Sowing in hope, and still his courage keeping,
Shall come rejoicing, bringing home his sheaves.

Earth's toils shall end; its sighing and its sorrow
Shall vanish in the glory soon to come.
Then shall the sower hail that glorious morrow,
While angel-reapers shout the "Harvest Home."

Then let us not be weary in well-doing;
If we faint not, our reaping day shall dawn.
Onward we press, though faint, yet still pursuing—
Oh harvest day, when shall we hail thy morn?

Night hath its tears, its shadows and its sadness;
Weeping endures until the day shall spring:
Then comes the morn, the harvest with its gladness—
Hail it, ye saints,—with joy awake and sing!

SECRET SOCIETIES—DECEPTION.

The following article appeared in the Telescope from the pen of Bishop J. Weaver when he was living at Roanoke, Indiana:

"It is nót my purpose to enter into a discussion of the leading principles of these orders. These, perhaps, have been sufficiently ventilated for the present. There are a few things that should be noticed, which have not, so far as I remember, been taken up. The particular matter is this: It has frequently been said by members of secret orders, that a number of our ministers and members are connected with secret societies. I shall not pretend to say whether these statements are true or false. If they are true, it places those organizations in rather an unenviable light. No member of the United Brethren church can unite with any such organization without a direct violation of the law of the church; and any organization that will, in any way, assist or encourage a man to violate the law of his church, is not worthy the confidence of Christians. Indeed, Christian gentlemen will not condescend to anything so mean and low. It is deception of the lowest type. If the statements are not true, then those who have made them are guilty of falsehood,—and I scarcely know which is the worst, they are so closely allied to each other,—and a man that will practice deception will most generally lie. Hence, be the statement true or false, it shows an utter want of honesty, purity and self-respect. If a man should be found guilty of any such conduct, he would be denounced by every honorable gentleman; and what may be said of a man may be said of an organization. On the supposition that the statements are correct, I have a few things to say to such of our members as have gone into their lodges, or contemplate doing so. There is no relation on earth that is more sacred than that of the church. The most tender cords bind Christians to Christ and each other; and between the members of this family the utmost confidence should be cherished. From the nature of this relation it is but reasonable to suppose that their purposes are above the spirit of this world. Now, for any member of this family to betray the confidence placed in him by the other members, is not only demoralizing to his own heart, but wicked in the sight of God. If it be said that there is nothing wrong in these orders, that, by no means, justifies a man in violating the law of his church and deceiving his brethren. There is another and better way for the members of this church. If a man feels that it is his duty for Christ's sake to unite with a secret order; that he can do more for Christ and his cause; and that he can be a better Christian by forming such an alliance (but I do not believe a word of it), let him, like an honorable Christian gentleman, leave the church, and then go. To join a secret order in this clandestine manner is anything but honorable. If he leaves the church first, he will be more respected by those he left behind; and if there is a single particle of honor among the members of the order he joins, they will think more of him. I know of no organization or association of men, whether political or ecclesiastical, that tolerate deception, except secret orders. If what they say is true, then they both practice and tolerate deception. Men who have deceived their party, like some have recently done, are forthwith denounced and disowned, and they deserve nothing better. The Bible, morality, and everything pure and honorable, is in eternal opposition to the spirit of deception; and just such deception, too, as that man is guilty of who will, in a clandestine manner, join a secret order contrary to the law of the church. No man can claim, as an apology, that he went into the lodge on the impulse of the moment. No; men have time to think. It is a calm, cool, deliberate act. If I believed these orders were as pure as the angels of light (but I do not), I could not be induced to join them until after I had left the church."

The reader will observe that the bishop did not discriminate as to which of the many secret orders at the time when he wrote this article tolerated deception. He certainly was then a good United Brethren, and in full sympathy with section seven, which says, "There shall be no connection with secret combinations."—M. V. Gundy, in the Conservator.

WHAT THE PAPERS SAY.

The willful destruction of property, the combinations of workmen, the determination to deprive men of work provided they do not belong to certain organizations, the fearful assaults often made on those who were willing to work, the boycotting system which aims to prevent people who have incurred the ire of "unions" from selling goods, and even from buying the necessaries of life, and which would, if possible, starve them to death, these are deeds of barbarousness which betoken the habits of African savages rather than American citizens. It is very easy to claim in strikes and these demonstrations against corporations and business firms that "an injury to one is the concern of all;" but there is no union which men can form, making an inner circle of self-interest and tyrannically dictating to those without it, which is not the grossest violation of every true principle of human brotherhood. Never were principles of right more terribly perverted in human judgment than in the case of those who seek to gain their ends by acts of extortion, violence, and sometimes murder.—Baptist Weekly.

The truth is these people have been permitted to flaunt their red flag of ruin in the faces of honest citizens so long, and so long have been allowed to openly preach sedition and revolution, that they were led to believe that it was only a question of time when the whole city should be theirs. They, without doubt, have been greatly surprised at the earnest and implacable opposition of the police against their late movements. They have been the great agitators in the eight-hour movement and every other movement which tended to unsettle and make the restless wage-workers, hoping that when they got all labor at loggerheads with capital their opportunity would come. For the present they are foiled, but such men never give up. If, when this flurry is over, they are permitted to wave their flags and use their tongues as they have in the past, they will be stronger when they strike next time.—Inter Ocean.

But secret societies of all kinds are of a different nature from necessary business partnerships. They are voluntary unions for the purpose of undue advantage of a few persons over the rest of mankind, who are equally deserving of the same benefits. It is a flagrant violation of the law of holy love, which requires believers to love as they are loved, and without partiality or respect of persons. To voluntarily join ourselves to a clique or party to whom we are not indebted nor obligated by justice or the law of love any more than to all outside, is a sin which God's Word, in James 2, puts beside all other violation of God's law.—Stumbling Stone.

It should not be forgotten that this order (Knights of Labor), which now presents so fair an exterior, began with the design of keeping its very existence a secret from the public. Its organized blows were to be struck in the dark, so to speak—a plan of operations scarcely compatible with honorable intentions or laudable aims. Though circumstances made it necessary that the fact of its being should be acknowledged to the world, its processes, its methods have been kept scrupulously hid from view, and all interests or powers with which it has treated have not been able to read its mind in its countenance, or determine the sequel to a conference or a concession. The influence of the Knights of Labor exerted by their acts has made capital—that is, the employer—distrustful, apprehensive; and has made labor—that is, the employe—restless, dissatisfied, disorderly, and has enslaved him with a mock charter of freedom. Thus has there gradually been brought about a condition of affairs in which intelligent minds can see great dangers to the real, substantial interests of labor in the future—a condition that has made the workingmen the puppets of a tyranny more oppressive, more destructive of prosperity, more injurious to the manhood, moral, social and intellectual character of the laborer than the monopolies and traditional wrongs it pretends to combat.—News.

Secret organizations are not suited to American society, nor, indeed, to any society, as is proven anew by the order of the Knights of Labor. Unnecessary in the first place, they afford opportunities for wrong-doing that makes them inimical to social order.—United Presbyterian.

We believe that there are thousands of people all over this country to-day who are beginning, for the first time in their lives, to think seriously about the matter of secret societies. The Catholic church condemns secret societies. To non-Catholics this has perhaps rather acted as an argument in their favor, since opposition to the church is with many people a large part of their own active religion. No doubt it has seemed to some unthinking and careless Catholics that the church's attitude in this matter was slightly unreasonable. The clear-headed politician and statesmen who have occasionally ventured to denounce secret societies as dangerous to our liberties have rarely held the public attention for a moment. The reason of this indifference has been that the mass of the people judge, as a rule, only by what they see and do not trouble themselves to "go behind the facts."

Our experience of the last two weeks has brought about a change in the matter. All reasonable people seem inclined to admit freely, not only the right of workingmen to organize, but the necessity of their doing so if they are to secure justice and fair treatment from their employers in all cases. But at the same time they are beginning to suspect that perhaps the attitude of the Catholic church is right after all in the condemning secret societies. It is becoming apparent that secret, oath-bound societies are, in principle, un-American; are contrary to the whole spirit and meaning of our institutions and are therefore dangerous to the Republic. People perceive that the moment a man joins a society and binds himself by oath to blindly obey secret leaders, that moment he gives up a part of his independence and sacrifices in some degree his liberty of action.

Our government, our laws, and the proper, healthy working of our social system depend upon the full, open and untrammeled expression of public opinion. That means that every individual should say his say fearlessly and frankly and without restraint. If he is a member in a secret society, bound by oath to obey its rules and its orders, what becomes of full and open discussion and independent action? The events with which we are all just now but too familiar show what comes of such organizations under the strain of excitement and conflict. Individual liberty, the corner-stone of our political and social structure, crumbles at the first touch, and an irresponsible coteries of "Grand" Something or others issue orders that throw thousands of helpless people into impoverishing idleness and paralyzes the commerce of a nation. And every man is bound by oath to obey.—Catholic Review.

We wonder if it has never entered the heads of the railroad magnates in this country that the reason they have so much trouble with strikes is that they are themselves the most persistent law breakers in the land. They run not only their mail trains, their regular passenger and freight trains on the Lord's day, but special excursion trains tempting thousands to break the Sabbath who would otherwise stay at home and go to church. Week after week the locomotive goes screaming by our churches disturbing the devotions of the worshipers and insulting Him who said, "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy." Just so long as these gigantic corporations defy God, and trample on the central law in his code, they must expect to have trouble. God will deal with individual sinners in the day of judgment, but as corporations have no souls, he deals with them here and now. Let the railroads become law abiding, and they will not be, as they now are, at the mercy of the lawless. But how can they expect their employes to have any regard for their rights when they have none for those of God, or for those who fear God. Can they expect that when they tempt the men whom they hire to break one of God's laws for their benefit that they will keep all the rest for their benefit; be honest when they want them to and dishonest when they want them to! be true to them while false to their Maker, and to the best interests of society?—Interior.

VACATION NOTES.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—Last week Friday I had barely stepped out of the hotel to mail my letter to your readers when I ran against our old friend, Elder Bancroft, of Wisconsin, who started for the coast April 12. Few more cordial greetings than ours were passed that day in San Francisco. Until Saturday night we were several times together, and then I missed him from his hotel, and presume he is by this time at home, as he was expecting to start Monday. Bro. Loveless and family left on that day for the East, after a work of Christian love which will long endear their memory to not a few in California.

The mission work they began at Silver Star Hall will be continued, God willing, by Bro. L. H. Reid, an Illinois teacher, who has consecrated himself to the work of saving the lost of that great city, and is most earnestly and ably aided by his estimable wife. The Kindergarten, Sabbath-school, temperance and other Gospel meetings maintained at this hall are a savor of life in one of the church-deserted parts of the city. In a surrounding population of 50,000 there is no other English Protestant place of worship. Saloons of the lowest character, patronized by the sailors from the neighboring wharves, abound in the vicinity; and a number of cheap hotels or lodging houses, crowded with homeless and often disappointed men, could supply a congregation on shortest notice. San Francisco is full of hotels of this class, and in this fact we find a sequel to the personal history of thousands of young men who have come here from Eastern homes, attracted first by the mines and then by the reports from the ranches, the wheat fields and the fruit farms of this prolific State. Many have gained wealth here, great wealth, but the multitude have yet to struggle for their daily bread; and, without the social checks of their Eastern home life, their childhood lessons of thrift are covered deep from sight in the debaucheries of the saloon and dance-house, they drift from place to place, earning liberal wages for a few weeks to spend there in a day or two at the drinking dens. It has been suggested, and not without reason, that the solution of the Chinese question might be found in the saloon. Close it up and the Caucassian laborer would be able to compete with the Mongolian.

The Silver Star Mission is largely maintained by Dr R. H. McDonald, who is an enthusiast for prohibition, and has been carried away by the notion prevailing here that temperance will amount to little unless loaded down with the dead weight of the lodge. I was introduced to him in his Pacific Bank Monday, and was glad to hear from him a guarded acknowledgment that secret societies might be injuring the churches of Christ. He thought, however, that the pressure of public opinion was working a better moral condition among the lodges in respect to temperance. Dr. McDonald is a warm patron of Miss Narcissa White, a United Presbyterian lady from Pennsylvania, who is lecturing for temperance on this coast with great success. Her church principles respecting the lodge are as good as those respecting the saloon, and her influence will be good with a man of Dr. McDonald's convictions.

Ben Hogan, the reformed prize fighter, spoke several evenings at the Silver Star Mission, beginning Saturday evening. Sabbath evening he told the story of his life and his remarkable conversion with much effect. Such proofs of the work of the spirit of grace are not so frequent here as in Chicago and New York. Mr. Hogan has found a useful field among the rough audiences of the mining cities, and many have been brought to Christ through his appeals. In the simplicity and child-like spirit of his prayers he resembles George Muller, of Bristol. He goes from here to Oregon and Washington Territory, everywhere publishing the glad tidings of redemption.

Another evangelist, Dr. Munhall, of Indianapolis, has been laboring with great success up and down the coast. San Francisco has not received him so gladly, although the series of meetings, which will be concluded to-night, have been of incalculable benefit to the churches. Like Pentecost, Finney and a few other evangelists, he has been a Freemason, but now that Christ has come to possess him fully, he has put away that iniquity, though I do not learn that he speaks as forcibly on the subject as Moody, Needham, Davis and Pentecost have done. Dr. Munhall is short in stature, thickset, dark, and of a positive nature. He speaks readily, if not eloquently, and is powerful in the Scriptures. His condemnation of the sins of San Francisco have been severe. Many regretted and some were alienated by them. But I cannot believe they were uncharitable or unjust. The vice and irreligion of the city are confined to no race or class, and that they are less concealed than in the East is no palliation for their enormity. Dr. Munhall goes from this State to Denver.

On the Sabbath I attended Dr. Gibson's United Presbyterian church and Sabbath-school on Mason street. The church is large and well appointed, and the enthusiasm of the pastor seems to reach into every part. The singing of the Sabbath-school was especially fine, and it was all the better because the words were not a "vain repetition" of some shallow sentiment used to give a tone of sanctity to a pleasing strain. It is a great mistake and a libel on the intelligence of American children to say that they will not praise God in such words of sense and devotion as have borne up the heart of the church for many generations. The music question evidently makes no trouble in this congregation, though an instrument is used in Sabbath-school; but it would be well if the lodge should get its due. Almost the first question asked by one of the church officers was if I was a member of the G. A. R. A pin of that order was stuck on his coat collar. He had no word to ask of my relation to Christ; his inquiry stopped with the lodge.

Dr. Gibson is not indifferent to the lodge question, however, and will attend the meeting of the Congregational pastors when the matter comes before them. So also, I hope, may Dr. J. G. Carson, of Xenia, Ohio, who has just come to the State for rest and health. General O. O. Howard has also promised to attend this meeting. In company with William Tirtlott, Esq., a former esteemed resident of Wheaton, now practicing law on Sansome street. I called on the General at his headquarters overlooking the bay at Black Point. Bronze Spanish cannon of two centuries ago adorn the gateway and beautiful grounds, and the sentry was a confessor of the Lord Jesus.

The Congregational pastors meet weekly, Monday afternoon, at the Palace Hotel. Their meeting this week was full and interesting. The subject was the general one of local evangelization, but in particular the aims and methods of a small society known as the Congregational Associates, organized for the establishment of Sabbath-schools and churches in neglected places. Dr. Kimball, of the Pacific, showed me great kindness in introducing me to these brethren, and it was a pleasing surprise when Mr. Hildreth, our former N. C. A. treasurer, came into the room. I feared I should not be able to see him, as he has lately removed to Santa Barbara on the southern coast.

From San Francisco to this place was a long ride through an immense wheat field already filling for the June harvest. At Ceres, a day's tarry on the vast plain gave some new ideas about farming and rest among friends. Mr. Stetson and his grandfather, Rev. J. L. Jones, maintain a steadfast testimony for Christ against the vices of intemperance and secretism, and the pastor of the Baptist (and only) church is with them.

The Chicago riots are warmly discussed here. Bad as the Chinaman are, they are not savages. The licence given to such mutineers against public peace would hardly be allowed in California rural towns. The least mercy such butchers as Spies and Parsons might expect would be the time it took to reach the nearest tree. HENRY L. KELLOGG.

When one ought to speak and yet remains silent, silence is absolutely sinful. When one might speak to advantage and yet refrains from doing so, silence is culpable, and sometimes it is even cruel. It may be a duty to cry out in alarm, or in warning, or in protest; and to fail of so doing may make one a sharer of the unaverted evil.—Southern Baptist.

Never were words truer or more timely. The silence that suffers men to go into perdition is more than cruel: it is murderous. The Divine command is now as in the days of the old prophet, "Cry aloud and spare not." "Show my people their transgressions." Who is guilty of this sin against mankind? Many, and especially the religious press. When the conductors of our religious journals shall speak out against the prevalent and popular sins of the age—when they shall have the courage to lay bare the abominations of lodgery, and demand of the church and the ministry that they shall cease from all complicity with the system that has "filled the land with violence," they will be free from the fearful guilt of being false watchmen. There are many in the churches and some in the ministry who plead ignorance and are perhaps excusable; but this is not true of the conductors of the religious press. To many of them it may be said as of old, "What hast thou to do to declare my statutes, or that thou shouldst take my covenant in thy mouth, seeing thou hatest instruction and castest my words behind thee? When thou sawest a thief thou consentest with him, and hast been partaker with adulterers."

THE SECRET EMPIRE.

MASONIC INQUISITION.

SEYMOUR LAKE, May 10, '86.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—I send you this notice, just received, from the lodge; also my answer to the same. My reason for doing so is that if the Lord, in his wisdom, suffers me to become a sacrifice to Masonic vengeance, the readers of the Cynosure may know what I have done. I am sorry I did not send you a copy of my resignation from the lodge. Pray for me, ye lovers of reform, that I may be faithful to my blessed Saviour through this Masonic storm. There are glorious promises ahead to the faithful servant of the Lord:

"OAKWOOD, May 1, 1886.

"Bro. Dewit Benjamin:—Charges have been preferred against you in Oakwood Lodge, No. 100, F. and A. M., and you are requested to appear on the 15th day of May, 1886, at 7 o'clock P. M., at Oakwood Lodge rooms of F. and A M., and defend yourself against such charges, which are as follows:

"'To the Worshipful Master, Wardens and Brethren of Oakwood Lodge, No. 100, Free and Accepted Masons:

"'By order of the Worshipful Master, charges are hereby preferred against Bro. Dewit C. Benjamin, a member of Oakwood Lodge and a resident of Brandon, Oakland county, Mich., for un-Masonic conduct under the following charges and specifications, to wit:

"'Specification 1.—That he is in arrears for dues for the term of (9) nine years.

"'Specification 2.—That he did, in the year 1884, after having been notified of his dues to the lodge, write a very insulting letter to the lodge, and denouncing Masonry in the strongest terms.'

"Dated this the 17th day of April, A. D. 1886.

["Signed] ISAAC NEWTON, Jun. War.,
FRED. VAN WAGONER, Sec'y,
"Of Oakwood Lodge, F. and A. M."

"SEYMOUR LAKE, Mich., May 10, '86.

"Oakwood Lodge of Freemasons:—I was summoned to appear at your lodge-room the 15th of this month, to defend myself against the following charges:

"1. Non-payment of dues. 2. As you claim, an insulting letter denouncing Masonry.

"My reasons for denouncing Masonry are: (1) It is a Christless religion; and he that denies Christ cannot enter heaven. (2) Its oaths are contrary to the laws of God, man, and to the Bible. (3) Masonry is the work of the devil; and to be an adhering Mason endangers the soul's eternal salvation.

"I am ready to defend myself before any legal court of justice in this county where I can have a fair and impartial trial. But to be tried before a lodge, whose law claims to be above civil law, and whose god is an idolatrous god, where the name of Christ is not allowed, is more than I can consent to. May the Lord Jesus help you to see the error of your ways and flee to him for pardon. I expect to meet this in judgment.

"Masons, I love your souls. The only way to heaven is through the atoning blood of Christ.

"D. BENJAMIN."

Members of the fraternity should be men whose affections and loyalties should not be divided and dispersed among numerous and conflicting bodies, but should be held in their integrity to herself (the Grand Lodge) that their power of service and ritualistic, educational, social and business capacity should be limited to her interests, to her instruction, to her sacrifices, to her duties.

The Royal Masonic Rite bodies of the An of Columbus, Ast of Ohio, recently advanced thirteen to the 90th degree, and one to the 18th degree. They are about to secure a temple which they intend to fit up in ancient Egyptian style, for their exclusive use.—Masonic World.

A series of meetings of Cronus Rose Croix Chapter, No. 512, Royal Masonic Rite, was closed Tuesday evening, during which a school of nine Knights Templar were advanced to the 18th, or Rose Croix degree, the 33d degree of the A. & P. Rite, and the 90th degree of Mizraim. Among those in the class were S. A. Shaw, A. F. Maxwell and John H. Wilson, of Lee's Summit. The Royal Masonic Rite dates its origin back 3,000 years before the building of King Solomon's Temple, which event was formerly supposed to have been the origin of Freemasonry, and as the antiquity of this rite is becoming known to the higher degree Masons, they are availing themselves of the opportunity of gaining the valuable and interesting information taught only in this rite.—Kansas City Times.

John Swinton, in his paper, shows unmistakable sympathy with the anarchists of Chicago. He thinks the suppression of the Arbeiter Zeitung wrong, and says: "The 'reign of terror' in Chicago has been severe during the week. House searching has been prosecuted on a wholesale scale, and all the prisons are full of people arrested on suspicion. Many peaceful labor organizations have been prohibited or broken up."

REFORM NEWS.

W. B. STODDARD IN OHIO.

WAKEMAN, O., May 13, 1886.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—Since my last report I have had some profitable meetings. Though generally not quite as largely attended as at some other seasons of the year, they have not been wanting in interest.

At Ontario a Mr. McColley undertook to champion the Masonic cause. His efforts very much amused all present. He is known to have gotten a jug of liquor and induced young men into his shanty to gamble and drink with him. We all concluded he was a good subject for Jubulum's setting maul.

At Creston the fraternity endeavored to laugh at what was said, but finding this pretty dry, some became quite angry. They have invented a new society in this section called the Jolly Haymakers. As near as we can learn, the object of this association is to fool its subjects.

At Mallet Creek, Rev. Baird, pastor of the Congregational church, invited me to speak Sabbath evening, to the union meeting held in his church, which invitation, of course, I accepted. The evening was rather dark and rainy. But as father had always interested them when he spoke here they made an extra effort to hear the son. So much for having a good father.

A goodly number came together on Monday evening for a lecture, and we believe good was accomplished.

I have recently met many of our aged friends well-known to the reform workers of other days. As I have listened to them giving their history, have seen their piety and consecration to God's service, I have been led to exclaim, Who are there in this fast age of the world that will take their places, when they hear the welcome "Come up higher?"

Uncle John Finney of Ontario, who worked so untiringly for the slave, is now in his eighty-fifth year. Mrs. J. A. Bingham, widow of the late Dr. Bingham of Mallet Creek, advocates the reforms so dear to her husband. Mrs. I. K. Knestrick and N. Minor of Creston assisted in arranging for the lecture at that point.

I spent a little time at Oberlin looking up the interests of our work. The temperance reform seems to be engrossing the attention of the younger reformers here. The number of those who listened to President Finney's words of warning against the lodge is constantly growing less. One by one they go to their reward. Two have passed over the river during the past year, Messrs. F. D. Parish and L. Spencer. Rev. Geo. Clark, Willard Burr, and J. L. Burrell have all passed the three-score years and ten. Mrs. Geo. Clark and her sister, Mrs. Hill, are very active in good words and works. Time and space do not permit the mention of many whom I would not otherwise omit.

I feel very grateful to the many friends who have encouraged us by their contributions and words of kindness to press on in this work.

I recently received a letter from Rev. Long, of Loudenville, containing a copy of the request which he presented the Rev. Haithcox after his glorification speech, given under the auspices of the I. O. O. F. of that place. Thinking it will interest the readers of the Cynosure I will enclose it. Rev. H. has not yet consented to discuss the statements which he made. W. B. STODDARD.

LOUDONVILLE, O., Apr. 26, 1886.

Rev. H. C. Haithcox.,

DEAR SIR:—Am fully persuaded that a man cannot be a member of such secret orders as Odd-fellows and Masons, and at the same time a true Christian. How a man who knows the teachings of these orders and the teachings of the Bible, can claim to be loyal to both, is one of the questions which I, with my narrow mind, cannot understand. As there are many citizens of Loudenville which seem to be just as narrow minded on this question as I am, pardon me if I make the following requests:

1. That you meet Mr. W. B. Stoddard, of Chicago, to-morrow eve in public discussion, or

2. That you meet me in this town some time in the near future to discuss the question: Resolved, that a minister of the Gospel is not true to his calling when he belongs to the Odd-fellows' or Mason's lodge.

This is by request of citizens who want the truth. It stands to reason that the decision of this question can be given by God alone through his Word.

Respectfully, S. P. LONG,
Pastor Ev. Lutheran church.

BRO. HAWLEY IN ILLINOIS.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—After the Odd-fellows' celebration at Belvidere (referred to in my last,) I went to Pecatonica and lectured twice in the Swede Lutheran church, Rev. Aurelius, pastor. The kind hospitality extended to me by Pastor Aurelius and his family made my visit to Pecatonica a very enjoyable season.

Those who do not claim that Freemasonry is in itself a religion, do nevertheless confidently affirm that it is the handmaid of the Christian religion. So, in my first lecture in Pastor Aurelius's church, I discussed the claim of Masonry to be the handmaid of the religion of Christ. I showed by Masonic testimony that Blue Lodge Masonry sustains precisely the same relation to Christianity that it does to Judaism, Mohammedanism, Buddhism, or any other form of idolatry. When a Christian Mason is buried with the honors of Masonry and a reasonable hope is expressed that he has gone to heaven, do the Masons mean to endorse the religion of our Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ? Of course, if this deceased brother has gone to heaven, he was saved as a Mason by his Masonry, or as a Christian he was saved by Christ. Do they mean to testify their belief that Masonry saved him, or do they mean, in their ritual, to teach that their deceased brother is saved because he was a Christian? Of course, in this case, they must mean to teach that salvation is by Masonry or by Christ. "O," say they who deny that Masonry assumes to save men from sin and fit them for heaven, "Masonry is the handmaid of Christianity. She means, in her burial service, to testify to the power of Christ to save those who believe in him." But Jews are Masons, as well as Christians; and Jews are buried with the honors of Masonry the same as Christians. The Jewish Mason is supposed to go to the Grand Lodge above the same as the Christian Mason. Does Masonry mean to teach that this unbelieving Jew is saved according to the Masonic plan of salvation, or does she mean to teach that a Jew can be saved by rejecting Christ, the same as a Christian by receiving him? If Masonry, as the handmaid of Christianity, means to teach that the Christian Mason is saved by grace received through faith, then Masonry, which is declared to sustain precisely the same relation to Judaism as a servant and helper of Judaism, must mean to teach that to reject Christ and remain in unbelief is just as good a passport to heaven as to receive him by faith. If the deceased Mason be a Mohammedan, a pagan, a deist, or a modern Spiritualist, Masonry, sustaining precisely the same relation to these false religions that it does to the true religion of Christ, endorses them as true religions on the assumption that Masonry is not a religion in itself, but the handmaid of Christianity. How hypocritical and false is the claim that Masonry is the handmaid of Christianity, when, at the best, she only endorses Christ as a way to heaven, and gives the same endorsement to Judaism, Mohammedanism, or paganism that she does to Christianity! But Christ claims to be, not simply a way to heaven, but the way—the only name given under heaven, or among men, whereby we can be saved. He affirms that no man can come to the Father but by him. If Christianity therefore be true, all other systems of religion must be false. If Christ is the way to God and heaven, all other systems of religion are but so many ways to hell. Ancient Craft Masonry, by endorsing the false religions of the earth as true ways to heaven, is as really in league with Satan to dethrone Christ and subvert Christianity as though she taught a plan of salvation peculiarly her own.

In the second lecture, I showed that Blue Lodge Masonry, in her religious philosophy, has developed a plan of salvation peculiarly her own; and, while playing the hypocritical role of handmaid to the prevailing religion, whether it be Christianity, Judaism, Mohammedanism, or paganism, Masonry is really aspiring to be the universal religion of the world. And while Mohammedanism and paganism is decaying, Masonry, under diversified names, is spreading; and in the language of Dr. Kendig, of Boston (a Mason of thirty-three degrees,) Masonry, more than anything else in the world, stands in the way of the coming of the kingdom of our Lord Jesus Christ.

Will not, therefore, the churches of America and the world unite to withstand this great anti-Christ? If men will, for the sake of worldly advantage, worship Satan, the god of this world, in the lodge, the apostolic doctrine—"Ye cannot drink the cup of the Lord and cup of devils; ye cannot be a partaker of the Lord's table and the table of devils," should be firmly maintained by the churches.

The Swede Lutheran church of America has taken a stand with Christ against the Masonic anti-Christ. Let their example be followed by all the churches of America.

From Pecatonica I went to Sycamore and lectured in the Swede Lutheran church there—Rev. Frykman, pastor. I was kindly received and hospitably entertained by Pastor Frykman and family. The night was so rainy that neither the pastor nor myself would have been disappointed if there had been no congregation. But there was quite an audience of quiet, attentive listeners, and I improved my opportunity to the utmost to fortify them in the position their Synod and churches have taken, that Freemasonry is organized infidelity, and therefore subversive of Christianity. I also showed them that we are forbidden of God to unite with any carnal brotherhood, or secret society.

From Sycamore I went to Winnebago and lectured in the F. M. church. I had called upon the four resident pastors of Winnebago, and had personally labored with the Methodist Episcopal, the Congregational and the Presbyterian pastors. Both the Methodist and Congregational pastors admitted that if Masonry was what I assured them it could be incontrovertibly proven to be, every friend of Jesus should stand with him against it. I called the attention of the Presbyterian minister to the fact that his church had always maintained and defended the doctrines of grace as taught by Paul and the leaders of the Reformation; that Freemasonry squarely antagonized the doctrines of grace by teaching salvation by works instead of by grace received through faith. I endeavored to arouse him to a sense of his obligation to resist the Masonic anti-Christ. He seemed timid and non-committal, but he and one of his ruling elders came and heard the lecture.

From Winnebago I went to Batavia, to strengthen the hands of the Swede Lutheran church there. They were without a pastor. I inquired for the leading deacon, and found him. His eyes sparkled and his face shone with interest while I opened out my mission to him. He desired lectures, but thought it well to defer a little, until the pastor they had called should come. So I returned to Wheaton and spent the Sabbath. C. F. HAWLEY.

CORRESPONDENCE.

EASTER AND THE SABBATH.

CHICAGO, May 13, 1886.

ED. CYNOSURE:—In your issue of to-day in an article referring to Christmas and Easter, you say: "We take our stand with Luther and the reformers, that whatever cannot be shown to be of Divine appointment or sanction is an unwarrantable innovation on the teachings of the Gospel" Permit me to stand beside you, shoulder to shoulder, on this platform. Now allow me to inquire, Is there any "Divine appointment or sanction" for the keeping holy of Sunday, either once a year, as "Easter," or fifty-two times a year, as the weekly "Lord's Day," or "Christian Sabbath?" If you can and will show this "Divine appointment," I promise to keep Sunday with you; otherwise how can I help regarding this institution as "an unwarrantable innovation on the teachings of the Gospel?" In the same article you say further: "We hold, too, that just in proportion as men have interpolated days and ceremonies, just to that extent have they forgotten the real commandments of God." Here again I wish to stand by your side. Now is it, or is it not, at once an illustration and a confirmation of this truth, that those who have "interpolated" into the calendar just fifty-two days of rest, without "Divine appointment or sanction," calling them "Christian Sabbaths," have also "forgotten," in each year, just fifty-two Sabbath-days, that are enjoined by "the real commandments of God"—that is, by the fourth commandment of the Decalogue? Will you be so kind as to explain this matter in your next issue?

Yours, for all God's real commandments, and no others. JOS. W. MORTON.

NOTE.—While we cannot go into a discussion of the question involved, it is due to our courteous and conscientious correspondent that he should have a hearing, and if it can be shown that the keeping of the Lord's Day is entirely without sanction in the Sacred Scriptures, we will admit that it is an innovation. We hold: 1. That it is the spirit rather than the letter of the law which demands our observance. 2. That Christ rose from the dead on the first day of the week, and that we have the apostolic example of meeting for worship and almsgiving on that day. 3. That keeping the first or Lord's Day as the Christian Sabbath gradually was adopted by the church as an honor to its risen Head, as fulfilling the purposes of the Sabbath and obeying the spirit of the Sabbath law. Other reasons might be given. None of these things are true of Christmas and Easter, which are directly traceable to heathen customs as their historic origin.

SANCTIFICATION AND WORLDLINESS.

NORDHOFF, California.

As I read the interesting columns of the Cynosure I am attracted with unusual interest to the article headed, "Brother Michael's Plan," by D. G. Strong, of Walla Walla, W. T., in the issue of April 8th.

Having resided in Elder Strong's district and was a member of the M. E. church when he was presiding elder, I am surprised and not a little sorry to read such lines from the pen of such a scholarly Christian minister. Being personally acquainted with Elder D. G. Strong, I cannot conceive how a man of his ability and enlightenment could assume for a moment that Rev. J. T. Michael, of South Oil City, Pa., is on the line of fanaticism when he attacks the sinfulness of oath-bound secrecy. Elder Strong has been connected with secret fraternities long enough to know their influence on Christianity and understand their claims, character and practical workings, and certainly knows that the ceremony of initiations, blasphemous oaths and barbarous penalties is enough to shock the moral sensibilities of any Christian man, when he fully understands their true character.

Is it possible that a Bible student, a minister of the Gospel, can urge entire sanctification as a distinct work of grace in the soul of a believer and not point out and oppose and show those souls the danger of wide-spread evils. God's true messengers will cry aloud and spare not; lift up their voice like a trumpet and show the people their transgressions, and the house of Jacob their sins. Isa. 58: 1. I praise the Lord for the blessed experience of sanctification, and fully realize that only a living sacrifice is acceptable to God and must not be conformed to this world. Rom. 12: 1, 2. The Bible plainly teaches that a believer is not a fit subject for sanctification until all actual sin is repented of, abandoned and forgiven. The oaths or obligations (calling God to witness) of secret societies is sinful and should be confessed. Lev. 5: 4, 5; Ex. 20: 7. How can a justified soul read the following Scripture and not abandon secret societies? 2 Cor. 6: 14–18; 2 Thess. 3: 6, 14. John 3: 19–21, and many other passages. When Christ says, Follow me, who ever spake openly to the world, he don't convey the idea of entering a lodge room hood-winked, with a rope around his neck and the person in a semi-nude condition, mouthing over sentences more suitable for a heathen than a Christian. He does not mean to join in brotherhood with all classes of sinful men and join in prayer in which the name of Christ is excluded. No. He says, Be ye separate; come out from among them and reprove their evil deeds. If it is straining a point exceedingly to allow that membership in any of those orders is an offense against either the doctrine or discipline of the M. E. church, then all members with a pure heart should obey God and come out. Those having the form of godliness, but denying the power thereof, from such turn away. 2 Tim. 3: 5. The same purity of heart that will cause a positive disrelish for the lodge members in the lodge room will not allow church fellowship with the same. The fact is when a church loses the Spirit and is too proud to confess it and get the pardoning love of God, the preacher and members must resort to something else than an earnest presentation of God's Word to interest and draw the people. God is mocked by hymns of praise sung by worldlings for money or vanity. The preaching must be so liberal in its tone that it would be equally appropriate to Buddhist or Mohammedans. The church is turned into a bazaar of passion and the Sabbath is turned into a parade day for display of gaudy apparel, jewelry and secret society badges, etc. Seats in the house of worship are sold to the highest bidder. Festivals and sociables take the place of prayer, and the lodge room has greater attractions than a revival meeting. Thus not only the M. E. churches, but many others, are dying. The true religion of Christ will break the fetters of secrecy. The shackles of the lodge oath will fall off under the blaze of the Holy Spirit. It will blow the French music out of the choir, upset the table of the money changers, and the health-destroying and soul-blighting practices of wearing corsets by women and using tobacco by men will be abandoned; pride, vanity and display disappear; the house of God, used for worldly feasting and merchandise, will become a house of prayer and praise: true holiness will show the wicked their transgressions and sinners will be converted to God. Some seem to think if they embrace an error and stick to it all is well, but voluntary blindness is voluntary destruction. The way to hell is as direct from a dead church as from the world. May God open the blind eyes and show the utter fallacy of such empty delusions. Rev. Michael is not so far off the Bible line. Religion that don't save from (not in) sin, is not the religion of Christ. Holiness that does not conform the life to God's Word is not Bible holiness. J. H. CRUMRINE.

BIBLE LESSON.

STUDIES IN THE WRITINGS OF JOHN.

LESSON IX, May 30, 1886—Jesus feeding five thousand—John 6: 1-21.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Jesus said unto them, I am the bread of life.—John 6: 35.

TIME.—April, A. D. 29. Almost a year after our last lesson. Passover, April 16; Pentecost, June 6; Tabernacles, Oct. 11.

COMMENTS ON THE LESSON BY E. E. FLAGG.

[Open the Bible and read the lesson.]

1. The hungry multitude. vs. 1–7. Jesus was followed by crowds largely made up of curiosity seekers, with here and there a sincere inquirer. But the lowness of the motive, "because they saw his miracle," did not hinder the fullness of Jesus' compassion. He felt for their bodily needs not the less, but more that he felt so deeply for their soul needs. His question to Phillip, "Whence shall we buy bread that these may eat?" is said to have been put to prove him. Had Phillip forgotten the miracle at the marriage feast in Cana, that not the slightest idea of a similar miracle being wrought here seems to have dawned on his mind. But are we not ourselves apt to forget that the Gospel is a supernatural Gospel, that its history for eighteen centuries has been one stupendous miracle? and instead of looking for more miracles of grace to come, we are discouraged at the smallness of the funds and the fewness of the laborers, and say with Phillip, even two hundred pennyworth are not sufficient. But infinitely great as are the world's needs, they bear no comparison with the ocean fullness of God's power and grace.

2. The multitude fed. vs. 8–13. We have here a most important lesson for all Christian workers, especially those (and they are vastly in the majority) who are in humble spheres of labor—who are not Moodys, Spurgeons, nor Cooks, who have only the five barley loaves and the two small fishes. But if these are surrendered entirely to the Lord in faith and humility, the old miracle will be again repeated in a higher form. We shall find that small and few as our talents may be, the touch of the Lord's hand will have the same multiplying power as the lad's loaves and fishes. A secondary lesson is the saving of the fragments, of allowing nothing to be lost that can be utilized for the good of humanity. In this phase of Christ's character we are shown that the highest spiritual elevation is not inconsistent with the most practical forethought and care for seeming trifles. The avoidance of waste in her household may well concern the mind of the most cultured Christian women. Saving for self is narrowing. Saving for Christ noble, and enlarges every faculty.

3. The tempest stilled. vs. 14–21. All Christ's divine teachings, and even his miracles, had not made such an impression on the multitude as did the miraculous supplying of a temporary want. It may be a humiliating fact, but human nature is the same to-day that it was then. A practical interest in men's bodily needs opens the way to their hearts and souls. To-day they are eager to crown him king, but the same voice perhaps would shout crucify him on the morrow. He withdraws himself from their unreasoning homage and alone on the mountain he sees his disciples tossing in their frail boat on the storm-swept sea of Galilee. In the storms of life Christ comes to us as he did to that frightened crew, walking on the waters; but he comes in the shape of trials, sorrow, discipline, and we know him not till we hear his voice saying, "It is I; be not afraid." But as soon as we receive the trial or the sorrow or the discipline from his hands, and therefore as it were a personification of himself, of his tenderness and compassion toward us, then the sea grows calm, and the bow of promise spans every cloud.

LIGHT FROM THE WORD.

How do the world's needs compare with the infinite fullness of the Gospel? Rev. 5: 20.

From Peloubet's Notes.

"After these things." Spoken of in the last lesson and the discourse which followed. This expression gives no definite idea of the time. The events recorded in the preceding chapter were at the time of a passover. According to ver. 4, a passover was now near, and there is therefore an interval of a year between the two times.—Westcott.

"Jesus went over the sea of Galilee." From the western side, probably near Capernaum, to the eastern shore. He had just heard of the death of John the Baptist by Herod Antipas, who was tetrarch of Galilee, where he then was. He went to the nearest place outside of Herod's dominions. The disciples had just returned from their missionary tour in Galilee, and needed rest, which could not be easily obtained at this time amid the crowds.

"Which is the sea of Tiberias." Added to describe the sea more exactly, especially for the sake of foreign readers. It was so named from Tiberias, the new Roman capital on the west shore of the lake, built by Herod during the lifetime of our Lord, and named in honor of the emperor, Tiberisa Cesar.

"And a great multitude followed him." Great multitudes follow him wherever he goes, and so throng him that he has no leisure even to eat. From every part of the land they come to listen to his teachings and to be healed.

"Because they saw his miracles which he did" The Greek words are very expressive, pointing clearly to repeated miracles of healing, on account of which crowds followed him continually from place to place.

"Jesus went up into a mountain." Rather, into the mountain.

"There he sat with his disciples." Though they came hither for retirement and rest (Mark 6: 31), yet the time was not idly spent.

"And the passover . . . was nigh." The Passover this year was April 16. Given (1) either to mark the time, or (2) as a further explanation of the multitude.

"When Jesus then lifted up his eyes." From the place among the hills where he was sitting with his disciples, and from which elevation he could see so far over the plain.

"And saw a great company come." The multitude spoken of in ver. 2. Some (Mark 6: 32) had arrived before, and may have been with Jesus, for "disciples" (ver. 3) may include many more than the twelve apostles.

"He saith unto Phillip." Much is omitted here that is recorded in the other Gospels. A large part of the day was spent in teaching and healing. The multitudes, absorbed in these matters of exciting interest, found themselves, toward evening, wearied and hungry, and a long distance from their homes or from any supplies, and probably many of them without money to purchase any.

"Whence shall we buy bread?" It would seem impossible to obtain food for so great a multitude.

"This he said to prove him." To test and try him, to call his attention to the greatness of the need, and the impossibility of supplying it by any human means; and then see whether he had such faith in Jesus as the Messiah as to believe that he could supply the multitude with food.

"Philip answered him." Philip's answer shows that he had not fully learned the lesson of perfect trust in Jesus' divine power.

"Two hundred pennyworth." Two hundred denarii' worth. The denarius was a Roman silver coin worth about fifteen cents. The whole amount mentioned is, therefore, thirty dollars.

"That every one of them may take a little." Even this would be a scant supply, just enough to stay hunger.

"There is a lad here," And therefore able to carry very little.

"Which hath five barley loaves." The ordinary coarse food of the lower orders.

"Two small fishes." The Greek opsarion is a diminutive; properly means what was eaten along with the bread, and specially refers to the small, and generally dried or pickled fish eaten with bread.

"But what are they?" The whole force of Andrew's remark, with its diminutive words, rests upon the smallness of their power to help, while Philip had dwelt on the greatness of the need.

"Jesus said, Make the men set down." The better "people" is a general word, including both men and women.

"There was much grass in the place." This is not inconsistent with its description by the other evangelists as a desert place, the word desert implying simply solitude, not an arid soil.

"So the men sat down." The women and children were probably apart by themselves, as oriental custom would require. St. Matthew (14: 21) tells us that the 5,000 included the men only.

"And when he had given thanks." In the other Gospels it is said that he blessed the loaves. The two forms, "blessing" and "giving thanks," are but an emphasizing of different elements in the same act. Asking a blessing upon food before meals was a universal custom among the Jews, and was practiced both by Christ and by the apostles.

"Gather up the fragments that remain." How improbable, from a human point of view, that one could multiply food at will should give directions about saving fragments—pieces that remained undistributed or unconsumed because of the abundance of the supply

"Filled twelve baskets with the fragments." All four accounts have the same word for basket, cophinus, i. e., the wallet which every Jew carried when on a journey, to keep himself independent of Gentile food, which would be unclean. The remnants far exceed in quantity the original store.

"Of the five barley loaves" is added to assert the identity of these fragments with their origin, the five loaves of the lad mentioned by Andrew. There was one barley loaf for each 1,000 men.

"Then those men," i. e., the people of ver. 10, those who had been fed and satisfied.

"When they had seen the miracle," i. e., as in Rev. Ver., the sign. The miracle was a sign to them that God was with Jesus, and led him to think that he must be the expected prophet.

He who knows Christ is able to instruct even these that are mighty in the Scriptures.—Wesley.

AMERICAN PLATFORM.

ADOPTED AT CHICAGO, JUNE 20, 1884

Viewing with deep concern the corrupt and unsettled condition of American politics, and witnessing with alarm the fearful prevalence of caste and clannishness by which our citizens are being arrayed in hostile hands, working secretly to compass political ends, a method directly and powerfully tending to increase corruption, to destroy mutual confidence, and hasten disruption and bloodshed; and having no hope of adequate remedy for these evils from existing parties, and believing the foundation of a party based upon the fundamental principles of the Declaration of American Independence, both inevitable and indispensable:

We, therefore, a portion of the American people, believing with our fathers that we have our rights and liberties, not from men or parties, but from God; believing in the Christian marriage, and not in Mormonism; believing in the religious democracy of the New Testament, and not in the despotism of the lodge; believing, also, with our Scotch and English ancestors, that civil government, though ordained in God, is "founded in nature, not in grace," and, therefore, that all have equal civil rights; while we abhor the idea of enforcing religion or controlling conscience by human laws and penalties as calculated to make hypocrites, not Christians, and savoring of the days of priestism, the fagot and the stake, we at the same time as firmly believe that atheism and priestcraft are twins and both alike foes to human liberty and welfare. We further most firmly believe that a government without God has none but lynch power, and is destitute of all legitimate authority to maintain civil order, to swear a witness, to try a criminal, to hang a murderer, to imprison a thief; and while we consider government without God as a mere usurpation, we regard all religions and worships invented by men, and so having no higher than human origin, as mere swindling impositions and cheats. We believe in peace and in national arbitration as a means of perpetuating it; yet we as profoundly believe that the bravery and blood of our soldiers have bought us the peace which we enjoy, and we honor the memories of the dead and will be just to the claims of the living; and we take up and prolong the strain raised by the women of this country: "For God, and home, and native land," and trust that this beautiful and patriotic motto will soon be not only echoed by their voices, but sustained by their votes.

We, therefore, solemnly adopt and present the following, as containing a brief synopsis of the principles of our government, by which we intend to be governed in casting our votes. We hold:

1. That ours is a Christian and not a heathen nation, and that the God of the Christian Scriptures is the author of civil government.

2. That the Bible should be associated with books of science and literature in all our educational institutions.

3. That God requires, and man needs a Sabbath.

4. We demand the prohibition of the importation, manufacture, and sale of intoxicating drinks.

5. We hold that the charters of all secret lodges granted by our Federal and State Legislatures should be withdrawn, and their oaths prohibited by law.

6. We are opposed to putting prison labor or depreciated contract labor from foreign countries in competition with free labor to benefit manufacturers, corporations or speculators.

7. We are in favor of a revision and enforcement of the laws concerning patents and inventions; for the prevention and punishment of frauds either upon inventors or the general public.

8. We hold to and will vote for woman suffrage.

9. That the civil equality secured to all American citizens by Articles 13, 14 and 15 of our amended National Constitution should be preserved inviolate, and the same equality should be extended to Indians and Chinamen.

10. That international differences should be settled by arbitration.

11. That land and other monopolies should be discouraged.

12. That the general government should furnish the people with an ample and honest currency

13. That it should be the settled policy of the government to reduce tariffs and taxes as rapidly as the necessities of revenue and vested business interests will allow.

14. That polygamy should be immediately suppressed by law, and that the Republican party is censurable for the long neglect of its duty in respect to this evil.

15. And, finally, we demand for the American people the abolition of electoral colleges, and a direct vote for President and Vice President of the United States.

THE CHURCHES VS. LODGERY.

The following denominations are committed by vote of their legislative assemblies or by constitution to a separation from secret lodge worship:

Adventists (Seventh-day.)
Baptists—Primitive, Seventh-day and Scandinavian.
Brethren (Dunkers or German Baptists.)
Christian Reformed Church.
Church of God (Northern Indiana Eldership.)
Congregational—The State Associations of Illinois and Iowa have adopted resolutions against the lodge.
Disciples (in part.)
Friends.
Lutherans—Norwegian, Danish, Swedish and Synodical Conferences.
Mennonites.
Methodists—Free and Wesleyan.
Methodist Protestant (Minnesota Conference.)
Moravians.
Plymouth Brethren.
Presbyterian—Associate, Reformed and United.
Reformed Church (Holland Branch.)
United Brethren in Christ.

Individual churches in some of these denominations should be excepted, in part of them even a considerable portion.

The following local churches have, as a pledge to disfellowship and oppose lodge worship, given their names to the following list as

The Christian Cynosure.

EDITORS.

J. BLANCHARD. HENRY L. KELLOGG.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, MAY 20, 1886.

CAPT. WM. TOURTELOTTE was misspelled in last week's editorial of the Cynosure, and the types obscured our meaning in some, and destroyed it in other places, the worst mangling for years.

In 1834 Dr. Leonard Woods, of Andover, Mass., said to the writer, "I firmly believe some more judicious men than the Abolitionists will take up that holy cause, and it will go through New England." It did. But the New England ministry sunk fifty per cent of their influence with the people by "shunning to declare the whole counsel of God." They were deterred by Garrison's heresies. The lodge has no heresies. It is sound and safe.

Politics should promote morals and religion, and time was when it did so. The American platform contains three things omitted from ordinary politics, viz.: God, the Sabbath, and the Bible: and the Christian who votes that ticket does so much to force these three pillars of our republic back into the temple whence they have been torn out.

AMERICANS should pray that God will send us candidates fit to become and to be prayed for as rulers. A few years since the secular press shunned religious topics, but now the vilest sheets chronicle revivals and gazette Moody, Jones, and their co-evangelists, because the masses attend their meetings and demand such reading.

PROHIBITIONISTS who are such from conviction, ten to one are opposed to secret societies. Mrs. Mary B. Willard, Mary Allen West, and almost every woman speaker at the Washington Woman Suffrage Conventions, loathe the secret orders and make no secret of their loathing. Why cannot steps be taken to form one great American party under the American name, and speedily?

THE ILLINOIS STATE CONGREGATIONAL ASSOCIATION, which meets at Moline, May 24th, next week, has given one evening to the discussion of the labor troubles by three of their strong men. Dr. Joseph E. Roy, who spoke to us at the Batavia monument and in Wheaton court-house, is one of the speakers. He sees too clearly that the Satan worships of the lodge are the seminal principle of mischief in these disastrous turmoils to omit a clear, distinct statement of this great truth, which the American people deplorably need to know; and his Christian and gentlemanly presentation of the subject will ensure its favorable reception by the entire State Association.

VICK'S FLORAL GUIDE, a monthly book of near 250 pages, is itself a flower garden as well as guide. Every young house-keeper who has a flower-bed of two feet by ten should have this charming monthly; and every young girl who hopes to be one should send ten cents to James Vick, Rochester, N. Y., and obtain a sample copy. For instruction and enjoyment it is worth more to the young than a wheelbarrow of the gewgaw picture books, which are sold for young children. Flowers would be miracles if they were not familiar, and here, in a single number, for ten cents, you get a thousand beautiful pictures of vegetable realities from a passion-flower to a cabbage. And it is as good for the aged and middle-aged as for the young. For, like Solomon, it discusses all that grows, from the cedar of Lebanon to the hyssop, which springs from the garden wall, and there is > "Not a flower on all the speckled bosom of the earth

> But shows some touch in freckle, streak or stain,
> Of G-'s unrivalled pencil." —Cowper.

DR. R. H. McDONALD.

Our associate, Mr. Kellogg, addresses the Congregational clergy of San Francisco, on the Anti-secret Reform, in the Silver Hall, owned by Dr. McDonald. Mr. and Mrs. Loveless held meetings in the same hall, and all unite in giving the doctor the highest praise as an earnest, devoted Christian. Gen. O. O. Howard now commands on that coast, and he is at heart opposed to the lodge, as is every intelligent child of God; "Aaron, the saint of the Lord," included. Mr. Kellogg hopes the General will favor the reform.

Dr. Warren, the Congregational Bishop of California, and his excellent wife were graduates from Knox College under the writer, and Mrs. Church was a member of the faculty. They will receive Mr. Kellogg joyously, as will also Captain Tourtelotte and Judge Daniels, formerly of Wheaton. If the California ministry can "make strait paths for their feet" through the dismal labyrinth of secret societies Dr. McDonald would see his way out, and may yet be President of the United States. If he was clean out of the lodge, the conscience wing of Prohibition would join the Americans, and the united party would give him a million of votes in 1888 and elect him in 1892.

Will Mr. Kellogg see Dr. McDonald and show him this writing, and tell him if need be the writer will back it with his blood?

Dear Father Kennedy never tired of the praises of Dr. McDonald, and if he is but half as good as represented, he must loathe the lodge at heart and only tolerate it as Aaron did, because the people are bewitched by it.

CAN'T FIND THE SEAM.

Take the ministry of the Protestant churches as a whole, solid body, and the church of God never had a purer, more learned, or better set of men, lay or clerical, in any former age of the world—men who would do more things in the course of the year from no motive but conscience and God's fear. And, as a whole, the Congregational ministers are not "a whit behind the very chiefest" of them. Yet, Presbyterian and Congregational ministers once closed every pulpit-door against Charles G. Finney from Oberlin to Boston; and in 1836 the Methodist General Conference, met in Cincinnati, censured two of their best men—George Storrs and Orange Scott—for praying at an anti-slavery meeting in that city. And in 1868, at Chicago, the same General Conference rescinded that censure "for the honor of the church;" after Storrs and Scott were dead and slavery had fallen. That wicked and merciless censure had stood on their records thirty-two years. Popular opinion was now changed, and that unpopular record was wiped out, but no regrets expressed for their wicked treatment of two Methodist preachers who were prophets of God and goodness. Yet the good Bishop Simpson was in the chair when the censure was repealed.

WHY WAS THIS? The answer is complex; but the chief reason of such conduct was they could not find the seam, or how to rip off the leprosy of slavery. Some said, "Slavery is not sin per se," and so took it into their churches and sheltered it as slavery per factum. Some, as Dr. Leonard Bacon said in his sermon at Joshua Leavitt's funeral, said they "could not believe the Abolitionists would succeed." Some were Gradualists; some Colonizationists; and so they all stood together, doing nothing against slavery, but acting together against Abolitionists, whom they "gave up to be crucified" by the mob.

The lodge difficulty is identical with that of slavery. Freemasonry is to-day unpopular with the great mass of good men; and yet there are Masons in all the prominent Congregational, Presbyterian, Methodist, Baptist, and especially Episcopalian churches. This silences pulpit, press and platform; and the men who do the paying and the praying are ignorant. If the American ministry to-day saw clearly that the lodge is disintegrating the churches and destroying the government; if they saw clearly what to do; if they knew that the lodge is a boasted cosmopolitan religion, excluding Christ to take in deists, Mohammedans, etc., who hate him; if they saw that the worship question underlies and outweighs all other questions, and that the United States is now forsaking God's altar and following Baalim (i. e., the gods of all sorts,) precisely as in Elijah's day; and if they could "find the seam" and how to rip off the lodge-leprosy, its tawdry and terrible abominations: there is virtue and faith in Christ enough in the American ministry to cause them to fall on their faces as Israel did, shouting that "Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father." The world would lose its hold, and the lodge its terrors. Anti-Masons are orthodox. Abolitionists were heretics. Garrison, Theodore Parker, and even Wendell Phillips hated the ministry and churches. Anti-Masons do not. And yet the same blindness is coming on the ministry and churches. They can curse Carter Harrison because he wants Bohemian votes, and gives them liquor to get them. But they do not see that a worse worldliness makes them shrink from offending Masons. Mayor Harrison belongs to the state. The ministry of the church and the state, though "ordained of God," is a league in which children of God unite with unregenerate men for civil objects. The case of Harrison will be more tolerable in the day of judgment than will theirs. Let us hope, believe and pray that we are to escape another baptism of blood; that we shall "find the seam" which separates Christ's worship from Satan's, and taught by the late labor earthquake, see that the thing to do is to separate Satan's worship from the churches, so as to cease grieving the Spirit of God.

It is due to our compositors to say that not all the errors in our last issue are chargeable to them.

The ministers of the city were supplied with the Cynosure of the 13th and their attention called to articles and editorials.

A French Evangelical Mission has been opened at 135 W. Van Buren street, Rev. P. A. Seguin, evangelist. We bespeak for Pastor Seguin the sympathy and co-operation of good people. We have a large foreign-born population who greatly need instruction in practical religion. In the faithful preaching of the Gospel is our only hope.

Many will regret the illness of Elder W. W. Ames, of Menominee, Wis., but will rejoice to know that he is gradually regaining strength. The cause of reform can but illy afford to dispense even temporarily with the labors of one who has been so active and suffered so much for the truth. Let every Christian pray earnestly for his restoration to health, and to the work to which he is consecrated.

It is sometimes necessary to secure the chemical analysis of a deceased human body to detect the existence and kind of poison it contains. No person, however, would be likely to enjoy such investigation; nor could it be properly committed to any but those fortified by scientific knowledge and capacity to endure the offensive. We have no case of physical poisoning to present, but to our ministerial brethren who have the moral discrimination and abhorrence of evil that have characterized that brave man, Anthony Comstock, we wish to commit the unpleasant task of reading the April and May numbers of the Masonic World, and its description of the origin and character of Freemasonry. We are sure it will impress them with a profound sense of duty to warn all young men to shun and abhor a system so full of moral pollution. Masonic literature, of which this is only an exaggerated specimen, is being constantly published.

Among the thoroughly faithful and indefatigable workers for humanity and the cause of true reform, no name stands higher than that of John G. Fee, of Berea, Ky. While others have abated somewhat of their zeal and toned down in some degree their radical adherence to the absolutely true in religious and political reform, our brother, with his declining years, has kept up as bold, steadfast and untiring a devotedness as when he was on the hopeful rather than the waning side of life. Among the enterprises undertaken by Mr. Fee, and that have proved a marked benefit to the colored people of Kentucky as well as to Christianity in general, is the school and church at Camp Nelson, Ky. These have long been in need of a new building. One has been for about two years nearly completed, and still lacks a few hundred dollars for its completion. We ask the friends of Christian education to send us sums of from $5 to $100, and enable this good brother to put this school and church in good running order before the commencement of the fall term. We will see it faithfully applied.

Among the many benevolent institutions is the American Order of Hibernians that has recently held its convention in St. Paul, Minn. They number 159,175. They have initiated during the year 27,815. The total money now held by the order is $974,242. Other property, $532,762. The number of military companies that are armed and drilled is thirty-five, an increase of eleven during the year. When it is remembered that the order is made up of those who are alien in both nationality and religion, that they were the outgrowth from and intimately connected with the Mollie Maguires who have been notorious for their conspiracies and murders, that they represent those who are anxious to embroil us in a war with Great Britain, and that they have a considerable force armed and drilled, and owning $76,900 worth of material with which to execute their commands, we see much to give us pause. We have no objections to Hibernians as such, but we want to see them independent, self-respectful citizens, and if any are soldiers, we want them sworn to United States Government and not to a secret empire.

There has been within the last thirty years a constant and alarming increase in the cases of insanity, idiocy, and also of suicide. In this country the insane increased from 1850 to 1880 from one in 1,500 to one in 600. In England and Wales the number of insane has doubled in less than twenty years. The same is true throughout Europe. In the meantime there has been an advance in education, wealth and the supply of the physical wants of the people. The causes of this mental disease are doubtless (1) The greater use of stimulants and narcotics. (2) The devotedness to the accumulation of wealth that has subordinated all other considerations, and (3) The increased desecration of the Sabbath by our railroads and the inhabitants of the cities. An able article from President Seelye, of Amherst, calls attention to these facts, and urges that not only the intellect but the moral capacities be cultivated in our schools if we would check this terrible drift towards national destruction. We heartily indorse his plea for instruction in the fundamentals of Christianity in our public schools. Let the Bible be our national text book.

THE N. C. A. ANNUAL MEETING.

The annual meeting of the National Christian Association is fixed by by-law No. 4 on the third Thursday in June of each year. Corporate members and all friends of the N. C. A. will please notice that this occurs on June 17th, and prepare to be prompt in attendance at 10 A. M. There will be two sessions, morning and afternoon, for the transaction of business at No. 221 West Madison street, Chicago, and an evening session at some suitable place provided by the programme committee. F. W. CAPWELL, President.

W. I. PHILLIPS, Secretary.

ATHEISTIC SCHOOLS.

To the Christian Ministry:

REVEREND AND DEAR BROTHER:—As a "watchman on the walls of Zion," you have noted the agitated condition of our country, and deeply regret those acts of violence which have marked the progress of the "labor movement." One wiser than T. V. Powderly has said, "The curse causeless shall not come." (Prov. 26: 2.) This upheaval and its lawless demonstrations are not so much the result of poverty and fraud as the expression of atheistic sentiments pervading the reckless masses composing "strikes and mobs." Facts are at hand proving that neither the leaders in these turbulent assemblies nor their followers are men who fear God and "tremble at his word." Their religious creed is, "No God," and contempt for the Divine ordinance of civil government. Possibly you may not be aware that for more than a century there have existed anti-Christian training-schools in the secret-lodge system, which denies Christ "before men," and puts the Bible, the Koran, and the Book of Mormons all on a level in the teaching and practice of its worship. This is practically atheism, for, "Whosoever denieth the Son, the same hath not the Father." (1 John 2: 23.) Hence the whole secret system, of which Freemasonry is the controlling center, is as Godless as any riotous assembly of communists or other system of pagan rites which have been invented by men and are inhabited by evil spirits. The rejection of Jesus Christ, contempt for his ordinance of civil government, and foresworn obedience to irresponsible leaders and unknown laws, and the surrender of private judgment, are the essence of the lodge system, and must inevitably result in riot and rebellion against the church of Christ and constitutional government.

Such ministers as Moses Stewart, C. G. Finney, David Bernard, Nathaniel Colver and A. M. Milligan, and statesmen like John Quincy Adams, Charles Sumner, William H. Seward and Thaddeus Stevens, clearly discerned danger to church and state and the liberties of the people lurking in the insidious system of secret societies, and wrote and spoke with great power against them. Their prediction is being verified when the industries of our country are suddenly thrown into confusion at the dictation of a few unscrupulous leaders, whose word is supreme law to the thousands who have sworn unquestioning obedience to official superiors. The Southwestern strike had its inception and proceeded upon precisely the same principle as the Masonic order. Hall, a Knight of Labor, was discharged at Marshall, Tex., and his employers refused to reinstate him. Martin Irons, Master of Assembly 101, ordered a strike, and 9,000 men, so the papers report, stopped work without a personal grievance, but simply at the behest of an arbitrary superior, and then prevented other men from doing the work they refused to do themselves. Strategetic points were seized by designing leaders, and, aided by multiplied secret combinations, the movement spread rapidly over the country until labor and capital were forced into a conflict, in which many lives were sacrificed, a temporary business paralysis produced, and both parties incurred serious losses. The whole movement proceeded, from its inception, upon the precise line adopted by Freemasonry—a line it has pursued in this country since the planting of its first lodge in Boston, in 1733. Please notice—

1. The recent strike was not commenced about wages. Most of the men who "went out" were "content with their wages."

2. It was a demand by lodge leaders that employers should submit to their dictation. You must take Hall back simply because we demand it.

3. It was not because employers refused to arbitrate with aggrieved individuls, for this they were willing to do, but—

4. It was continued by Irons's demand that Hoxie should "recognize" the Knights of Labor, a secret order, which (like Freemasonry,) has its own legislature, laws, courts, oaths, and penalties—all secret, as on a level with legitimate State and Federal governments.

5. It further demanded that men should be dismissed who, for any cause, would not swear their oath and join their unions.

In brief, it was simply an instance in which the plans and principles of the "Secret Empire," publicly asserted and sought to enforce by violence what it has been secretly doing for years—viz.: It has been "boycotting" trade, blinding justice, baffling officers of the law, and menacing the church and the ministry until silence has become a crime. Just so sure as atheism and anarchy produce riot and blood, just so sure will the Secret Empire compel the church and state to defend their rights, or yield the ground to those whose "tender mercies are cruelty."

Dear brethren in the ministry, has not the time fully come when, in the words of Dr. Fisch of Paris, "the church in America must stand as one man against Masonry, or be destroyed." We believe it has. To secure united and wise effort in so difficult an undertaking as the overthrow of the whole secret-lodge system, should there not be an inter-denominational, national conference called at the earliest practicable time to consider the relation and duty of the church and civil governments to the secret-lodge system? Joseph Cook, Dr. R. S. Storrs of Brooklyn, Dr. Griffith of Boston, President H. Fairchild of Berea, and others have been consulted and approve such a council. Are you in favor of it? Will you give your views personally, in writing?

Pres. J. BLANCHARD,

N. C. A. ROLL.

To Whom it may Concern:

The roll of corporate members contains the names of several persons who have not attended an annual meeting of the National Christian Association for some years, and some have not written or otherwise reported, until their whereabouts are unknown to the secretary. At the annual meeting in 1885 a committee was appointed to submit an amendment to the by-laws and present a plan to the meeting in 1886 for securing the attendance of members, and, where it seemed desirable, relieving such persons as are either unable or unwilling to act with us. I am sure that the Association has no desire to deprive a single member of his rights, and wishes to avoid any measure calculated to injure the feelings of any one, but desires to secure an effective, working body, combining the greatest wisdom and the largest number of active members possible. As I am on this committee, and wish to recommend such action as will be wise and just, I make the following requests:

1. Will you (D. V.) attend the annual meeting here on the 17th of June aprox.?

2. Will you write me, either a personal letter or a letter to the Association, if you cannot attend?

3. Will you give date of your last attendance and state how long in your judgment the Association ought to continue membership in a case where the party ceases to attend or write or otherwise give expressions of interest in the annual meeting and its work?

The time is near at hand and I hope for an early reply from each corporate member who reads this note, which will aid me in preparing a recommendation for consideration at the annual meeting.

J. P. STODDARD, Sec'y N. C. A.

MASONIC BENEVOLENCE.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—Have you statistics—definite information—showing what proportion of funds contributed by Freemasons actually go for the relief of poor persons. A friend of mine, intelligent in many respects, assumes that Masonry is not a mere savings bank, but certainly benevolent—aids orphans and widows as the church does not. This friend of mine is a Freemason and a professing Christian. Give to me facts if you can.

JOHN G. FEE.

Answer. The most careful collation of Masonic statistics shows that of the funds paid into the lodges by Masons, less than one-fifth are paid out for relief of distressed Masons or their families, or for any purpose that can possibly be called benevolent.

In 1876 the Grand Lodge of Missouri received $19,876, out of which it paid nothing for anything except salaries and expenses. The Grand Lodge of Illinois expended in 1872 $25,015.59 for various expenses, and only $100 for benevolence. In 1873 there were expended $28,822.19, and not one cent in charity. The receipts of the Grand Lodge of Iowa, by official report for 1882 was $18,204.47, and the amount paid out for relief was $1,400, which is less than 8 per cent. What these lodge expenses are, and where the money goes to, can be seen from the report of the Grand Lodge of Iowa for 1885, pp. 145 and 146:

Grand Master C. T Granger	$ 600 00
Grand Secretary T. S. Parvin	1,600 00
Grand Tyler	100 00
Add to this expenses of session	312 92
Committees	701 61
General expenses	4,212 25
Mileage and per diem to delegates	4,077 80
Special appropriation not benevolent	1,542 30
Charity fund	100 00
Gross	$11,947 38

This shows beyond question that the percentage of charity as compared to cost is very small. It is probable that in some subordinate lodges the showing would be better, but it is not probable that it can be shown that more than a mere moity is paid out for benevolence. Masons are often deceived in this respect by the reports of Masonic life insurance companies. These companies often pay out large sums, but they are in nowise benevolent societies

They take risks and do business like other insurance companies, but always receive considerably more than they pay out. These insurance companies are not a part of Masonry, but simply business companies conducted by Masons. Of the great number of benevolent institutions in Kentucky, and especially in the city of Louisville, there is one for the benefit of the widows and orphans of deceased Masons of Kentucky; but while the Masons have more wealth than any religious denomination, they do in the way of benevolent institutions not one tenth as much as the Methodist, the Protestant Episcopal, the Presbyterian or the Roman Catholic churches.

LITERATURE.

We have received the June number of Demorest's Monthly Magazine. This excellent periodical takes rank with our first-class monthlies, not only in its able contributions, but especially in its discussion of topics of current interest, both scientific, moral and social. The noble stand which its editor has taken on prohibition should commend it to all earnest friends of temperance.

The Woman's Magazine for May is received. It is published by Esther and Frank E. Hough, of Brattleboro, Vt., and is devoted to art, literature, biography, and home science. For its size and price it is both cheap and profitable; $1.50 per year.

The May number of The English Pulpit contains sermons by Canon Farrar, George Macdonald, Alexander Maclaren, Mark Guy Pearse and Dr. Westcott, together with Prayer-Meeting Talk, Sermonic Framework, reviews of new books, etc. The Pulpit occupies an entirely new field, covered by no other periodical in this country. Yearly, $1.50; clergymen, $1; specimen number, 15 cents. A. E. Rose, publisher, Westfield, N. Y.

We have received from its able author, H. L. Hastings, of Boston, Mass., "Atheism and Arithmetic," one of the Anti-Infidel series. "The alarming increase of skepticism and atheism in the land, as illustrated by the fact that, in the United States, the number of homicides was more than twice as large in 1884 as in 1883, indicates the importance of dealing promptly and vigorously with these important questions. The fact that cheap atheistic publications are being scattered by hundreds of thousands, not only through this land, but also in heathen countries where Christianity is just beginning to take root, furnishes another reason for prompt and energetic action on the part of Christians." The price of "Atheism and Arithmetic," in strong manilla covers, is 15 cents; cloth, 35 cents. We heartily commend the book to our readers.

THE HOME.

LIGHT IN DARKNESS.

I am blind and blind.
Many think I am smitten by God's frown,
And rejected and deserted of my kind.
Yet I am not cast down.

I am weak, yet strong;
I endure what I no longer see.
Poor, and helpless, I the more belong,
Father Supreme, to Thee.

O Merciful One!
When all are farthest, then Thou art most near—
When friends pass by, my weakness shun,
Thy chariot I hear.

Thy glorious face
Is beaming toward me, and its holy light
Shines in upon my lonely dwelling-place,
And there is no more night.

On my bended knee,
Recognizing Thy purpose, clearly shown:
My vision Thou hast dimmed that I may see Thyself, Thyself alone.

Veiling mine eyes I go,
Singing lays; ardent beauty round me throng;
Harps, angels' lips I seem to hear the flow
Of soul and liquid song.

Vistas new,
Where heaven's opening on my sightless eyes,
Typed rays from Paradise refresh my brow,
That earth in darkness lies.

Deep my calm!
My being fills with rapture; waves of thought
Roll in upon my spirit, streams sublime
Break over me unsought.

Give me now my lyre.
I feel the stirrings of a gift divine;
Within my bosom glows unearthly fire,
Lit by no skill of mine. —Milton.

SHALL WE HAVE ANOTHER PENTECOST?

BY NINA HOWARTH.

"And grieve not the Holy Spirit of God, whereby ye are sealed unto the day of redemption." Eph. 4: 30. That was a mighty manifestation which ushered in the Holy Spirit's dispensation. No wonder it was noised abroad and drew a multitude together, and that they were all amazed, and that so wonderful a phenomenon should have been misunderstood and criticized by the promiscuous and uninstructed crowd; and that Peter felt called upon to defend so glorious and powerful an exhibition of Divine power; and he could do it fearlessly, for he was filled with the Holy Ghost. He could explain it all very learnedly, too, for this new power, as had been predicted, brought all things to memory. It was to inhere in the church and by its sanctifying essence, potent force and inherent properties, render her invulnerable to assaults from without and schisms within.

We are aware that there are multitudes of people who profess to believe and attempt to prove that the power which wrought the stupendous miracles which resulted in the formation of the Christian church—that spiritual building not made with hands—was to end with the life and labors of the apostles. It is true the Holy Ghost has fled and no longer operates his holy and irresistible functions, save in individual experiences where a separation and consecration has prepared a fit subject; but this does not prove that it was in agreement with the Lord's will that his people should be deprived of the infallible guidance of the Divine Spirit. O, no! On the day of Pentecost they did not receive the gift of tongues only, but a blessing promised to all of God's people of every succeeding generation who should retain the pure and simple faith delivered to the saints of Christ. This power from on high cannot be retained by church or individual without holy living. As an example for preparation for the reception of this blessing of all blessings, please see Acts 1: 13-14. We find there were no divisions there. The seekers did not represent several different churches and fancy they were magnanimously conferring upon Christ and his cause signal honor, inasmuch as they had so far overcome their sectarian predilection as to condescendingly unite with those of another faith in revival effort. They were all humble, believing and obedient disciples of Jesus, and they were prayerfully consecrating themselves and waiting patiently for the fulfilment of the promise by which they were to be comforted and indued with power from on high. Although they had received the Spirit in some measure when the Lord breathed upon them and said, "Receive ye the Holy Ghost," yet, whatever advancement was wrought upon their spiritual condition by this act, it was far behind that which followed their baptism of the Holy Ghost, by which they were filled. Then we find a change, indeed, as recorded by Luke in Acts 2: 41–47. There are certain points contained in this Scripture reference worthy of marked attention:

1. "They that gladly received his word were baptized." Are we not to infer from this that where urging was required they were considered unfit subjects—rejected of the Holy Ghost?

2. The amount of work accomplished on that day (Pentecost), three thousand souls being saved under Peter's Holy-Ghost preaching. And afterward they continued steadfastly in the apostles' doctrine and fellowship. Ah! here is the secret of that success (remember, the Acts were written about A. D. 63,) which, within thirty years from Christ's death, had spread far and near, and a church gathered at Rome where the simple worship of the Gospel was celebrated in obscure portions of the city and in private rooms, lest they attract the attention of the blood-thirsty Nero.

3. They were all together and had all things common. They sold their possessions and parted to all who were needy. Was this merely the gratification of caprice, or was the practice enjoined as a principle of Christianity? Please read Luke 18: 18–23.

4. "And the Lord added to the church (not the Very Right Rev. Dr. so and so's church,) daily such as should be saved."

The Holy Ghost remained with the church until after the martyrdom of the apostles and the great apostacy, which was effected by worldly ambition and avarice. The Founder of the church had been crucified, and the Holy Ghost, his representative, was cast out that a great human organization might be reared and popes and councils reign in his stead. The natural result of these unhallowed innovations was the Roman hierarchy (two-horned beast, Rev. 13: 11–15). Under the ecclesiastical and civil rule of the popes the abomination of desolation, or secretism, in the character of the secret Jesuitical priesthood and inquisition, and which has brought judgment and destruction upon nations and people in all ages, was soon set up and its miserable doom as an organization guaranteed by an unchangeable decree; and moral decomposition and a state of barbarism set in and advanced with rapid strides until, in 1492, we find the frightful monster, Roderic Borgia (Alexander VI.), on the Papal throne.

Reform measures were set in motion, at different times, only to agitate an insupportable moral stench and fill the gaping mouth of the inquisition. They did not take into account the fact that the Saviour had said: "No man putteth a piece of a new garment upon an old; if otherwise, then both the new maketh a rent, and the piece that was taken out of the new agreeth not with the old. And no man putteth new wine into old bottles; else the new wine will burst the bottles and be spilled, and the bottles shall perish." Luke 5: 37, 38.

"But," says one, "the great apostacy can never be reproduced. The world can never again relapse into mediæval darkness. We are Protestants. Our church" (by this you mean the seven hundred denominations which, in their aggregate, you believe to be the church of Christ,) "is to convert the whole world, inaugurate the reign of righteousness—or a thousand years of universal peace—and entire freedom from sin and its effects. There can be no such elements of spiritual and moral decay in our church as those which destroyed the church of Rome."

Dear friends, do you forget that this power, which in its present stage of existence is symbolized by the "false prophet" in Rev. 19: 20, was once the virgin bride of Christ? Is there one organization among the seven hundred of which the Protestant church, so-called, is composed as pure and strong as that assemblage gathered by God's providence and sanctified by the presence of his Spirit on the day of Pentecost, and was presided over by the inspired apostles, who had been with and learned of Jesus? Are there no elements of decay in the Protestant church? Let us see.

Do you suppose the humble followers of the meek and lowly Jesus, who had not where to lay his head, could by any possible means have been induced to erect a costly church edifice, with parlors, dining-room, kitchen, pantry, smoking-room, billiard-room, dancing-hall, and every appliance to facilitate pleasurable excitement, that the profane world might be drawn in, and their money—perhaps the price of a drunkard's ruined life and of his desolate home and starving family, or the ill-gotten gain of a gambler—appropriated by such devices as a necktie, apron, pillow-case, sheet or bag festival, tea party, kettle-drum, broom-brigade, etc., etc. The world support the church and pay its debts! And it is seldom we find one entirely free from liabilities of some sort.

Now, this is not an overdrawn picture. There are churches (?) in East Saginaw and elsewhere that are guilty of all this abomination. Again, we ask, would any one of the disciples have become a party to the building up of such a system as this, though they had ample means in hand—much less if a heavy debt must be incurred? But this is not all.

Do you think Peter, James, John, or any of the other disciples would have welcomed to their ministry or communion one of our modern pagan sun-worshipers or Baalites? Would they have fellowshiped a Freemason anywhere or in any capacity? Would they have felt honored in having a vast number of their heathen temples dedicated in their name? Could they have been persuaded to enter a Masonic temple divested of their own clothing, and submit to being draped in the somewhat indelicately scant initiation suit, furnished by lodge benevolence "free"—only for this occasion, however—the most important part of which consists of a blindfold or hoodwink, a cable-tow or halter, and conducted by a Junior Deacon, who may be a profane drunkard, or, that which is infinitely worse, a rum-seller, to the door of the lodge, where they are represented as being poor, blind candidates seeking light through the rites and benefits of a worshipful lodge? Fancy a Peter, Paul or John being tilted around in this duly and truly prepared style, blinded and dragging after him a rope—a most fitting emblem of the mental thralldom and moral degradation of idolatry "in all its forms," but more especially in these secret systems where there is no restraint, not even that of shame!

Reader, how do the apostles appear in this new character? O, think of it! The very thought of such a thing seems like the gravest blasphemy, does it not? And yet the Protestant church ministry is full of just such characters; yes, of men who have passed through all the secret abominations of the lodge—through ceremonies which are blood-curdling in their blasphemy. This system would not be such an insufferable stench in the nostrils of the Most High if it was an isolated power, not seeking the fellowship of his own people, if it had not appropriated his own prerogatives and all his titles; and were it not that chief among its activities is the effort to amalgamate Christ and Belial and thus appropriate his kingdom. Let us right here open our Bibles and turn to Ezek. 8: 15–18, and read what the Lord says of this idolatrous system. The whole chapter is an exposure, in vision, of all its forms, both ancient and modern. The verses we have specified apply to Freemasonry and its kindred orders, though in the vision it had not encroached quite so far in space and rights as at present:

"Then said he unto me: 'Hast thou seen this, O son of man? Turn thee yet again, and thou shalt see greater abominations than these.' And he brought me into the inner court of the Lord's house, and behold! at the door of the temple of the Lord, between the porch and the altar, were about five and twenty men, with their backs toward the temple of the Lord and their faces toward the east; and they worshiped the sun toward the east. Then he said unto me: 'Hast thou seen this, O son of man? Is it a light thing to the house of Judah that they commit the abominations which they commit here? For they have filled the land with violence, and have returned to provoke me to anger; and lo! they put the branch (Christ) to their nose. Therefore will I also deal in fury: Mine eye shall not spare, neither will I have pity; and though they cry in mine ears with a loud voice, yet will I not hear them.'"

Horrible as is this vision, its effects are doubly intensified by the fact that these men, whom the Lord represented as worshiping the sun in the temple, "between the porch and the altar," now enter the most holy place in the professed church of Christ, and, in what is termed the sacred desk (altar) dispense the Word of God to his professed people, and from thence, also, administer to them the holy sacrament. It only requires one more scene to fill the cup of the Protestant church, i. e., the admission of those "things which they do in the dark, in the chambers of their imagery." Ezek. 8: 12. The Secret Empire, under Satan's administration, is straining every department of its ponderous machinery to add this, another work of fatal ruin, to its many like achievements.

How superficial was the work of the Reformation! It seems like a criminal oversight in the reformers of that period that they failed to strike at the root of the apostacy, i. e., the corruption of the ordinances of Christ, by which the Holy Spirit was grieved away; that this old leaven, with all its schismatic capabilities, was incorporated into the Protestant church to prepare the way for every species of corruption in idolatry's catalogue. Nevertheless, this being the case and its results wrought out, it must have been by God's permission, that man might behold his own incapacity to apprehend and carry forward the Christian mission in the absence of the Holy Spirit's mighty co-operation. Would that all might become conscious of this miserable failure and set themselves to the task of a thorough reconstruction!

We hope most, if not all, of the workers in the Christian Association reform realize the fact that we are living in the last days of human probation.

Destruction awaits the world at the very time when popular professors look for its conversion. What a delusive hope, and how fondly cherished! These see no danger, and scoff at those who obey the prophetic injunction, "Blow ye the trumpet iu Zion and sound an alarm in my holy mountain. Let all the inhabitants of the land tremble, for the day of the Lord cometh, for it is nigh at hand." Joel 2: 1. "When they shall say, 'Peace and safety,' then sudden destruction cometh upon them." 1 Thess. 5: 3.

Chap. 13 of Revelatious briugs to view two powers symbolized by beasts. The first is introduced and a description of his chief characteristics given in the first eight verses of that chapter. The second appears in the 11th verse, aud is described as having two horns like a lamb, and speaking as a dragon. The first arose up out of the sea, denoting its political or civil character. The second came up out of the earth, denoting his ecclesiastical character. These powers were united in criminal intercourse. The first Roman imperial government was in the closest governmental relations—in fact, the two governments were practically one—with Roman Catholicism; and this connection converts the moral and spiritual attributes of the church into the dragonic—persecuting—spirit of a wild beast. During the combined action of these two powers, the latter power caused to be made another, third power, which was an artificial representation of the first power—a ten-horned beast. This "third" power is symbolized by an image. This image was an idol, through which the first beast and also the dragon were worshiped. Now, the 14th chapter of Revelations, 9th to 12th verses, introduces our time and work. Here, under the third angel's message, we have these three powers in the form of dreadful objects of worship: The worship of the beast, civil government; the reception of his mark, Roman tradition; and the worship of his image, Freemasonry and its numerous offshoots—the whole representiug a vast Secret Empire, more persecuting and blasphemous than its original, and more dangerous because of its secrecy.

By reading this message carefully, we can ascertain the nature of our work. First, we would explain fully the nature of the mark of the beast—the Catholic church, symbolized by "Mystery," Babylon, the mother of harlots and abominations of the earth, and in Rev. 16: 13 symbolized by "false prophet," out of whose mouth, and out of the mouth of the dragon, and out of the mouth of the beast, came three unclean spirits—spirits of devils. Here we have the joint action of these three powers at work and in coalition with mystic Babylon, the harlot daughters of the Romish church, who were seduced by her false doctrine and abominations. We now find the whole world in idolatry, worshiping the devil through these moustrous organic idols. It is druuken with the wine of their illusive professions, cunning appeals, abnormal practices, and extravagant promises. It has come to believe that these organisms, with the support of all the isms of their creation aud other agencies which they control, is sufficiently mighty to break God's prophetic Word and keep this sin-corrupted world jogging along in their service for thousands of years to come. In view of this state of things, where is the path of duty? Where is that narrow way which leadeth unto life, and which few find because broad is the way that leadeth to destruction? See Matt. 7: 13, 14.

First of all, we must make our escape from all these Satanic delusions. We know by experience that this implies self-crucifixion—that it requires the martyr-spirit; but if we would have everlasting life, we must follow Christ without the camp, and, if need be, through Gethsemane's agony, before Pilate's judgment-seat, and to the cross. Remember, "He that findeth his life shall lose it; and he that loseth his life for my sake shall find it." Matt. 10: 39. Again, "So, likewise, whosoever he be of you that forsaketh not all that he hath, he cannot be my disciple." Luke 14: 33. There is but one way of escape from all forms of idolatry, i. e., to come out of all apostate organisms, gather to the name of Christ, and cry mightily day and night for the return of the Holy-Ghost power.

The channels of iniquity have doubled, yes, quadrupled their volume in these last days. Shall we have another Pentecost? We may, if placed in the same consecrated attitude as were those who composed the first gathering upon whom this mighty shower of Divine grace was poured. Is it reasonable to suppose that down here, in the end of the world, where, as is predicted, iniquity abounds, and because of which the love of many has waxed cold, that our merciful Creator would refuse to pour out blessings upon his poor, waitiug, tried and tempted subjects, if they complied with the conditions upon which blessings are offered? No; God does not will that we stem the tide of evil which is upon all the world to try men's souls with only natural powers of resistance. Christ said, "Every plant which my heavenly Father hath not planted shall be rooted up." Matt. 15: 13. Can this declaration come true without the instrumentality of a people endued with power from on high? Never! Let us come up to the help of God against the mighty where he can arm us for the conflict with the beast and his image, which is already gathered with a force which, for numbers, is as the sand upon the sea-shore, and, for strength, worthy of the display of God's Almighty power.

East Saginaw, Mich.

THE HIDING-PLACE.

A Christian lady was employed in teaching school. During the session a terrible disease swept iu among her scholars. One seat became vacant after another till but few were iu attendance. All were sorrowful and afraid. Yet the teacher continued her work and maintained her usual cheerfuluess and composure. One morning she entered the school-room and found a very small number present. They gathered close by her side as if for safety. Two of their number that day were lying pale and cold in their beautiful coffins.

"Oh, what shall we do?" exclaimed one of the children. "Do you think we will get sick and die too."

The teacher gently tapped her bell as a signal for silence; then spake with gentle, hopeful tone. "Children, you are all afraid of this terrible disease; you are sad because your dear little friends are dead; and you know not but you may die, too. I know only one way of escaping; and that is to hide."

The children were bewildered; such a thought seemed almost irreverent as they were taught to believe God could send disease upon them no matter where they might be. They had never dreamed of hiding. But their anxious minds were soon relieved as the teacher continued, "I will read to you about the hiding-place." And she opened the Bible and read to them the ninety-first Psalm; "He that dwelleth in the secret place of the Most High shall abide under the shadow of the Almighty. There shall no evil befall thee; neither shall any plague come nigh thy dwelling." All were hushed into quiet hopefulness with the sweet words of assurance of the Psalmist. Then the recitations followed as usual.

What a blessing is the Christian teacher! How the pious parent is delighted to know that the teacher is awakening among the children a spirit of love and trust in God. Would that all our school-rooms were thus filled with the aroma of heavenly grace. The day is coming when every one of these tender little children will need a hiding-place. While young, may they learn where to find it and be safe.

TEMPERANCE.

TOBACCO AND INSANITY.

A party of clergymen were discussing this subject, when the case of Rev. Mr. B. was mentioned, a graduate of Andover, of high standing, and for a time very successful.

"He was made a raving maniac twenty years ago by the use of tobacco!" remarked one of the party.

Another gave his account of the man, whom he called vividly to mind "with his pale face, stained lips, repulsive breath and quivering hand." The abject slave of the weed,—he chewed "negro-head tobacco,"—a match for any man who has not the iron nerves of an African goat or a horse. He preached three years with unexampled popularity and success. His health then failed, and no one knew the cause. A few months rolled away, and he utterly broke down, yet still no one knew the cause. In a few months more he became a maniac, relinquished his pulpit, and was as wild as the man found "cutting himself with stones among the tombs," and no one knew the cause. He was then taken to an asylum for the insane, and remained twenty years! He there breathed a fetid atmosphere, paced the floor of confined walls, stared upon the outside world through iron grates, cursed himself, cursed his wife and children, and in his wild ravings "dealt damnation round the land," thus day and night champing tobacco as a fretted horse champs his bit. He was once pacing his room as he had aforetime, year by year, when a change came over him. He stopped abruptly, and in a sort of soliloquy exclaimed; "Why am I here? What brought me here? What binds me here?" His soul burstiug with indignation, he cried aloud, "Tobacco! Tobacco!" He then walked backward and forward; then bursting into tears, he cast the foul plug through the iron grates, and looking upward to God, he said, "O God, help, help! I will use no more."

Mr. B. dropped his tobacco, and the sad, dark eclipse fled from his beautiful mind, and it came out from the horrible storms and tempests of insanity clear as the sun and fair as the moon. He soon regained his health and vigor, and again preached the Gospel of the blessed God, and after ten years of arduous service, he died, revered and beloved.—George Trask's Anti-Tobacco Tracts.

SAM SMALL ON THE LABOR QUESTION.

I think every man in this country ought to look more at the liquor question than at the eight-hour law. There is many a hungry man in this country, uot because the eight-hour law is not in force, not because of the greed of employers, but because no employer will hire him at any price on account of his habits. I'd like to become the chief of the Knights of Labor to-night if I could insert in the constitution a clause that no man should become a member who would not become a teetotaler. [Applause.] A just workman, an honest workman, a sober workman will get his just dues whether an eight-hour movement is in force or not. I love the laboring mau because I am one, and I have spoken in favor of them from the hustings and the pulpit. I want to see the time come when the sweat of labor will be a greater honor than the Legion of Honor in France, or the Order of the Garter in England. And that day will come if the workingmen of America will become sober, Christian workingmen. And if you have tried all means and failed, remember that no matter how dissolute, or debauched you are, or how sinful or how vile, you can cast your sins all on Christ and he will bear them for you. It's his business to look after them. God be praised that we have such a Saviour. Now, how many of you here will say I'm against liquor, and will do what I can to down it?

Two-thirds of the audience stood up, and after thanking them Mr. Small said there were some who did not stand up, and he wanted to know if there were any who would say now they would quit drinking. A half dozen stood up, and after a prayer by Mr. Hemingway, the audieuce was dismissed.

The Governor of Iowa has made a uoble stand in regard to enforcing the prohibitory law of that State He seems to realize that law does not euforce itself, but that it is the duty of the officers to execute it, and of the people to encourage and aid them. If officers will fearlessly regard their oaths, and honestly endeavor to fulfill their sworn duty, and temperance people will cheer and support them, there will be no more foolish talk about prohibition not prohibiting. We commeud the following proclamation of the Governor of Iowa, which was issued on May 3d.—Midland.

Whereas, The people of this State, at a non-partizan election, held on the 22nd day of June, A. D., 1882, expressed themselves in favor of prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors as a beverage; and

Whereas, The twentieth general assembly enacted a law in compliance with such expressions; and

Whereas, The twenty-first general assembly ameuded the law to secure universal enforcement; and

Whereas, A very large number of persons are petitioning for pardons and remissions of fines for offenses committed under such law; now, therefore,

I, William Larrabee, Governor of the State of Iowa, relying with confidence upon the loyalty and true Christian spirit of our people to sustain all measures adopted for the promotion of the general welfare, do under the pains and penalties of the law, warn all persons engaged in the illegal sale of intoxicating liquors to desist from such unlawful practice, and I do hereby give notice that wilful violations will hereafter have no claim on executive clemency. And I call most earnestly upon all the good people of the State to aid, to the best of their ability, in the enforcement of the law. Especially do I call upon all temperance societies, and other bodies orgauized for kindred purposes, to realize the necessity for new energy iu their labors. Let the priests, ministers, teachers and the press use their best efforts to enlist the moral forces of the State in this cause. Let the judges, attorneys, and other officers of the courts be painstaking and persistent in enforcing law, both in letter and spirit. Let the sheriffs and peace officers be fearless and vigilant, and let the mayors and municipal officers awaken to new zeal in their efforts to secure an observance. I exhort all citizens to lay aside partizan differences, and by united and determined efforts, banish the dram shop from Iowa.

(Signed) WILLIAM LARRABEE.

The remedy for an aching tooth is extraction. Where there is no tooth there is no pain. The remedy for drunkenness is prohibition. No liquor no drunkenness.

Total, 34 churches, 53 ministers, and 2,498 members.

—"Yellow Hawk," ten years ago a painted savage, is now the pastor of a Congregational church in Dakota, living on his own farm of 160 acres, under fence, well stocked and in good cultivation, with garden and flower-beds, his comfortable house and furniture being as civilized as those of most white settlers on the frontier.

—The pastor of a United Presbyterian church at Allegheny, Pa., having requested the congregation to attend divine services without wearing "jewelry, seal-skins and plumes," resolutions were passed in accordance to attend church "in plain garments."

—There are forty-two Protestant church edifices in New Mexico, belonging to the different denominations as follows: Methodist Episcopal, 16; Methodist Episcopal South, 7; Presbyterian, 12; Protestant Episcopal, 3; Baptists, 2. Thus in a territory covering an area of 122,580 square miles—larger than all the New England States with New York added, with a population of 130,000, there are but forty-two Protestant church edifices.

—The Southern Baptist Convention met last week in Montgomery, Ala. Dr. Mell was elected president. With the exception of eight years he has been president since 1863. Ex-Gov. Thomas H. Watts delivered an address of welcome. He said one source of regret was that there was any division. He hoped there would soon be one Baptist convention of the United States. Fifteen States were represented in the convention by over five hundred delegates. Missionaries from China, Mexico and Italy were also present. A report was adopted for raising $10,000 to be expended in evangelizing the colored race in the South. The discussion of means for reaching the colored people was long and interesting. An incident of the discussion was a speech by the colored pastor of a Baptist church in Chattanooga.

—The Island of Erromanga, where five missionaries successively fell victims to the ferocity of the cannibals, is now accessible to missionary work in every part. During the past year the Lord's Supper has been thrice administered in the presence of 500 natives. The Presbyterian church now numbers 196 adult members and 36 teachers. The people have supplied during the year all the food required for the missionary and his family, besides contributing about 2,000 pounds of arrowroot and about $85 in money.

—An attempt at revival of idolatry is reported from the Telugu Islands. The missionary work among these Telugus has been attended with marvelous success, the baptisms in each year being numbered by the thousands. Now the idolators seek to get even with the missionaries and win the people back to the faith of their fathers. They go among the Christian converts bearing on bamboo poles small idol houses.

—We notice that there is a proposed union of Baptists and Congregationalists of England. We should not wonder greatly if this should be accomplished. They stand nearer to each other in their doctrines, forms of worship and methods of work generally, than any other dissenting denominations of England. The only thing that divides them is the form of baptism, but the Baptists in England are not close communicants, as most of them are here; and looked at from the standpoint of the New Testament, the differences between these denominations are of the smallest.

—Three years ago the American Home Missionary Society (Congregational) inaugurated systematic work among the immigrant population of this country. Since then the number of German Congregational churches is said to have doubled. The German department of the society is now directing its energies toward an endowment of the German school at Crete, Neb., for which $25,000 is asked, and to the selection of suitable young Germans to enter this school or the Theological Seminary at Chicago to be trained for missionary work.

—The following statistics of the Welsh churches are taken from the most trustworthy sources: In the year 1881 the population of Wales was 1,571,267; the nonconformist denominations comprise 864,389 of this number, and possess 4,447 churches; Calvinistic Methodists (Presbyterians), 277,290; Congregationalists, 276,201; Baptists, 195,631; Wesleyan Methodists, 66,438; Primitive Methodists, 19,382; Unitarians, 5,000, and Methodist Free church, Society of Friends, and Scotch Presbyterians, number 1,608.

AFRICA'S NEW STATE.

The substitution of Belgian for English officials on the Lower Congo, the preparations made for the construction of the long-talked-of railway along its southern bank, and the contract just signed at Brussels for a loan of $25,000,000 to an international syndicate to colonize the Congo basin, mark a new departure in the history of the great enterprise begun by Mr. Stanley nine years ago.

Of those who speculate on the future of the Congo State, very few realize that they are speaking of a region more than one-third the size of Europe. Yet such is actually the case. The basin of the Congo extends eastward across more than three-fourths of the African continent, while to the north and south it stretches from the fifth parallel of northern to the tenth of southern latitude. With a length of 1,400 miles and a breadth of 1,200, it contains an area of 1,300,000 square miles, and a population of 40,000,000. Mere space, indeed, counts for little in estimating the value of a new colony. The whole breadth of Northern Siberia is probably worth less than the few square miles of Melbourne or Singapore. But the Congo, flowing for 2,900 miles through one of the most fertile regions in the world, where every tropical product that can be named is found in abundance, offers a bounteous harvest of gain to those who can support the trying climate of equatorial Africa, and who are willing to do their best in putting down that baneful slave-trade wherewith the Arabs of Zanzibar on the east and the Portuguese of Angola on the west, sacrificing three or four human lives for every slave captured by them, have so long devastated one of the finest regions of the whole continent.—Times.

ANTI-LODGE LYRICS.

Sing the Reform Into the Hearts of the People!

One of the most popular books against lodgery is the latest compilation of

George W. Clark,

The Minstrel of Reform.

A forty-page book of soul-stirring, conscience-awakening songs, appropriate for lectures, conventions and the home circle. What can add more to the interest of a meeting than a song well sung? What means will more quickly overthrow the power of the secret lodges than to sing the truth into the popular conscience?

Get this little work and use it for God and home and country. Forty pages.

BETWEEN TWO OPINIONS.

BY E. E. FLAGG.

Author of "Holden with Cords," "A Sunny Life," "Little People," etc.

The Best Story of the Reform.

Price, only $1.00.

Published by THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

This latest and best of Miss Flagg's works is now ready in handsome print, neatly bound. The story begins in a quiet New England home, and paints its homely joys with a delicacy and truthfulness worthy the hand of Harriet Beecher Stowe. The scene then changes to a thriving, growing, palpitating young Western city, and with great power and startling accuracy the writer leads us behind the scenes that we may see the machinery that works the liquor traffic and labor troubles. The story of the strike, the mob, the attempted assassination, the saloon-keeper's wiles, the curse of his trade, the power of the Christian faith to change him to a messenger of mercy, the criminal and the hidden power that shields him from justice, the land robbers tricks, the dark and secret conspiracies of the lodge—these and all the incidents of the book are portrayed with rare tact and great power of description. It is emphatically a book for the hour. And what is better and yet more striking, the incidents are facts, and every one a powerful and convincing argument against the lodge and the saloon.

Every temperance man and woman should read this book. No temperance story like it was ever planned, much less ably executed. A wonderful light is thrown upon the difficulties in the way of prohibition. Learn how they may be avoided.

Every one who loves to read a good story, chaste and elegant in expression, p in thought, true in incident, deeply interesting in its narrative, should read this bo

READ THESE NOTICES FROM THE PRESS:

The Free Methodist, Chicago.

"Between Two Opinions" is a story, its incidents vouched for as facts, which presents a powerful argument on these questions and must attract thousands of readers among our thinking and observant people. The plot of the story is neither startling nor novel, but it develops a wonderful strength in following the experiences of people in the common, every-day walks of life.

Free Press, Birmingham, Iowa.

It differs from the popular story, "The Bread-winners" of a year ago. It greatly differs from that book in that it is written from the Christian standpoint, and its beautiful and touching descriptions of home life and home duties and heroic self-denyings will waken a responsive echo in every heart, that has not by dissipation lost the taste for the pure joys of home.

The Religious Telescope, Dayton.

The author, Miss Flagg, is a brilliant writer. The stirring questions in American politics are undoubtedly prohibition and the labor movement as championed by the secret unions of working men, which direct the strikes that with more and more frequency occur in our cities. "Between Two Opinions" is a story, its incidents vouched for as facts, which presents a powerful argument on these questions, and must attract thousands of readers among our thinking people.

The Christian Conservator, Dayton.

This is a charming book, written in an attractive manner. It is so full of sunshine and so radiant with light that one is enlightened, warmed, and, before they are conscious of it, set against the lodge. The style gleams, glows and sparkles. It is dignified and simple. It is the right book to place in the hands of your wife or daughter to superinduce co-operation with you in anti-secrecy work. Every minister's wife should read it, and then, if her husband is not an Anti-mason, he should take his turn next and become one.

The American, Washington.

We are reading, in spare moments, Miss Flagg's new book, "Between Two Opinions," and the estimate we have thus far put upon it is that it is masterly both in style and argument. One is insensibly made to feel that he is reading facts and not fiction; that the book is not a play upon the imagination but an unraveling of mysterious circumstances which have an important bearing upon current events.

Law and Order, Boston.

The book takes high ground for prohibition of the liquor curse, for woman's ballot for home protection, and for a better and more honest brotherhood than is forced by their obligations upon the members of secret orders. It is, therefore, a valuable book for several large classes of American readers.

Christian Instructor, Philadelphia.

There are important questions pressing upon American politics to-day; two of them are prohibition and the labor question as connected with the secret unions of workingmen. This work is an expose of the twin evils, secret societies and the saloons. The truths are given in the form of a story; not startling, but thrilling experiences of home life that are vouched for as facts. The evidences presented of the impossibility of reaching the saloon keeper so long as he and the officers of the law are sworn brothers in the den of some secret society, are conclusive enough to awaken the most careless and obtuse member of society. It is a valuable book for the masses to read.

Evangelist, Berea, Kentucky.

The object of the volume is to illustrate the practical workings of Secret Societies, and especially to show how the Lodge upholds the saloon, and this very important design is wrought out with much skill, clearness and power. By reading it temperance people may learn much about the difficulties in the way of prohibition.

The Standard, Chicago.

It is written in the interests of reform, more especially temperance and Anti-masonry. The title of the story suggests the special aim of it, which is to protest against all "halting between two opinions;" in other words, is a plea for radicalism. The story is vigorously written, and will interest even readers who do not altogether believe in its doctrine.

The Pacific, San Francisco.

It is a story intended to do service against the saloons, and in favor of Womans' Christian Temperance work, and especially against the secret orders—Freemasons, Odd-fellows, the Knights of Labor, etc. No reflecting man can doubt that any combination of picked classes and individuals is liable to great abuse. It is obvious, also, that secret orders are specially capable of being used in a selfish and unprincipled way.

FARM NOTES.

POULTRY FOR PROFIT—LEGHORNS.

Like most of my brother fanciers I have a hobby, which is the Leghorn breed. I have kept the White Leghorn mostly, though the Brown Leghorn is preferred. The latter is a larger, handsomer, and more docile fowl. The Leghorns are placed at the head of the list as egg producers. I always kept my birds confined. Some complain of the Leghorns as being high flyers. I use for my yards fences one lath high. By clipping one wing, the birds can be kept within such an enclosure. I have also kept Spanish fowls in such yards, and I hope all those who have built their yards six and eight feet high will try this plan. Of course, it will not do to clip exhibition fowls. After a hen has been kept two years, she has seen her best days, and should be disposed of unless she possesses extra points, when she may be retained for breeding. Fowls should have warm dry quarters, and if well cared for, will abundantly reward the owner.—American Agriculturist for February.

THE BEST NESTS FOR HENS.

An empty barrel makes the best nest for a sitting hen. It may be set out in the yard or the orchard, and be safe from rain or storm, and if closed by a loose door in the front at night, there will be no danger from vermin. A flour barrel is sunk in the ground for one-fourth, or one-third its diameter, sloping it a little forward, to prevent rains from beating in. The excavated earth is filled back into the barrel, a nest being made in the center of it. This makes a very convenient arrangement, and gives an earth bottom to the nest, with every facility for controlling the hen and the chicks. If these nests are scattered about the yard hens will take possession of them, and when one takes to sitting, she may be furnished with eggs, and closed up with a slatted door, or a coop set in front of the barrel, and protected from disturbance by other hens. The coop will serve for feeding and watering the hen, and allow her a place for exercise. As one rarely has things ready when they are wanted for use, it is well to look after such things as these in time, especially when early chicks are raised. Where barrels are not to be had conveniently, coops made in the shape of small sheds, and weatherproof, with loose doors to close them at night, can be made through the winter, in readiness for the early sitters.—Ib.

INTERESTING FACTS ABOUT EGGS.

Five million dozen of eggs are annually imported from the Dominion, the greater portion from Quebec and Ontario. The egg import from Europe is also large, but the hens of the Canadas are by far the largest factors in this trade. And the trade increases every year. Eggs pay no duty, and when we reflect that this product comes from millions of humble sources—the poultry yards of small farmers—and that it is only the surplus that goes to market, we may well wonder where and how the billions of eggs consumed in the United States are produced. It is an interest that may be rated at many tens of million dollars. Yet it is not among the enumerations of the National Census. Let us hope that the next census, the eleventh, will cover this important field. It is probable that the egg consumption of our fifty-five million inhabitants is not less than three billion a year, at a valuation of from twenty-five to thiry millions of dollars. There are "egg trains" on the railroads of the northern frontier, and the cities and villages of New England draw most of their eggs from the border, to which they are brought by the railroads of Canada. The import of eggs at Ogdensburg alone was valued at one hundred and fifty thousand dollars for the last fiscal year. As many are entered in several other collection districts, at Buffalo, and in two districts in Maine, nearly three times this traffic in imported eggs is done. These eggs are taken from the original packages, carefully examined by candle or lamp light, and then repacked, the defective eggs being laid aside. If transportation is not immediate, the eggs are placed in cold storage warehouses, where the temperature is a few degrees above freezing, and there kept until shipped. The world must be fed, and while the imperial West feeds famishing Europe with grain, and the South sends cotton and tobacco, the favored people of the United States need not begrudge the hard-working farmers of Canada the contribution they are able to make to our needs from their little farms.—C. P. Dewey, in American Agriculturist for Oct.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Frsemasonry Illustratsd. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. A historical sketch of the institution and a critical analysis of the character of each degree, by Prest. J. Blanchard, of Wheaton College. Monitorial quotations and nearly four hundred notes from standard Masonic authorities confirm the truthfulness of this exposition and show the character of Masonic teaching and doctrine. The accuracy of this exposition legally attested by J. O. Doesburg, Past Master Unity ☐ No. 191, Holland, Mich., and others. This is the latest, most accurate and complete exposition of Blue Lodge and Chapter Masonry. Over one hundred illustrations—several of them full page—give a pictorial representation of the lodge-room, chapter and principal ceremonies of the degrees, with the dress of candidates, signs, grips, etc. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1.00

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished, with engravings showing the lodge-room, dress of candidates, signs, due guards, grips, etc. This revelation was so accurate that Freemasons murdered the author for writing it. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Prest. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7 50. Paper cover, 35 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. To which is appended "A Revelation of the Mysteries of Oddfellowship (old work,) by a Member of the Craft." The whole containing over five hundred pages, lately revised and republished. In cloth, $1.50 each; per dozen, $14.50. The first part of the above work, Light on Freemasonry, 416 pages, 75 cents each; per dozen $7.50.

History of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan. This book contains indisputable, legal evidence that Freemasons abducted and murdered Wm. Morgan, for no other offense than the revelation of Masonry. It contains the sworn testimony of over twenty persons, including Morgan's wife; and no candid person, after reading this book, can doubt that many of the most respectable Freemasons in the Empire State were concerned in this crime. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern. A book of great interest to officers of the army and navy, the bench and the clergy. TABLE OF CONTENTS: The Antiquity of Secret Societies, The Life of Julian, The Eleusinian Mysteries, The Origin of Masonry, Was Washington a Mason? Fillmore and Webster's Deference to Masonry, A Brief Outline of the Progress of Masonry in the United States, The Tammany Ring, Masonic Benevolence, the Uses of Masonry, An Illustration, The Conclusion. 50 cents each; per dozen, $4.75.

Masonic Oaths Null and Void; or, Freemasonry Self-Convicted. This is a book for the times. The design of the author is to refute the arguments of those who claim that the oaths of Freemasonry are binding upon those who take them. His arguments are conclusive, and the forcible manner in which they are put, being drawn from Scripture, makes them convincing. The minister or lecturer will find in this work a rich fund of arguments. 207 pp., postpaid.....40 cts.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry, by E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge, No. 639, Chicago, gives the correct or "standard" work and ritual of Masonry; the proper position of each officer in the lodge room, order of opening and closing the lodge, dress of candidate, ceremony of initiation, the proper manner of giving the signs, gripe, etc., are fully illustrated and explained. First three degrees. Paper cover, 35 cents.

The Mystic Tie, or Freemasonry a League with the Devil. This is an account of the church trial of Peter Cook and wife, of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a reverend Freemason; and their very able defense presented by Mrs. Lucia C. Cook, in which she clearly shows that Freemasonry is antagonistic to the Christian religion. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Freemasonry Self-Condemned. By Rev J. W. Bain. A careful and logical statement of reasons why secret orders should not be fellowshiped by the Christian Church, and by the United Presbyterian church in particular. Paper covers: price, 20 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Masonry a Work of Darkness, adverse to Christianity, and inimical to republican government. By Rev. Lebbeus Armstrong (Presbyterian), a seceding Mason of 21 degrees. This is a very telling work and no honest man who reads it will think of joining the lodge. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

Sermon on Masonry, by Rev. James Williams, Presiding Elder of Dakota District Northwestern Iowa Conference, M. E. Church—a seceding Master Mason. Published at the special request of nine clergymen of different denominations, and others. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

College Secret Societies. Their customs, character, and the efforts for their suppression. By H. L. Kellogg. Containing the opinion of many prominent college presidents, and others, and a full account of the murder of Mortimer Leggett. 2? cents each; per dozen, $2 00

In the Coils: or, the Coming Conflict. By "A Fanatic." A historical sketch, by a United Presbyterian minister, vividly portraying the workings of Secretism in the various relations of everyday life, and showing how individual domestic, social, religious, professional and public life are trammeled and biased by the baneful workings of the lodge. Being presented in the form of a story, this volume will interest both old and young, and the moral of the story will not have to be searched for. $1.50 each; $15.00 per dozen.

General Washington Opposed to Secret Societies. This is a republication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8th, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life—undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin Trial. Also the letter of Hon. Richard Rush to the anti-Masonic committee of York County, Pa., May 4th, 1831. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14th, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons, swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Ex-Presidsnt John Quincy Adams' Letters on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Thirty most interesting, able and convincing letters on the above general subject, written by this renowned statesman to different public men of the United States during the years 1831 to 1833. With Mr. Adams' address to the people of Massachusetts upon political aspects of lodgery; an Appendix giving obligations of Masonry, and an able Introduction. This is one of the most telling anti-secrecy works extant, aside from the Expositions. Price, cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00. Paper, 35 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

Judge Whitney's Defense before the Grand Lodge of Illinois. Judge Daniel H Whitney was Master of the lodge when S. L Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. HOME AND HEALTH.

THE WEAKER SEX.

Notwithstanding the assertion, so oft repeated that it has come to be accepted as truth, that woman is the weaker of the sexes, it is a question open to doubt, even if considered in a physical aspect. The late census of the State of New Jersey goes to show that the reason why there are more women than men in the world is not because there are more girls than boys born, but because the girls, being stronger, outlive the boys. Thus there are in the State of New Jersey, at the present time, nearly 1,000 more boys than girls under five years of age, while of all ages there are over 11,000 more native born females than males. This is not altogether due to the depletion of the late war, for there is a large preponderance of girls over boys under twenty, all of whom have been born since the war. The following table is instructive, and would be more startling if we could eliminate the effect of immigration, there being some 3,466 more foreign born males than females in the State, the great majority of whom must be over twenty years old: Under 5 years of age there 918 more males; from 5 to 20 years of age there are 2,113 more females; from 20 to 60 years of age there are 3,489 more females; over 60 years of age there are 3,411 more females.

It would be an interesting question, if it could be solved, how much of the increased mortality among the boys from 5 to 20, as shown by the above figures, is due to inherent weakness in the sex, and how much is the result of want of home care in the matter of sports and exposures of boyhood. The rates of increase between 20 and 60 must, however, be much greater, allowing for immigration, though those are the years of greatest peril to womanhood; while above 60 the excess of females, in proportion to the whole number of people living, is eight times as great as it is under sixty.

Woman, in many parts of Europe, are permitted to join in the rugged labors of life with a freedom which savors perhaps more of self indulgence in the sterner sex, than of a conviction that she is equally able to do the work. In Holland one may see any day a woman in harness pulling a canal boat while her stolid husband coolly smokes and steers; upon landing in Amsterdam, women porters carry your baggage, while plenty of masculine loafers stand looking on; in Vienna or in Dresden one sees women carrying mortar and laying brick, pumping water for irrigation, or wheeling away refuse, even in the palace grounds; in Switzerland they may be seen mowing hay, and carrying great panniers up the steep mountains; in Prussia they work in the fields with the cows and dogs; and in many other countries they demonstrate practically their perfect equality with men in physical strength and endurance. Even in this country one often sees a woman carrying about all day, a baby, while she sees the sights—an exercise of strength and endurance the strongest man would find beyond his capacity. Yet he calls her "the weaker sex."

It is said by Grace Goodwin, in Babyhood, that supplying a little babe with plenty of water is more important than the choice of food. The babe should have a meal of warm water, of the same temperature as its milk, to be given through the tube—if a bottle-fed baby—letting the child have all it wants. When given toward night it will insure sleep, and in many cases it will take the place of food during the night.

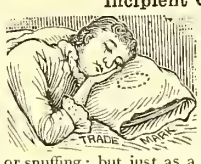
She has recommended the use of water in many cases and has never known it to fail. Having kept her own children healthy without any drugs, she has come "to believe that all the virtue of the old-time saffron and catnip tea was in the warm water."

Lady Mount Temple is using her name and influence in promoting a society known as 'The Plumage League." The object of the society is to discountenance the wearing of feathers and wings of birds, and each member of the League is pledged to refrain from using ornamental feather plumage. This new crusade of fashion will probably have the effect of putting a stop to the wholesale and wanton destruction of our most beautiful birds.

A German scientific journal recently made the statement that it would be beneficial to the eyesight to print books in dark blue ink on pale green paper.

HORSFORD'S ACID PHOSPHATE,

Decided Benefit.



Dr. JOHN P. WHEELER, Hudson, N. Y., says: "I have given it with decided benefit in a case of innutrition of the brain, from abuse of alcohol."

ALL-NIGHT INHALATION!

"A positive revolution in the treatment of Air-Passage Diseases of the Nose, Throat, and Lungs, and, for the purpose designed, as valuable a discovery as vaccination."

THE PILLOW-INHALER.

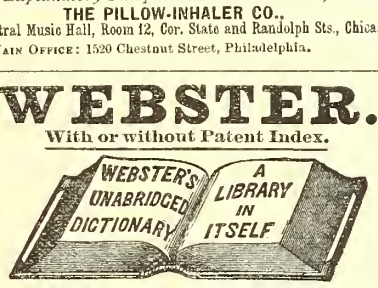
A Speedy, Positive and Permanent Cure for Catarrh, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Incipient Consumption.

It is a hair pillow, with reservoirs of evaporating liquid, the fumes or vapor of which is inhaled all night long, whilst sleeping as usual, and without any discomfort. It is used only at night, and is perfectly safe to the most delicate. There is no stomach-dosing, douching or snuffing; but just as a smoky lamp will leave a deposit on a whitened wall so the PILLOW-INHALER, for say eight hours at a time, spreads a powerful healing balm or salve on the inflamed inner coating of the diseased air-surfaces, from the nostrils to the bottom of the lungs, and hence into the blood. Old-fashioned inhalation, through a tube, for a few minutes a day, sometimes cured. Think of eight hours constant action, on the same principle, but intensified a hundred-fold! There are no pipes or tubes. The medicine is breathed in, not swallowed, and goes right to the diseased parts.

CATARRH. BRONCHITIS. CONSUMPTION.

HON. E. L. HEDDEN, Collector of the Port of New York, says: "I take pleasure in stating that the PILLOW-INHALER has been of the greatest relief, and I believe of permanent benefit, to my wife, who has been a great sufferer from Bronchial and Catarrhal Troubles, accompanied with distressing Asthma. I recommend its use to all persons afflicted with such maladies."

E. L. HEDDEN, 38 West 49th St., New York.



MR. H. G. TEELE, 50 Bryan Block, Chicago, Ill., says: "I suffered fifteen years from a severe case of Catarrh; coughed incessantly day and night. I bought a PILLOW-INHALER, and since using it my cough is gone; my lungs are no longer weak and sore, and I am in better health than I have been for years."

During the six years of its existence the PILLOW-INHALER has wrought cures of Catarrh, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption, that have been more like miracles than the usual treatment of disease. It is not expensive, and is within the reach of every one. Send for Explanatory Pamphlet and Testimonials, or call.

A Wonderful Woman,
A Wonderful Life,
AND
A Wonderful Book.

Laura S. Haviland is a quiet, gentle, unassuming Quaker woman, 76 years of age, yet vigorous, who has had a remarkable career of usefulness, and has now given to the world a remarkable history of her "Life Work" as a teacher, at an early day, of the colored refugees in Canada and in Michigan, and in other States, as a traveler down South in the guise of a "berry picker," helping out into freedom many slaves; as a nurse and preacher to the sufferers in hospitals during the war; and with Gov. St. John and Elizabeth Comstock, relieving the destitute and suffering refugees in Kansas.

LUCILLE VERNON.

Cloth.....75 cents.

THIS is a pleasant surprise in many ways. The author is Rev. W. T. Meloy, of the United Presbyterian Church of Chicago, and the book is published by the Board of Publication of his denomination. It is a love story, not "fascinating," but with so much of genial interest that the reader is in no danger of laying it down unfinished. * * * The moral purpose of the book is to describe and vindicate Christian character, in its more heroic aspects, and it is a success. We congratulate the author and the United Presbyterian Board of Publication on this literary lily of the valley.—The Interior.

"LUCILLE VERNON" is evidently not an ideal sketch, but the fictitious names used represent to a great extent real men and women of flesh and blood. The characters of many of them are by no means attractive, but are perfect counterparts of querulous, obstinate and parsimonious professors who are thorns in the flesh of many a pastor in all the churches. But as in all the churches, there were also good and true men and women at Lansington, who upheld and encouraged the pastor. * * * In its author will be recognized the worthy pastor of the First United Presbyterian Church of Chicago, and a welcome contributor to these columns.—United Presbyterian.

The heroine, who becomes the bride of the pastor of the church at Lansington, is a wonderful exemplification of how a woman who is a true wife and help-meet may throw her life and energies into the great work of saving souls; aiding, by gentle words and sympathy, wise counsel and brave endurance, the husband having charge of a congregation where the Demon of Misrule held full sway. We follow with interest the history of the wife and husband through their hours of despondency and discouragement to the happy ending, where religion, harmony and peace have gained the ascendency and the good man and wife find their reward.—Pittsburgh Daily Telegraph.

IN THE COILS;

—OR—

The Coming Conflict.

A NEW AND STRANGE STORY BASED ON STARTLING FACTS, VIVIDLY PORTRAYING A MYSTERIOUS AND DANGEROUS POWER AT WORK IN THE GOVERNMENT, THE CHURCH, AND THE HOME.

"All will agree that this is a powerfully written story."—Evangelist, (Chicago, Ills.)

"A book which we trust may have a wide circulation."—National Baptist, (Philadelphia.)

"So intensely interesting did I find it that it was hard to pause until the last sentence was read. This work places the author high among the writers of fiction."—W. W. Barr, D. D. in Christian Instructor, (Philadelphia.)

"Unless we are greatly mistaken, the work will do more to awaken the American church and people to the evils of Freemasonry than any other book recently published."—Evangelical Repository.

"The book will create a sensation in Masonic circles, and evoke criticism of a most relentless character. The courage of the author in attacking such a rock-rooted bulwark as Freemasonry is something to admire, Fanatic though he be."—Nebraska Watchman.

"Light is needed on this subject and needed badly, and we welcome this contribution to the literature of anti-secretism, and cordially commend it to the favorable attention of our readers."—United Presbyterian, (Pittsburgh.)

"A charming work, fit to be classed with 'Uncle Tom's Cabin;' it is indeed less a work of fiction. The volume is as valuable as a work of reference as it is agreeable, truthful and useful. Our young folks will not leave the book, if they begin it, till they 'see how it turns out.'"—Cynosure, (Chicago, Ills.)

Such was to Freemasonry the great NATIONAL CONVENTION held in BATAVIA, N. Y., September 1882. It gave the world

Thurlow Weed's Great Letter

On the abduction and murder of WILLIAM MORGAN in 1826, which has been the most widely published of any Anti-masonic document. The dedication of a noble granite monument to the memory of Morgan, and the able and eloquent addresses of the Convention make this a most valuable pamphlet.

SEE WHY.

It contains—
1. Portrait of Morgan.
2. Portrait of Thurlow Weed.
3. Fine picture of the Monument.
4. The great letter of Thurlow Weed and his affidavit—almost the last public act of his life.
5. Address by J. E. Roy, D.D.
6. The monument oration by Pres. C. A. Blanchard.
7. Addresses on "Christian Politics" by Pres. J. Blanchard, on the Character of Freemasonry by Prof. E. D. Bafley, on the "Freedmen and Secret Societies" by Rev. H. H. Hinman; and very interesting personal and historical reminisences.

The Facts Stated.

HON. THURLOW WEED ON THE MORGAN ABDUCTION.

This is a sixteen page pamphlet comprising a letter written by Mr. Weed, and read at the unveiling of the monument erected to the memory of Capt. William Morgan. The frontispiece is an engraving of the monument. It is a history of the unlawful seizure and confinement of Morgan in the Canandaigua jail, his subsequent conveyance by Freemasons to Fort Niagara, and drowning in Lake Ontario. He not only subscribes his NAME to the letter, but ATTACHES HIS AFFIDAVIT to it.

In closing his letter he writes: I now look back through an interval of fifty-six years with a conscious sense of having been governed through the "Anti-Masonic excitement" by a sincere desire, first, to vindicate the violated laws of my country, and next, to arrest the great power and dangerous influences of "secret societies."

The pamphlet is well worth perusing, and is doubtless the last historical article which this great journalist and politician wrote. [Chicago, National Christian Association.] Single copy, 5 cents.

The outlook of the great railway strike is encouraging for the resumption of business of all kinds. The railroads will all be prepared to receive all freight offered, though many of them expect to require police protection.

A mad dog belonging to A. J. Hall, a farmer of Cabott, Ark., bit his milch cow last week. The cow showed symptoms of hydrophobia Monday, as did also two children of Hall's, who had been nourished on the animal's milk. Other members of the family are also ill, but may survive, but no hopes are entertained of the children's recovery.

A liquor-tax bill, similar to the Scott law, was passed Thursday by the Ohio Legislature, and goes into effect at once.

A cloud-burst at Xenia, Ohio, Wednesday night, speedily filled all streams in the vicinity, and the water, laden with logs, rushing into a railway culvert, quickly formed a dam of huge dimensions, which was burst by the pressure of the water. The flood, when released, swept through the town, carrying off everything in its path. In some instances whole families were drowned. The number drowned or missing is placed at twenty seven, while the loss to property will reach $100,000.

The passage of the "Clark bill" and the proclamation of Governor Larrabee following have so intimidated the saloonists and encouraged the friends of temperance and aroused them to action that no liquor is openly sold in the Charles City (Iowa) district.

The board of directors of the Milwaukee Chamber of Commerce passed a resolution Thursday to the effect that butterine and oleomargarine, specifically branded, is a legitimate business, and that Congress should not interfere with the industry.

Anarchist Johann Most was brought down to court and released on $1,000 bail. This money was subscribed by some of Most's friends. He complained bitterly of having been handcuffed, and of his loss of $180 at the time he was arrested.

Fifteen cases of cholera and fifty-four deaths were reported during twenty-four hours at Venice, and ten new cases and four deaths at Brindisi.

In the event of war between Turkey and Greece it is probable that Russia will intervene as the ally of Greece. Such intervention would probably be the commencement of serious complications throughout Europe.

Germany, Austria, England, Prussia, and Italy have notified Greece that a blockade of her ports has been ordered.

The Socialistic member of the German Reichstag, William Liebknecht, will make a trip to the United States in September to agitate his views and raise collections.

A terrible hurricane has just swept across the middle of Spain. In Madrid seventy persons are known to have been instantly killed and 200 others have been seriously injured. The wind struck the city with the suddenness of lightning. Tram cars and cabs were overturned and broken into splinters, roofs were dislodged, and telegraph wires everywhere torn from their poles.

The papers of Germany express their satisfaction with the arrest of Most and of other anarchists, and hope that they will be severely punished.

At Venice, Friday, there were reported seven new cases of cholera and three deaths.

The uncontested passage by the United States Senate of the bill for scientific instruction on the effects of alcohol and narcotics in all schools aided by funds granted by the national government, and its passage by the House of Representatives with very few dissenting votes, is a signal triumph for the temperance reform, and marks an era in its progress. Not simply the direct results from such instruction, but especially the national testimony of its importance will have great weight with the State legislatures, fifteen of which have already passed similar laws. Great credit is due to the W. C. T. U., to whose untiring efforts we are indebted for this important measure. It is the grand preliminary to a national prohibition. It is the mining process which shall ere long result in such an unheard-of public sentiment that the liquor traffic shall be utterly exploded and thenceforth classed with other crimes that are alike destructive of human life and happiness.

The party of "Rum, Romanism and Rebellion" in the House of Representatives seems intent on resisting any action in reference to the admission of Dakota as a State. No territory ever applied for admission with so large capacities for statehood, and none ever complied more fairly with all the known conditions. The bill for admission passed the Senate with small dissent, but will be reported adversely in the House with little probability of any other being offered as a substitute. The real animus of this opposition is partly political (as it will add two Republican members to the Senate) and partly because it will add another to the States whose constitutions demand a prohibition of the liquor traffic. A political or pro-whisky party that sets itself against the people of a territory whose numbers, intelligence and enterprise are unsurpassed by anything in our national history may possibly gain a temporary advantage, but it is an advantage that will enure to its overthrow.

Pres. C. A Blanchard preached last Sabbath in the Chicago Avenue church, on the relations of secret societies to the labor troubles. The sermon was reported in the Inter Ocean of Monday morning.

Among the many influences that complicate the movement for Home Rule in Ireland and resist any peaceful solution of the great question now pending in the British Isles is the existence and course of the Order of Orangemen. Originating in a religious war and having for its object to promote sectarian animosities, it has been one of the most fruitful sources of hatred and strife that have afflicted the British nation. Like its twin sister, Freemasonry, it appeals to the meanest prejudices and scruples at no means by which its ends may be accomplished. It is even now threatening armed rebellion in Ireland in case the National Parliament shall give to Ireland a local legislature, and this threat has been approved by unscrupulous politicians. We are glad to note that the House of Commons passed to the second reading the Arms Act restricting the use of firearms throughout Ireland; an act in which the peaceful among both the Liberals and Conservatives concurred. The sooner the British people, both Protestant and Catholic, shall purge out these secret conspiracies, the sooner will there be lasting peace and a triumph of true religion and absolute justice.

GEORGE THOMPSON.

The fact that together with the great increase of crime there are 1,400 murders annually committed in the United States, and but about one in a hundred receives the full penalty of the law, while of minor crimes the proportion is much the same, shows that there are somewhere some malign influences which prevent the due enforcement of justice. Rev. Washington Gladdin enumerates some of these influences, among which are (1) excessive and unwise legislation, (2) the power of party politics which leads men to make unwarrantable concessions to the criminal classes for the sake of their votes, and (3) the selection of jurors who have no just comprehension of the obligation of their oath to render a verdict according to the law and evidence. There is much force in these considerations, but the learned doctor strangely overlooks the obvious fact that often the prisoner at the bar, the judge on the bench, the prosecuting witnesses and members of the jury belong to the same secret and sworn brotherhood, and that unless these officers and ministers of justice are better than their oaths they will unquestionably exercise partiality; sometimes intentionally and often unconsciously. Men are some times better than the organizations to which they be long, but we have no right to expect them to be so, and any plan for the maintenance of good government that does not take into account these secret fraternities is strangely forgetful of one of the most potent influences of the day.

Two avowed anarchists have been arrested who were circulating circulars teaching opposition to all government, and advertising a public meeting on the lake front Sunday, May 29. The circular claims that the constitutional right of free speech has been invaded, and that with the overthrow of all law will come a universal respect for all natural rights. That such a circular should be issued at this time proves two things. First, that anarchy is not dead. Like a hidden serpent, it is ready to spring forth at any moment in its work of destruction. No, anarchy is not dead. It has thousands of schools here in Chicago where it is assiduously cultivated. Some are licensed by civil authority. Every dramshop, brothel and secret lodge is to a greater or less extent a school for anarchy, for whatever cultivates self-indulgence and leads to the forgetfulness of God and his law leads also to contempt of and resistance to all human enactments.

The other fact is that those who discard all constitutions and laws are the most ready to claim their protection, and that the most extreme in their demand for freedom are the ones who of all others would be the greatest oppressors and compel mankind to minister to their support.

The remedy for anarchy (and its only remedy) is the reign of law and the faithful preaching of the Gospel.

John Swinton's Paper says "the bomb thrown by unknown hands amid a squad of Chicago police has been a God-send to the enemies of the labor movement." If he means the enemies of anarchy and secret despotism, he is doubtless correct. It electrified alike the city and the country, and aroused us to a sense of danger from the volcanic fires of malignant selfishness that spring from practical atheism. Its effect was, in a degree, like the battle of Bunker Hill or the bombardment of Fort Sumter. Terrible as it was, it was inconceivably better than that the accumulating forces of evil should have grown beyond the powers of repression. It is by just such lessons that men are aroused to the dangers that surround them. When our railroad corporations shall find that the men that they have compelled to violate the Sabbath have become so corrupted in their morals that they can no longer be trusted, and, like the Anarchists, shall set themselves against their employers and society, they will probably conclude that it is safer and wiser to obey God than to trample on his law.

Mr. Powderly, in a letter sent to leading papers, seeks to justify the boycott by the Knights of Labor on the ground that it is practiced by employers and by other secret associations, including the Freemasons. We have never known that employers had resorted to coercion and intimidation to prevent the employment of laborers. If such things have occurred, they were deserving of the severest reprehension. That the other secret orders, including the Freemasons, have practiced the boycott to punish their enemies and promote the interests of their "brethren," we are quite ready to believe, and do not doubt that the K. L. learned this most convenient weapon from the mother order. But the question is not whether Knights of Labor are equally privileged with other secret combinations who resort to extra legal methods or self-aggrandizement, but whether all such are not practical conspiracies against society to be resisted and put down.

The Christian Standard publishes our article, "Shall we join the Knights of Labor?" and adds the following excellent remarks: "We thank the Cynosure for calling our attention to a fact of which, when we wrote, we were entirely forgetful—that the Knights of Labor are a secret organization. Our answer would have been different if we had thought of this feature of the association. We never counsel anyone to join a secret society. We know of no good work for God or humanity to the success of which secrecy is essential; and we see dangers in secret associations, which every Christian should avoid. We have no objection to such an association of workingmen as will concentrate their strength against the encroachments of heartless monopolies, and unite their influence against strikes and boycotting, and in favor of the settlement of differences between employers and employed by arbitration. But for these laudable purposes all the proceedings of such an association may be, and should be, as open as the day."

GEORGE THOMPSON.

BY H. H. H.

Rev. George Thompson, whose portrait appears in this number, and whose name is familiar to most of our readers, was born at Madison, N. J., Aug. 12, 1817. He went to school in the same school where John Brown had received instruction. A marked trait of his boyhood was his fondness for fishing, which has all through life been a favorite recreation. He has aimed especially to be "a fisher of men." In 1832 he moved to Jersey, Licking county, Ohio. In 1833 he was converted, and in 1835 moved to Oberlin—then in its infancy as a Christian school. The moral atmosphere of Oberlin was at that time intensely religious. The men and women who had undertaken to plant a Christian college in the wilderness labored under many difficulties, and were actuated by a spirit of self-sacrifice that has been rarely excelled. Oberlin, in those early days, was a synonym of Christian earnestness which the world called fanaticism; and it was not strange that a young Christian should have been greatly strengthened and confirmed in his religious character. Such seems to have been the effect on the mind of our brother; and that depth and steadfastness of faith has been the keynote of all his subsequent life. After staying nine months, he went to Austinburg, Ashtabula county, Ohio, because Oberlin could not accommodate the crowds that flocked to the institution, for it was then and for some years known as Oberlin Institute. A building made of slabs, 12 feet wide and 100 feet long, was one of the extemporized quarters for those who flocked to the new school of the prophets. Bro. Thompson remained at Austinburg one year and a half, and then went to Mission Institute, Quincy, Ill. This school had been founded by Dr. Nelson, the author of "Nelson on Infidelity," and was an outgrowth of the revival and missionary spirit of the times.

The anti-slavery agitation was then becoming a great disturbing element in the religious and political world. Elijah P. Lovejoy, a young and talented minister, who had emigrated to Missouri, and was driven from that State because he dared to express his convictions on the subject of slavery, was murdered at Alton, Ill., by a Missouri mob. A State anti-slavery convention was held at Alton, which Bro. Thompson attended. A State anti-slavery society was organized, and influences were set in motion which in twenty-five years overthrew that system of gigantic wickedness that was then so arrogant and so strong. It was not strange that one who was naturally generous and brave should have solemnly dedicated his life to the deliverance of the oppressed and henceforth "remember them that were in bonds as bound with them."

Occasions make men what they are. It was over the dead body of his brother that Owen Lovejoy entered into covenant with God to be the apostle of freedom, and he was not alone in his apostleship. In July of 1841 Mr Thompson, with two of his associates, Work and Burr, fell into the hands of Missouri slave-holders who had entrapped them, and were made to feel the pitiless grasp of despotic power. They had undertaken to aid some slaves in crossing the Mississippi river, and were caught and thrown into jail at Palmyra, Mo. Such was the state of public opinion that this simple act of humanity was regarded as a terrible crime. They were denounced as worse than highway robbers, and their lives were in imminent danger. They were thrown into Palmyra jail, riveted to a large chain, which was made fast in the wall, and remained seventy days. Though suffering reproach and affliction, they did not fail to find help in God, and, amidst taunts and suffering, they prayed and sang praises to God, until all Palmyra was shaken by their presence. Though no law of Missouri had been violated, yet such was the state of public opinion that, for the simple act of humanity which they had attempted, they were condemned to imprisonment in the Missouri penitentiary for twelve years: and even this was better than to have been given over to the mob that was thirsting for their blood. A gallows had actually been built for their execution. They were taken in chains to the penitentiary, fastened to a chain as before, clad in prison garb, and set to work. But souls whom Christ has made free are never bound.

"Stone walls do not a prison make,
Nor iron bars a cage:
Minds innocent and quiet take
That for a heritage.
If they have freedom in their love,
And in their souls are free,
Angels alone that soar above
Enjoy such liberty."

Not even slave-holders could forever resist the influence of noble and honest hearts, and it was not long before they had the respect and confidence of the officers of the prison. They were allowed liberty to instruct their fellow-prisoners in the Gospel, and many were converted who afterwards went out redeemed and washed from all iniquity. After three and a half years Work was pardoned; six months later Burr was made free, and after serving within two weeks of five years Mr. Thompson was permitted to depart. During their prison years, besides preaching the Gospel, he wrote "Prison Life and Reflections, by Work, Burr and Thompson," which has been circulated extensively. He also wrote "Prison Bard," a collection of poems. There were few idle hours. Looking back now through nearly half a century, our brother writes: "It was the most useful and happiest five years of my life."

Soon after his pardon, the noble Christian woman who had visited him in prison, gladly shared his reproach, and has since been his faithful companion and sharer of his toils and triumphs, became his wife. After spending nearly a year in lecturing, he was called to the Mendi Mission, West Africa. This mission had been planted but a short time by the return of the Amistead captives. Mr. Raymond, who was in charge of the mission, died soon after Mr. Thompson reached the mission. For over two years he labored alone, suffering greatly from the malaria so abundant on that coast. He then returned and took out his wife, two children and a number of missionaries. Their eldest child died, and Mrs. Thompson becoming alarmingly ill, he was obliged to bring her to America and return alone. He then labored on about three years longer, when duty as well as increasing debility required his return to America.

It was the privilege of the writer to spend some years on the field of labor previously occupied by Bro. Thompson, and to converse with native Christians and African chiefs that had known him well. They always spoke of him in terms of profound admiration and respect. Perhaps no one of the many missionaries who have occupied that field ever performed more self-denying and efficient service during the same period than our brother. Since his return to this country he has brought up and educated a large family, including two adopted Africans, one of whom is a successful lawyer in Pensacola, Fla., and the other a minister of the Gospel in Mississippi.

Bro. Thompson labored nearly twenty years as a home missionary in Northern Michigan, building a church and supporting himself mainly by his labor on his farm. It was here that he encountered the anti-Christian and malignant spirit of Freemasonry, and suffered much persecution because he felt constrained to bear testimony against it. And if there is less of violence in the spirit and conduct of Freemasons than was manifested by slave-holders, there has certainly not been less of guile and hypocrisy. In this case, as in the previous reform, our brother has stood firm. He now lives in Oberlin, Ohio, where he is engaged in preparing his books for republication, among which are several descriptive of Africa and the mission work. With his advancing years, he has abated not one jot of devotedness to Christ and humanity, and still toils onward towards the city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God.

UNLAWFUL COMBINATIONS.

Judge Mallory, in his address to the Grand Jury at Milwaukee, said:

"In view of the labor troubles now so prevalent throughout the country, I think it will be well for the Grand Jury to investigate carefully and fully the nature and character of the labor organizations which exist in our midst, with a view of ascertaining whether anything in any of their constitutions, or in any oath which any officer or member is required to take binds officers or members to resort to violence or other unlawful means for the purposes of accomplishing the objects sought to be attained. Any organization whose officers or members are so bound is an unlawful organization and liable to indictment. A conspiracy to prevent, by means of threats or other unlawful means, an operative from obtaining employment in his business is indictable. It is also indictable to conspire to molest and obstruct workmen, with a view to induce them to leave their employment, and any labor organization having for its object the accomplishment of such purpose, by such means, is unlawful."

Such an investigation, though eminently proper, is wholly inconsistent with the covenant of secrecy. How is the Grand Jury to know what are the "nature and character of the labor organizations," or whether "any oath binds officers or members to resort to violence or other unlawful means for the purpose of accomplishing the objects sought to be attained," except as such members may be required to disclose all the facts in reference to such obligations and practical workings? We imagine the universal howl of execrations all along the line of the secret orders at the "invasion of privacy," "inquisitorial investigation," and "the violation of the rights of conscience" in requiring persons to reveal what they had sworn "to always conceal."

Unlawful combinations? Of course they are. Who needs to be told that in obedience to the commands of these secret organizations property has been seized and destroyed, peaceable citizens have been intimidated and driven from their work, maltreated and killed, and the entire business interests of the country have been held in abeyance?

If anything were necessary to prove that the Knights of Labor are an unlawful organization, the following testimony, taken before the Congressional Committee sent to the Southwest, makes it evident:

"Joseph Cramer was the next witness. He testified he had been a Knight of Labor, but had left that organization soon after the commencement of the strike. Before he left, and while he was a striker, he was ordered by the Master Workman of his assembly to proceed to a certain place and stop a freight train. This he refused to do on the ground it would be a violation of law, and he was expelled by the order.

"Richard O'Brien, a Knight of Labor, and foreman of the shops at De Soto, testified he saw a Knight of Labor at that place disable engines.

"Other Knights of Labor testified to the same effect, and added evidence of assault by members of the order upon men who had refused to join the strike. Two engineers of the Missouri Pacific Road testified to having received various warnings not to take out their engines. Both had been ditched while making their regular runs by obstructions placed upon the tracks, but he would not say who had attempted to wreck the trains.

"T. J. Portis, General Attorney of the Missouri Pacific system, gave, in evidence, a list of indictments returned by the grand juries against the strikers. He said 360 persons have been prosecuted for offences committed in connection with the strike. On the conclusion of his testimony the committee adjourned."

We are heartily glad that an upright judge has had the courage to demand an investigation of these organizations, and we trust that it will be made apparent that all secret associations are of the nature of conspiracies, and ought not to be tolerated in a free government.

WEEK-DAY SERMON.

BY E. E. FLAGG.

For some reason "Phebe, servant of the church which is at Cenchrea," stands in my mind as the New Testament type of strong, active Christian womanhood. To be a servant of the church when her path led through the fires of martyrdom was no light thing. The burdens she bore, the mourners she comforted, the souls that owned her for their spiritual mother are all unrecorded. Thrilling episodes there were in her life, no doubt—hairbreadth escapes from the fury of her persecutor, long journeys full of romance and peril—yet her whole biography is contained in scarcely more than fifty words. The two brief verses which tell us all we know of her are so full of wonderful touches that they seem to throw around her name the halo of a distinct personality.

"For she had been a succorer of many and of myself also." Had Phebe lived in our own land in the the time of Fugitive Slave act, she would have succored its hunted victims exactly as she succored hunted Christians in the days of Nero. And were she living now, is there any question but her voice would be raised fearlessly against that institution of darkness and terrorism which under the very shadow of holy places is binding souls to do its secret bidding, I am inclined to think she would have as small regard for lodge practice as that good sister who met a certain minister's avowal that he was an Odd-fellow and gloried in it, with the fervent ejaculation, "May the Lord have mercy on your poor soul!"

Many of our modern Phebes, zealous for temperance, full of charity and alms deeds, are yet willingly ignorant of the anti-Christian nature of Freemasonry or its blasting effect on the church. I am very sure that so did not the ancient Phebe. Yet she had more excuse. There was no anti-secret literature in her day; no Morgan had exposed those unfruitful works of darkness of which the whole Masonic brood of present times is the lineal offspring, and paid the penalty with a martyr's death. It was enough for her to know that it originated under the full shadow of heathen altars; enough to know that it was the worship of devils and not the worship of Christ; and I can imagine this strong, brave, sweet woman of that far-away apostolic age, looking with astonishment, undecided whether to be scornful or pitiful, at the indifference with which Christian women now regard the outgrowth of paganism. Would she have said of this same secret mystery of iniquity, "It is nothing that concerns me," when she knew that it concerned most deeply and directly the honor of her Lord and the life of his church? Would she have held her peace when hireling shepherds preached another Gospel? Would she have seen its bitter fruits in relaxed discipline and growing wordliness, and borne us no testimony? I trow not. Of course she would have been a very inconvenient member of some churches that I could name, and among whom I can count some of her lineal representatives to-day whose loyalty and devotion has been tried in the fire made hot as the lodge spirit of persecution can make it. I don't complain that we have no Phebes—only that we don't have an army of them. Then, and then only, will the church be purified and the foundations of secrecy be shaken with the first touch of the earthquake that foreruns his coming.

A CALL FOR OUR INTER-CHURCH CONVENTION.

BY REV. HALLECK FLOYD.

Believing that it hath been determined in the councils of the Almighty Father that truth and righteousness shall be promoted and established in the earth through the instrumentality of the Christian church, and that unity of thought and action among his people on all great moral reform questions is pleasing to him whose dominion is universal, and whose kingdom is eternal; and recognizing the feeling of unrest that exists in the public mind because of organized efforts to promote the interests of factions and classes as against the best interests of society, in matters of business, politics and religion, we, whose names follow, do hereby issue a call for a convention of Christian ministers and Christian workers of the various denominations and associations of churches of America—to be held at some city in Ohio, Indiana or Illinois in the early part of September, 1886, as may be determined by the executive committee—to consider what should be the attitude of the churches of America toward secret societies.

To this convention the Christian men and women of America are invited for prayer and counsel on this great national question. It is desired that this meeting be composed, as far as possible, of delegates chosen by their respective denominations, but a cordial invitation is extended to all who are in harmony with the object of the meeting.

The secular and religious press is requested to give this call an extended notice.

FORGOTTEN LESSONS.

Workingmen have forgotten the experience of 1877, and are repeating the conduct which then cost them so dearly. In the spring of 1877, after long depression which had been aggravated by the electoral dispute and railway wars, business began to revive. The Presidential contest and the railway wars had been settled. War broke out between Russia and Turkey, and caused increased demand for grain, arms, and other American products. Then strikers blockaded traffic on railways all over the North. Labor agitators had a harvest season, as they have now, and lived for months on the earnings of better men. The less intelligent and sober workmen resorted to violence, as they do now. The anarchists, ordinarily powerless in America, seized the occasion to cause riots in Pittsburgh, Scranton, and other cities, as they have now in Chicago and Milwaukee. The consequence in 1877 and 1878 was the most terrible prostration of industry since the outbreak of the civil war, the lowest prices known in this country for forty years, a greater number of failures than had ever occurred before in any year, and suffering inexpressible for a great body of working men and women.

The authorities in many localities also seem to have forgotten the lessons then learned at the cost of much bloodshed, and by the light of the flames which destroyed millions of property. After the riots of 1877 every sane workman, and every other law-abiding citizen, came to know that the only way to deal with lawless violence was to put down sternly and mercilessly the very first beginnings, at what ever cost of life. All learned that the sharpest possible distinction must always be made between the peaceful strikes of labor and any resort whatever to intimidation or force, and that the worst enemies of labor, as of society, are the weak officials who palter with a mob because it pretends to have the cause of labor in hand. Had not the Mayor of Chicago this year been a demagogue, whose courtship of the worst elements has for years encouraged lawlessness there, the authorities of that city would never have allowed the anarchists to sweep away any body of working people, however ignorant or reckless, with the idea that mob law for the cause of labor would be tolerated in America, or could benefit the working people.

The cause of honest labor has been set back for years again by these violent outbreaks. Let it be noticed that every one of them begins in an attempt to intimidate laborers who are not on strike, and do not want to be. Strange to say so capable a man as Henry George is quoted as defending intimidation in support of strikes, on the ground that the strikes could rarely succeed without it. But do not sensible workers begin to see that intimidation is lawbreaking, and therefore the first step in that fatal path which leads inevitably to mob-law, rioting, prostration of industry, and great suffering to labor? The first resort to violence or intimidation, for the purpose of making a strike successful, leads to others. The example is contagious, and the movements of labor this year have to a strange extent become identified with the counsels of anarchy. Cannot industrious men see that it is the very height of folly for them to send capital into panic by lawless acts? It is bad enough to embarrass industry by any mistaken and excessive demand. But an experiment on the eight hour basis might have been made in peace, and, had it proved a failure, in peace it could have been abandoned. Instead, violence and rioting now threaten to disturb all industry to such an extent that, had the experiment the brightest prospects of success, it could scarcely end otherwise than in failure. And if it fails, and years or months of prostration result, and the great army of the unemployed seeks work on any terms, do not laborers see that they will have lost all that they had gained or hoped to gain, and more? Labor has no other enemy on earth so dangerous as the man who counsels the first of intimidation or of lawless violence.—N. Y. Tribune.

SECRET SOCIETIES AND THE CHURCH.

Noticing the statement in last week's Worker that in a certain meeting 87 new members have been received this year, with 20 more applications, I incline to call attention to the fact brought out a few weeks ago by a Chicago weekly, where a correspondent states that the above mentioned meeting received last winter 70 or 80 new members, some of whom were Freemasons and Odd-fellows, and that in consequence of this mixture, the Friends' meeting-house at that place was closed against C. F. Hawley, who labors to "defend Christ and the Christian religion against the subtle efforts of Satan to dethrone the one and subvert the other, through the agency of the secret lodge system."

The writer of these lines has noticed with regret the tendency of some evangelists and meetings to "scoop in" members indiscriminately, for a show, and arguing that the church has held "too nice notions" of propriety, and the reason Friends have not succeeded to gather large and influential congregations in cities, like other churches, is on account of these too nice notions, etc.

It would be well to pause, and take warning from the United Brethren church, which a few years ago aspired to become a "popular" (?) church, and, grappling with the city church question, some in their church found they had "too many nice notions," and set to work to accommodate the church to the wants of the lodge and the saloon-governed cities, where, by the way, American institutions are a practical failure. That the U. B. church has made a grand mistake, no one will doubt who is conversant with the present status of the church.

Secrecy has now got such a hold that the church is gasping for living breath, and in a state of disintegration consequent upon the effort to change their discipline on the subject of secret orders.

We would therefore ask, in all candor, how long can our church hope to evade the serious question, seeing the present indifference and lethargy on the subject in some places? and the lodge friend secretly entrapping our young men into the meshes of the lodge.

After full investigation and careful observation for many years, the following conclusions are well settled and easily proved:

1st. That secret oath-bound organizations are unnecessary, and prejudicial to a free government and a free church.

2d. That they are worldly and selfish institutions—some are Christless, and heathen in their system of pretended devotion—others are simply based on a selfish generosity.

3rd. That some, if not all, of these institutions are so organized for mutual protection that justice is defeated with impunity. The law-making and executive powers are made to bend to their will, and the people are often defeated by under handed schemes concocted by a few designing men.

4th. That secrecy is a despotism that binds its victims with horrible oaths and penalties; secretly wreaks vengeance upon those who expose their true designs; rules in the dark and works in the dark; and seeks to accomplish their purposes by secret means, which they could not do in a fair, open competition.

5th. It is admitted that some otherwise good men have gone into these orders with personal and selfish aims, as some good men held slaves, and sold intoxicating drinks, before the public conscience was awakened to the enormity of these evils.

Finally, as the secular press is muffled on the subject, and some of the "popular" churches are handicapped by secrecy, churches like our own should lose no time in having our members and young people instructed and protected against the baneful influence of secret orders, especially as they assume to control the church. The secular press, the government, and now a powerful secret order stops the channels of legitimate business with a wink and a word, resulting in incalculable damage to the commerce of the nation. Is not secrecy the greatest monopoly that has ever cursed a free country?—John F. Hanson, in the Christian Worker.

ABETTORS OF INIQUITY.

Men and women of average respectability, who profess to be averse to crime and anarchy, nevertheless aid and abet iniquity in various ways.

By low talk and profanity, in which vileness is promulgated.

By attendance upon theatres and shows—where crime is taught, in dazzling and attractive object-lessons.

By beer and dram-drinking, and favoring drinking-houses and free drink—where and wherein crime is manufactured.

By favoring or belonging to secret societies—where crimes are sometimes planned, and ofttimes covered up.

By Sabbath-breaking and dishonesty—in which the law of God and the rights of man are practically defied.

By craven neglect or refusal to stand by the right—whereby sin, and impurity and crime are allowed to stalk abroad without rebuke, and without shame.

What is needed is principle—solid and strong for God and man. Principle—well-steeped in God, to protect itself from overthrow by temptation or assault. Principle—moved by the Dynamite of the Holy Ghost, to open an undaunted aggression against all Satanic influences whatever. But again, principle—as holy as God, and permeated with love; to draw as well as fight, and to save both the tender and the hardened, as far as possible, from earthly wrong, and from hell.

A meeting of anarchists was recently held in Cleveland, Ohio, which was attended by a number of the police in citizen's dress, whose presence, being made known to the anarchists, served to put them under some restraint. The president, in opening the meeting, said:

"Brother anarchists, I would not waste words here to-night, but would advise you to go out and do as your brethren in Chicago did; but there are spotters present, and should I do so I would be arrested and thus our glory would end. But be patient, and our time will come. Capital will have to yield in the end, not by arbitration, but by force."

Resolutions approving of the action of the anarchists in Chicago were adopted by the meeting. An old man took the floor and said: "A Winchester rifle costs eighteen dollars. Think how many bombs you could purchase for that sum. Stop buying watches and save your money for dynamite." When the language was objected to by one of the listeners, cries came from all parts of the meeting: "Put him out. Throw him out of the window." It is by meetings of this character, and talking of this kind, and by publications of the same type, that the anarchists prepare themselves for riots and bloodshed. There ought to be no such seditious discussions in this country. The public safety demands its suppression by the authority of law.

—To show their interest in the temperance reform and to encourage their people to follow their example, the King and Queen of Sweden have taken the pledge.

VACATION NOTES.

VISALIA, Cal., May 12, 1886.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—The pleasure of reading your April 29th number has added peculiar satisfaction to the natural and social pleasures of this region. It is an excellent reminder of the lesson we are all reluctant to learn, that the work of the world will go on prosperously and happily after we are well out of it and forgotten.

California's immense wheat field, from Stockton to the vicinity of Majove, is about 300 miles long and from 50 to 80 wide. In 1883 this product was the most valuable in the State, and every year adds heavily to the average. That year it was worth $43,500,000; the cattle $23,000,000; the gold and silver only $16,500,000. Twenty years ago it was supposed that no profitable cultivation of this immense valley of the San Joachin would ever be attempted, and it was given over to grazing. Then came a year when the winter rains failed, and the cattle perished by millions from starvation. The cultivation of the cereals seems by this calamity to have received more attention, until three years ago. California had 2,794,000 acres sown to wheat, producing 30,322,000 bushels, 8,000,000 more than were raised in any other State. The barley crop also was unsurpassed by any other State, and was valued at $10,000,000. It seems likely that in a few years there will be a much greater diversity of products on these immense plains, as the thousand-acre farms are cut up into quarter-sections, and irrigation becomes cheaper and more general. Fortunes have often been made on these wheat ranches in a few years, but more often the former has to struggle against crop failures and expenses which would appal his co-laborer in the East. He plows with a six-mule team, and reaps with a dozen teams before an immense machine that cuts a swath a rod wide and delivers the winnowed grain at its side. A small farmer could not compete in such a race.

Tulare county, of which Visalia is the county seat, is a country of streams. Wide rivers pour their clear floods out of the mountains, roaring over boulders, and gleaming over sands. Irrigating canals and ditches tap them here and there until their names as rivers are lost. Scattered white oaks, huge, gnarly and breaking down with age, form an open forest for miles in every direction, and from the tower of a beautiful and well appointed court-house there is a magnificent view of the Sierra Nevada range from the foot hills twenty miles away to the summit peaks, whose pine forests can be clearly seen with the naked eye, though fifty miles away. Up into these mountains a friend, whose kind hospitality I am proving, T. E. Kennedy, took me the other day some thirty miles, to examine a fine marble ledge that may in a few years attract a railway. The trip was one of the happy experiences of this vacation journey.

The reports that have come overland of the universal sway of the secret lodges in California are not exaggerations. From the number of lodge-pins displayed, one might roughly guess that every other man he met belonged to some order, and advertised the fact for the advantage of his business. Even men who are by conviction opposed to secretism, feel compelled to join something in self-defence—a matter of simple necessity. A Methodist pastor, formerly a student at Wheaton, whom I met on the train, said his sentiments respecting secret societies were not changed, but dread of personal violence led him to seek the protection or the Grand Army of the Republic. A conscientious lawyer of San Francisco was led into the same order because it would be financial suicide to stand out against the lodge. An excellent pastor of the same city has seceded from the Freemasons, and believe that the lodge, the saloon and the priest are the triple enemies of republican liberty, which seek to dominate over public interests, and have almost succeeded. Yet he belongs to the Good Templars with Dr. McDonald. There are multitudes who object to secretism, but they are overawed by the fearful power of the lodge. They see Governor Stoneman proclaiming a public holiday in honor of the secret labor lodges of San Francisco, who paraded last Friday (the 7th) the streets of that city. They see the State Legislature voting an appropriation for the expenses of a national lodge meeting soon to be held here. They see the lodge, through the anti-Chinese leagues, demanding the obedience of merchants, farmers and business men. They see Dr. Barrow's church, the First Congregational of San Francisco, opened to the Knights Templars for their "Good Friday" ceremony. They see churches, courts, business and political circles under the lodge domination, and they fear to stem this universal tide. But the Lord has some martyr spirits yet, and we may pray confidently that their testimony will prevail.

It is worth noting that there are several orders here that are not known in the East, as the Native Sons of the Golden West, United Friends of the Pacific, Order of the Golden Gate, Legion of the West, and Brotherhood of Friends of Humanity. George B. Katzenstin, of Sacramento who was Finch's predecessor as head of the Good Templar order, and is yet its Grand Secretary, is "Supreme Chancellor" of the California Knights of Pythias, and also is at the head of the Odd-fellows of the State. Influential members of the Good Templar order have publicly charged him with subordinating temperance work to lodgery, but such accusations rather please him than otherwise, as arrows only tickle the hide of a rhinosceros.

An item from the "Ancient Order of United Workmen" shows how the so-called insurance lodges are able to keep up their payments of death-rates from comparatively low assessments. Within seven or eight years about five thousand members of this order have withdrawn from it in this State alone. It is estimated that each one paid in while a member $100 for his lodge insurance. During the same time some 800 death claims have been paid, amounting to $1,600,000. It thus appears that in this order about one-third of those claims are paid by members who have given up their contract, or allowed their policies to lapse.

N. F. Ravlin, who is well known, but with no pleasant recollections, by the Baptist churches of Chicago, is at the head of the anti-coolie league in California, and is attempting to rival O'Donnel, of the "sand lots," as a grand reformer. He has failed here in attempting to recover his reputation through the temperance movement, and now succeeds in disgusting sensible people in his role as a demagogue. Even his Masonry is too thin to hide the renegade.

THE SECRET EMPIRE.

FREE SPEECH IN SALEM, PA.

To the Editor of the Witness:

A preacher who is doing evangelistic work, came to this place April 23d, and preached in Walker's Hall every night with acceptability until the 3rd inst. On this day he preached in the forenoon on extravagance in dress and against wearing ornaments. This was not received with as much favor as former sermons. But the culmination was reached in the evening when the speaker declared Christians should not belong to secret societies. He first urged reasons against Freemasonry, then giving general objections to them all. On the former, which he declared to be the mother of all the others, he urged that the company—Jew, Turk, deist, rum-seller, etc.—was unfit for a Christian. Passages of the Bible were urged. It (Freemasonry) claimed to be a religion while it rejected the name of Jesus from its ritual and prayers, and also rejected women. The plea of benevolence was declared to be a sham, for they pledged to help only a select few, and of all moneys received only about ten per cent was used to relieve their own poor. They also rejected cripples and sick men, who are the natural and Biblical recipients of benevolence. Their taking of oaths was extra-judicial, and forbidden by the Bible. "Swear not at all." It gave them undue advantage over outsiders, which is un-American and dangerous to our government. General objections to all secret societies were urged. They dangerous to the government, as seen by the dynamiters. The Molly Maguires were a secret society. Secret societies are not necessary for any good purpose. They cause waste of time and means. The religion of Jesus was urged to be the remedy for all evils, while secretism was the cause of strikes and their attendant bloodshed. Most of the crimes in Ireland were caused by secretism.

The next day the horse-sheds, where the new preacher kept his horse, by permission, were nailed shut, and threats were made against him. Even church-members offered to furnish tar and feathers to the rabble to be applied to the preacher. An old man, who was supposed to favor the teaching, was pelted with rotten eggs on his way home. One of the preachers sided with the rabble, and said it was "not preaching the Gospel," and "it was condemning men unheard."

The next night it was announced by the preacher that the following evening he would answer the objections presented. This night the rabble gathered around the building beating it, screaming and howling, until after the close of the meeting; rotten eggs were thrown, one hitting a lady in the face. Out of a congregation of about seventy, all but four arose to endorse free speech. If secretism is of such a nature that it cannot be called in question, or the impropriety of it discussed without endangering one's life, or being insulted with rotten eggs, is it not dangerous to our country and to religion? And ought it not be prohibited by law?

Rev. Cogswell, who was well known to our readers of ten years ago as a seceder from the lodge, is now pastor of a church of Disciples in Englewood, and on Sunday evening preached to the Disciples in this building.

REFORM NEWS.

W. B. STODDARD IN OHIO.

CLEVELAND, O., May 21, '86.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—I came to this city last evening from Northfield, where I have arranged to speak Sabbath and Monday evenings. I find that the seed sown by father, Mr. Ronayne, and Mr. Hinman in this section has taken root, and is growing well.

Last Sabbath evening I had the pleasure of addressing a large audience in the Congregational church at Wakeman. The friends at this point have recently erected a new edifice for worship at a cost of about $20,000. Three hundred members are reported by the pastor, Rev. S. W. Meek, and what is better, they seem to be in a good working condition. Messrs. A. C. Hall, C. C. Canfield and A. Cleveland are the most active workers here. The Cynosure is a welcome visitor on these homes.

About four hundred listened to my discourse. I was especially gratified to see a number of young people present.

Leaving Wakeman Monday morning, I made short calls at Berea and West View. Here I secured some new readers for our paper, and was assured by many that some lectures would be very acceptable at some future time when the people were not quite so busy. Mrs. L. B. Smith, who was an especially effective helper when Mr. Ronayne worked the degrees at Berea, is still working at the old line.

Rev. L. White, pastor of the Wesleyan church at West View, was for two years a student at Wheaton College. I found in him a true friend to all the reforms of the day. On my way to Northfield I stopped over one train at Bedford. After Mr. Ronayne worked the degrees at this point some time since, the pastor of the Disciple church publicly renounced Masonry. Many subscribed for the Cynosure, and the cause gained rapidly for a time. Some, however, have grown weary in well-doing, and are not enduring to the end. (See Matt. 10: 22). Mr. R. J. Hathaway, Mr. J. Forbes and A. Alexander are now the only readers of the Cynosure at this point. The Methodist preacher here is a Knight Templar Mason. They have engraven the Knight Templar sign on the corner-stone of their new church, and seem to glory of their shame. A man that has drank wine from a human skull, invoked double damnation on his soul if he ever reveals the the secrets of a Knight Templar, as this Methodist preacher has, and then stands within the sacred desk, should be ashamed to call himself a man.

To-day I expect to call on the United Presbyterian and other pastors of this city. I am now at the house of Mr. T. K. Dotty, editor of the Christian Harvester, a holiness journal known to many readers of the Cynosure. I am indebted to him for personal kindness. I am working toward Columbus; shall expect to reach there by the first of June. There are a few who are still indebted to me for their Cynosures. If such parties will remit so that I can balance my books at this time, I shall be thankful.

NEW HAMPSHIRE MISSION WORK.

Since my last report, I have labored in South Newmarket, Stratham, Greenland, Portsmouth, Newcastle and Kittery. By invitation of Elder C. R. Crossett, of Portsmouth, I assisted at a most excellent prayer service in his church. Elder Israel was also present, and added much to the interest. It is refreshing to be in such a meeting. I spent one Sabbath at Newcastle, and preached to the people. After the evening service a goodly number tarried to pray for the baptism of the Spirit and full salvation. I had the pleasure of meeting Elder W. W. Dow, a college friend, whom I had not seen for over twenty years. He is in full sympathy with our reform work, as were nearly all the pastors I met. I conversed with a back-slidden Advent preacher, who has gone down to an Odd-fellow's lodge for fellowship, sympathy and help. He seemed under full control of the lodge spirit. I also conversed with a Christian Baptist preacher, who is an adhering Freemason of three degrees. He showed a good spirit, and evidently did not understand the true nature of lodgeism. I explained to him its unchristian character, and trust the good seed fell in good ground. We have continued our meeting and Sabbath-school at Durham Point for a year with hopeful results. We commence the second year with a step in advance, taking a collectiou each Sabbath for some benevolent purpose. Our first collection was given to Sister Abbie Wood, of Portsmouth, who has been an earnest laborer in the Lord's vineyard, but is now very sick. Our second collection was given to Mrs. Munford, a faith missionary in Bulgaria. Religious papers introduced, tracts distributed, conversing and praying with the sick and poor, made up the balance of my work. A home missionary has occasion to note the difference even in pious people. I called just before noon on a preaching brother. He was all love and honey, and in full sympathy with my work, but never once thought of "hospitality." Concluding that the Lord did not wish me to have any dinner that day, I called at the post-office to write a postal. The meek post-mistress, providentially learning my business, said, to my astonishment, "Does thee eat? Please lay off thy overcoat and tarry for dinner." So, "In some way or other, the Lord will provide."

BRO. HAWLEY IN WISCONSIN.

Dear Cynosure:—Leaving Wheaton I went to Chicago. Mr. Moody was preaching in the Cassino Rink, on State street. I engaged in the afternoou and evening in the circulation of tracts, principally the one entitled "D. L. Moody on Secret Societies." In the evening I heard him preach a sermon from the text, "Whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap." He expressed his anxiety that all who heard him, though they might forget the sermon, would remember the text.

Leaving Chicago, I went to Lyons, Wis., and visited Dea. Britton to consult, with him in regard to the Wisconsin work. But as the deacon was not prepared to formulate a plan of work until Rev. Bancroft returns from California, who is well acquainted with the Wisconsin work, I returned to Lyons and took the train for Elkhorn, stopping by the way at Springfield. From Elkhorn I went five miles into the country and visited a W. M. church, Rev. Howe, pastor. Here I was kindly entertained by the pastor, and by those veteran friends of Christ and reform, John and Ira Rood.

I spoke once in the church, and would have spoken twice, but we were prevented from gathering by a rain storm. Bro. Ira Rood brought me back to Elkhorn and introduced me to some friends, and I spent some time there in personal labor with the pastors and others, and distributed some tracts.

One of the pastors seemed to be prejudiced. He evidently looked upon Anti-masons as a pestilent set of fellows. He acknowledged that some Masous depended on their Masonry for salvation. And he thought Masonry was Unitarian in doctrine. Yet his antagonism to Anti-masonry was so strong, that he said he would rather have forty Masons in his church than to have one Anti-mason.

I asked him if it was a common thing to receive Unitarians into orthodox Christian churches, while their sympathies with Unitarianism were so strong that they refused to sever their connection with the Unitarian body. He became restless and in such a hurry that he could not spend time for further conversation.

Perceiving his hurried anxiety to close the interview, I politely withdrew. But such examples of blind prejudice among the pastors are extremely rare. I have not found more than one such case before in eight months of reform work. But even this brother stated that though he had had good opportunities for joining the Masons, without paying for his initiation, he had declined to do so, because he thought it would hurt his influence as a minister to become a Mason.

From Elkhorn I returned to Springfield, and went into the country and called upon Prof. Hand. We had an interesting time together in discussing the secret society outlook. The professor's antagonism to Freemasonry has been greatly increased by the fact that Freemasonry has gone to seed; and a crop of secret societies are springing up that are avowedly hostile to both church and state.

Honorable men have sown the wind, and now we are reaping the whirlwind, iu a crop of secretly organized desperadoes, that respect neither personal nor property rights, and that are hostile to both church and state. Just as the mania for strikes has become as infectious as a pestilence, and has spread to the children of our public schools, so has the example of the honorable gentlemen, who have confederated in secret clans, for the promotion of morality, science, and religion, promising and swearing "to ever conceal and never reveal," and to keep each others criminal secrets, "murder and treason not excepted," and to espouse the cause of each other when in any difficulty, whether right or wrong; promising and swearing under no less penalties than to have their throats cut, and their tongues torn out; their hearts torn out, and their bodies severed in twain, and their bowels burnt to ashes; and their skulls knocked off and their brains exposed to the scorching rays of the sun, besides many other penalties, equally horrible, but too numerous to mention —so has the example, we repeat, of these gentlemen of the ancient and honorable fraternity become infectious, and has spread like a pestilence; and now the poor, the ignorant, and the brutal are banded together in sworn confederacy, and flaunting the red flag of murder, threaten to burn, and kill, and rob until the property holders of our country are exterminated, and their property, that has escaped destruction, is in the hands of the spoilers.

Gentlemen of the Masonic fraternity, is it not time that you confess your error, and surrender your charters, and unite with Christians and patriots in insisting that those who do truth shall come to the light? that lodges of honorable gentlemen, in secret and sworn confederacy, be not as so many earth works thrown up for the defense of the secret dens of desperadoes, who are threatening the peace of our country, and of the civilized world? Yours for wise and consistent action in these days of peril.

C. F. Hawley.

CORRESPONDENCE.

REV. R. N. COUNTEE AND THE LODGE.

HE IS ENJOINED BY THE COURTS.

Memphis, May 15, 1886.

Editor Cynosure:—Since I last wrote you, many have been our seasons of auxiety, and at last the long looked-for has come. On last Tuesday, as I stood at the bedside of an old afflicted sister in the Lord Jesus, I was called away to the front room of the house, where a deputy sheriff served upon me a notification of an injunction which had been granted the lodgeites by the Judge of the Chancery Court against myself and the officers of Tabernacle Baptist church. I have waited until now for a copy, but the same has not yet arrived. I wanted to give your readers an exact statemeut of the things of which we are enjoined. It is, indeed, a part and parcel of our constitutional liberty that men can serve God as they see fit; and the Judge so worded the injunction that we are only prohibited from interfering with them in their privilege of worshiping in the church—which, we suppose, means listening to the Word preached; to which we heartily assent, and believe that if they hear with their ears they will soon believe in their hearts and be converted from the nonsense of lodgeism to the glorious liberty of the sons of God. The Judge further said that in the matter of the holy sacrament he would not interfere with the officers of the church; so they are yet deprived of membership in the church, and are agaiu foiled in their expectation. But they say big things boastingly; however, I remember One who saith, "I will fight your battles," and in Him we repose quietly.

The lodgeites were led to this step on account of the decision rendered by the council of white brethren to whom they appealed, which was as follows: "That in view of the confusion which has existed, growing out of societies, and is likely to continue to disturb the peace of our churches, we advise the aggrieved members" (lodgeites) "that they propose to the Tabernacle church that, if they will disband the society organized within the church, you will withdraw from membership in all other societies and return to membership in the church." This they could not do—leave the lodge; no, no, no! Never! So they spurned the advice they themselves asked for, and concluded to take "proper steps with Countee and his church, viz.: go to the courts.

We had occasion to say last Sunday, in our morning talk, that the rich man wanted Lazarus sent to his brothers to warn them against the place of torment in which he was suffering, but was informed that they had Moses and the prophets to hear them; otherwise they would not hear, though one arose from the dead. Men have uo need to run after councils to explain for them the plain teachings of God's Word. "Come out from among them," is too plain a command to need the advice of a council. Men who will not hear the Gospel are not apt to hear other men.

Their paper, the Watchman, said "school-boys could have done better," and spoke of "half-handed preachers, white and colored." This we could scarcely divine, unless we knew what full-handed ones were. And one of the white clergy said that the model preacher among them kept a school, a grocery, a saloon, and a barber shop, and, beside all of this, was a pastor of a church. He is, without doubt, full-handed. I pray God my hands may never be so full!

Our relief fund embodied society principles in one feature only, viz.: that ouly they who contributed to it were to receive aid. On last Tuesday night, with Bro. Woodsmall to help us out of the little tangle, we voted it out; and, in accordance with the recommendation of the council selected by the lodgeites, we have now a poor fund out of which all are to be helped alike when necessity demands it. The Watchman ridicules the movement, and of course carries with them the masses who never wait for argument. Like the men of Paul's day, they carry off the common people against a good cause, and are acting the part of Demetrius, and when the mob comes they will say, "Our societies are Christian institutions." They undoubtedly made a fine display of their Christianity last August and October in their assaults upon me, to murder. We have heard of this kind of Christianity, and know that Satan is the father of it, for he was a murderer from the beginning.

The Grand Master of the colored Masons of the State of Tennessee was in to see me this day (Saturday). He is a Baptist minister from Knoxville, and an old friend. I tried to shame him because he informed me that he was out looking after the craft. I told him it was a burning shame to go around peddling old, worn-out lodge secrets. I finally advised him, if he would continue to do so, to buy his books from and recommend the Cynosure rooms to his lodges, for books were cheaper there than elsewhere. He said those books were "no good." I said: "See here, friend, I know more of the lodge than you do—taken more degrees than you have, and I am through lying about Masonry; for any man can buy all he wants of it for fifty cents." We were very jovial and frank. I reminded him that, whatever happened to me, the lodge would be held accountable. He said, "I told them to let you alone from the start."

About 5 o'clock this afternoon, while I happened to be out, a man rushed wildly into the house and called for me. He was in his shirt-sleeves and kept his hand behind him. My wife drove him out of doors. He went immediately to the office of The Living Way and called for me. I suppose he must be some half-witted person, or he may be a hired servant of the "wolves' compact;" but I am not alarmed. I thank God I am not easily aroused, though I am naturally of a nervous temperament; but of late God has strengthened me wonderfully.

We shall make an effort to have the injunction dissolved by the chancellor on Monday next. We ask the prayers of the people of God everywhere in this our struggle against the powers of lodgery. We realize God in the midst of his church, and know the battle is not ours but his.

There was an effort made to draw some of the members of the church into the Knights of Labor, but it proved futile. We had only to point to the results of their strikes. The eye-openers they have given the world carry with them no uncertain interpretation, and their motto, "Secrecy and Obedience," properly enough displays their inner workings. Eventually, we may expect a bloody war between capital and labor. Secret compacts will ere long tear down the foundations of this government. May God save the elect!

Yours for more light, R. N. Countee.

SECRET SOCIETIES AND ANARCHY.

The following is from a prominent friend of the cause:

Rev. J. P. Stoddard:

Dear Sir and Bro.:—We are still holding the fort here by the help of God. The secretists are doing everything in their power to retard, and, if it were possible, to overthrow the cause of Christ and of human freedom; but I have an abiding faith that our cause will prevail, because it is a righteous cause. Are we not on the eve, if not in the midst, of momentous events? Anarchy, riot, bloodshed and contempt of law prevail everywhere in the land. But God reigns, let all good people rejoice.

I have always regarded the ballot as the palladium of our liberties, the safeguard of republican institutions; but it becomes a most dangerous weapon when put indiscriminately into the hands of nihilists, socialists, communists, dynamiters, Freemasons and every abominable, double-dealing, red-handed despotism with which our land is cursed. Is not this an awful fact? Is there no remedy? Have we no government but the mob?

The powers at Washington seem powerless. Does the constitution tie up their hands so that no attempt even is made to quell the universal riot and lawlessness? What can we, the poor people, do, when the constituted authorities stand, with shivering limbs, white lips and inane features, before this "Bonasus" that walks, roughshod, with impudence and devilish malignity throughout the land without let or hindrance? Is it our constitution, or is it the million and a half votes in the hands of these revolutionists that causes this fatal inertia on the part of the powers that be?

The secret clans here all sympathize with the K. of L., and would no doubt lend a helping hand if the opportunity should ever present itself.

Bro. M. A. Gault was with us yesterday and Sabbath, and very ably presented the cause of national reform in three sermons on that important subject.

I hope this will find you and my very dear and excellent friend, Dr. J. Blanchard, and all the Cynosure friends well and strong in the faith that God will in his own good time and way work out his righteous purposes, making use of the weak things of this world to confound the mighty.

REFORM WORK IN KANSAS.

BELOIT, Kansas, May 12.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—The Wesleyan church at Laban, near Beloit, invited Rev. R. Loggan to assist us at our quarterly meeting, May 8, 9. He came, and we enjoyed the services under his preaching very much, and the occasion was one of deep interest. After quarterly-meeting services were over, he gave us two excellent lectures on Monday and Tuesday evenings—the first on the origin and character of Masonry, and the second on the religion of the same. It was a masterly effort, and was well received by the people. A. R. BROOKS.

HOW HE MEETS IT.

TWIN BROOKS, Dak.

"Confound you, Walker, I was almost mad at you the other Sunday," said a prominent Mason and Odd-fellow. The trouble was, this friend—he is a friend of mine—heard me make some statements in the pulpit that "fit on" concerning Masonry. This friend was in the audience. We met on the highway, and the above-quoted remark was the opening of a conversation on secrecy. My friend said: "Masonry and Odd-fellowship are founded on the Bible." I said that to contend that Mackey and Chase are not authorities in Masonry is to manifest ignorance, and they both teach that the Bible is not the foundation of Masonry. My friend said again: "A man must believe in the Bible and in the Almighty God, or he can't become a Mason." I said: "How do all class of religionists, Christians, Jews, Mohammedans, Hindoos and Confucians come together on this Bible?" No answer, but an attempt to go on and say that great men, professors in colleges and preachers, are Masons. I said: "But how can a man be a Christian and accept Masonry which ignores Christ?" My friend said: "Masonry does not: a man must believe in the Almighty God, and then live a moral life to be a Mason." I contended that we believe in the triune God of the Bible—the Father, Son and Holy Ghost, and the only way of salvation is through the merits of the atoning blood of Christ.

"Well," said my friend, "the worst I wish you is that you were a Mason and an Odd-fellow." I told him that going into Odd-fellowship was going into rather poor company. Three-fourths of the saloon-keepers are Odd-fellows, and I can't fellowship them. My friend is a Prohibitionist, and couldn't swallow this last statement.

He said that "Odd-fellowship is a charitable institution," and I replied that taking money in to pay out is not charity; and especially when collecting three dollars and paying out one. I said further that it reminded me of the G. A. R. in Indiana, where an encampment was held, and $2,000 raised, and a vote taken to send a cord of wood to each of four widows. These statements hit, and now my friend wants me to debate with him privately, "sometime"—no time set. I think he will not call for the debate.

This calling Masonry a religious institution becomes ridiculous when it is modified by the term Christian, as it so often is. A German friend overheard me speaking to another brother concerning his church for Bro. Stoddard should he come out here, and the German friend, who proved to be a Mason, said we had no business "bothering about Masonry." He said it is a Christian institution, and that he was led to embrace Christianity through Masonry. I asked him what kind of a thing he would have when he took Christ from Christianity. It "boiled" the German friend. However, there are men whom you might suspect being intelligent, who talk about the Christianity of Masonry. I know a Judge of Probate in a western county who is one of these Christian Masons; but his manifestation of the "Spirit and the mind of Christ" is not very noticeable.

I propose to have the Masons and Odd-fellows "trot out" their religion—if they have any—and let us see it, and when they show us that they can keep the whole law of God and quit lying, then a better day has dawned, that's all. C. E. WALKER.

BIBLE LESSON.

STUDIES IN THE WRITINGS OF JOHN.

LESSON X, June 6, 1886.—Jesus the bread of life.—John 6: 22-40.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Lord, evermore give us this bread.—John 6: 34.

TIME.—About the middle of April, A. D. 29, the Passover that year beginning April 16 (John 6: 4). The day after our last lesson.

COMMENTS ON THE LESSON BY E. E. FLAGG.

[Open the Bible and read the lesson.]

1. Carnal hearers of the Word. vs. 22-27. When some celebrated preacher is followed by multitudes who hang upon his words, it is not always because they feel any strong spiritual need. That such crowds could follow Christ for so long a distance, and take so much pains to find out his retreat, just for a piece of bread, throws into the strongest relief the wretched condition of the Jewish peasantry under the tyrannous exactions of the Roman tax-gatherer. The poorest country of Europe in modern times could hardly present such a vivid picture of destitution among the masses. But when we go to hear the truth preached, either in the usual church service or from the mouth of some world-renowned evangelist, for any lower motive than a sincere hunger for the bread of life, we merit Christ's reproof. We are as much on the plane of carnal hearers as the people who followed him "because they did eat of the loaves."

2. The truth misapprehended. vs. 28-34. Nothing is more natural than that such hearers should misapprehend Christ's teachings. We cannot discern spiritual things when standing on a worldly plane, yet their question shows that they felt the rebuke. There is in it at least the shadow of a genuine interest. "What shall we do that we might work the works of God?" It is the question to-day, and the answer for all time will remain the same. Believe in Christ with that genuine faith which purifies the heart and brings forth fruits of righteousness in the life. Their next inquiry seems a strange one coming from those who had ate from that table spread so miraculously in the desert the day before. "What sign showest thou then that we may see and believe thee?" It was a natural characteristic of the Jewish nation to seek after a sign. But this was not all. They were never satisfied however numerous or wonderful the signs. They always demanded more. Their expression, "Our fathers did eat manna in the desert," seems to hint that the thought in their minds was that Christ, to prove himself "the Prophet like unto Moses," should grant another and stronger sign of his power, by giving them a continuous supply of food similar to what was given ancient Israel. And with this idea they had sought him. The idle and impoverished saw here a chance to live without labor or care, and how eagerly they would rally round the banner of such a leader! Even when he directs their thoughts to the pure, life-giving bread from heaven, their prayer, "Lord, evermore give us this bread," is evidently like the Samaritan woman's petition, "Give me this water," made with no true sense or appreciation of the gift for which they were asking. When Christ unfolds the truth in plainer terms they only murmur and leave him.

3. Jesus the Bread of Life. vs. 35-40. He himself was the bread on which all believing souls should feed. Grandly and winningly he unfolds the blessed truth. No one who comes to him shall be cast out. Everlasting life is in him and nowhere else. Yet the lodge professes to give salvation to its members while ignoring all mention of Christ's work, even his very name. For bread they give a stone, and thousands actually believe that heavenly life is insured if they but obey the requirements of their order. It is a solemn question for every minister and every Christian worker how far they are responsible, by their silence, for souls cheated and starved, kept away from the Gospel feast by the monstrous pretense of the lodge anti-Christ.

LIGHT FROM THE WORD.

What is that commandment which obeyed is the whole work God requires of us? 1 John 3: 23. Would any sign have convinced the Jews? vs. 26, 36, 64. Where is it prophesied that all believers shall be divinely taught? Isa. 54: 13; Jer. 31: 34.

From Peloubet's Notes.

"The day following" the feeding of the five thousand, the arrival of Jesus and his disciples in the latter part of the night.

"The people which stood on the other side of the sea." The other side from Capernaum, in the vicinity of the place where the five thousand were fed.

"Saw that there was none other boat there, save that one." They had seen the disciples sail away in the only boat; they had seen that Jesus did not go with them. Therefore he must be somewhere in the region.

"Howbeit there came other boats," etc. This verse is another parenthesis to explain how the people were enabled to sail across the sea to Capernaum.

"From Tiberias," on the southwest shore of the lake.

"After that the Lord had given thanks." This shows the emphasis to be laid on giving thanks, and probably that at this juncture the miracle took place.

"They also took shipping." More literally, they themselves entered into the boats.

"Came to Capernaum, seeking Jesus." They came here, because this was one of the frequent resorts of Jesus and his disciples, and here they would be most likely to find him.

"When they had found him on the other side of the sea." The other side from the plain of Bethsaida.

"Rabbi." A title of honor and respect, signifying Master or Teacher.

"When camest thou hither?" They had sought him in vain. They could not understand how or when he could have reached Capernaum without their knowing anything about it.

"Ye seek me, not because ye saw the miracles." It was for the results of the miracles, and not for the miracles themselves as expressing God's thoughts and Christ's true mission. They came for the healing and the food, but failed to see the true meaning of the miracles.—P.

"But because ye did eat of the loaves and were filled." Were satisfied with food, as animals with fodder.—Westcott. He that loves a man for money or for meat, loves money or meat more than the man. Therefore he that loves God for any other end than God, certainly loves that more than God.—J. Hales.

"Labor not for the meat which perisheth." This is not to be the chief end even of labor for daily food: it is not to be the great object for which we work and expend our energies.

"But for that meat which endureth unto everlasting life." You should put your life's work into that which shall endure.

THE BREAD OF LIFE. What is this food that endureth to everlasting life? The food of the soul and mind. The soul needs food as really as does the body.

"Which the Son of Man." The term is specially appropriate here, as it is only by virtue of his incarnation and Messianic office that Christ gives this enduring food.—Geo. W. Clark.

"Shall give unto you." It is, to be sure, a meat which is given thee; but yet thou must strive after it, if thou wouldst possess it.—R. Besser. Most of the best gifts of God we must thus labor for, seek earnestly and supremely.

"For him hath God the Father sealed." To seal anything is to attest by some sign or mark that it is genuine, that it comes from the person who sealed it with his endorsement. He had been thus "sealed" (1) by direct testimony in the Scriptures, (2) by the same in the voice from heaven at his baptism, (3) by indirect testimony in his miracles and Messianic work.—Cambridge Bible.

"What shall we do, that we might work?" What is the work which God would have us to do that we might have this bread of life as our reward?

"Jesus answered." For this question implied that they were teachable, and willing and ready to learn.

"This is the work of God, that ye believe on him whom he hath sent." He turns their attention from the outward to the inward, to the source and spring of all good works. Because no works are really good which do not spring from faith. He that has faith, and he only, does the works of God.

WHAT IS THIS FAITH? That confiding and affectionate belief in the person and work of Christ which affects the character and life, and makes the man a true Christian.—Webster.

HOW DOES FAITH PRODUCE THE WORKS OF GOD? As Christ is the truth, he that accepts him as a teacher will know the will of God. Christ imparts the spiritual life and love which are the source of all the truest good works.

"What sign showest thou then?" "Thou" is emphatic: "What dost thou on thy part?" They quite understand that in the words, "Him whom he hath sent," Jesus is claiming to be the Messiah; but they want a proof.—Cambridge Bible.

"What dost thou work?" What do you do that will prove that you are greater than all the prophets of old? Christ does not wish us to have a mere blind belief, but always gives us proofs and reasons for the faith he requires us.

"Our fathers did eat manna in the desert." Moses proved that he was sent from God by giving the people bread from heaven to eat; now what do you do that is greater than this to prove that you are the greater prophet, even the Messiah?

"Moses gave you not that bread from heaven." Here he makes a double denial of the fact they had given as authenticating Moses's mission as a prophet. 1. That Moses did not give the manna; it was given by God; Moses had nothing to do about bestowing it; the Israelites found it in the morning after the dew had dried off the ground. 2. The manna was bread from heaven but not in this highest sense.

"My Father giveth you the true bread." True in the sense of real and perfect.—Cambridge Bible.

OBITUARY.

We have received from Mrs. Eveline C. Mather, aged 93 years, of Arlington, N. Y., a letter giving the account of the death of Moses Ferrin on the 13th inst., his good wife having died on the 3d. Mrs. Mather says: "Mr. Ferrin was an honored member of the Free Will Baptist church, a true Christian, a devoted husband, a loving father, an excellent neighbor, a firm Republican, and a firm Anti-mason; and his death is a heavy blow to the cause in Ellington. I hope his mantle will fall on some other shoulders that will wear it manfully." She says: "I have known him more than thirty years, and I wish I could speak his praise to the rising generation, and exhort them to go and do likewise.

AMERICAN PLATFORM.

ADOPTED AT CHICAGO, JUNE 20, 1884

Viewing with deep concern the corrupt and unsettled condition of American politics, and witnessing with alarm the fearful prevalence of caste and clannishness by which our citizens are being arrayed in hostile bands, working secretly to compass political ends, a method directly and powerfully tending to increase corruption, to destroy mutual confidence, and hasten disruption and bloodshed; and having no hope of adequate remedy for these evils from existing parties, and believing the foundation of a party based upon the fundamental principles of the Declaration of American Independence, both inevitable and indispensable:

We, therefore, a portion of the American people, believing with our fathers that we have our rights and liberties, not from men or parties, but from God; believing in the Christian marriage, and not in Mormonism; believing in the religious democracy of the New Testament, and not in the despotism of the lodge; believing, also, with our Scotch and English ancestors, that civil government, though ordained in God, is "founded in nature, not in grace," and, therefore, that all have equal civil rights; while we abhor the idea of enforcing religion or controlling conscience by human laws and penalties as calculated to make hypocrites, not Christians, and savoring of the days of priestism, the fagot and the stake, we at the same time as firmly believe that atheism and priestcraft are twins and both alike foes to human liberty and welfare. We further most firmly believe that a government without God has none but lynch power, and is destitute of all legitimate authority to maintain civil order, to swear a witness, to try a criminal, to hang a murderer, to imprison a thief; and while we consider government without God as a mere usurpation, we regard all religions and worships invented by men, and so having no higher than human origin, as mere swindling impositions and cheats. We believe in peace and in national arbitration as a means of perpetuating it; yet we as profoundly believe that the bravery and blood of our soldiers have bought us the peace which we enjoy, and we honor the memories of the dead and will be just to the claims of the living; and we take up and prolong the strain raised by the women of this country: "For God, and home, and native land," and trust that this beautiful and patriotic motto will soon be not only echoed by their voices, but sustained by their votes.

We, therefore, solemnly adopt and present the following, as containing a brief synopsis of the principles of our government, by which we intend to be governed in casting our votes. We hold:

1. That ours is a Christian and not a heathen nation, and that the God of the Christian Scriptures is the author of civil government.

2. That the Bible should be associated with books of science and literature in all our educational institutions.

3. That God requires, and man needs a Sabbath.

4. We demand the prohibition of the importation, manufacture, and sale of intoxicating drinks.

5. We hold that the charters of all secret lodges granted hy our Federal and State Legislatures should be withdrawn, and their oaths prohibited by law.

6. We are opposed to putting prison labor or depreciated contract labor from foreign countries in competition with free labor to benefit manufacturers, corporations or speculators.

7. We are in favor of a revision and enforcement of the laws concerning patents and inventions; for the prevention and punishment of frauds either upon inventors or the general public.

8. We hold to and will vote for woman suffrage.

9. That the civil equality secured to all American citizens by Articles 13, 14 and 15 of our amended National Constitution should he preserved inviolate, and the same equality should be extended to Indians and Chinamen.

10. That international differences should hc settled by arhitration.

11. That land and other monopolies should be discouraged.

12. That the general government should furnish the people with an ample and sound currency.

13. That it should be the settled policy of the government to reduce tariffs and taxes as rapidly as the necessities of revenue and vested business interests will allow.

14. That polygamy should bc immediately suppressed by law, and that the Republican party is censurable for the long neglect of its duty in respect to this evil.

15. And, finally, we demand for the American people the abolition of electoral colleges, and a direct vote for President and Vice President of the United States.

THE CHURCHES VS. LODGERY.

J. BLANCHARD. HENRY L. KELLOGG.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, MAY 27, 1886.

THE INTERDENOMINATIONAL CHURCH CONGRESS has now the warm endorsement of The American (Prof. Bailey gave it the name) and other anti-secret papers. Dr. Kerr, who has the leading U. P. paper, pledges the co-operation of that powerful sheet. Dr. R. S. Storrs, of Brooklyn, N. Y., writes that he "thinks such convention will do good." Dr. Roy, with the American Missionary Association behind him, has addressed us, and consents to go on the National Board of Directors, and the skies are bright with omens.

In this number read carefully Halleck Floyd's form of a call, and also another by President L. N. Stratton, of the Wesleyan Theological Seminary. These two speak for two denominations.

Prof. H. Woodsmall and Rev. R. N. Countee, of Tennessee, are both expected at Wheaton Commencement, and to have the whole afternoon to address the people, and to attend the N. C. A. June 16th and 17th.

When this breeze has come to us laden with reform.

§ "Like the sweet south wind o'er a bed of violets Stealing and giving odor," we shall see more and say more about the National Church Congress. Here is what President Stratton recommends: Read and ponder.

FORM OF A CALL.

We, the undersigned subscribers, citizens of the United States of America, and members of the Christian church, though of various ecclesiastical names, witnessing:

1. Certain hindrances arising to the work of Christ from the affiliations of church members with secret societies, and witnessing

2. The growing interest in the church against such secret societies, insomuch that six Christian denominations entire, and many local churches of other denominations, exclude by church law members of secret societies from membership in such denominations and churches, and witnessing

3. The evil of the secret oath to sometimes defend a member of a secret society even to the detriment and defeat of our heaven-ordained civil government, and witnessing

4. The growth of other evils against temperance, the Sabbath and the Bible, we therefore yield to the general wish for an Inter-church Assembly of Evangelical Christians, to be held in the city of..... on the..... for the purpose of forming a more perfect union and adopting a plan for the repentence and reform of human minds from the thraldom of the errors referred to.

HON. AND REV. HALLECK FLOYD preached in Wheaton College Chapel last Sabbath morning to an interested congregation. Mr. Floyd is thrust forth by Dr. Davis, Dillon, McNew, and their anti-secret conventions, to hold a series of conventions, to open the eyes of two hundred thousand United Brethren to the fact that a handful of men are resolved to apostatize and compel the church to apostatize into lodge-fellowship, forbidden by the leading apostle of Christ.

Local conventions have been held—the one in Michigan, South Conference, was one of great power. Now the book-room has the money, and Bishop Weaver who, when the war first opened, and the Lebanon Convention (1869) voted 70 to 20 to "hold the fort" against blasphemy and devil worship, wrote and published against fellowshipping secret societies, and but a short time since, said, "I stand precisely where I stood forty years ago;"—now this man owns to his apostacy, but says, "Wise men often change!" So Judas Iscariot, Ananias and Sapphira "changed," but they were not "wise," because, like this Bishop Weaver, they changed from Christ to silver and the world.

Now there wants about a thousand dollars to pay the cost of getting and holding the great United Brethren Convention in July. If the 20,000 United Brethren could have heard Dillon, Titus, and others, at the Michigan Convention, the next General Conference in 1889, would go against the lodge, at least, twenty to one.

Who will send Halleck Floyd a little money to bear expenses and help out the great United Brethren Convention in July? Who? Send to Rev. Halleck Floyd, Dublin, Indiana.

THE LIBERTY PARTY.

This party was organized by a majority of eleven in a convention of a hundred and twenty-one delegates in 1840, twenty-three years before slavery fell. But six States were represented in that convention. It met in Albany, and one hundred and four of its members were from the single State of New York. The Liberator and Mr. Garrison's party opposed and ridiculed the movement with much bitterness. Besides these disadvantages, the party was formed but a few months before the election, after the party lines were drawn, when there was no possibility for bringing the abolition voters into the field. The Democratic party had been in power twelve years, and was allied with the slave power, and was already moving, by additions of slave territory, to subvert popular government, and make slavery perpetual. A more unpropitious beginning for a new political party could scarcely be conceived. But the movement succeeded, because it had in it the elements of success, human welfare and the approbation of God

Almost all the Abolitionists were at first opposed to liquor, as most of the Prohibitionists are now opposed to secret societies, and prohibition stood related to abolitionism much as the American party is now related to prohibition. In 1845 a bill was offered in the Maine Legislature repealing licence and suppressing liquor-selling by fines and imprisonment. It failed in the house by 87 to 44 votes. It was since carried there.

The sole question for us is: Does the American party contain in it the elements of success? If so, it will, must and ought to succeed. Let us lay the American and Liberty parties together.

1. Both the American and Liberty parties were identical with the original American movement. The fathers had neither slavery nor Masonry. Both came from abroad. The Dutch brought slavery, and the English Masonry; one in 1620, the other in 1733.

2. Both parties opposed evils sure to destroy the country if let alone. Slavery tried it, and failed. Secret oath-bound orders, sworn to obey secret despots, which is Masonry with name changed, have seized our inland commerce, defied our laws, and murdered our civil officers. These secret orders have different names and different methods, but they have one structure, despotism; one nature, secrecy, oaths and worships, that is to say, they have one religion, which, by dropping Christ, excludes God, marriage and the Sabbath; not that they all openly declare all this, but, as marriage is Christ's institution, and the Sabbath his day, and as there is no access to God but by Christ, omitting Christ omits all these, that is to say they omit the United States and Christian civilization; and August Spies, Herr Most and the "No God" "No Law-people" are only graduates of the Powderly and Irons school, as drunkards are graduates of the saloon.

3. Then the American and Liberty parties differ in their antagonisms. Slavery impoverished the South and taxed the North. Careful estimates showed that the South had, since the Revolution, sunk and spent money belonging to the North, over one billion and thirteen millions of dollars. The Southern post-office owed the North a balance of fifteen million dollars. The discovery of this helped the Liberty party.

The American party meets lodge swindling in its own families and households. The lodge ruin works as silent as chloroform, and is as fatal both in church and state. But a few more labor raids on railroads, home commerce, and officers of the law will convince the American people that socialism and dynamite are but Freemasonry outspoken and reduced to practice, and carrying out the oaths, atheism and cut-throat theories of the lodge. This discovery will save us, but our help comes from Christ.

THE AMERICAN PARTY.

SECRETARY'S NOTICE.

There will be held at No. 221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Friday, June 18, at 10 A. M., a conference of the national committee and voters of the American party. This meeting will be for the transaction of any business of the party which may be brought before it. E. D. BAILEY, Sec'y.

This party was resolved on fourteen years ago, and named in a full meeting in Shakespeare Hall, Syracuse, N. Y., that year. Its first nominee was Charles Francis Adams, by the suggestion of Hon. Philo Carpenter; Joel L. Barlow for Vice-President. In 1876 our nominees were Hon. J. B. Walker and Donald Kirkpatrick. Next, 1880, Gen. J. W. Phelps and Hon. S. C. Pomeroy; and in 1882 Blanchard and Conant were put in nomination, who withdrawing, and ex-Senator Pomeroy also asking leave to withdraw, Americans cast their vote in 1884 for St. John and Daniels, the nominees of the Prohibitionists, they having personally declared themselves clean of the lodge.

These nominations were object-lessons in voting to enable enlightened Americans to vote without violating their conseiences by casting their suffrages for men owing sworn allegiance to a government as foreign from ours as that of Turkey, and like it in its leading features; and to teach the ten million voters in America that conflicting oaths will sink their court-houses into popular contempt, whether the strange oaths insult Jehovah by oaths sworn upon Chinese baubles; or secret oaths sworn in the confessional or the lodge.

The National Liberty Convention in New York, May 12, 1841, nominated James G. Birney and Thomas Morris for election in 1844, three years before the time to vote; and in 1845 the Liberty Convention in Augusta, Me., "announced the campaign of 1848 as opened." The reason given for "this bold, early action" was "to keep the great question of the ballot versus slavery before the people." (Willey's Anti-slavery History, p. 176.) Events proved the wisdom of their course. The need of educating the people to vote against the lodge is, if possible, greater than was then the need of instruction in anti-slavery voting. The pulpit, press and platform, then muffled by cotton bales, are now silenced by the sorcery of the lodge. Nothing cows men like a false religion, even men who do not believe it. Slavery was local; the lodge girdles the globe. And the auction-block, crying off hogs, horses, men, mothers and children to the highest bidder, was not so fatal to American principles and free institutions as socialism, which is the atheism of Masonry gone to seed.

The Cynosure is not advised of the plans and purposes of the National Committee. We observe in their official notice, given above, that not only the committee but "VOTERS" of the American party are called to meet in Carpenter Hall, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago, June 18th, now near at hand; and all business is in order. This seems to point to important work. If nominations are to be made for the coming election in 1888 (and this is one year later than the nomination of Birney and Morris in 1841, which received near sixty-seven thousand votes), it is time Americans were making up their minds whom to put into our Federal ticket, to bear our banner in the cyclone of a Federal election.

The Liberty party candidates were, at first, not superior in talent or standing to a multitude of voters of the American ticket to-day. Birney was mild and affable and able; but he was driven from his native South, and had the disadvantages of an exile. Thomas Earle, who was put on the ticket with him in 1840, was unknown to us by name till put on the ticket. And though Thomas Morris was a Democratic U. S. Senator, we have hundreds of men who can make an abler argument than he.

It is true that the Liberty party in Maine had from the first some of their ablest lawyers and clergymen, as Gen. Fessenden, father of Wm. Pitt; Gen. Appleton, Prof. Smyth, Drs. Tappan, Shepard, and the Thurstons, who stood in the front rank of their professions, both before and after they went into the Liberty party. But, outside of Maine, it was not so. Salmon P. Chase voted quietly with the Liberty party six years. Giddings, Charles Francis Adams, and others, came to his aid, and the party forced a recognition as a permanent factor in American politics. Till he went to the United States Senate Chase was a young lawyer who never held a public office higher than a city council man, sitting and voting on curbstones and sewers. And he wrote to Giddings and Adams and got up the Free Soil Convention in Buffalo eight years after Birney's first nomination.

What now are we to do? We have Hon. Halleck Floyd, who has been a State Senator and a skillful politician with fearless integrity and a pleasing and impressive address. He is now holding public conventions against the lodge minions and their attempts to secretize. He is a better speaker for a crowd than was Senator Chase. F. W. Capwell has in him the elements of an able statesman, and if pushed to it can speak. J. W. Wood of Wisconsin, M. R. Britten of the same State, Wm. Pitt Norris of Iowa, not to mention many others whose names are familiar as laborers in our cause, either of whom is fit to drill American voters and enlist volunteers.

Our associate editor, Mr. Kellogg, is about this time speaking in Silver Hall, San Francisco, which hall is owned by Dr. R. H. McDonald, who was St. John's strongest competitor for the Prohibition nomination at Pittsburgh. He is a determined public man and philanthropist. Like many good and great men he has been hoodwinked in the lodge, which is semi-omnipotent on the Pacific Coast. It has been hinted to us that he has learned that secret lodges cannot be used for Christ. S. M. Good of Des Moines, Iowa, said to us that while a Mason associated with prominent men in Iowa, he was more pleased with his Knight Templar's cap, plume, gloves, gauntlets and sword than a boy with his first pair of boots. But when he came to read and understand the order, he crammed his whole Templar's rig into the stove. He would not sell the idolatrous stuff. In brief, the Cynosure is in favor of nominating candidates for 1888 on the 18th day of June near at hand. And if Carpenter Hall can be crammed with voters who are willing, as we used to do in the slavery struggle, to remove the chairs of the hall and sleep one night on carpets, we can put our candidates into the field, and half the labor performed by Gen. Weaver for the Greenbackers will yield double the results. And our results are permanent. Will Messrs. Capwell and Bailey send a call to American voters which shall wake us up as a town crier wakes the inhabitants of a village, bell in hand.

We have one great advantage over the Liberty party. That was sectional. We are not. Our speakers can now speak. Mr. Hinman has spoken all through the South, where the first Liberty candidates would have been lynched if they had attempted to address the voters. Not only is the South open to us, but it is actually sending us missionaries. It may send us candidates.

Prof. Woodsmall, late of Iuka, Miss., now of Memphis, Tenn., with Rev. R. N. Countee and B. A. Imes of the same city, are expected at the Commencement at Wheaton College, June 16th, prox., and the president is arranging for one of the three to speak on Sabbath evening, and the other two to address a crowd on the afternoon of Commencement day. Who are these Southerners? Prof. Woodsmall has held Biblical Institutes for the Baptist ministers and deacons of the South. Mr. Countee is pastor of the Tabernacle church in Memphis (colored); and Mr. Imes is the scholarly pastor of the colored Congregational church connected with Lemoyne Institute, under the care of the American Missionary Association. These three noble men are out-spoken condemners of the lodge. Prof. Woodsmall writes: "There are 800,000 colored Baptists in the South, and if the leaders of these Baptists can be induced to leave the lodges, it will, by balance of votes, nearly revolutionize the United States." He writes a powerful letter, and if his personal appearance equals the rumor of him, and if the American Convention, June 18th, should nominate him, the Cynosure will contribute and collect funds to enable him to stump the South. One of his correspondents writes of twenty-five who have quit the lodges.

Mr. Countee is very dark complexioned, and his history reminds one of Napoleon's marshall, who, battered, scarred, and given up for lost, marched up at the head of his battle-scarred division whom he had led through a thousand deaths. When Napoleon saw him he cried out: "The bravest of the brave!" Mr. Countee has a small bullet in his scalp, fired at him for no cause but arguing against the lodge. Mr. Imes, also colored, is a friend of Dr. Roy, and enjoys the confidence of the secretaries of the American Missionary Association.

Nor should we forget Hon. Fred Douglass, who is decidedly opposed to secret societies, and one of the most popular men in the South. He never drank liquor nor joined a lodge.

In short, the lodges are, to-day, everywhere unpopular, and growing more so. Let us

> "Pour in light on Plutoe's drear abodes, > Abhorred by men, and dreadful e'en to gods."

Let us launch our ship and man it, with our platform nailed to the mast, and the whole loathesome progeny of darkness will speedily disappear with the coffle-chains, hand-cuffs, fetters, whips, and auction-blocks of slavery.

SHALL WE HAVE A CHINESE WALL?

There seems to be a great and growing disposition to exclude from our country unwelcome immigrants, not only on the West Coast but also on the East.

The Chinaman is excluded because he works and lives cheap, and it is difficult to compete with him in the labor market. The Italians, Bohemians, Poles, etc., are sought to be excluded because some of them are socialists, some anarchists, and all come here offering cheap labor. Sooner or later, however, they become members of labor unions, insist on a certain price of labor for all, and by strikes and boycotts, often with violence, interfere with the just rights of others. To these may be added many Irish and Germans, whose principles and habits are out of harmony with our own, and whose influence is essentially demoralizing. It is claimed that what with the Indians we are attempting to civilize, and the freedmen who still greatly need our sympathy and aid, we have about as much heathenism as we can attend to, without the irruption of hordes of Mongolians, and myriads of the refuse of the populations of Europe.

It would, perhaps, be a benefit to our country if there were a cessation, or, at least, an abatement of this influx, and if American interests were the only consideration, we might insist on their exclusion. At the risk of seeming to be unpatriotic we affirm that there are other, if not higher considerations It is more to be a man than to be an American. We are first of all citizens of the world, brothers in humanity and subordinately citizens of our nation. "The earth is the Lord's," and ours only in common with all the children of men, amongst whom he is no respector of persons. We are the descendants of Europeans who came here because this was God's earth, and they had a right to come. They never asked leave of the aborigines, nor do we admit that they had any right of exclusion. We represent different nationalities and races, but make no distinction in natural rights. We have instituted a government and recognize its authority as being ordained of God, but we recognize also our equality as men, and not merely as citizens. The law-abiding immigrant has rights just as sacred, and with the same claim to protection, as our own, and this does not depend on any human compact, but is the paramount law of Divine justice. Manifestly nations have no rights but such as are ordained of God. The Divine law is the Great Charter, and in none of its provisions is there authority for the exclusion of any who are law-abiding and self-supporting immigrants. The Hebrew common-wealth, in some respects the most exclusive of human governments, made the law-abiding immigrant welcome. "Thou shalt not vex a stranger nor oppress him." "He shall dwell with thee, in one of thy gates, where it liketh him best. Thou shalt not oppress him." The famous Burlingame treaty with China recognizes the alienable right of free immigration by the citizens of both countries, and the fathers of the republic held that this was the asylum of the oppressed of all nations. We claim the right of free emigration, and have always exercised it. We once went to war with Algiers to secure the freedom of our citizens to visit their waters. Until we are willing to relinquish this right of emigration, we cannot exclude the people of neighboring nations.

What, then, are our rights and duties toward these invaders?

1. We have a right to insist that all inhabitants, whether native or foreign, shall strictly obey our laws, and we have a right to provide that practices or customs that are injurious to the public good shall be effectually suppressed. Keeping a Chinese opium den or a German Sunday beer garden, is not a natural right, and should never be tolerated. This is true of all conditions affecting public health or morals.

2. We have a right to exclude all paupers, criminals, and those known to be disseminators of principles contrary to good government. Known anarchists have no right of immigration, and should be at once arrested and punished, or remanded to the country from whence they came.

3. We may rightly demand of all immigrants that they renounce allegiance to all other governments, whether civil or religious, whether open or secret, and that they promise supreme allegiance to our laws.

4. We should provide for the essentials of Christian instruction in all our public schools, and make education compulsory. This would be inconceivably better than any Chinese wall of exclusion.

"The Right Reverend Bishop Riordan, of the Roman Catholic church, Bishop Kip, of the Episcopal church, Bishop Fowler, of the Methodist Episcopal church, Deacon Ira P. Rankin, of the Congregational church, Judge Robert Thompson, Past Grand Chief of the Good Templars, and some other professed Christians, prominent in church and temperance societies, with some liquor dealers and liquor drinkers, have entered into partnership to carry on respectable (?) high licence saloons in San Francisco, if the guardian angels of the city's morals and drinks, the supervisors, will permit.

"None but the respectable people and their children will be wanted in those high-toned saloons. To add respectability and pay the additional tax, beer will be ten cents. These saloons are to have pretty waiter girls of pious disposition.

"Religious and general amusements every night, and church on Sundays."

The above is from the California Voice, a paper devoted to the cause of national and State prohibition. We doubt not that some who are the true friends of temperance give in their adhesion to the license system, but their course is so inconsistent with their profession that people are slow to believe that they are not in sympathy with the scheming politicians, the conservative dead-heads who wish to stave off all action, and the astute liquor dealers who stand shoulder to shoulder with them in demanding that their business shall be made respectable, and are willing to pay more or less as the case may require.

It is a hopeful sign that the Christian ministry should have so generally considered and spoken on the recent labor troubles in the country. It has, especially in this city, tended to strengthen the hands of the civil authorities in the repression of crime. Few of them have seemed to be able to discover the underlying cause. A recent cartoon represents a workman with his mug of beer in hand, blowing off the froth of anarchy, riot, murder, etc., and forgetting that it was the underlying drink that caused the froth. We are glad there was one minister and one congregation that had the courage to look these questions squarely in the face, and that on last Sabbath Pres. C. A. Blanchard preached in the Chicago Avenue church on the labor troubles as the outgrowth of the secret lodge system. It has been reported in the Inter Ocean, and we hope to have this sermon for the Cynosnre.

BURLESQUES.—We notice in the Royal Arcanum Journal an advertisement of burlesque initiations into the different orders of Odd-fellowship, Freemasonry, etc. These rituals are offered for sale at from $5 to $9 a set, and are recommended to the different secret orders as a means of raising funds by a public exhibition of their absurdities. It is a little remarkable that these orders should regard telling the truth as a great crime, while telling all manner of lies is highly meritorious and to be commended as a righteous method of sustaining these benevolent (?) orders. To the thoughtful mind the fact that all these orders seem agreed in resorting to hypocrisy and fraud to cover their tracks and hide their real objects from the public view, is an abundant evidence of the demoralization which they are inflicting and the dangerous character of their doings.

We ask pardon of our excellent contemporary for crediting "The Three Divine Societies" to the Gospel Messenger instead of The Brethren Evangelist, to whom the credit was due.

The French Evangelical Mission is at 135 W. Van Buren street, Chicago. It has services in English every evening, except Thursday, when they are in French. On Sunday at 11 A. M. and 4 P. M. services will be in French. It is expected that a free reading-room will be established in connection with the mission.

THE N. C. A. ANNUAL MEETING.

The annual meeting of the National Christian Association is fixed by by-law No. 4 on the third Thursday in June of each year. Corporate members and all friends of the N. C. A. will please notice that this occurs on June 17th, and prepare to be prompt in attendance at 10 A. M. There will be two sessions, morning and afternoon, for the transaction of business at No. 221 West Madison street, Chicago, and an evening session at some suitable place provided by the programme committee. F. W. CAPWELL, President.

W. I. PHILLIPS, Secretary.

LITERATURE.

We have received the first numbers of the Mennonite, a sixteen-page magazine, published monthly by Rev. N. R. Grubb, 2136 Franklin street, Philadelphia, Pa. Price 50 cents per year. It seems ably conducted and soundly evangelical. It represents a denomination who abhor war and "have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them."

We have read with great interest a volume of lectures and addresses by Canon Farrar. A few weeks ago, when Canon Farrar was in this country, tens of thousands of people paid as much one dollar each to hear a single lecture delivered by him, and were well pleased with what they got for their money. Several of the most important of those lectures and addresses, with other papers, are now published by John B. Alden, of New York, and can now be had in a very handsome cloth-bound volume, for the price of forty cents. Some of the lectures are also published separately in the Elzevir Library, in which form the lecture on Dante sell for 3 cents; on Temperance, 2 cents; on Ideals of Nations, 2 cents; Thoughts on America, 3 cents. None who read them but will be instructed and delighted.

THE HOME.

"I WILL COME AGAIN."

Thou art coming, oh, my Saviour,
Thou art coming, oh, my King,
Every tongue Thy name confessing,
Well may we rejoice and sing.

Thou art coming! Rays of glory
Through the veil Thy death has rent
Gladden now our pilgrim pathway,
Glory from Thy presence sent.

Thou art coming—not a shadow,
Not a mist, and not a tear;
Not a sin and not a sorrow
On that sunrise grand and clear.

Thou art coming! Jesus Saviour,
Nothing else seems worth a thought;
Oh, how marvelous the glory
And the bliss Thy pain had brought!

Thou art coming! We are waiting
With a hope that can not fail,
Asking not the day or hour,
Anchored safe within the veil.

Thou art coming! Thou art coming!
Jesus, our beloved Lord;
Oh, the joy to see Thee reigning,
Worshiped, glorified, adored!

Thou art coming! Thou art coming!
We shall meet Thee on Thy way:
Thou art coming! we shall see Thee,
And be like Thee on that day.

A DESCRIPTION OF JESUS.

Let me give you a description of our Lord Jesus Christ as it was found in an ancient manuscript sent by Publius Lentulius, President of Judea, to the Senate of Rome:

"There has appeared in these our days a man of great virtue, named Jesus Christ, who is yet living amongst us, and of the people is accepted for a prophet; but his own disciples call him the Son of God. He raises the dead, and cures all manner of diseases. A man of stature somewhat tall and comely, with a very reverent countenance, such as the beholders may both love and fear. His hair of the color of chestnut full ripe, and plain to his ears, but thence downward it is more orient and curling, and waving about his shoulders. In the midst of his head is a seam or partition of his hair, after the manner of the Nazarites. His forehead plain and very delicate. His face without spot or wrinkle, beautiful with a lovely red. His mouth and nose so formed as nothing can be reprehended. His beard thickish, like the color of his head, not very long, but forked. His looks innocent; his eyes gray, clear and quick. In proportion of body, most excellent; his hands and arms delicate to behold. He rebukes with majesty, counsels with mildness, invites with the most tender and persuasive language; his whole address, whether in word or deed, being elegant, grave, and strictly characteristic of so exalted a being. No man has seen him laugh, but the whole world behold him weep frequently, and so persuasive are his tears that the multitude cannot withhold their tears from joining in sympathy with him. In short, he seems for excellent beauty and divine perfection every way surpassing the children of men."

IN BAD COMPANY.

A few years ago an infidel lawyer in St. Louis, during the progress of a great revival which he ridiculed, was on his way to a drug store to procure some medicine for his sick child. It was a bright afternoon of the Lord's day, and a street preacher was speaking of Jesus to an immense crowd in one of the worst quarters of the city. The curiosity of the infidel was excited, and he stopped for a moment on the edge of the vast throng, to see what the gathering of so many persons meant.

Not a word the preacher uttered could he hear; but near him, and mounted on a wagon, stood a man who was pouring forth a volume of blasphemy and obscenity and hate, cursing the Bible, and Christ, and Christianity. The infidel noticed that the blasphemer had quite a group of sympathizers around him, who laughed at his coarse jests and loudly applauded his vile sentiments. But he also noticed that the group was made up of the very scum of society. Thieves, burglars, prostitutes, bloated drunkards—men, women and half-grown lads upon whom the police kept a watchful eye—constituted the admiring audience of the foul wretch who was flooding them with his tide of filth.

The lawyer after a while bowed his head in utter shame, as he reflected that he was identified with this spawn of hell. It is true that he was an infidel on far other and higher grounds, resting his skepticism upon intellectual and scientific objections to the Bible; but he remembered that the arguments and witticisms of his class of thinkers dribbled down through the various strata of the community, becoming dirtier and more offensive at each successive descent, until they reappeared at the bottom in the disgusting shape that faced him from the wagon of the infidel orator. He walked away chagrined and mortified, and, without attending one of the revival meetings, without hearing a sermon, he renounced infidelity, became a Christian, and determined to devote the remainder of his days to the defense of the cause he had sought to destroy.—Armory.

NAPOLEON'S TESTIMONY.

In a communication inserted in the New York Observer of April 16, 1842, Prof. G. De Felice, of Montbaun, translated from a French journal the following conversation related by Count De Montholon, the faithful friend of the fallen Emperor on St. Helena:

"I know men," said Napoleon, "and I tell you that Jesus is not a man!

"The religion of Christ is a mystery which subsists by its own force, and proceeds from a mind which is not a human mind. We find in it a marked inviduality which originated a train of words and maxims unknown before. Jesus borrowed nothing from our knowledge. He exhibited in himself the perfect example of his precepts. Jesus is not a philosopher, for his proofs are miracles, and from the first his disciples adored him. In fact, learning and philosophy are of no use for salvation; and Jesus came into the world to reveal the mysteries of heaven and the laws of the Spirit.

"Alexander, Cæsar, Charlemagne and myself founded empires; but upon what did we rest the creation of our genius? Upon force. Jesus Christ alone founded his empire upon love; and at this hour millions of men would die for him.

"It was not a day of battle which achieved the triumph of the Christian religion in the world. No; it was a long war, a contest for three centuries, begun by the apostles, then continued by the flood of Christian generations. In this war all the kings and potentates of earth were on one side; on the other I see no army, but a mysterious force, some men scattered here and there in all parts of the world, and who have no other rallying point than a common faith in the mysteries of the cross.

"I die before my time, and my body will be given back to the earth to become food for worms. Such is the fate which so soon awaits him who has been called the great Napoleon. What an abyss between my deep misery and the eternal kingdom of Christ, which is proclaimed, loved, and adored, and which is extending over the whole earth."

PECULIAR MEANS.

Nothing is more remarkable in the Bible than to see how God, as if to teach us to trust in nothing and in none but himself, selects means that seem the worst fitted to accomplish his ends. Does he choose an ambassador to Pharaoh?—it is a man of stammering tongue. Are the streams of Jericho to be sweetened?—salt is cast into the spring. Are the eyes of the blind to be opened?—they are rubbed with clay. Are the battlements of a city to be thrown down?—the means employed is, not the blast of a mine, but the breath of a trumpet. Is a rock to be riven?—the lightning is left to sleep above and the earthquake with its throes to sleep below, while a rod is used which is more likely to be shivered on the rock than to shiver it. Are men to be converted by preaching and won from sensual delights to a faith whose symbol is the cross and whose crown is to be won among the fires of martyrdom?—leaving schools and halls and colleges, God summons his preachers from the shores of Galilee; the helm of church is entrusted to hands that had never steered aught but a fishing-boat; and by the mouth of one who had been its bitterest persecutor, Christ pleaded his cause before the philosophers of Athens and in the palaces of Rome.—Guthrie.

HOMELY ILLUSTRATION OF FAITH.

Sam Jones was talking to a man of weak faith the other day. The doubter asked if Mr. Jones could not give him a demonstration of religion. "None," was the reply. "You must get inside the fold, and the demonstration will come itself. Humble yourself, have faith, and you shall know the truth."

"In other words, I must believe, accept it before it is proved and believe it without proof."

"Now hold on right here. Out West they have a place for watering cattle. The cattle have to mount a platform to reach the troughs. As they step on a platform their weight presses a lever, and this throws the water into the troughs. They have to get on the platform through faith, and this act provides the water and leads them to it. You are like a smart steer that slips around to the barnyard and peeps in the trough, without getting on the platform. He finds the trough dry, of course, for it needs his weight on the platform to force the water up. He turns away disgusted, and tells everybody there is no water in the trough. Another steer, not so smart, but with more faith, steps on the platform. The water springs into the trough, and he marches up and drinks. That's the way with religion. You've got to get on the platform. You can't even examine it intelligently until you are on the platform. If you slide around the back way, you'll find the trough dry. But step on the platform, and the water and the faith come together without any trouble—certain, sure and abundant."

WHOM TO MARRY.

The right kind of working girl makes a better wife for a workingman than a rich girl would. She is better adapted to him. The great majority of the rich and well-to-do men started out in life with wives poor like themselves. They pulled together and made common sacrifices, the wife contributing as much to the success achieved as the husband. It was, indeed, because they were married and because they had such wives, that they won success. Two are better than one, especially where both are good. The workingman who is married to a good wife devoted to his interests and ready to share his toils as well as his joys—who is strengthened by carrying the responsibilities of the family, gets along in the vast majority of cases better than his old bachelor comrades. He is a better human being, at any rate. He marries the girl of his choice, dowerless as to money, and husband and wife together fight the battle of life, both stronger for their union.—Sel.

THE SABBATH.

The Lord will require his Sabbaths at the hand of all Christian people. The present labor troubles furnish a good illustration of the way he requires it. The managers of railroads are the champion Sabbath breakers of this country. They not only show an utter disregard of the claims of God upon themselves, but of the claims of their men upon that day of rest. They teach their employes to be law breakers. The consequence is their employes are utterly regardless of the rights of the company, and by their enforced inactivity, and by the destruction of property, the railroads have lost all that they have gained by running on Sabbath. Every one knows that if men were employed on the roads that are conscientious in the observance of the Sabbath, the property of the road would be entirely safe in their hands; for no Sabbath-keeper would ruthlessly destroy the property of another. All such men are shut out from taking employment on a railroad, because they cannot break the law of God. The Lord has his own way of vindicating his holy law.

GOD'S POWER PREVAILS.

We recall nothing in the history of African missions more surprising than the apparent conversion of many youth in East Central Africa so soon after the establishment of the Board's mission. Ten years have usually been regarded as the period through which a missionary in Africa probably must labor after reaching a native tribe before he may expect to see the first convert. The language has to be learned, the confidence of the people must be secured, and their habits changed, before they will personally accept the Gospel message. Such an experience awaited all the earlier missionaries in South Africa. It has been deemed a marvel that the English church missionaries at Uganda could report, within eight years after their arrival at Victoria Nyanza, a church of more than one hundred communicants. But within two years and a half since the first agent of the Board took up his residence near Inhambane, and within one year from the time he began to teach, he, and those who have joined him, are permitted to rejoice in a spiritual awakening, the genuineness of which they cannot doubt. Our brethren may well say, in the midst of their astonishment and joy, that "no power save that of the Lord of glory could have done this work, and if it is his, it will go on, and nothing shall prevail against it."—Missionary Herald.

"THE MASTER HAS COME OVER JORDAN."

"The Master has come over Jordan,"
Said Hannah, the mother one day;
"He is healing the people who throng Him
With a touch of His finger, they say.

"And now I shall carry the children,
Little Rachel, and Samuel, and John,
I shall carry the baby Esther,
For the Lord to look upon."

The father looked at her kindly,
But he shook his head and smiled,
"Now, who but a doting mother
Would think of a thing so wild?

"If the children were tortured by demons,
Or dying of fever, 'twere well;
Or had they the taint of the leper,
Like many in Israel."

"Nay, do not hinder me, Nathan,
I feel such a burden of care.
If I carry it to the Master,
Perhaps I may leave it there.

"If He lay His hand on the children
My heart will be lighter, I know,
For a blessing for ever and ever
Will follow them as they go."

So over the hills of Judah,
Along by the vine-rows green,
With Esther asleep on her bosom,
And Rachel her brothers between.

'Mong the people who hung on His teaching,
Or waited His touch and His word,
Through the rows of proud Pharisees listening,
She pressed to the feet of the Lord.

"Now why shouldst thou hinder the Master," Quoth Peter, "with children like these?
Seest not how from morning till evening,
He teacheth, and healeth disease?"

Then Christ said, "Forbid not the children,
Permit them to come unto me."
And He took in His arms little Esther,
And Rachel He set on His knee.

And the heavy heart of the mother
Was lifted all earth-care above,
And he laid his hand on the brothers,
And blessed them with tenderest love.

And He said of the babe in His bosom
"Of such is the kingdom of heaven."
And strength for all duty and trial
That hour to her spirit was given. —Sel.

TRAINED ELEPHANTS.

The winter quarters for the animals connected with Mr. Barnum's circus are at Bridgeport, Conn., and the Standard of that city gives the following account of one of the trained elephants:

Among the amusing things done by the twenty-one-trained elephants in the Barnum London show, is a scene where one elephant, dressed as a clown, walks into the ring and sits down in a chair. Reaching out his trunk he picks up a dinner-bell on the table in front of him and rings it for dinner. A servant enters with a loaded tray, and places a square meal upon the table. The clown elephant then helps himself gracefully to the various dishes, picks up a champagne bottle filled with water, and empties it into his mouth. He then takes a napkin and wipes both sides of his mouth. The servant removes the tray of dishes, and the elephant, picking up a palm leaf fan with his trunk, leans back in his chair, and leisurely fans himself. Professor Arstingall, the trainer, proposed teaching him to smoke a pipe of tobacco, but Mr. Barnum remarked that his performers and army of employes were men of exemplary character, and his clown elephant should not be permitted to demoralize them by setting them bad examples. While this ludicrous and amazing display of human intelligence is being exhibited, a dozen other elephants are busy in the same ring. Three of them are playing at see-saw, one is rolling a barrel around the ring with his forefeet, another is turning the handle of a large organ, while still others are standing on their heads at the top of high pedestals.

A DOG THAT COULD COUNT.

Old Fetch was a shepherd dog and lived in the Highlands of the Hudson. His master kept nearly a dozen cows, and they ranged at will among the hills during the day. When the sun was low in the west, his master would say to his dog, "Bring the cows home;" and it was because the dog did this task so well that he was called Fetch.

One sultry day he departed as usual upon his evening task. From scattered shady and grassy nooks he at last gathered all the cattle into the mountain road leading to the distant barnyard.

A part of the road ran through a low, moist spot bordered by a thicket of black alder, and into this one of the cows pushed her way, and stood quietly. The others passed on, followed some distance in the rear by Fetch.

As the cows approached the barnyard gate, he quickened his pace and hurried forward, as it to say, "I'm here, attending to business." But his complacency was disturbed as the cows filed through the gate. He whined a little and growled a little, attracting his master's attention. Then he went to the high fence surrounding the yard, and, standing on his hind feet, peered between two of the rails. After looking at the herd carefully for a time, he started off down the road again on a full run. His master now observed that one of the cows was missing, and he sat down on a rock to see what Fetch was going to do about it. Before long he heard the furious tinkling of a bell, and soon Fetch appeared, bringing in the perverse cow at a rapid pace, hastening her on by frequently leaping up and catching her ear in his teeth. The gate was again thrown open, and the cow, shaking her head from the pain of the dog's rough reminders, was led through it in a way that she did not soon forget. Fetch then lay down quietly to cool off in time for supper.—E. P. Roe, in "St. Nicholas Dog Stories," St. Nicholas for May.

MAMMA, ARE YOU A CHRISTIAN?

An influential lady, the wife of a promising lawyer in C——, who had been under deep conviction for several days, gave the following account at our prayer meeting of her conversion:

Last evening my little girl came to me and said, "Mamma, are you a Christian?"

"No, Fanny, I am not."

She turned and went away, and as she walked off, I heard her say: "Well, if mamma isn't a Christian, I don't want to be one." And I tell you, my dear friends, it went right to my heart, and then and there I gave myself up to Christ.

In the language of that little child, "Mamma, are you a Christian?"—Words of Life.

If you set out in life to keep your children's body clean, healthy and comfortably clothed, their hearts pure and their minds trained for the work in life, whatever that may be, your strength will not give out. But if you propose to dress them æsthetically or fashionably, to fill your house with bric-a-brac, to eclipse your friends in your balls or brilliant little dinners, to attain this or that social success—no strength has ever been promised you for any such work.

TEMPERANCE.

A FREE ADVERTISEMENT FOR "THE BACCHUS."

If a paper entitled "The Murderer's Journal" should present itself and state that it comes "to fill a long-felt want;" that these are times demanding the greatest personal liberty, and that the "associated murderers" desire to lay before the great American people the necessity of adopting the most scientific methods of killing people, as well as the necessity of murdering a stated number of people each month, the result would be that considerable interest might be taken in the matter. Even the religious journals would consider the subject in carefully prepared editorials; sermons would be preached; public meetings held; the people would arise in their might, and the "associated murderers" would find themselves enjoying their personal liberty in a space measuring about 7x4 feet.

If a druggist accidentally gives out morphine instead of quinine, and the patient dies, there is an immense amount of newspaper talk, lawyer's talk, and damage suits; but the same druggist can sell whisky, vile with belladonna, opium, stramonium, or coculus indicus, to a man for whose crazy actions or even deed of murder following, no one but the drinker is held responsible.

"The Bacchus Publishing Co."—that sounds well, doesn't it? Bonfort's Wine and Spirit Circular says concerning this new journal:

BACCHUS.—A particularly lively new member has just taken its place in the ranks of trade journalism. Bacchus yeleped, and profusly illustrated, it proclaims its intention "to wage war against shams of all descriptions, whether political, social, theological, national, state or local." The illustrations are very good, the letter-press admirable and the editorial work ably done. We have no doubt that the paper will be a very valuable reinforcement to the little army that is fighting the formidable hosts of prohibition.

We particularly admire the modesty of this editor —"the littly army" vs. "the formidable hosts of prohibition!" Poor little innocent dears! what a pity they have to be annoyed.—Union Signal.

THE BARBER'S TEMPERANCE LECTURE.

There are many temperance lectures which are not delivered in public places; and a good many plain, sensible people say things on the subject which are quite as well worth remembering as the most eloquent addresses of eminent temperance orators. When men will look facts in the face they will find abundant reasons for letting strong drink alone.

Two colored barbers were together in a shop. One was a youug man; the other was old. The young man took off his apron and started out of the door.

"Yo's gwine to get a drink, Jim?" asked the elder.

"Dat's what I'm gwine to do."

"Go and git yo' drink. I yoost ter do de same ting when I wuz young. When I wuz fust married dah wuz a gin mill next to de shop wha' I wucked, and I spent in it fifty and sebenty cents a day outen de dollah an' a half I earned. Wal, one mawnin I went into de butchah shop, and who shood cum in but de man wat kep' de likker shop.

"'Gib me ten pounds po'terhouse steak,' he said.

"He got it and went out. I sneaked up to de butchah and looked to see what money I had left.

"'What do you wan'?' said the butchah.

"'Gib mee ten cents wuff o' libber,' wuz my remark.

"It wuz all I could pay fur. Now you go and git yo' drink. 'You'll eat libber, but de man wat sells yo' de stuff will hab his po'terhouse steak. De man behin' de bar eats po'terhouse steak—de man in front eats libber. I ain't touched de stuff fo' thirty years, and now I am eatin' po'terhouse steak myself."

If a man wishes to make the rumseller rich and himself poor; to feed the rumseller luxuries while he starves his own children; if he desires to dress the rumseller's wife in velvets and his own wife in rags, and rob his own wretched, bare-footed children that he may adorn and beautify the family of the rumseller, there is only one thing necessary, and that is, let him drink strong drink. He will find that these greedy rumselling cormorants will take everything he earns, and leave him a wretched outcast, while they revel in luxury and waste the substance that belongs to the poor and suffering.—Safeguard.

"DON'T FEEL LIKE AXING HIM."

The real reason why persons do not forsake sin is, they do not really want to. They are not quite willing to give up every idol, to cut off the right hand and pluck out the right eye. They do not honestly ask the Lord to help them, because they are not quite ready to be helped. They do not pray for deliverance, because they are not fully ready to be delivered.

Miss Helen Jackson tells the following story of her temperance work among the Southern freedwomen:

"A colored sister in the church, one who helped me a great deal last year, was greatly addicted to wine, and was, moreover, a woman of much influence in the church, many members of which were very intemperate. A few days ago I went to her house and read the Bible to her. She told me she did not drink wine any more. She said: 'I thought I couldn't do without it, but I axed de Lord to make me stop, and I just worried him until he did. Then I drinked beer in de place of wine; but I didn't want to, and I studied 'bout dat a heap, and I knowed if I axed de Lord he would make me stop, for he's de same God. So I did ax him, and I stopped drinkin' de beer. Now,' she says, 'dere's one ting more—dat's terbacker. I know de Lord will help me to stop, but I don't feel like axing him as I did afore.'"

NOTES OF THE TEMPERANCE CONFLICT.—The Canada Citizen gives the following summary of the counties which have adopted the Scott act:

"Nova Scotia has eighteen counties and one city, of which thirteen counties have adopted the act.

"New Brunswick has fourteen counties and three cities, of which nine counties and one city have adopted the act.

"Manitoba has five counties and one city, of which two counties have adopted the act.

"Prince Edward Island has three counties and one city, all of which have adopted the act.

"Ontario has thirty-eight counties and unions of counties and ten cities, of which twenty-five counties and two cities have adopted the act, and in five counties and three cities agitation has been started in its favor.

"Quebec has fifty-six counties and four cities, five counties of which have adopted the act.

"British Columbia has five parliamentary constitueneies, none of which have adopted the act."

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

—A missionary meeting at Roanoke, Ind., was addressed by Rev. D. F. Wilberforce, a native African, educated in this country, and ready to return to his field at the United Brethren Mission, West Africa. A collection of $300 was taken.

—The general conference of the Southern Methodist church is now in session in Richmond, Va. It opened on the 5th of May. The membership has increased in the last few years over fifty thousand. The membership is 996,994.

—Dr. Lansell, the English missionary, in a single recent year, distributed no less than 56,000 Bibles among the exiles in Siberia.

—The Episcopalians of this country are making an effort to raise a missionary fund of $1,000,000 in commemoration of the centennial of their church in America. They feel encouraged by the progress so far made.

—Within two years twenty Methodist missions have been planted and eleven mission churches erected in Chicago, at a cost of $58,000 for lots and buildings, and $18,005 for support of Sunday-schools.

—The Missionary Review brings together various recent gifts and legacies for benevolent purposes from donors in this country and Great Britain, mostly for home and foreign missions, amounting in all to over $1,500,000.

—Bishop Warren tells the missionary secretaries "the 100,000 new members thronging our doors the past three months is God's response to our effort for a million for missions. If we bring in all our tithes, neither the church extension society nor the people can get church room enough te receive the blessing."

—The Presbyterian Theological Seminary at San Francisco has received a gift of $50,000 from W. S. Ladd, of Portland, Ore., for the endowment of a chair.

—Thirty-five years ago it was the crime of high treason in Italy to possess the Bible. Now Bible depots are established in every Italian city.

—During a recent visit to New York, Dr. John A. Broadus secured $60,000 for the erection of buildings at Louisville, Ky., for the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary.

—The late John Antonides, of Flatbush, L. I., bequeaths $25,000 in trust to the General Synod of the Reformed church in America, to be known as the John Antonides Scholarship Fund, the income of which is to be used in aiding "poor, pious, worthy young men, who are preparing for the Gospel ministry in the Reformed church." He bequeathed also $26,000 for other religious objects.

—The German Theological School, of Newark, N. J., has received a legacy of $1,000 from the late Mrs. E. K. Williams, of Vernon, N. Y.; $6,000 from Thomas Williams, of the same place, and $10,000 from the Synod of New Jersey.

—Thomas Horan bequeaths over $40,000 to charitable institutions. Have you yet made your will in favor of God's cause? Perhaps you had better give it before you die, and see yourself that it gets into the right hands.

—Mrs. Van Cott, the evangelist, is reported to have recently said that during the past seven years she delivered 1,978 sermons, conducted 5,094 meetings, spent 8,446 hours in churches, written 8,199 religious letters, brought 12,667 seekers to the altar, traveled 71,270 miles, received 4,330 converts on probation, and baptized 1,086 persons. She was born in 1830.

—The British and Foreign Bible Society has proposed to the American Bible Society that they cooperate in the production of a new version of the Bible in Spanish.

—The students of Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, Troy, N. Y., under the lead of a son of Gen. O. O. Howard, recently voted that no liquors should be furnished for grand marshal night by assessment on the students, as has usually been done, but that any one desiring them must furnish them for himself.

—There is at present a very strong movement toward a union between the United Church of Christ in Japan and the Congregationalists in this country. The movement originated with the natives themselves, but finds great favor with the foreigners also. The Congregationalists are already a strong body, and so is the United Church of Christ in Japan. The former comprises the results of the operations of the American Board in this country, and the latter the result of five missionary societies, namely, that of the American Presbyterian, the Southern Presbyterian, the Scotch Presbyterian, the Dutch Reformed and the German Reformed. The desire for union, however, is not confined to the two denominatians just named. There is a strong desire, also, in the Methodist Episcopal mission, the Canada Methodist mission, and that of the Evangelical Association for a union of the Christians of these churches in Japan. This desire, moreover, is not a dormant one. A co-operative union has just been formed between the Canada Methodist mission and that of the Methodist Episcopal church in their theological school work, and an invitation has been extended to the mission of the Evangelical Association to become a partner in the union.—Missionary letter from Japan.

—Great gifts to foreign missions are reported in many churches. Trinity church, Boston, raised $4,400 the other Sunday, and Dr. Cuyler's church $4,600 in the regular collection; and many smaller churches have more than doubled their gifts to this cause.

—The Baptists of Topeka, Kansas, have sent a greeting to their fellow members throughout the country, in which they affirm the success of prohibition in Kansas. They say: "Not a legalized place for the sale of liquor as a beverage in all our eighty thousand square miles of territory. In four years we have driven the saloons out of nearly three hundred towns and cities of the State. We have seventy-five counties without a saloon, and for this token of divine favor we return gratitude to Almighty God. There are but three cities in our State that openly violate the law. Two of them are on the banks of the Missouri river, the other near the Colorado line, all on the border of States unfriendly to the prohibition laws; but at these places the State and county officials have commenced prosecutions, and they will soon have to submit to the inevitable."

—Bishop Taylor writes as follows from Africa: In the past few months I have commenced two chains of missions, beginning on the Atlantic coast, to be extended inland year by year, locating stations about fifty miles apart. This year I expect, under the leadings of the divine Spirit, to start two more. The great difficulty is in getting in; after that we can send in recruits yearly without going in person to settle them.

—The "Conscience Fund" at Washington begun in 1827, now amounts to $220,000, and is increasing every year.

—Rev. Dr. Jessup, of Beirut, reports that a numerous body of Mohammedans in a Syrian city are reading the Bible, have rejected the Koran, and profess belief in Christ.

—Twenty-two students connected with the Kioto Training School were to be received in March by the Second church, Kioto, Japan, on confession, while the Third church was to receive eighteen persons from the city.

—Samuel P. Jones and Samuel W. Small, evangelists, opened their meetings in Baltimore on May 2 before audiences of 5,000 or more people.

—Bishop Littlejohn has resigned the care of the European churches belonging to the American Episcopal body, and the Bishop of North Carolina has taken his place.

—The fifth general conference of the colored Methodist Episcopal church of America is now assembled in Augusta, Ga., Bishop W. H. Miles of Louisville, Ky., presiding.

—The Rev. George E. Reed, D. D., pastor of Hanson Place Methodist church, Brooklyn, has been made president of the New York Preachers' Meeting, in place of the Rev. John Johns, resigned.

—At a Cincinnati interdenominational meeting of colored ministers held a week or two ago, resolutions were passed deprecating the general Sabbath desecration in visiting places of public amusement, and resolving to preach from time to time special sermons against the practice.

—The handsome new Tabernacle Presbyterian church of Philadelphia, of whose congregation the Rev. Dr. Henry C. McCook is pastor, was dedicated on May 2 with impressive ceremonies. The edifice has cost $207,945.80, and there is not a cent of debt upon the new structure.

—The Rev. E. F. See, who has resigned his pastorate in Albany to become general secretary of the Brooklyn Young Men's Christian Association, received a hearty welcome and reception on the evening of May 5 from many prominent Brooklyn people interested in the work of the association.

—Revival meetings have been in progress in Sardis, Miss., since the last week in January. The first services were held in the Presbyterian church, a large ingathering being the result. Then the Baptist church was opened for similar meetings, with similar results; and soon the Methodist church entered into the campaign. The result is the conversion of from one hundred and fifty to two hundred persons. The saloons have been closed, and the town has been profoundly affected.

—The churches connected with the Presbyterian Union in Japan have increased their membership 80 per cent in two years. The number is now over 4,000. At this ratio there will be in ten years over 75,000 church members.

—According to the Churchman, no workman that belongs to a labor union can now consistently solicit aid from charity organizations.

—The Presbytery of the Indian Territory reports for the past year an increase of 24 per cent in churches, 33 per cent in church membership, 62 per cent in Sunday-school membership, and 25 per cent in the total amount of contributions. A very satisfactory showing, indeed! The present openings for promising church and school work far exceed the means at command to occupy.

—There are in the American Episcopal church fourteen sisterhoods and two well-established orders of deaconesses—one in Long Island and one in Alabama. In the Church of England, twenty-five sisterhoods and eight orders of deaconesses are reported.

—In the theological seminary of Richmond, Va., sixty-two colored men are studying for the ministry.

—In one section of Minneapolis there are thirteen houses of worship, eleven of which are Scandinavian, in only one of which is the English language spoken. Most of them are full at every service, three of them holding 1,500 people each.

—There are seventy-four Protestant Episcopal churches in this city and ten missions, with an aggregate of 29,493 communicants—a gain of eleven churches and 17,354 communicants during the past twenty years.

—The First Congregational church of Minneapolis, Minn., lost its house of worship by fire Sunday afternoon, May 2. Insurance will cover a large part of its value. The pastor of this church, the Rev. J. L. Scudder, had just left for his new charge in Jersey City.

—Joseph Cook is resolved "to fight rum, tooth and nail," and he advises Prohibitionists to accept no compromise.

—Omaha has Dr. John Hall's son among its pastors, and Kansas City has the son of Dr. Philip Schaff, of Union Seminary.

—Arrangements have been made in Syracuse, N. Y., for a business-men's prayer-meeting, to be held daily from 11:45 A. M. to 12:15 P. M, in the chapel of the First Presbyterian church.

—Reports from all sections of Kentucky, and, in fact, throughout the Southwest generally, point to a deep religious movement. Nearly all the churches are holding special services with most gratifying results.

—As the result of Mr. Moody's efforts in the Young Men's Christian Association rooms, Brooklyn, there has been a large accession of membership. Meetings have been continued with success under the Rev. Mr. Bliss.

—A Pastor's Alliance, comprising twenty-seven pastors of the District, has been formed in Washington, D. C., to assist the authorities in enforcing the laws and securing proper legislation, especially for Sabbath observance.

—The public recantation of a well-known infidel was read from a Maine pulpit, on Feb. 14th. He is an aged man, who has always gloried in being called an infidel. Having been enlightened by the Holy Spirit, he caused to be read in the Methodist pulpit, in Pembroke, a declaration signed by him, in which he said: "I desire now to counteract the evil that I may have caused. I believe for a person to live and die happy he must believe in the Lord Jesus Christ as recorded in the Scriptures."

—At the State convention of Young Men's Christian Associations of New York, held at Elmira, it was mentioned that a corps of the White Cross Army, for the promotion of personal purity among young men, was organized about one year ago, and now numbers 567 young men, the object of which is to seek to influence young men of their acquaintance to treat women with respect, to put down, as far as they may be able, indecent language and coarse jests, to maintain the law of purity as equally binding upon men and women, and to endeavor to fulfil the command, "Keep thyself pure." Those who are brought into very close contact with young men can appreciate in some measure the urgent need of special efforts in this direction by a special agency, such as the association has wisely created.

ANTI-LODGE LYRICS.

Sing the Reform Into the Hearts of the People!

One of the most popular books against lodgery is the latest compilation of

George W Clark,

The Minstrel of Reform.

A forty-page book of soul-stirring, conscience-awakening songs, appropriate for lectures, conventions and the home circle. What can add more to the interest of a meeting than a song well sung? What means will more quickly overthrow the power of the secret lodges than to sing the truth into the popular conscience?

Get this little work and use it for God and home and country. Forty pages.

Berea College History.

PP. 87, CLOTH, 40 CENTS.

The establishment of a College for the education of colored children and the white children of the mountaineers in a slave State at a time when the whole country was shaken by the discussion of abolition, was a sublime act of faith in God who "hath made of one blood all nations of men."

This is what REV. JOHN G. FEE did at Berea, Ky., and the friends of reform cannot spend 40 cents better than to send for this of faith tried, and of precious deliverances that read like a chapter from the book of Daniel.

A WOMAN'S VICTORY;

OR

THE QUERY OF THE LODGEVILLE CHURCH

BY JENNIE L. HARDIE.

This simple and touching story which was lately published in the Cynosure is now ready for orders in a beautiful pamphlet. It is worth reading by every Anti-mason —and especially BY HIS WIFE. Get it and take it home to cheer the heart of your companion who may desire to do something for Christ against great evils, but is discouraged from making any public effort. PRICE, FIFTEEN CENTS. Ten for a dollar

The Facts Stated.

HON. THURLOW WEED ON THE MORGAN ABDUCTION.

This is a sixteen page pamphlet comprising a letter written by Mr. Weed, and read at the unveiling of the monument erected to the memory of Capt. William Morgan. The frontispiece is an engraving of the monument. It is a history of the unlawful seizure and confinement of Morgan in the Canandaigua jail, his subsequent conveyance by Freemasons to Fort Niagara, and drowning in Lake Ontario. He not only subscribes his NAME to the letter, but ATTACHES HIS AFFIDAVIT to it.

In closing his letter he writes: I now look back through an interval of fifty-six years with a conscious sense of having been governed through the "Anti-Masonic excitement" by a sincere desire, first, to vindicate the violated laws of my country, and next, to arrest the great power and dangerous influences of "secret societies."

The pamphlet is well worth perusing, and is doubtless the last historical article which this great journalist and politician wrote. [Chicago, National Christian Association.] Single copy, 5 cents.

BETWEEN TWO OPINIONS.

BY E. E. FLAGG.

Author of "Holden with Cords," "A Sunny Life," "Little People," etc.

The Best Story of the Reform.

Price, only $1.00.

Published by THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

This latest and best of Miss Flagg's works is now ready in handsome print, neatly bound. The story begins in a quiet New England home, and paints its homely joys with a delicacy and truthfulness worthy the hand of Harriet Beecher Stowe. The scene then changes to a thriving, growing, palpitating young Western city, and with great power and startling accuracy the writer leads us behind the scenes that we may see the machinery that works the liquor traffic and labor troubles. The story of the strike, the mob, the attempted assassination, the saloon-keeper's wiles, the curse of his trade, the power of the Christian faith to change him to a messenger of mercy, the criminal and the hidden power that shields him from justice, the land robbers tricks, the dark and secret conspiracies of the lodge—these and all the incidents of the book are portrayed with rare tact and great power of description. It is emphatically a book for the hour. And what is better and yet more striking, the incidents are facts, and every one a powerful and convincing argument against the lodge and the saloon.

Every temperance man and woman should read this book. No temperance story like it was ever planned, much less ably executed. A wonderful light is thrown upon the difficulties in the way of prohibition. Learn how they may be avoided.

Every one who loves to read a good story, chaste and elegant in expression, p in thought, true in incident, deeply interesting in its narrative, should read this bc

READ THESE NOTICES FROM THE PRESS:

The Free Methodist, Chicago.

"Between Two Opinions" is a story; its incidents vouched for as facts, which presents a powerful argument on these questions and must attract thousands of readers among our thinking and observant people. The plot of the story is neither startling nor novel, but it develops a wonderful strength in following the experiences of people in the common, every-day walks of life.

Free Press, Birmingham, Iowa.

It differs from the popular story, "The Bread-winners" of a year ago. It greatly differs from that book in that it is written from the Christian standpoint, and its beautiful and touching descriptions of home life and home duties and heroic self-denyings will waken a responsive echo in every heart, that has not by dissipation lost the taste for the pure joys of home.

The Religious Telescope, Dayton.

The author, Miss Flagg, is a brilliant writer. The stirring questions in American politics are undoubtedly prohibition and the labor movement as championed by the secret unions of working men, which direct the strikes that with more and more frequency occur in our cities. "Between Two Opinions" is a story, its incidents vouched for as facts, which presents a powerful argument on these questions, and must attract thousands of readers among our thinking people.

The Christian Conservator, Dayton.

This is a charming book, written in an attractive manner. It is so full of sunshine and so radiant with light that one is enlightened, warmed, and, before they are conscious of it, set against the lodge. The style gleams, glows and sparkles. It is dignified and simple. It is the right book to place in the hands of your wife or daughter to superinduce co-operation with you in anti-secrecy work. Every minister's wife should read it, and then, if her husband is not an Anti-mason, he should take his turn next and become one.

The American, Washington.

We are reading, in spare moments, Miss Flagg's new book, "Between Two Opinions," and the estimate we have thus far put upon it is that it is masterly both in style and argument. One is insensibly made to feel that he is reading facts and not fiction; that the book is not a play upon the imagination but an unraveling of mysterious circumstances which have an important bearing upon current events.

Law and Order, Boston.

The book takes high ground for prohibition of the liquor curse, for woman's ballot for home protection, and for a better and more honest brotherhood than is forced by their obligations upon the members of secret orders. It is, therefore, a valuable book for several large classes of American readers.

Christian Instructor, Philadelphia.

There are important questions pressing upon American politics to-day; two of them are prohibition and the labor question as connected with the secret unions of workingmen. This work is an expose of the twin evils, secret societies and the saloons. The truths are given in the form of a story; not startling, but thrilling experiences of home life that are vouched for as facts. The evidences presented of the impossibility of reaching the saloon keeper so long as he and the officers of the law are sworn brothers in the den of some secret society, are conclusive enough to awaken the most careless and obtuse member of society. It is a valuable book for the masses to read.

Evangelist, Berea, Kentucky.

The object of the volume is to illustrate the practical workings of Secret Societies, and especially to show how the Lodge upholds the saloon, and this very important design is wrought out with much skill, clearness and power. By reading it temperance people may learn much about the difficulties in the way of prohibition.

The Standard, Chicago.

It is written in the interests of reform, more especially temperance and Anti-masonry. The title of the story suggests the special aim of it, which is to protest against all "halting between two opinions;" in other words, is a plea for radicalism. The story is vigorously written, and will interest even readers who do not altogether believe in its doctrine.

The Pacific, San Francisco.

It is a story intended to do service against the saloons, and in favor of Womans' Christian Temperance work, and especially against the secret orders—Freemasons, Odd-fellows, the Knights of Labor, etc. No reflecting man can doubt that any combination of picked classes and individuals is liable to great abuse. It is obvious, also, that secret orders are specially capable of being used in a selfish and unprincipled way.

FARM AND GARDEN.

CELERY FOR HOME USE.

For seven months—from August 15 1885, to March 16, 1886,—we were not without good celery, white and crisp; for five months we had an abudance for a large family. As this supply was raised in a common graden, with no special soil or appliances, for home use only, a plain statement of how it was done may be of service to those who suppose the culture too difficult for prentice hands. The ground was ploughed the latter part of April, soon as dry enough; planted to Little Gem peas, in rows four feet apart. When fairly up they were cultivated, and Early Ontario potatoes planted in rows between the peas, except that two spaces were set with early celery for summer use, 100 plants. The last week in July alternate rows of potatoes were dug, and rows of celery set eight feet apart, 300 plants, for fall use. About August 10, 200 plants for winter use were put out. This last planting should have 300 plants to make a full supply for winter and spring for a family of ten to fifteen. The plants were set six inches apart in the row: eight inches would be better where the ground is made as rich as it should be.

As the soil was not more than ten inches deep and underlaid with clay, I made it deeper by throwing out for the celery rows about six inches of top soil and then six inches more, keeping them separate. I then filled the trenches nearly full with top soil, well-rotted manure, hen manure, and wood ashes, mixing them thoroughly. The trenching would not have been necessary had the soil been sufficiently deep and rich for the roots, which run very deep in good soil. With exception of the plants intended for winter, the celery was banked up gradually as it grew. At the first banking, the ground was first loosened with a hoe, then each plant taken separately in the left hand and dirt enough drawn close around it with the right hand to hold the leaves together and upright. Afterward more earth was brought up to the plants, from time to time, with hoe or spade. The plants for winter were dug in early November and packed close in a trench one foot wide and as deep as the plants are high. The soil was filled in close to the plants at the sides, and the plants covered with leaves six inches deep. In December as many more leaves were put over. With this protection the celery kept well.—Prof. C. H. Dann.

If a plow or other steel implement has become very rusty make a mixture of half a pint of oil of vitriol poured slowly into a quart of water, and apply to the rusted metal Wash off with water and scour in the usual manner. It is better, however, not to let any implement get rusty.

At the Canadian Experimental Station it has been determined that feeding timothy without much clover had a tendency to dry the flow of milk in winter.

The shallow-rooted timothy and deep-rooted clover feed in different depths of soil, and hence go well together. Mammoth clover ripens more nearly with timothy than medium clover, but its stems are coarser and not liked by farm stock except swine.

There is a bill before the House Committee of Agriculture for taxing butterine and it associates. On the other hand the assemblies of the Knights of Labor of New York and Brooklyn have passed, and forwarded to Washington resolutions approving the manufacture and use of these articles, thus antagonizing the butter-producing interests.

The New Englander gives a plan for preventing crows from pulling corn. It is to soak the corn in a weak solution of copperas (sulphate of iron) twenty-four hours before planting. To make it easy to drop, and to prevent it from injuring the hands, rub the corn in gypsum or plaster. This method, it says, will prevent crows from destroying the corn and save the farmer much annoyance and labor.

An Idaho paper says that now the country west of the Rocky mountains must be given the palm for producing the best and finest horses to be found anywhere in the world. It is also remarked that it costs no more to raise a horse that is worth from $100 to $300 or more than it does to raise a $40 cayuse; besides good horses command a readier sale than poor ones, and in numberless ways the advantage is in raising good horses.

The Boston Cultivator gives the following as among the new or less known points on insecticides: Mix pyrethum with four or five parts of flour. Gas lime water for the cabbage worm is made by rubbing the inside of a cask with a spoonful of gas lime and filling the cask with water. Burning straw over the strawberry plants for the tarnished plant bug has proved quite successful. The effectiveness of the pyrethum is increased by the addition of alcohol.

The Wisconsin Agricultural Experimental station has been testing potatoes. The Pearl of Savoy yielded 309 bushels to the acre; E. Sunrise, 316; Crane's Potentate, 302; Alexander's Prolific, 327, down to Garfield, 226. This yield was of large potatoes. A test of quality was also made with the following result: Extra: Alexander's Prolific, E. Harvest, E. Sunrise, Fine E. Ohio, White Star, E. Illinois, E. Maine and Garfield. Good: Crane's Potentate, Corliss Matchless and Rural Blush. Poor: Mammoth Pearl and American Giant.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. A historical sketch of the institution and a critical analysis of the character of each degree, by Prest. J. Blanchard, of Wheaton College. Monitorial quotations and nearly four hundred notes from standard Masonic authorities confirm the truthfulness of this exposition and show the character of Masonic teaching and doctrine. The accuracy of this exposition legally attested by J. O. Doesburg, Past Master Unity ☐ No. 191, Holland, Mich., and others. This is the latest, most accurate and complete exposition of Blue Lodge and Chapter Masonry. Over one hundred illustrations—several of them full page—give a pictorial representation of the lodge-room, chapter and principal ceremonies of the degrees, with the dress of candidates, signs, grips, etc. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1.00.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished, with engravings showing the lodge-room, dress of candidates, signs, due guards, grips, etc. This revelation was so accurate that Freemasons murdered the author for writing it. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Prest. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7 50. Paper cover, 35 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. To which is appended "A Revelation of the Mysteries of Oddfellowship (old work,) by a Member of the Craft." The whole containing over five hundred pages, lately revised and republished. In cloth, $1.50 each; per dozen, $14.50. The first part of the above work, Light on Freemasonry, 416 pages, 75 cents each; per dozen $7.50.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern. A book of great interest to officers of the army and navy, the bench and the clergy. TABLE OF CONTENTS: The Antiquity of Secret Societies, The Life of Julian, The Eleusinian Mysteries, The Origin of Masonry, Was Washington a Mason? Fillmore and Webster's Deference to Masonry, A Brief Outline of the Progress of Masonry in the United States, The Tammany Ring, Masonic Benevolence, the Uses of Masonry, An Illustration, The Conclusion. 50 cents each; per dozen. $4.75.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry, by E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge, No. 639, Chicago, gives the correct or "standard" work and ritual of Masonry; the proper position of each officer in the lodge room, order of opening and closing the lodge, dress of candidate, ceremony of initiation, the proper manner of giving the signs, grips, etc., are fully illustrated and explained. First three degrees. Paper cover, 35 cents.

The Mystic Tie, or Freemasonry a LEAGUE WITH THE DEVIL. This is an account of the church trial of Peter Cook and wife, of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a reverend Freemason; and their very able defense presented by Mrs. Lucia C. Cook, in which she clearly shows that Freemasonry is antagonistic to the Christian religion. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Morgan's Exposition, Abduction and MURDER, AND OATHS OF 33 DEGREES. Composed of "Freemasonry Exposed," by Capt. Wm. Morgan "History of the Abduction and Murder of Morgan;" "Valance's Confession of the Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan;" Bernard's Reminiscences of Morgan Times," and Oaths and Penalties of 33 Degrees 304 pages.

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

History of the Abduction and Murder OF CAPT. WM. MORGAN. As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan. This book contains indisputable, legal evidence that Freemasons abducted and murdered Wm. Morgan, for no other offense than the revelation of Masonry. It contains the sworn testimony of over twenty persons, including Morgan's wife; and no candid person, after reading this book, can doubt that many of the most respectable Freemasons in the Empire State were concerned in this crime. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Sermon on Masonry, by Rev. James Williams, Presiding Elder of Dakota District Northwestern Iowa Conference, M. E. Church—a seceding Master Mason. Published at the special request of nine clergymen of different denominations, and others. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

College Secret Societies. Their customs, character, and the efforts for their suppression. By H. L. Kellogg. Containing the opinion of many prominent college presidents, and others, and a full account of the murder of Mortimer Leggett. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2 00.

In the Coils; or, the Coming Conflict. By "A Fanatic." A historical sketch, by a United Presbyterian minister, vividly portraying the workings of Secretism in the various relations of everyday life, and showing how individual domestic, social, religious, professional and public life are trammeled and biased by the baneful workings of the lodge. Being presented in the form of a story, this volume will interest both old and young, and the moral of the story will not have to be searched for. $1.50 each; $15.00 per dozen.

General Washington Opposed to SeCRET SOCIETIES. This is a republication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8th, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life—undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin Trial. Also the letter of Hon. Richard Rush to the anti-Masonic committee of York County, Pa., May 4th, 1831. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14th, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons, swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' LETTERS on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Thirty most interesting, able and convincing letters on the above general subject, written by this renowned statesman to different public men of the United States during the years 1831 to 1833. With Mr. Adams' address to the people of Massachusetts upon political aspects of lodgery; an Appendix giving obligations of Masonry, and an able Introduction. This is one of the most telling anti-secrecy works extant, aside from the Expositions. Price, cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00. Paper, 35 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

Judge Whitney's Defense before the GRAND LODGE OF ILLINOIS. Judge Daniel H Whitney was Master of the lodge when S. L. Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the five degrees of Female Free Masonry, by Thomas Lowe; comprising the degree of Jephtha's Daughter, Ruth, Esther, Martha and Electa, and known as the Daughter's Degree, Widow's Degree, Wife's Degree, Sister's Degree and the Benevolent Degree. 20 cents each; per dozen, $1.75.

Stearns' Inquiry into the Nature and TENDENCY OF FREEMASONRY. With an Appendix treating on the truth of Morgan's Exposition and containing remarks on various points in the character of Masonry, and a Dialogue on the necessity of exposing the lodge. 338 pages: cloth, 60 cents each, per dozen, $5.00. Paper covers, 40 cents each; per dozen, $4.00.

Mah-Hah-Bone; comprises the Hand Book, Master's Carpet and Freemasonry at a Glance. Bound in one volume. This makes one of the most complete books of information on the workings and symbolism of Freemasonry extant. Well bound in cloth, 589 pp.....$1.00

Masonic Oaths Null and Void; or, Freemasonry Self-Convicted. This is a book for the times. The design of the author is to refute the arguments of those who claim that the oaths of Freemasonry are binding upon those who take them. His arguments are conclusive, and the forcible manner in which they are put, being drawn from Scripture, makes them convincing. The minister or lecturer will find in this work a rich fund of arguments. 207 pp., postpaid.....40 cts.

Masonry a Work of Darkness, adverse to Christianity, and inimical to republican government. By Rev. Lebbeus Armstrong (Presbyterian), a seceding Mason of 21 degrees. This is a very telling work and no honest man who reads it will think of joining the lodge. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Secret Societies. A discussion of their character and claims, by Rev. David McDill, Prest. J. Blanchard and Rev. Edward Beecher. In cloth, 35c. per doz. $3.25. Paper cover, 15c. Per doz. $1.25.

Reminiscences of Morgan Times. By Elder David Bernard, author of Bernard's Light on Masonry This is a thrilling narrative of the incidents connected with Bernard's Revelation of Freemasonry. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 DeGREES OF FREEMASONRY. To get these thirty-three degrees of Masonic bondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

The Master's Carpet, or Masonry and Baal Worship Identical, explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the lodge, and proves that Modern Masonry is identical with the "Ancient Mysteries" of Paganism. Bound in fine cloth, 420 pp.....75cts.

Freemasonry Contrary to the ChrisTIAN RELIGION. A clear, cutting argument against the lodge, from a Christian standpoint. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern, AND COLLEGE SECRET SOCIETIES. Composed of the two pamphlets combined in this title, bound together in Cloth. $1.00 each; per dozen, $9.00.

ON ODDFELLOWSHIP.

HOME AND HEALTH.

A NEW SACCHARINE SUBSTANCE.

A new sweetening agent has been produced from coal tar. It is known to chemists as "benzoyle sulphuric imide," but it is proposed to name it "saccharine." The discoverer is Dr. Fahlberg, and its preparation and properties were recently described by Mr. Ivan Levinstein at a meeting of the Manchester Section of the Society of Chemical Industry. Saccharine presents the appearance of a white powder, and crystallizes from its aqueous solution in thick, short prisms, which are with difficulty soluble in cold water, but more easily in warm. Alcohol, ether, glucose, glycerol, are good solvents of saccharine. It melts at 200° C., with partial decomposition. Its taste in diluted solution is intensely sweet; so much so, that one part will give a very sweet taste to 10,000 parts of water. Saccharine forms salts, all of which possess a powerful saccharine taste. It is endowed with moderately strong antiseptic properties, and is not decomposed in the human system, but eliminated from the body without undergoing any change. It is about 230 times sweeter than the best cane or beet-root sugar. The use of saccharine will therefore be not merely as a probable substitute for sugar, but it may even be applied to medical purposes where sugar is notpermissible. One part of saccharine added to 1,000 parts of glucose forms a mixture quite as sweet as ordinary cane sugar. The present price is 50 s. per pound, but although very high, this is not prohibitory, as its sweetening power is so great; but it is very probable the cost of its manufacture will soon be very considerably reduced. This new compound will be of great interest, for not only is it perfectly wholesome, but it possesses, in addition to its intensely sweet taste, decided antiseptic properties.

MAKE HOME CHEERY.

If you wish your children to stay at home, give them a home to stay in. Make it cheery and healthy. If you do not wish to be miserable yourself, and make others around you unhappy, take care of your health. If you want your wife to fade away like "the last rose of summer," put her in a dark kitchen on the shady side of the house, and let her clothe her parlors in perpetual gloom; but if you want health, let in light. It is better to have faded carpets than to have faded cheeks.

Our old friend, Giles Dayton, used to say, if he was going to build another house, he would not have a window in it; for when a house was furnished with windows, the women wanted shutters and blinds outside, and two or three thicknesses of cloth and paper within to shut out the light; and he would just board up the windows to begin with, and so save all the trouble.

We believe in windows. We know a family which moved into a house which was said to be very light and pleasant; but before many weeks had passed they had holes enough knocked through the walls to put in a dozen more windows, and they found comfort and profit in the change.

The pestilence "walketh in darkness." If you want health, down with shades and curtains, and fill the house with light, and so drive out disease and death.

"But we must keep the shutters closed to keep out the flies."

Oh, yes! the flies show excellent judgment. They usually know enough to keep out of a dark room. They value their health too highly to live in a charnel-house. Dark houses are excellent places for funerals; and wise flies know enough to keep out of them; but can men and women enjoy good health living in places where flies will die? God bathes the world in light. Let us be thankful for it, and walk in the light while we have it.

TALK TO THE CHILDREN.

Children hunger perpetually for new ideas. They will learn with pleasure from the lips of parents what they deem drudgery to study in books; and even if they have the misfortune to be deprived of many educational advantages, they will grow up intelligent people. We sometimes see parents who are the life of every company they enter, dull, silent, and uninteresting at home among their children. If they have not mental activity and mental stores sufficient for both, let them use what they have for their own households. A silent home is a dull place for young people—a place from which they will escape if they can. How much useful information, and what unconscious, but excellent moral training in lively, social argument. Cultivate to the utmost the art of conversation at home.

HORSFORD'S ACID PHOSPHATE,

Invaluable as a Tonic.

Dr. J. L. PRATT, Greenfield Illinois, says: "It is all that it claims to be—invaluable as a tonic in any case where an acid tonic is indicated."

DR. JONES'

RED CLOVER TONIC

Is the best known remedy for all blood diseases, stomach and liver troubles, pimples, costiveness, bad breath, piles, ague and malaria diseases, indigestion, loss of appetite, low spirits, headache, and all diseases of the kidneys. Price 50 cents, of all druggists.

ALL-NIGHT INHALATION!

"A positive revolution in the treatment of Air-Passage Diseases of the Nose, Throat, and Lungs, and, for the purpose designed, as valuable a discovery as vaccination."

THE PILLOW-INHALER.

A Speedy, Positive and Permanent Cure for Catarrh, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Incipient Consumption.

It is a hair pillow, with reservoirs of evaporating liquid, the fumes or vapor of which is inhaled all night long, whilst sleeping as usual, and without any discomfort. It is used only at night, and is perfectly safe to the most delicate. There is no stomach-dosing, douching or snuffing; but just as a smoky lamp will leave a deposit on a whitened wall so the PILLOW-INHALER, for say eight hours at a time, spreads a powerful healing balm or salve on the inflamed inner coating of the diseased air-surfaces, from the nostrils to the bottom of the lungs, and hence into the blood. Old-fashioned inhalation, through a tube, for a few minutes a day, sometimes cured. Think of eight hours constant action, on the same principle, but intensified a hundred-fold! There are no pipes or tubes. The medicine is breathed in, not swallowed, and goes right to the diseased parts.

CATARRH. BRONCHITIS. CONSUMPTION.

HON. E. L. HEDDEN, Collector of the Port of New York, says: "I take pleasure in stating that the PILLOW-INHALER has been of the greatest relief, and I believe of permanent benefit, to my wife, who has been a great sufferer from Bronchial and Catarrhal Troubles, accompanied with distressing Asthma. I recommend its use to all persons afflicted with such maladies."

E. L. HEDDEN, 38 West 49th St., New York.

MR. H. G. TEELE, 50 Bryan Block, Chicago, Ill., says: "I suffered fifteen years from a severe case of Catarrh; coughed incessantly day and night. I bought a PILLOW-INHALER, and since using it my cough is gone; my lungs are no longer weak and sore, and I am in better health than I have been for years."

During the six years of its existence the PILLOW-INHALER has wrought cures of Catarrh, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption, that have been more like miracles than the usual treatment of disease. It is not expensive, and is within the reach of every one. Send for Explanatory Pamphlet and Testimonials, or call.

IN THE COILS;
— OR —
The Coming Conflict.

A NEW AND STRANGE STORY BASED ON STARTLING FACTS, VIVIDLY PORTRAYING A MYSTERIOUS AND DANGEROUS POWER AT WORK IN THE GOVERNMENT, THE CHURCH, AND THE HOME.

"All will agree that this is a powerfully written story."—Evangelist, (Chicago, Ills.)

"A book which we trust may have a wide circulation."—National Baptist, (Philadelphia.)

"So intensely interesting did I find it that it was hard to pause until the last sentence was read. This work places the author high among the writers of fiction."—W. W. Barr, D. D. in Christian Instructor, (Philadelphia.)

"Unless we are greatly mistaken, the work will do more to awaken the American church and people to the evils of Freemasonry than any other book recently published."—Evangelical Repository.

"The book will create a sensation in Masonic circles, and evoke criticism of a most relentless character. The courage of the author in attacking such a rock-rooted bulwark as Freemasonry is something to admire, Fanatic though he be."—Nebraska Watchman.

"Light is needed on this subject and needed badly, and we welcome this contribution to the literature of anti-secretism, and cordially commend it to the favorable attention of our readers."—United Presbyterian, (Pittsburgh.)

"A charming work, fit to be classed with 'Uncle Tom's Cabin;' it is indeed less a work of fiction. The volume is as valuable as a work of reference as it is agreeable, truthful and useful. Our young folks will not leave the book, if they begin it, till they 'see how it turns out.'"—Cynosure, (Chicago, Ills.)

BATAVIA CONVENTION PAMPHLET.

A Staggering Blow!

Such was to Freemasonry the great NATIONAL CONVENTION held in BATAVIA, N. Y., September 1882. It gave the world

Thurlow Weed's Great Letter

On the abduction and murder of WILLIAM MORGAN in 1826, which has been the most widely published of any Anti-masonic document. The dedication of a noble granite monument to the memory of Morgan, and the able and eloquent addresses of the Convention make this a most valuable pamphlet.

SEE WHY.

It contains—
1. Portrait of Morgan.
2. Portrait of Thurlow Weed.
3. Fine picture of the Monument.
4. The great letter of Thurlow Weed and his affidavit—almost the last public act of his life.
5. Address by J. E. Roy, D.D.
6. The monument oration by Pres. C. A. Blanchard.
7. Addresses on "Christian Politics" by Pres. J. Blanchard, on the Character of Freemasonry by Prof. E. D. Bailey, on the "Freedmen and Secret Societies" by Rev. H. H. Hinman; and very interesting personal and historical reminisences.

LUCILLE VERNON.

Cloth.....75 cents.

THIS is a pleasant surprise in many ways. The author is Rev. W. T. Meloy, of the United Presbyterian Church of Chicago, and the book is published by the Board of Publication of his denomination. It is a love story, not "fascinating," but with so much of genial interest that the reader is in no danger of laying it down unfinished. * * * The moral purpose of the book is to describe and vindicate Christian character, in its more heroic aspects, and it is a success. We congratulate the author and the United Presbyterian Board of Publication on this literary lily of the valley.—The Interior.

"LUCILLE VERNON" is evidently not an ideal sketch, but the fictitious names used represent to a great extent real men and women of flesh and blood. The characters of many of them are by no means attractive, but are perfect counterparts of querulous, obstinate and parsimonious professors who are thorns in the flesh of many a pastor in all the churches. But as in all the churches, there were also good and true men and women at Lansington, who upheld and encouraged the pastor. * * * In its author will be recognized the worthy pastor of the First United Presbyterian Church of Chicago, and a welcome contributor to these columns.—United Presbyterian.

The heroine, who becomes the bride of the pastor of the church at Lansington, is a wonderful exemplification of how a woman who is a true wife and help-meet may throw her life and energies into the great work of saving souls; aiding, by gentle words and sympathy, wise counsel and brave endurance, the husband having charge of a congregation where the Demon of Misrule held full sway. We follow with interest the history of the wife and husband through their hours of despondency and discouragement to the happy ending, where religion, harmony and peace have gained the ascendency and the good man and wife find their reward.—Pittsburgh Daily Telegraph.

The pastor of a Congregational church in this vicinity, who is represented as being "fond of a cigar, a joke, and a good time," has been requested, by a letter signed by seven out of eight of his church committee, to resign his pastorate because of alleged inefficiency. This he peremptorially declines. They have proffered him the payment of his salary to the end of the year, but he does not propose to accept the bread of idleness. He evidently thinks he is persecuted, but he seems to forget the admonition of the Master, "When they persecute you in one city flee into another."

At this time more than a hundred degrees of Masonry, constituting over half a dozen rites, are claiming attention, each organization assuming that it has something valuable to impart; some from one source and some from another; while most of the time many of them are occupied with internal uproar over the authenticity of pretended documents purporting to have been issued by some self-assumed authority, as though it could make any difference in the value of their establishment, whether the original pronunciamentos were forged or not. Preposterous legends and astounding titles, with all the other "modern improvents" necessary to high degree outfit, can be fabricated now with as little expense as at any former time, and made genuine, if that is any object, without difficulty.—Victoria Freemason.

We notice that in several cities there is a movement among the barbers to secure to themselves a Sabbath of rest. Sometime since their labor union in Washington, D. C., voted to strike against Sunday work. More recently the barbers of Boston have petitioned the city government to enforce the law against keeping open barber shops on Sunday, and, we believe, they have secured exemption from Sunday labor. We wish to commend their example to other artists and mechanics. No employer has a right to demand any labor not needful as a work of necessity or mercy. In insisting upon a Sabbath of rest all laborers will promote their own highest good, and secure the sympathy of all well-disposed citizens.

It would be reasonable to suppose that the most veterate sitter would, after more than twenty years, grow weary of brooding over addled eggs. But Rev. Dr. Palmer, of New Orleans, said at the late meeting of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian church South, that the reasons for separation from the Northern church are just as strong now as when the vision took place; that the Northern church had condemned slavery and the doctrine of State rights, and had never repented of and confessed their great sin. He held that the church had no right to express convictions on such questions. One would suppose that after a lapse of twenty-five years the pleadings of Dr. Palmer for slavery and the declaration of the General Assembly against rebellion, might be remanded to the pages of history and the last of the severed links of the Union be re-united.

Irish revolutionists have held a secret conference in Boston and say that in the event of a war with Great Britain, they can furnish about 30,000 troops, duly armed and drilled for the conflict. We do not doubt it, and we have reason to believe that besides these, there are numerous other bodies of men armed and equipped, amounting in the aggregate to several hundred thousand men, who are fully prepared for a conflict at home or abroad. Besides these, our standing army of 25,000 officers and men would cut an insignificant figure. We have no fears of a conflict with Great Britain. The fisheries question will be settled in the courts or by negotiation, but we have much to fear from these unauthorized military bands, which are not sworn to the United States Government, but are sworn to secret, irresponsible despotisms. We have far more to fear from the enemies in our midst than from those beyond our borders, and our national security is not in these military organizations, but rather in their complete suppression.

Whether prohibition is profitable will be seen from the following communication in the Voice: "Hon. John D, Stewart, Circuit Judge of eight counties in Georgia, after five years on the bench, resigned. When he first filled the position three of the counties were for prohibition, and five against. Now only one is against. He says: 'In the prohibition counties crime has been reduced one-half. I get through the docket in a "dry" county in a day or two. In a "wet" county it takes me about a week. The cost of running the court is about $150 a day. The "dry" counties are saving $800 a year by prohibition in the mere matter of court expenses.'" If any other evidence were necessary it would be offorded by the exceeding bitterness with which prohibition is opposed by all who have any pecuniary interest in the liquor traffic. It is true that some men have raised great sums of money, established presses, published books, and even laid down their lives for sentiment, but they were not the men who make and drink beer and whiskey and go to war for the personal liberty of ruining themselves and others for gain. If prohibition did not prohibit there would be neither prohibitionists nor "personal liberty leagues." Mens' actions are more eloquent than words.

Some ladies were arrested and fined five dollars each for gathering some flowers in Lincoln Park. Picking flowers in the city parks is doubtless reprehensible, and may rightfully be suppressed by law; but a city government that employs its police force to look after dandalions, and licenses thousands of saloons and permits them to violate the law by selling on the Sabbath, to minors, and often without license, and a government that winks at gambling and prostitution, and only wakes up to the existence of anarchy when five or six of its policemen are slain, is a government unfaithful to the interests and unworthy of a great city. Within the past few months the members of the Salvation Army, who were earnestly laboring to reform the baser elements of society, have been arrested, fined and imprisoned, while avowed anarchists paraded the streets and flaunted their red flags of defiance, and were unmolested. Fortunately the public attention is being awakened. The bomb at the haymarket was a costly, but most useful, lesson, and it is to be hoped that, ere long, it will be the great interests of justice and humanity rather than the protection of the public pleasures that will receive the first attention of the police.

Among the benevolent and reformatory institutions of this city there is perhaps none less pretentious and more needful than the House of Industry for ex-criminals at 111 Center avenue. Almost all who go into our prisons find, on coming out, that all access to honest labor is closed against them and the business of crime seems the only practical way of getting a livlihood. We are far from advocating excessive tenderness to criminals. We would make it very evident to all men who trample on the laws, that "the way of the trangressor is hard." But society ought to protect itself, and it can do this most effectively by dealing kindly as well as justly by the excriminal. This institution aims to give a temporary home and work to those who come out of our jails and penitentiaries. Quite a number are being provided for, and more might be aided if there were a larger building and more means.

The city and country is all agog with Decoration Day. Much as we rejoice in the providential results of the late war, and highly as we esteem those who counted not their lives dear to them so that they may purify and preserve their country, we have two objections to these celebrations. First, they tend to revive and perpetuate the memories of the war and keep alive the sectional animosities that have so greatly hindered the unification of the nation, attention to questions of common interest, like the prohibition of the liquor traffic, etc., and in various ways our national prosperity.

Second, they tend to keep alive and promote the war spirit. Slowly the Christian world is learning the Divine lesson of "Peace on earth and good will to men." International arbitration ought to be at once accepted as the remedy for all war, but the reason why it is not is that our history is made up of the exploits of warriors, and that military hero-worship prevails to such an extent. When, as a people, we shall learn to honor men for moral heroism rather than mere brute courage and military strategy, and when, not the man who has labored to destroy life, but rather to save it, shall have special respect, we shall begin to emulate the example and have more of the spirit of the Master.

A bill has been introduced into the House of Representatives by Mr. O'Neill, of Missouri, to provide for the incorporation of the Knights of Labor. This is one of the demands that they make in their declaration of principles. Of course every organization having legitimate ends, and seeking to promote them by right means, ought, by all means, to be afforded all legal facilities. But the two unalterable conditions of the creation of any incorporate body is that it shall be in subordination to the State and open to its inspections. We presume that in theory the Knights of Labor profess subordination to the civil authorities, but practically they have trampled on all law, justice and the public good. Judge Mallory, of Milwaukee, lately instructed the grand jury to inquire into their character whether they were not an unlawful organizations, having for their object unlawful acts. We are not advised as to the result of such inquiry, but we do know that it is a fundamental principle that neither the public generally nor the State shall have any means of knowing what are their ceremonies, covenants, laws or decisions. Mr. O'Neill, in his Arbitration bill, expressly provided that in any legal investigation they shall not be obliged to communicate any of the secrets of the order.

An act to incorporate a secret order must, of course, provide for just such concealment. But to ask our National Congress to create something of which it cannot have any knowledge is to ask it to stultify itself. Nay, more, to commit treason against the body politic.

HYMN BY GUSTAVUS ADOLPHUS.

Fear not, O little flock, the foe
Who madly seeks your overthrow;
Dread not his rage and power:
What, though your courage sometimes faints,
His seeming triumph o'er God's saints
Lasts but a little hour.

Be of good cheer; your cause belongs
To Him who can avenge your wrongs;
Leave it to Him, our Lord.
Though hidden yet from mortal eyes,
Salvation shall for you arise;
He girdeth on His sword!

As true as God's own Word is true,
Not earth nor hell with all their crew
Against us shall prevail.
A jest and byword are they grown;
God is with us; we are his own;
Our victory cannot fail.

Amen, Lord Jesus, grant our prayer!
Great Captain, now Thine arm make bare;
Fight for us once again!
So shall Thy saints and martyrs rise
A mighty chorus to Thy praise
World without end. Amen!

CONSTRUCTION VS. REFORMATION.

There are two plans for the improvement of both lapsed men and lapsed institutions. One is the Divine, the other the human. Men are not fitted for the kingdom of heaven by gradual improvement upon what they are by nature, but by a re-creation. "Except a man be born again he cannot see the kingdom of God." "If any man be in Christ Jesus, he is a new creation, old things have passed away; behold all things have become new." So with institutions that are to be used and honored of God. "No man putteth new wine into old bottles." There must be a fitness between the institution and uses to which it is to be applied. It was not by the improvement of the Jewish church that it could be used to give the Gospel to mankind. The Mosaic dispensation had served its purpose and was to be supplanted by something better. It was not, as Luther first attempted, by the improvement of the Roman Hierarchy that it could be fitted to hold the new wine of the reformation. Protestantism must have of necessity a separate organic existence.

And this is true of all our civil and political movements. Even the overthrow of slavery demanded reconstruction. It was a practical regeneration of the nation. Political parties are never reformed. They serve their purpose, and others have to be constructed when a new and higher purpose is to be subserved. Neither the Democratic nor the Whig parties could be used to abolish slavery. God raised up another party and trained it in the school of his providence. It was baptized in suffering and blood, and divinely educated to be used for the purpose for which it came forth. Its mission was a noble one, but like the chrysalis it is wound up. Its vital elements are to be evolved and re-appear in the form of a new party with new and larger purposes The better moral sense of the people always gravitates to the right side of every question, and its crystallization into a party is only a question of time.

During the last twenty-five years the best moral sense of the people of the North has been mainly in the Republican party, but the baser elements are so strong that it has and must fail to be the true party of reform. The best moral elements in the South are to-day in the Democratic party, but it is handicapped and overruled by abounding influences of evil. The political party that shall redeem this nation from the twin demons of the lodge and the saloons must come from an evolution of all that is good in both these old parties and its infusion into a new and better party.

CHRISTMAS AND EASTER.

"When the Cynosure, in its opposition to the observance of Christmas, Easter, and other church festivals, claims to take its stand with Luther, it would be well if it referred to the works and quoted the words of the great reformer in justification of such a claim. Luther is greatly wronged when he is made to condemn the observance of Christian holidays, or to teach principles whose consistent application would preclude such observance. He was too ardent an advocate of Christian liberty to countenance for a moment any prohibition or condemnation of such observances, which God has left free. Christians are not commanded to keep Christmas or any other day, but they are commanded to worship the Lord in the beauty of holiness, and if they choose to observe Christmas or Good Friday for this purpose, as many in their love for their Lord are moved to do, who shall forbid them? Not the observance of such days in the exercise of Christian liberty, but the prohibition of such observance, is adding to God's Word and imposing upon the disciples a yoke of human bondage."

The above, from the Lutheran Standard, together with several private letters, leads us to say,

First: That we have never said that Luther opposed the observance of Christmas and Easter, for he did not always carry out his convictious to their logical results; but we take our stand with him in insisting that it is God's law, rather than human commands and traditions, that demand our observance, and that as a general fact people neglect the former just about in proportion as they observe the latter.

Second: We have never questioned the liberty of any one to keep Christmas, Easter, Good Friday, or any other day in the whole calendar. We have never for a moment entertained the idea that the Society of Friends should be compelled to practiee baptism and the Lord's Supper, or that the Protestant Episcopal, Lutheran aud Romau Catholic ehurches should be hindered from keeping all the days they may elect, but our conviction is that in either case there is error.

The drift in all our Protestant churches is towards ritualism and to Rome—a forgetfulness of the Spirit in the practice of constantly enlarged eeremonies, and a growing adherence to forms. It is seriously proposed that all our religious denominations should unite in a common ritual, and that by so doing we shall have solved the great problem of the visible unity of the Universal church. We greatly desire such unity. Our prayer is that of the Saviour, "That all may be one," but to our mind it is human inventious and traditions that stand most in the way of real union. When we shall eliminate from our religious observances all that is merely human, and be eontent to observe just what God has commanded without adding or subtraeting from what is written in his Book, we shall be in the road to universal righteousness.

WASTED RESOURCES.

M. P. SMITH.

The Apostolic church were all of one faith and order, and if the church of God had heeded the Apostle's injunction there would have been but one faith and order still. But now, men are still saying, I am for Luther and I am for Calvin and I am for Wesley, and if Paul were here he would say, Who is Luther and who is Calvin and Wesley, but ministers by whom ye believed? Therefore, let no man glory in men; you exhibit the effects of the carnal mind, you are an idolatrous people.

That the church of God is weltering under a financial and ministerial curse to a very great extent, is my humble opinion. Look at a small town of two or three thousand inhabitants, and only one-third of the population ever attend church, and only a small fraction of these are of any financial ability, and this small number are obliged to support four or five different churches, when one good church is sufficient to meet all of the demands of such a town.

Then what an inducement to endure an hireling ministry (many are taking the sacridotal offiee). The church is divided in these matters, also in the stationizing process that is so popular among us; that the work of God is hindered on this account to a great extent, is evident to my mind. See the mighty scrabble for money. Why, they even turn the house of God into a dining-room, and make it also a place of merchandise, and sell suppers to a gluttonous people, when a time of fasting and prayer is more in harmony with the spiritually-minded portion of the church of God. Oh, for a glorious reform in the ehurch of God. Replace the ancient landmarks, and return to primitive Christianity, and then we shall see salvation go forth out of Zion, and her righteousness shall shine forth clear as the sun, and fair as the moon, and as terrible as an army with banners.

Omro, Wis.

THE BOYCOTT.

An able article in the June Century speaks of boycotting as having been practiced from time immemorial, and which is habitually used for good as well as for improper reasons. When either one of two parties refuses to do business with the other it only exercises a legal right, and however much this disagreement may be deplored, it cannot be prevented by any legal enactment. Not so when the boycott becomes indirect—when the party which refuses to do business with another undertakes to compel all others to do likewise. It then becomes an interference with personal rights and a practical conspiracy against society. A secret order votes to boycott a newspaper. In order to make it effective they boycott all who patronize it. At once the grocer, the baker, the butcher and the mechanic feel the foree of the eombiued onslaught. They must either yield and give up their paper or their business is greatly injured, if not ruined. Most men, to avoid a controversy and for the sake of continuing a business which at best is none too lucrative, will yield, and the result is that the press, which prides itself on its fairness and independence, succumbs to the pressure and is subordinated to a secret conspiracy.

"The indirect boycott, then, is a private wrong, in that it strikes at the right of private security, which the State is bound to maintain for the individual eitizen. Its plainest aspect is when it is threatened or employed for the purpose of extorting money, under the guise of fines or otherwise. The act is a conspiracy whieh law would not tolerate in any person not a representative of a labor organization. Other individuals are not allowed to collect their debts or to enforce their contracts iu that fashion. It is also a public wrong, for it strikes at the functions and existence of the State itself. The plainest aspects of this poiut are in two recent propositions. One is the proposed organization of the policemen of our eities into branches of the Knights of Labor. The guardians of the public peaee would then owe allegiance not to the State, but to the imperium in imperio. The other is the proposed boycotting of the militia of a State, of individuals who do not leave the militia organizations, and of individuals who refuse to boycott members of the militia. This rises beyond conspiracy into the field of treason. But it is the logical result of an admission of the principle of indirect boycotting.

"The inevitable tendency to social disintegration is already shown by the increasing disposition to make use of the boycott as a remedy for the real or imaginary grievances of all sorts of combinations and classes of individuals. The tendency is increased by the practical license which the organization of the Knights of Labor allows to its branches. If a branch of the order makes use of the boycott, in the shape of a causeless strike against an uninterested third party or otherwise, the boycott continues until it is removed by the branch which applied it, or until the boycotted party accepts the mediation of the managing eommittee of the whole order. The order is a federation whose principle is one of large local sovereignty. In these local boycotts, the branches are thus the 'wieked partners,' who take the responsibility of the act; the managing committee is the factor whose 'moderation' recommends the system to those who do not perceive its real nature. Let us understand the thing clearly, its nature and its results. The new system, in any of its forms of combination to injure the business or assail the rights of uninterested third parties, is one which the State must deal with or die: its refusal to exercise its essential function of the protection of the individual would be merely a relegation of that function to new combinations of the assailed individuals. By making the alternative one of social peace or social warfare, labor succeeds only in forcing into consideration a question before which even its claims to recognition and substantial justice must retire for the time.

"The single question which is pressed upon the American people is whether they will permit a power to be exercised by one class of American citizens which must deprive other classes of their rights, or compel them to organize similarly in self-defense and overthrow social order in the inevitable conflict. The only admissible answer to the question would seem to be the decision of the State to adhere to its fundamental principle, to deal with individuals only, and to resist combinations whose object is to usurp or to nullify the State's functions of punishing or protecting the individual citizen."

ROMANISM AND SECRET SOCIETIES.

Cardinal Gibbons says: We hold that if a man joins a society, swearing never to reveal any of its workings, no matter how eriminal, and to obey the dictates of its officers blindly, he surrenders his personal liberty, becomes a slave to his fellowmen, and cannot partake of the sacraments of the church. Such an oath is taken by the prevalent secret soeieties; hence their eondemnation by the clergy. On the other hand, if a man joins an organization, swearing to keep secret its workings, with the proviso that nothing therein shall be contrary to the laws of the land, to his conscience, and religious tenets, we hold that his action is perfectly justifiable. The whole question as to the church's attitude toward the Knights of Labor depends on which of these oaths the members take.

From the above, as well as several articles in the Catholic Review, we are convinced that the Roman Catholic church, in the United States, does not intend to stand by the mandament of the Archbishop of Montreal, but is seeking for some middle ground which shall not compromise them as bishops, or offend a powerful organization whose head (Mr. Powderly) and a large share of its members are steadfast adherents of Romanism. Astute as these learned bishops are, they will unquestionably fail. It will be found practically impossible to discriminate between different secret societies, (1) because all alike deny to the public any knowledge of their secret workings, and (2) all alike declare that their covenants are in harmony with the duties that their members owe to God and to their country. The trouble is, that it is the lodge or assembly that is to decide what is, or is not, contrary to duty to God and to humanity. There is reserved to the initiate no right of private judgment, and people differ greatly as to what is contrary to the duties we owe to God and humanity. Without such restrictions on the consciences of the members of their orders their covenants would be but ropes of sand. If a Mason or a Knight felt at liberty to disclose any of the secret working of the order that seemed contrary to his conscience, he would be a very unsafe member; and yet, so long as "the lodge (as Robt. Morris says) is to be the judge," he is in any case a slave. The bishops who have attempted to patch up this compromise, will either cheat the lodge or the church, and unquestionably will be cheated themselves.

THE FRANCHISE.

The following from the New York Weekly Witness is most timely and important:

Freedom of voting is the security for public peace and prosperity, but to what extent has that freedom been preserved?

Have we not Knights of Labor whose chosen leaders must be obeyed by its army of workingmen?

Have we not the Grand Army of the Republic, every member of which is a voter, who are to vote together for the party who will give the most liberal pensions to the greatest number of soldiers whether or not the pensioners had been a month or a year in the army, or had ever seen an enemy, or been in any way injured?

Have we not a liquor-ring, fully able and quite willing to defeat any party that does not please it, or any individual candidate that has the least odor of temperance?

Have we not railroads and other companies and syndicates which employ voters by the thousand and expect them all to vote according to the interests of their employers though it may be against the republic interest?

Have we not the Church of Rome, so skilfully organized and ably commanded, that thousands of votes shall be given for any party that will put through its jobs, such as exemption from taxation, grants for institutions, separate schools, etc.?

With all these menaces of the franchise, is it not necessary in defence of all that is pure, good and for the public interest to band together for the overthrow of the greatest curse of the country—the liquor traffic?

We heartily concur in the above, but will the Witness please tell us how the liquor traffic is to be overthrown unless we also break up the rings that protect it? No rings are so powerful as those that are secret, and are sworn to mutual protection. We are quite ready to join hands with the Witness in securing the election of such legislators and executive officers as will out-law and suppress the liquor traffic; but have we not a right to ask as a condition of such co-operation that the candidates chosen to represent us shall not be members of the above mentioned rings or of any other combination bound to secrecy, obedience and partiality?

SERMON BY PRES. C. A. BLANCHARD.

LABOR, LIQUOR, AND LODGE.

At the Chicago Avenue church the Rev. C. A. Blanchard interested a large audience in a timely discourse on the above-named subject, holding secret societies responsible for the great injury to commerce and trade caused by the labor strikes. The sermon was as follows:

Come unto Me all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest.—Matthew 11: 28.

There is no peace saith my God to the wicked.—Isaiah 57: 20.

God wills the happiness of men. Our Saviour describes his mission in these words: "These things have I spoken unto you that my joy might remain in you, and that your joy might be full." "These things have I spoken unto you that in me ye might have peace" If there is anything proved by the Word of God it is that he loves men, and only desires to establish them in righteousness; that he longs to bring to the restless, hungry, weary, wandering hearts of men the calm and rest which reigns in heaven. "Come unto me," he says, "and I will give you rest."

Men's hearts yet quake as they think how thin is the crust of law and order on which their homes are builded, how slender the bars of force that keep the wild beasts of society from ravening their prey, and some imagine that policemen and the militia are their hope of security. Others call for money, "plenty and cheap." Others think that if land titles were abolished and interest declared unlawful then society would have rest. And others, still, that if wages could be increased, while hours of labor were diminished all would be well. But Jesus says, "Come unto me and I will give you rest." And the voice of God affirms that there is no peace to the wicked. Rich or poor, well or sick, learned or ignorant, there is no peace to the individual or society until men love God.

Masked batteries are more dangerous than those which are in sight and against which provision can be made. The most hopeless sign of the times to-day is that the real cause of the unrest, which is everywhere evident, seems so unknown. There was never a time when the increase of wealth was so rapid as now. There was never a time when it was so widely diffused. There was never a time when the poor man could secure so comfortable a home and rise so soon to competence as to-day. Yet it is doubtful if there was ever an age when discontent, anger, envy, and hate were so universal. What is the reason for this singular phenomenon? Why do not men save more when they earn more? Why are they not better satisfied when they are better situated? Why does the age seem reeling and rocking like a ship in a storm in the midst of the abundant gifts of nature?

The reason is not far to seek.

and there can be no peace without him. Atheism, open, blatant, and blaspheming on the platform. Atheism, real, though silent, in the very church, perhaps often in the pulpit itself. But whence the increase of atheism in the era of Bibles, conventions, and general intelligence?

For years we have been told that the masses of men were drifting away from the church. Mr. Moody has said that more than ninety per cent of the men in the manufacturing centers of England do not go to any church at all. Yet he is a very ill-informed man who supposes that these men do not have the same religious nature which others have, or that its wants are unsupplied. These men in Europe and America go to the lodge, while others go to church and, just at this moment, the rage and hatred that takes possession of all classes, one against the other, is associated with the most astounding development of the secret society system that the world has ever seen.

It would be far truer to speak of the present disturbance as "The Lodge Question," than "The Labor Question." We do not need to hear about law and labor so greatly as we do about lodge and labor. In the Southwest the whole difficulty began with the refusal of a railway line to reinstate a member of a secret society in its service. The order at once took the commerce of that whole region by the throat and said, "Unless you put this member of my society back and pay him such wages as I direct I will destroy you."

The first gun here in Chicago was the demand on the part of a secret society that Mr. McCormick should turn five men into the street, because they had refused to join the lodge, and, just before the explosion of that bomb at the haymarket—a crowd of men who had gathered near these works rushed at a number of quiet non-union men with cries of "Scab! Scab!" and a volley of sticks and stones. Yet, in view of facts like these, men continue to talk as if capital and labor were, or were likely to be, antagonists, and devise ways and means to harmonize their supposed divergencies of interest. Every man who eats and wears less than he earns is a capitalist, and the great mass of men who have large capital are those who a few years since owned absolutely nothing but their labor.

The question will naturally arise, How can this be true when all over the country our wise men seem neither to see nor know anything about it? They all say Labor and Capital, or Liquor and Labor; very few say that the question is

LODGE AND LABOR,

The fact is more important than the explanation, and all who can read and are wllling to understand know that in St. Louis, Chicago, and New York, the question has been not about wages so much as whether a man who chose not to join a secret society should have the privilege of earning a living by honest labor. We can, however, easily see how this wide-spread ignorance has come about. For years the older secret societies have been undermining the public conscience, disintegrating the churches, taking possession of the offices, and over-riding the laws. And all the time they have been proclaiming their neutrality in religion and politics. Attempting to preach a religion without Christ and to establish a government of their own, secret and irresponsible, the principle has extended until the lying, hypocritical, and assassin religion of the lodge takes the dagger, the torch, and the dynamite in hand and threatens death if submission be refused.

It goes without saying that, in such a time, recklessness and immorality abound. Stores, manufactories, bake-shops, and mills can run only eight hours—but saloons, gambling hells, and houses of infamy may grind their grists twenty-four hours in the day and 365 days in the year. How can it be otherwise? The secret religious systems of this age require no confession of sin, no prayer for pardon, no faith in Christ. They initiate and tax and give banquets, and picnics, and balls, but do not lead men to new and holy lives.

The reason why we obtain rest when we come to Jesus, is that we gain victory over sin, and there is no other way to secure this victory, no way to peace except through it. Satan is the great deceiver, and he makes men believe that there is something the matter besides the fact that men refuse to come to Christ, whereas this is the explanation of all the want and misery of men, and the false religions of the world are what keep men from coming to Jesus.

But is it not true that the rich oppress the poor? Do not great corporations trample the laws of God and the rights of men under foot? And ought there not to be action of citizens for the righting of such wrongs? Doubtless. It is all very true. But the preachers and do not say to men, "Come to Jesus and you shall find rest." They appeal to the natural envy and hate which the poor bear toward the rich, they shut their eyes to the horrible drain made on our material resources by the liquor trade. They seem to have no special interest in the fact that the Sabbath is gone and the Bible banished.

I do not here profess great friendship for the poor. Words are cheap—so much breath. I show how I feel toward the poor by what I do. I am willing to go to the extent of my power in action to relieve their sufferings or right their wrongs. But, rich or poor, we must get to Christ or we shall never arrive at rest, and he is to-day the best friend of the poor man who says most clearly amid the Babel of earthly voices, "Behold the Lamb of God that beareth away the sins of the world!"

Let the potsherds strive with the potsherds of the earth, but let us who have tasted the good Word of God, who have felt the powers of the world to come, who have known Jesus in his resurrection and interceding and coming power, insist that our text is true, and continually invite the weary and heavy laden to the carpenter's Son, who alone can meet all the wants of the human soul. Amen.—Inter Ocean.

The following is important to a class of readers who are likely to be deceived by spurious advertisements:

WORK AT HOME.

The Women's Educational and Industrial Union of Boston, Mass., cautions all women to be wary of advertisements and circulars promising—on receipt of a certian sum—work at home, with large earnings. We are receiving letters from women far and near who have been defrauded by these promises. Either the person forwarding the money gets no answer at all, or the materials and implements sent are of little worth, or the finished work is rejected even if well done, or other obstacles are placed in the way, (the object being simply to get rid of her). The parties advertising make frequent changes of name and address, with some difference in circulars. They are now sending out through the United States, Canada and the Provinces, hundreds of thousands of plausible circulars, well calculated to deceive, for not many of the hundreds of thousands of women receiving them are aware that by a single advertisement any city firm can get plenty of workers close at hand.

Learning that this evil can best be checked by enlightening the public, we solicited the aid of the press, and the following continuous notice appears in our daily papers, each in turn giving it one week's insertion:

"The Women's Educational and Industrial Union, 74 Boylston Street, will gladly give information regarding circulars and advertisements offering to women work at home."

It is earnestly desired that newspapers everywhere help to enlighten the public by copying the whole of this present article and by giving the above notice, or a similar one, frequent insertions; also that Women's Associations, variously located, join us in this work, and by suitable advertising make themselves known as centres of information. Any needed assistance from us will be gladly rendered. Individuals can aid by procuring the insertion of this article in their local papers.

Such general concurrence of effort will save multitudes of women from sorrow and loss, work effectively against the swindlers, and promote the interests of the honest advertisers.

President Women's E. and I. Union.

THE SECRET EMPIRE.

MASONIC FOOLISHNESS.

The Grand Moguls and Magnificent Highmightinesses of Masonry had a hifalutin reunion at Cincinnati last week which registered from 30 ° to 32 ° above zero, and likewise above par. High sounding titles echoed adown the marble halls of the grand Cathedral on Broadway, while personified sublimity and grandeur strutted up the same, and vice versa. It was a sort of royal cross, as nearly as we can get at it, between a Sanhedrim and a Hippodrome. It was an occasion which we approach at a disadvantage on account of its mysteriously spectacular and mataphorical features and festivities. Profound old truisms, and moss-grown platitudes, were rehearsed with the impressive gravity becoming their antediluvian origin. The object lesson plan was strictly adhered to, and was eminently successful. It is only through the instrumentality of object lessons that the grand arcana of Masonry can be successfully and safely fooled with. The object is spectacular, the lesson oracular, and by the combination of this magic twain, more than mere worldly wisdom is evolved. The ancient and honorable Order of the Sons of Malta were "onto" this same object lesson racket. Beginning at skull and cross-bones, the candidate for the acquisition of its secret suplimities was led, by way of the "grand tank" and the "inclined plain," to a point of triumph whence, with the index finger of his right hand, he could point with pride to the unutterable glories of the "Maltese Star!" Then he was generally honored, in that way so dear to the average American heart, by the conferment upon him of a high and responsible office. But we are off our beat. Returning to the reunion at Cincinnati, there were "seeret rooms" in the Grand Cathedral—magic rooms, as it were, papered with musty mysteries of the dim old past, and crowded with the symbols, all quaint and curious, of a mystic and forgotten lore, "which none but craftsmen ever knew," and all that sort of thing.

It affords us pleasure to state that "Knight Kadosh, 32 °," was on hand, with a full staff of officers and guards. He was there to preserve the peace, and in case of a "strike" for eight hours, was ready to prance in and knock it silly in eight minutes. "Grand Inspector Inquisitor Commander, 31 °," was also entirely present in person, and in full bloom. He attracted much attention. It was his delicate duty to accompany the "companions of the mystic tie," when they ventured to penetrate the awful mysteries of "the wine room." What with dodging champagne corks, and trudging back and forth, he was pretty well tuckered out before he got through. The "Grand Sultan, 32 °," was present, of course, but he didn't bring his harem along, lest he might be arrested under the Edmunds anti-polygamy law, and sent over the road. He spoke in flattering terms of Sunset Cox, but denounced King George, of Greece, in unmeasured terms—said he was the meanest son of a gun he ever had anything to do with. Last but not least, the "Sublime Prince of the Royal Secret, 32 °," was conspicuously in the mix, and don't you forget it. He gave his royal secret to a couple hundred of the boys in a confidential way, and told them with a wink that mum was the word. This "royal secret," which the Sublime Prince keeps under lock and key, is "How Not to Do It!" So we have been informed by an Ohio Senator.—Belfontaine Examiner.

RENUNCIATION.

Rev. R. W. Marsh, having written to a Kansas paper on renunciation of Masonry, adds the following:

I wish now to add that previous to writing my renunciation I had never seen any exposures of the lodge, save when a boy about thirteen or fourteen years old I read some in Morgan's book that I now know to be true, with but few verbal changes from the form of words in the lodges I attended—changes not in any wise relieving the situation or altering in substance Masonry the world over, as the exposures go to show. Witness the latest given in public print—that of the ex-prefect of police in Paris, Andrieux—giving the very cut-throat language of the oaths I took here in Ontario. My renunciation was made on the basis and strength of my own interpretations of the institution, the Lord being my helper. It cost me more to do what I have done, and am ready to than perhaps some may think. I have been called liar, perjured villian, and I need not say more. God, that searcheth all hearts, and who has declared by his Son that "There is nothing hidden that shall not be revealed," he knoweth that I have uttered truths, undenying truths only, in what I have written of Masonry. If to be placed "Under no less penalty than to have my throat cut across, and my tongue torn out," etc.; in the first degree, and "My left breast cut open and my heart torn therefrom," etc., in the second, "My body severed in two, my bowels torn thereout, and burned to ashes in the centre," etc., in the third degree, the very position of every man who becomes a Master Mason, if I say all this and more, oh! how much more! be right, be of the saints in light(?) here below, and not of the unfruitful works of darkness, as I supposed, then I have been wrong in writing my "renunciation" and in publishing as from the house tops what I saw "in the chambers of their imagery." Glory to God, I revel in my freedom from the snare. Hating nobody, loving, I trust, everybody, I am yours, for Christ and his cause.

MASONIC BAPTISM.

The following is the account in the Philadelphia Press of the conclave of the Knights Templar at Scranton, Pa. We wish to call especial attention to the dancing and the baptism, and to ask our readers to remember these Knights Templar Masons have a religion that ignores Christ in the Lodge and the Chapter, but confesses him in the commendary, that joins tn the revelry of the dance and administers the rite of baptism in the name and to the honor of Free-masonry. Blasphemous oaths, heathenish prayers, and the profanation of a holy ordinance are mingled with the unholy revelry in which, sad to say, some who are called Christian ministers unite. The annual conclave of the Grand Commandery Knights Templar of Pennsylvania commenced in Scranton, Pa. Sixty commanderies were represented, among them the following from Philadelphia: Philadelphia, No. 2; St. John's, No. 4; Kadosh, No. 29; Mary, No. 36; St. Alban's, No. 47; Corinthian Chasseur, No. 52; Kensington No. 65 4.

The annual parade took place this morning, the column moving at 11 o'clock. Nearly 1200 Knights were in line, embracing nineteen commanderies, and nearly every one headed by a baud of music. The display was one of the most imposing ever witnessed in this city.

The reception was held at Lackawanna Rink, which was beautifully decorated for the occassion. After the general reception there was dancing for an hour or more, the several splendid bands in attendance furnishing music alternately. Later in the evening Cœur de Lion Commandery, tendered a splendid banquet at the 13th Regiment's armory to visiting Knights and Companies A and C ofthe 13th Regiment, were present in full uniform. The annual election of officers of the Grand Commandery will be held at 10 o'clock to-morrow morning and the public installation at 2 in the afternoon.

A happy Masonic incident occured here last evening. The grand officers called at the residence of Grand Commander Joseph Alexander and administered the rite of baptism to his infant son. Deputy Grand Commander George S. Graham named the child, and baptismal ceremony was performed by the Grand Prelate of the order, Rev. Henry W. Platt.

ROMAN CATHOLIC SECRET SOCIETIES.

THE CATHOLIC BENEVOLENT LEGION.

This is the significant name of the vigorous young organization to whose interests the Record is devoted. It was incorporated under the laws of the State of New York, September 5, 1881, and given authority by the superintendent of the insurance department to issue certificates to its members, as a Beneficiary Association.

The principal object of the C. B. L. apart from its insuraunce features, is to afford Roman Catholics the advantages of local councils or clubs for social, moral and intellectual improvement.

The insurance features are important, as a rigid physical examination is the basis of admission to membership.

Care is exercised to exclude all unworthy applicants, and provision is made for the expulsion of any who by their conduct bring disgrace upon the order.

Membership is restricted to Roman Catholics who are over 18 and under 55 years of age, at time of admission.

Rates of assessments are graded according to age at admission and the amount to be paid beneficiaries at death, according to the table following.

The government of the C. B. L., nnder the laws of the State of New York, is committed to the Supreme Council, which, in its constitntion and laws, has delegated certain powers to State and subordinate conncils and to officials.

State councils may be formed when five or more subordinate councils in a State, with a combined membership of five hundred, nnite in the application

They shall enact laws for their own government and have general supervision of the affairs of subordinate councils within their jnrisdiction, but no control of the benefit fund.

Subordinate councils are desired in every flourishing Catholic community. Seven members are requisite, but a larger number is preferable. Fifty dollars is charged for a charter and set of supplies.

Through the courtesy of the Supreme President of the Catholic Mutual Benefit Association, we are placed in possession of the Reporter, the ably edited official organ of the order, published at Erie, Pa. We have long desired to inform our readers of the existence and progress of this flourishing organization, but were nnable to obtain an exact acconnt of its affairs. From the Reporter and the report of the Superintendent of Insurance we learn that this order has sprung from the germ of a little society organized for the purpose of procuring a church bell at the village of Niagara. In December, 1876, it assnmed its present name and obtained a charter. Its membership is restricted to practical Catholic men. Its objects are manifold for the improvement and benefit of its members and their families. It pays $2,000 insurance upon the death of a member, and from February 27th, 1879, to January 31st, 1886, paid to beneficiaries $701,000.

The membership, December, 31st, 1885, was 11,586, whereof 5,836 were in New York State. Net increase, 1,964. During last year it paid $172,000 in benefits, whereof $88,000 was to the beneficiaries of members who had resided in this State.—C. B. Legion.

REFORM NEWS.

REFORM WORK IN WISCONSIN.

OSHKOSH, Wis., May 24, 1886.

Arriving here on Saturday evening, I was cordially welcomed at the parsonage and home of Bro. W. W. Warner. Neither his own health or that of Sister Warner is very firm, but both are strong in the Lord and are doing an excellent work for the Master. Sabbath, I spoke to a good audience, at 10:30 A. M., in the Wesleyan church. A very interesting Sabbath-school service followed immediately, and at four o'clock the friends gathered for an hour's conference and prayer. Each of these services was to me a time of refreshing, and I trust of some profit to all present. There were testimonies from several aged brothers and sisters, at the P. M. meeting, that were eminently cheering. Bro. Warner went to fill a country appointment at 7:30, and, as had been previously arranged, I spoke in the First Presbyterian church, at the same hour. The pastor, Rev. McNary, gave me the right hand of Christian fellowship, and it was our privilege to renew a pleasant acquaintance, begnn, I think, in Dayton, Ohio, some ten years ago. The greater portion of Bro. McNary's ministerial labors have been in the United Presbyterian church, and he came here to take charge of a mission in care of that body. No good and sufficient reason being found for maintaining a "division" in the body of Christ, it was decided to unite the U. P. mission and First Presbyterian churches, with Bro. McNary as pastor. Like other assembly Presbyterian bodies, the first church of Oshkosh has no official declaration against the lodge. And while its pastor does not shnn to declare his personal views on the subject whenever he deems it proper, he has hitherto refrained from any lengthy discussion of the question in his pulpit. He has, I am told, spoken very decidedly in the ministers' meeting, and is well known as personally and radically opposed to the whole lodge system. Those who know Bro. McNary, will agree with the statement that he is independent in thought and fearless in expression, and while following his own convictions, and tenaciously clinging to his rights, he concedes to others what he demands for himself. I spoke plainly to his people, as utterance was given me, and the very intelligent and apparently appreciative audience gave marked attention. The pastor thanked me for my discourse, and one young man took me by the hand, as I was retiring from the house, saying, "That is the kind of preaching I like to hear. We need sharp points, and where there is danger we ought to know it." I hope that some good was done, and feel that I have been about my Master's business, and in departing carry with me only pleasant and grateful memories.

RICHMOND, Ind, May 29.—Since daylight our route has been through the winter wheat region, and crops are looking fine. The indications of thrift are everywhere abundant, and the whole country is in its spring holiday dress. This used, I believe, to be called a "Quaker city," but has, I fear, fallen from grace. The depot is environed with saloons, and the victims of that curse appear to abound and to be on hand for the "easy drinks." My time is too limited to justify a down-town trip, and if the specimens at the front are fair samples, I have no desire for contact with the heart of the business center. A fair presumption is, however, that the worst is at the front here as elsewhere, and that the "back-bone" of Richmond's business is averse to this wholesale slaughter of souls and the bodies of men. It is nearly time for train to Centerville, where, D. V., I spend Sabbath, and will write you of our special work. J. P. STODDARD.

REFORM WORK IN KANSAS.

MAY 22, 1886.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—On the 8th inst. I started to Mitchell county to attend a Wesleyan Methodist quarterly meeting, Bro. Brooks having written for me to come and lecture for them, about eight miles south of Beloit, where I met with earnest Christian friends. Bro. McPherson was waiting for me at Beloit, the train being behind time nearly two hours.

I found the brethren generally heartily interested in the anti-secrecy cause; some a little fearful to have me come, and was happy to learn before I left, that their fears were gone, and they were glad I came.

I preached for them four times and lectured twice, and they were very liberal in my support.

We had good attendance and good attention. The last evening a Mason, after dismission, denied my assertion about the exclusion of the name of Christ from Masonic prayers, and when I gave him some Masonic authority he did not deny them, but said they had the Bible in all their lodges. I asked him if he knew the "twenty-first landmark of Masonry?" and he did not know. I then showed that the Koran, the Shasters, the Zend, Avesta, or the Book of Mormon was just as good as the Christian Bible in Masonry; that Mackey, in his "Masonic Jurisprudence," page 95, says: "That some Masons may [mark it, may,] teach the Divine authenticity of the Holy Scriptures, is true, because some Masons are Christians; but Masonry does nothing of the sort, but leaves every man to his own opinion upon that subject, as it does upon his politics, his religion, his profession."

In the same volume he gives the twenty-five "landmarks" of Masonry. In the twenty-first, he says: "It is a landmark that a 'book of the law' shall consitute an indispensible part of the furniture of every lodge." "I say advisedly, a 'book of the law,' because it is not absolutely required that everywhere the Old and New Testaments shall be used. The 'book of the law' is that volume which, by the religion of the country, is believed to contain the revealed will of the Grand Architect of the universe. Hence, in all lodges in Christian countries, the 'book of the law' is composed of the Old and New Testament; in a country where Judaism was the prevailing faith, the Old Testament alone, would be sufficient, and in Mohammedan countries the Koran might be substituted." . . The landmark closes as follows: "The landmark, therefore, requires that a 'book of the law,' a religious code of some kind, purporting to be an examplar of the revealed will of God, shall form an essential part of the furniture of every lodge.'

And the twenty-fifth landmark is, that "THESE LANDMARKS CAN NEVER BE CHANGED." When I quoted these, he had nothing further to say.

A case which shows how the institution shields and honors the worst of criminals, was related to me by a brother who once belonged to a lodge in a town in Illinois, and knew whereof he affirmed, being a member of the same lodge with the criminal.

He was a prominent business man in the town. He seduced a young woman he had living with the family; and, the fruit of his infamy being found in an old well, there was talk of lynching him. A warrant was put in the sheriff s hands,—who was also a brother Mason,—he held it three days without attempting to arrest the criminal, who got ready by that time and left the country, for a year or two, when he returned and was received into the lodge all right, and is now honored with a fat office, by appointment, in Springfield, Ill.

The brother who related this to me is intelligent, and hesitates not to tell all he knows about the system, which he now hates with a perfect hatred. He expressed astonishment that those who never belonged, understood it so correctly. When he left the lodge he tried to forget about it, but he now regrets that he did not try to remember it, so as to more fully expose the abomination.

I have an appointment to lecture in Clay county, near Longford, commencing the 30th inst., at the Wesleyan Methodist place of holding their quarterly meeting, having been earnestly requested to come by Rev. J. C. Bernhard, the pastor.

My heart is in the work, but cannot, for want of support, go only when sent for, R. LOGGAN.

BRO. C. F. HAWLEY'S REFORM WORK.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—From Prof. Hand's I went to Lake Geneva, and stopped with my old friend and fellow-reformer, Thomas Ginn, at whose house I was made welcome during my stay.

I called upon Dr. Coleman, the pastor of the M. E. church of Lake Geneva, and conversed with him in regard to the secret orders. The Doctor disclaimed any affinity for Freemasonry. He said that three-fourths of the Masons who were members of the Wisconsin Conference of the M. E. church have withdrawn from the lodge. Many of them, he thought, had withdrawn because the fact that they were Masons injured their influence as ministers. But some of them had renounced Masonry because they belived it to be a system of wickedness that they could not, as Christians, adhere too. The fact that any of those ministerial lodge worshipers were so blinded by the god of the lodge that they did not perceive the wickedness of their false worship is horrible. But it is a notable sign of the times that light is shining upon Masonic darkness; and public sentiment is beginning to demand a man of one religion as a shepherd to lead the sheep of Christ.

Is it not terrible to think of ministers engaging in the false worship of the lodge until Satan, who works to blind the minds and stupefy the consciences of all false worshipers, has so completely chloroformed them that they do not perceive the wickedness of uniting with, and adhering to, a religious society like the Freemasons, that ignores Christ in its confession of faith, in its prayers and in its plan of salvation? But if blindness, in part, has happened to ministers, let us rejoice that truth is spreading among the people, and to retain influence with them, many Masonic ministers are withdrawing from the lodge.

In my conversation with the Doctor, he frankly admitted that, as Christians, we must take a stand against Freemasonry if it teaches salvation in some other way than through Christ. I assured him that there is a plan of salvation taught in the religious philosophy of Freemasonry that squarely antagonizes the Gospel of Christ.

He said, "What do you propose to do?"

I replied, "If I can have the concurrence of the pastors and churches of Lake Geneva, I propose to lecture on the Masonic plan of salvation, and show how it antagonizes our holy Christianity." I said I might get a hall and lecture on the religious philosophy of Freemasonry without the concurrence of the pastors and churches; but if I made the showing there, the people would ask, why are the pastors so indifferent to the fact that Satan is conspiring to dethrone Christ and subvert Christianity through the secret lodges?

The Doctor said he was willing, as far as he was concerned, for me to give such a lecture in his church, and referred me to the chairman of the board of trustees.

I went to the brother referred to, and he said he was only a passenger; that there were nine trustees, and that it would require a majority of them to open the house. So I went from one trustee to another, giving each a private lecture on the religion of Freemasonry. After getting the concurrence of three of the board I went back to the chairman and asked him if he, individually, would consent to my lecturing in the church? He replied that, individually, he was willing that the house should be opened, if no one made a fuss about it. "Will it do," said I, "to announce for the lecture if four of the trustees, beside yourself, consent?" He said, "No, you must get five of the trustees besides me to consent." As only one of the trustees was a Mason, I did not despair, but continued my private lectures until the bill was filled, and I could report to the pastor that I had seen six of the nine trustees, and they had consented to open the church for my lecture. I asked if it would be necessary to see the other three. He thought not. I also visited the Congregational pastor. He said he was not a Mason; that he had advised young men not to join the lodge, but he was going to take a vacation, and would not remain in the city. My lecture was arranged for Tuesday night.

After the time was fixed, I learned from Dr. Coleman that he also intended to take some short vacations—going out on Monday and returning on Wednesday; and, as he had arranged to take his first vacation the coming week, it would take him away the night of my lecture. As the Baptist and Episcopalian pastors resided elsewhere, none of the pastors heard the lecture. But the Masonic lodge and five of the churches were represented in the audience, though it was not large. One Baptist minister was present. I spoke, and distributed tracts at the close of the lecture. Conversing with the Baptist minister, I found that he was deeply impressed with the anti-Christian and deistical character of Freemasonry. He cheerfully assisted me in the distribution of tracts. After the congregation had retired, only one man, a Mason, and myself remained.

"You don't know all about Masonry," he said.

I had only incidentally referred to the ceremonies, giving only brief extracts therefrom. "Maybe I did not tell all I knew about Masonry." I replied: "Are you a Mason?"

"Yes," he said; "when a man is once a Mason, he is always a Mason. But I don't meet with them any more. Seven years ago I became a Christian."

"What do you think about Christians being Masons?" I asked.

With an emphatic gesture, he replied, "A man cannot be a Freemason and a Christian. A man cannot serve two masters. He cannot serve Christ and the Masonic lodge—the devil. If a man has the Spirit of Christ in his heart, and goes into a Masonic lodge, it will leave him."

What a pity that all who have been deluded into the lodge do not anoint their eyes with eye salve that they may see, as this man clearly saw, that to adhere to Freemasonry is to take sides with the devil against Christ. Has he not spoken by the Holy Ghost, through Paul, and commanded us not to be unequally yoked together with unbelievers, and does he not command those who are yoked with unbelievers to come out and be separate, if they would be accepted of God. How vain to feign faith, while refusing obedience.

CORRESPONDENCE.

REFORM WORK IN MEMPHIS.

MEMPHIS, May 26, 1886.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—In passing through an unusual ordeal or warfare, and one which interests a few more Christians beside those who are connected with the Tabernacle Baptist church, I again write you. In my last I informed you that the lodgcites had taken out an injunction against us, asking the court to prohibit us from interfering with them, in not allowing them to attend our church business meetings, or partake of the communion. The first part the court granted. "But the holy supper," the judge said, "I will not interfere with the officers of the church in that matter." We will make an effort to dissolve the bill next week, in which we anticipate very little trouble. To make their list large, they used the names of some persons who are dead, and in two instances they have used fictitious names and the names of people who are members of the Methodists, who have no rights in our church.

The season of high revelry has opened with the society element, and their summer work of demoralization and debauchery has begun. They have what they call annual anniversaries or pic-nics. They rent a large park and sell privileges of bar room, booths or eating stands, and ten-pin alley, and a number of other, they say, innocent games, and then they gather the noble and ignoble, the high and the low, all kinds. Some of the ministers who belong to the society open the exercises with prayer, and then they eat, they drink beer, they dance, all night long; yes, from four P. M., until four A. M. Young men and young ladies, old men and old ladies, church members and non-church members, all contribute their means and their presence to make these revelries a success, and they are, financially. First, to the park owners; second, to the street car company; third, to the bar room. The societies themselves come in for a share of what is left, but these people never stop to think, and every society in turn carries out the same programme.

The Living Way has done much toward reforming a number of irregularities among the people, despite the efforts of the lodgcites to suppress the same. They have made a door-to-door canvass against the paper, and the sailing has been very rough, yet God has been its stay. Our heads are yet above the billows, and we trust ere long the subscription list will be doubled. We have put the price down to $1.00 per year, for clubs of twenty, and hope to rally for God and the right, evermore. We have not seen the Cynosure for two weeks. The lodgeites, I learn, have a file, and I hope they are not intercepting mine; I miss them so much. They have clipped some of my letters and attached them to their injunctions to show him I fight the lodge. They say in their bill I am a fanatic, and insane. I say, glory to God. He hath an asylum for all his loved ones, and I doubt very much the ability for a lodgeite to ever enter therein. Their asylum is elsewhere. We beg the prayers of God's loved ones everywhere.

Yours in the thickest of the fight,

R. N. COUNTEE.

LODGE LESSONS.

LOUISVILLE, Kansas, May 20, 1886.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—Enclosed is my subscription to the Cynosure, for another year, which paper I regard as one of the brightest reflectors of the true light of God, sending its reflected rays into a secrecy-cursed world. From my earliest recollection, I was taught to read God's word, for myself, and early in life sought earnestly for light, by which, unaided by mortal man, I was convinced that the Bible was not founded on secrecy, needed not secrecy for its promulgation, and is positively opposed to secret organizations, and upon that conviction commenced my fight in life: and truly it has been a bitter fight, for soon after starting for myself in the world, it was my misfortune to settle in a town given up to Masonic idolatry. Soon after settling, the "Hiramites" invited me to join the order; I put them off; a few weeks later they came with an urgent invitation; I told them, with my conviction of right and belief in the Bible, I could not go with them. I was then told that I must join or leave the town, as they were determined that no man should do business there unless he was a Freemason. Then I told them it was settled, for under no circumstances would I unite with their organization. Then commenced a series of persecutions that resulted in my eviction from the town, with a loss of about $2,000.

I thought I was alone in this fight, save the unseen hand of God, for my own (pretended) friends were oath-bound and fettered, and they took the spoils. This idea of singlehandedness lasted until a few years since, when I began to occasionally hear of "The National Christian Association;" but giving it little thought, thinking it only one of the many political off-shoots of a dissatisfied people, until two years ago, when, thank God, through the persistance of one of the best of earthly fathers, I became a member of your family, and weekly as I have read the Cynosure, my early conviction became stronger, and by the light I have received, have tried to obey the Master. Matt. 5: 16. One little incident in my private work must suffice for the present. A few Sabbaths since I was listening to a good brother, who, in closing his sermon, having occasion to refer to the secret societies of the town, made use of the following language: "May God bless you in your work of love." At the close of the services I asked the brother if he knew the character of the societies on which he had invoked the blessing of God. He said, "no" but supposed they were moral and benevolent. I asked him if he desired information as to their character. "Certainly," he said, and if I could furnish him with any it would be gladly received. We sent him "Williams and Brownlee's Sermons on Masonry," and "Masonry a Work of Darkness," and some other tracts, and a few copies of the Cynosure. I waited about two weeks and called again, when the brother grasping my hand, fervently thanked me for my timely aid. It had opened his eyes, saved him, and he in turn had saved a member of his church who was about to take the Masonic obligation, but after reading the above tracts, had turned his back upon the order forever. I believe if I had some tracts and a few copies of "Thirteen Reasons Why a Christian Should Not be a Freemason," to scatter among these people, that great good might be accomplished. Yours in Christ, W. A. LIMBOCKER.

SECRET SOCIETIES AND THE U. B. COMMISSION.

BEACONSFIELD, Iowa.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—One of the U. B. ministers was visited by committee from the G. A. R. They invited him to join their order. He was friendly with them and said, "I will join your society providing you agree that it is my privilege to withdraw and expose it should I find it to be wrong, which would be my duty as a minister." They would not receive him upon this simple condition of doing right. They would bind his conscience not to do right in giving the truth as a minister, in regard to it. It is the sense of the U. B. Commission, (of which Bishop Weaver and Z. Warner are the head), that such orders are not "dangerous to character." Though they have been puffed as men of brains, but it seems they make poor use of their sense.

CYRUS SMITH.

CITIZENS' LEAGUE.

DETROIT, May 24, 1886.

Your Mr. Paxton and Mr. Bonner, of the "Chicago Citizens' League," interested our citizens yesterday afternoon and last evening very highly; they appear to be the right men in the right place.

A similar league will now soon be formed here. I say amen to every effort to protect the youth from the all-devouring blight of intemperance. Save the boys and you save the men. But, oh! what inconsistency is this? While organizing and struggling and praying for the salvation of the children and youth from the withering curse of intemperance—to license grogshops all around them, and all along their pathway, to leave them and their parents, too, to rum and destruction? BIBLE LESSON.

STUDIES IN THE WRITINGS OF JOHN.

LESSON XI, June 13, 1886.—Jesus the Christ.—John 7: 37-52.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God.—Matt. 16: 16.

TIME.—Oct. 17, A. D. 29. About six months after the last lesson. The feast of the Tabernacles this year began on Oct. 11 (Lewin), and this was the seventh day of the feast.

COMMENTS ON THE LESSON BY E. E. FLAGG.

[Open the Bible and read the lesson.]

1. Christ the only source of spiritual life. vs. 37-39. On the last day of the feast the usual ceremony of filling golden vessels with water from the fountain of Siloam, which flowed from under the temple mountain, and pouring it on the altar, was performed by the priests with demonstrations of the greatest joy. The beautiful appropriateness of Christ's address to the people can only be felt by imagining this scene which was accompanied by chanting from Isaiah 12: 13: "Then with joy shall ye draw water out of the wells of salvation." He points them at once from the symbol to the reality. He himself was the source of those living waters. It was the same proclamation that he had made by the well of Sychar in the care of one sinful woman, made now to a vast crowd composed of all classes and grades of character. In some of the people it seems to have wrought such conviction that they are ready to confess him as the Christ, the Prophet foretold by Moses; while others, in their ignorance of the facts of his nativity, ask scornfully and incredulously, "Shall Christ come out of Galilee?" When we judge by appearance only, we are not apt to judge righteous judgment. Moody, when an uncouth stripling, was forbidden to speak at the meetings of the church he attended, because his mistakes in grammar offended the ears of fastidious hearers. There is always a division among the people because of Christ. The word of truth separates, and any preaching which does not sever the chaff from the wheat and draw a sharp line between his friends and his foes has no true or permanent converting power.

2. The officer's testimony to Christ. vs. 44-53. The witness of enemies is often more valuable and convincing than that of friends. Nothing less than a divine power and dignity displaying itself in every look and word of Christ could have rendered the officers of the law powerless, as they themselves confessed, to arrest him. But the Sanhedrin, unimpressed by this wonderful witness, only tauntingly inquire, "Are ye also deceived? Have any of the rulers or of the Pharisees believed on him?" This is the common argument with which every righteous movement has always been assailed. Seldom or never, at least in its incipient stages, has the causes of truth numbered among its adherents the great and powerful. Their reply to Nicodemus' noble and just appeal stands a lasting monument to the ignorance which always accompanies bigotry. At least three prophets, including Elijah, had been born in or were residents through the greater part of their career of this despised province. Error wilfully indulged will close the eyes to the plainest truths. We see it to-day in the absurd arguments by which otherwise intelligent men strive to uphold the fallacies of high license. The same may be said of those who embrace and defend the gigantic falsehood of Freemasonry. There is a strong resemblance between Romanism and the lodge. While the Protestant church apes the mummeries of the one and fosters the fables of the other, the rubbish of lying traditions will come in time to choke up entirely the pure, life giving waters of salvation. And here is the secret of her loss of power with the masses. The only remedy lies in every individual Christian waking up to a solemn sense of personal responsibility, and realizing that he is called to have and be in himself a fountain of living water springing up unto everlasting life.

LIGHT FROM THE WORD.

Why are earthly resources so unsatisfying? Jer. 2: 13. What is the invariable consequence of clinging to and and loving error? 2 Thes. 2: 11.

From Peloubet's Notes.

"In the last day, that (the) great day of the feast." That is, on the seventh day of the feast, Oct. 17 of that year.

"Jesus stood." In the temple court, probably in Solomon's porch, where he witnessed the joyous procession bringing the water from Siloam, when the people sang to the sound of cymbals and trumpets the words of Isa. 12: 3: "With joy shall ye draw water out of the wells of salvation."

"And cried." Heralded, spoke in a loud voice, so that all could hear him.

"If any man thirst." It was burning autumn weather when the sun had for months shone in a cloudless sky, and the early rains were longed for. Water at all times is a magic word in a sultry climate like Palestine, but at this moment it had a double power.

"Let him come unto me, and drink." To come to Jesus is to believe on him, to accept his teachings, to yield to his commands. It is to come into sympathy with him, likeness to him. Do we thirst for a life worth the living? He gives us an object of life worthy of the greatest, and yet possible to the lowliest.

"And drink." To drink is to go to Jesus and receive these blessings at his hand.

"He that believeth on me." He that acknowledges me as the Christ (ver. 31), and with a penitent and obedient heart trusts in me for salvation and sin.

"As the Scripture hath said." The reference is not to any one isolated passage, but to the general tenor (1) of such passages as Prov. 18:4; Isa. 58:11; and Isa. 44: 3.

"Out of his belly." Better, his heart.—Clark. It signifies the inmost heart of the man, which, saturated with Christ's life, opens like a rock (Ex. 17: 6) and pours forth its spiritual wealth.

"Shall flow rivers of living water." Just as the rock in the desert not only contained water, but the water flowed forth for the thirsty multitudes.

"Shall flow." This clearly implies something received that it may flow from the recipient unto others.

"Rivers." Denoting abundance, freeness, continued supply, in contrast with the small golden pitcher used in the ceremony of the pouring of water.

"Of living water." Pure, running water, ever-flowing streams; the opposite of stagnant, malarious, poisonous water.

"But this spake he." This is John's interpretation of Christ's words in the temple.

"Of the Spirit, which they that believe on him should receive." The Holy Spirit and influences were the living waters, abundant, free, purifying.

"For the Holy Ghost." Spirit, omitting "Holy," as in Rev. Ver. In the first clause we find "the Spirit," but in the second the article is absent, and the words literally mean for "spirit was not yet"—the word "spirit" meaning, not the Holy Spirit as a Person, but a bestowal or reception of his influence and power.

"Was not yet given." The dispensation of the spirit, when his influences should come in their full abundance, had not yet come.

"Because that Jesus was not yet glorified." Not until Jesus had been crucified, raised again, and exalted by the right hand of God, and thus made Lord and Christ.

"Of a truth this is the Prophet." The Prophet of Deut. 18: 15, whom some identified with the Messiah, others suppose would be the forerunner of the Messiah.

"Others said this is the Christ." The great Messiah King whom they expected, whom the prophets foretold, and to whom their whole religious ceremonial pointed.

"Shall (the) Christ come out of Galilee." Christ seemed to them to come from Galilee, because his childhood home and much of his ministry was there.

"Hath not the Scripture said." This is their argument for believing that Jesus, being a Galilean, in their opinion, could not be the Messiah.

"That Christ cometh of the seed, or offspring, of David."

"And out of the town of Bethlehem, where David was?" Where he was born and lived for about sixteen years, till he was called into the service of King Saul. All the trouble with their argument was that they did not take care to ascertain the facts.

"Some of them." Of the multitude, not the officers mentioned in the next verse.

"Would have taken him." Arrested him, and carried him before the Sanhedrim as a pretender.

"But no man laid hands on him." Not even those who commanded them to do it.

"Then came the officers." Not Roman soldiers, but temple police, answering to the modern constable or the Roman lictor or the English beadle. They had been directed by the officers of the Sanhedrim to arrest Jesus.

"To the chief priests and Pharisees." Regarded now as one body, the Sanhedrim.

"Why have ye not brought him?" The officers had returned without fulfilling their mission.

"Never man spake like this man." They were not overawed by the multitude, but by the words of Christ himself.

"Are ye also deceived?" "Have any of the Rulers?" etc. Implying that those who were sent were men of influence and position. Every weapon of reproach and ridicule was used against Jesus to keep men from becoming his disciples.

"But this people," the crowd, the multitude, "who knoweth not the law." Have not been instructed in the schools of the Pharisees.

"Are cursed." Or, accursed are they! execrable, doomed to error and deception, and worthy of contempt and perdition.

"Nicodemus ..." He that came to Jesus by night (before), as recorded in John, 3d chap. Nicodemus seems not yet to become an open disciple.

"Doth our law judge any man before it hear him?" There is a covert sarcasm, not so much in the words as in the position of the rulers, in which they had placed themselves. They had just been sneering at the people for not knowing the law, yet at the same time they themselves were acting contrary to the law.

The Facts Stated.

HON. THURLOW WEED ON THE MORGAN ABDUCTION.

This is a sixteen page pamphlet comprising a letter written by Mr. Weed, and read at the unveiling of the monument erected to the memory of Capt. William Morgan. The frontispiece is an engraving of the monument. It is a history of the unlawful seizure and confinement of Morgan in the Canandaigua jail, his subsequent conveyance by Freemasons to Fort Niagara, and drowning in Lake Ontario. He not only subscribes his NAME to the letter, but ATTACHES HIS AFFIDAVIT to it.

In closing his letter he writes: I now look back through an interval of fifty-six years with a conscious sense of having been governed through the "Anti-Masonic excitement" by a sincere desire, first, to vindicate the violated laws of my country, and next, to arrest the great power and dangerous influences of "secret societies."

The pamphlet is well worth perusing, and is doubtless the last historical article which this great journalist and politician wrote. [Chicago, National Christian Association.] Single copy, 5 cents.

AMERICAN PLATFORM.

ADOPTED AT CHICAGO, JUNE 20, 1884

Viewing with deep concern the corrupt and unsettled condition of American politics, and witnessing with alarm the fearful prevalence of caste and clannishness by which our citizens are being arrayed in hostile bands, working secretly to compass political ends, a method directly and powerfully tending to increase corruption, to destroy mutual confidence, and hasten disruption and bloodshed; and having no hope of adequate remedy for these evils from existing parties, and believing the foundation of a party based upon the fundamental principles of the Declaration of American Independence, both inevitable and indispensable:

We, therefore, a portion of the American people, believing with our fathers that we have our rights and liberties, not from men or parties, but from God; believing in the Christian marriage, and not in Mormonism; believing in the religious democracy of the New Testament, and not in the despotism of the lodge; believing, also, with our Scotch and English ancestors, that civil government, though ordained in God, is "founded in nature, not in grace," and, therefore, that all have equal civil rights; while we abhor the idea of enforcing religion or controlling conscience by human laws and penalties as calculated to make hypocrites, not Christians, and savoring of the days of priestism, the fagot and the stake, we at the same time as firmly believe that atheism and priestcraft are twins and both alike foes to human liberty and welfare. We further most firmly believe that a government without God has none but lynch power, and is destitute of all legitimate authority to maintain civil order, to swear a witness, to try a criminal, to hang a murderer, to imprison a thief; and while we consider government without God as a mere usurpation, we regard all religions and worships invented by men, and so having no higher than human origin, as mere swindling impositions and cheats. We believe in peace and in national arbitration as a means of perpetuating it; yet we as profoundly believe that the bravery and blood of our soldiers have bought us the peace which we enjoy, and we honor the memories of the dead and will be just to the claims of the living; and we take up and prolong the strain raised by the women of this country: "For God, and home, and native land," and trust that this beautiful and patriotic motto will soon be not only echoed by their voices, but sustained by their votes.

We, therefore, solemnly adopt and present the following, as containing a brief synopsis of the principles of our government, by which we intend to be governed in casting our votes. We hold:

1. That ours is a Christian and not a heathen nation, and that the God of the Christian Scriptures is the author of civil government.

2. That the Bible should be associated with books of science and literature in all our educational institutions.

3. That God requires, and man needs a Sabbath.

4. We demand the prohibition of the importation, manufacture, and sale of intoxicating drinks.

5. We hold that the charters of all secret lodges granted by our Federal and State Legislatures should be withdrawn, and their oaths prohibited by law.

6. We are opposed to putting prison labor or depreciated contract labor from foreign countries in competition with free labor to benefit manufacturers, corporations or speculators.

7. We are in favor of a revision and enforcement of the laws concerning patents and inventions; for the prevention and punishment of frauds either upon inventors or the general public.

8. We hold to and will vote for woman suffrage.

9. That the civil equality secured to all American citizens by Articles 13, 14 and 15 of our amended National Constitution should be preserved inviolate, and the same equality should be extended to Indians and Chinamen.

10. That international differences should be settled by arbitration.

11. That land and other monopolies should be discouraged.

12. That the general government should furnish the people with an ample and sound currency.

13. That it should be the settled policy of the government to reduce tariffs and taxes as rapidly as the necessities of revenue and vested business interests will allow.

14. That polygamy should be immediately suppressed by law, and that the Republican party is censurable for the long neglect of its duty in respect to this evil.

15. And, finally, we demand for the American people the abolition of electoral colleges, and a direct vote for President and Vice President of the United States.

THE CHURCHES VS. LODGERY.

The following denominations are committed by vote of their legislative assemblies or by constitution to a separation from secret lodge worship:

Adventists (Seventh-day.)

Baptists—Primitive, Seventh-day and Scandinavian.

Brethren (Dunkers or German Baptists.)

Christian Reformed Church.

EDITORS.

J. BLANCHARD. HENRY L. KELLOGG.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, JUNE 3, 1886.

At Wheaton, Ill., last Sabbath, the Methodist Episcopal pastor invited the Wheaton Post of the G. A. R. under the lead of a Universalist, to appear in his church and desecrate the day by its sham display. There are godly men and women in that church, who, if they knew that the Grand Army swears its members to secrecy and submission as do Masons and Knights of Labor, and practices the same degrading ceremonies of initiation, with forms slightly varied, that, in short, it is a vile branch of Satan's army, marshalling for the field of Armageddon, they would spurn from their pulpit the Mason and Odd-fellow who desecrates their house, and the day and worship of God, by such mummeries.

Let us not forget the meeting of the AMERICAN PARTY Committee and VOTERS, June 18th, now at hand. As long as lodgemen can count on the votes of secret sworn confederates, and stand an equal chance with anti-lodgemen for the votes of outsiders, their gun has two barrels, and the destiny of the country will be in their hands, and we are approaching the state in which "none may buy or sell who has not the mark of the beast in his forehead or in his hand." But the hour when that mass of American voters, who neither desire nor expect office, vote relentlesely and steadily against lodgeites, is the hour of our redemption. Let us put a ticket in the field at once, draw every conscientious voter from the Prohibition party before that party makes its nominations for 1888, and we shall put the secret wing of that noble party into a dead minority, and all true reformers will march to the polls, Americans in principle, and Americans in heart and name.

TO THE UNITED BRETHREN IN CHRIST.

THE CYNOSURE SENDETH GREETING.

1. Eighteen years ago (1868) Rev. D. Berger electioneered to make Bishop David Edwards president of the National Christian Association opposed to secret societies, and offered to start and edit its organ if we would raise him $20,000.

2. When Warner, against honor, religion and decency, wore the halter and hoodwink of Satan in the lodge, he and others attempted to "pitch the U. B. Church toward Sodom." They started the Itinerant (then Tribune) to destroy its testimony against demon-worship, the parent and protectress of the evils, crimes and miseries of mankind in all lands. That Itinerant now assails the senior editor of the Cynosure for "dividing our church."

3. They promise to give you city churches and wealth as the price of your apostacy, that is to say, "the friendship of the world," which "is enmity against God." The senior editor, if mean enough to desire it, has no earthly motive for wishing to divide the Brethren church.

CONGREGATIONALISM AND SECRET SOCIETIES.

The Illinois State Congregational Association closed its annual sessions last week, at Moline, Ill. The moderator was a Mason who stands by the lodge, Rev. Mr. Howe of Peoria, and he and Frank Woodbury, of Rockford, were put on the programme committee for next year.

We give below, for the information of the Theological Seminary students particularly, a "statement" laid before the Association twelve years ago. Since that time the National Congregational Council has dropped Dr. Quint, who had but two votes for secretary of the Council, and Dr. Hazen, a good man who belongs to no secret society, is in that important office.

A STATEMENT.

Their denominational relations to secret societies are briefly these:

1. The early Congregationalists of this country abhorred Freemasonry. The late venerable Dr. Storrs, of Braintree, Mass., father of Dr. Storrs, of Brooklyn, N. Y., on my asking him, "What were the sentiments of the New England clergy concerning Freemasonry in his early youth?" gave this answer:

"My Grandfather Williston, of West Haven, Ct., used to say that a Freemason was hand in hand with the devil." I asked him if the clergy of New England, at that time, (about 1750 and onward) generally concurred in this opinion of his grandfather? He answered that they did. Also the famous Dr. Hopkins, author of what was called "Hopkinsianism," speaks of Freemasonry as belonging to the kingdom of Satan. See Prof. Park's Memoir of Hopkins, Appendix. Again:

2. The fundamental principle of Congregationalism is as hostile to the secret orders as its history. Our ground principle, as stated by Bradshaw's Apology, in Neal's History of the Puritans, and stated also by Bancroft's History of the United States, is this: "That not even a ceremony was to be tolerated unless required by the Scriptures."

This principle condemns, as unlawful, all the ceremonies of Freemasonry and other secret societies which are of a religious nature; their oaths, initiations, prayers, funerals, lectures, and degrees; all these being solemn, and their declared object being to restore and teach man his duty to God and his neighbor; all are substitutes for the atonement of Christ, and an opposition religion, utterly subversive of the first principles of Congregationalism. That is to say, they are religious ceremonials not required by the Scriptures, which the Puritans condemned as "unlawful."

3. Our present State Associations explicitly condemn Freemasonry.

This General Association of Illinois has repeatedly condemned it. Our last decided action, written and presented by Prof. Bartlett, of Chicago Theological Seminary, declared Freemasonry to be, "as we suppose, contrary to good government and the Christian religion."

The Congregational and Presbyterian Convention of Wisconsin, explicitly condemned the lodge by adopting the "Report" of Rev. Wm. DeLoss Love, and others, and two local associations in Michigan have done the same. The State Congregational Conference of Ohio, adopted a similar condemnatory report, written by Prof. Morgan of Oberlin, who took ground with ex-Pres. Finney, excluding Freemasons from the churches. And the Iowa State Association has taken similar strong action condemning the lodge. And, in April, 1873, our triennial convention at Chicago, representing the Congregationalism of eight States, on motion of Rev. S. B. Goodnow, by resolution, desired its Education Society to decline aiding into the ministry any young man "connected with any secret, oath-bound society."

Now, as all this clear, oft-repeated, and explicit action has failed to keep some members of our churches from joining these lodges, it is evident our brethren need light on this subject. And as State Associations have not time for cool and careful consideration of this matter along with our other business, a thorough discussion of the subject, under the control of a judicious editor, could not fail to be of the greatest interest and value to our people.

Finally, we have, it seems, without a popular vote of our churches, established "A National Congregational Council.

And it is well known that the secretary and actuary of this fearfully significant body, was, at the time of his appointment to this office, Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Freemasons in Massachusetts. This measnre put all the Congregational ministers and churches who had condemned the lodge, between the upper and nether millstone; between a National Council, whose only permanent officer was a chaplain of Masons, and our State Associations, which had condemned the lodge.

It is plain that this state of things cannot and ought not to continue. Our ministers and churches must and will be extricated from this anomalous, embarrassing, and contradictory position. And, for this, we need and must have discussion in the Advance, or elsewhere.

With one word respecting Dr. Quint's Masonry, and that of our brethren who belong to the lodge, I have done.

I was in Boston when Dr. Quint was inaugurated Grand Chaplain along with Deists, Universalists and others, officers of the Grand Lodge, six or seven days after he was appointed chairman of the committee to call a National Congregational Council.

The official Masonic statement did not give his exact grade, but spoke of him as a Mason of high degree.

Now, what I have to say is this: If he was simply a Royal Arch or seventh degree Mason, he has taken sixty oaths, but if he is a Knight Templar, he has taken seventy-two solemn oaths beginning with the words, "Furthermore, I promise and swear," and this right in the face of that Saviour who has said, "Swear not at all:" and also to minister, in the face of the injunction of that apostle who said, "Above all things, my brethren, swear not." And these, his sixty or seventy oaths, are neither judicial nor Christian, but imprecatory; not by the help of a merciful God, but by the secret and irresponsible vengeance of unmerciful men!

This is not all. If a Knight Templar, when he took his seventy-second degree oath, he held a grinning, human skull in his hand, and imprecated a double damnation on his soul if he violated one Masonic obligation covered by either of all those seventy-two oaths. And every time he gives a Masonic grip or sign, or enters a lodge or encampment, he virtually repeats and professes his amenability to all these stupendous blasphemies! And the relation of oath-bound secret societies to the Gospel is thus the relation of blasphemy to Christ. No man can sit in that Council along with Dr. Quint, unless he rebukes him, without sharing, ignorantly or consciously, his awful guilt before God!

We do not charge intentional guilt on brethren who have been swindled into a few degrees, and are ignorant of the system they belong to. But by the constitution of the lodge they are but deluded underlings to unknown superiors. But these revolting facts, which seem like horrible dreams to the ignorant and uninformed, can now be easily verified or disproved, and for this we ask discussion. For by the clear Scriptural doctrine of fellowship laid down by Prof. Boardman, he that walketh in darkness, cannot be, and remain in communion with the child of light; and if that moral darkness intended, be found on this earth, it is in a Masonic lodge.

AUSTIN WILLEY'S HISTORY.

This book, lately out, gives the best history of the times just before the present generation, which is precisely the history least apt to be known. We are all more or less antiquarian; and "the thorough-paced antiquary not only remembers what others forget, but forgets what others remember." Oliver Johnson, who believed in Garrison, but not the New Testament, has written a volume of Garrison; and Mr. Garrison's sons have issued one volume with the promise of six. Vice-president Henry Wilson and Horace Greeley have given the secession and its war the white-caps of the national tempest, but Mr. Willey gives us the surface of the sea under the billows which swept off three million pair of fetters from our national decks. Mr. Willey was and is a Puritan, born amid the rocks of New Hampshire, and now in a smiling old age looks out from Northfield, Minnesota, over a united country without a slave, instead of two countries snarling and biting each other like hyenas through the bars of adjacent cages, across a line dividing the Mississippi and south flowing rivers, crosswise with a row of custom houses, from the Chesapeake to the Gulf of California.

Mr. Willey graduated a newly-fledged minister at Bangor, Maine, and engaged in abolitionism as lecturer, editor and patriot. He neither sought nor held office. He sought a country and gained one, and now has given a book containing several thousand names of those active in the long national agony, telling who they were and what they did. His volume was rightly named, "The Chronicles of Popular Abolitionism," and Hon. Senator Blaine, who was his near townsman and knew him and his life, says, "His book will possess great and permanent value, and must command a wide circulation." We advise every reader of the Cynosure to obtain and read it. And every young man in New Hampshire and Maine who neglects to do so, will wander in American politics, like English-speaking children in a Pennsylvania graveyard, where the inscriptions are in German, ignorant of their father's and grandfather's memories. If the family of those whose names and exploits the book commemorates shall read it, Senator Blaine's prediction will be fulfilled. We give this endorsement and send-off the more cheerfully because the book is by no means partial to us.

I left Andover in 1835, and came west two years before Mr. Willey made his first anti-slavery speech at Foxcroft, Maine, and engrossed with local politics in that State, while we were in Ohio. It is not wonderful that his book should mention the World's London Anti-Slavery Convention without saying that the Cynosure editor was its American vice-president; that the same gentleman offered the anti-slavery resolution to the American Board, in Boston, 1849, and wrote and advocated all the action both in presbytery and synod, which suspended from the ministry Rev. Wm. Graham, for teaching that "Jesus Christ authorized slave-holding," which the Portland Mirror said was the first and only instance in the world where justifying human bondage has been condemned by a church court as error.

There is one other omission in Mr. Willey's book, which is not so harmless. He tells us that Jackson was elected in 1828, and in 1832. But he does not mention that Jackson and his cabinet, Livingston, Barry, Eaton and Poinsett were Masons, while the Whigs, Adams, Webster, Everett, Quincy, etc., were Anti-masons. That in 1832, Anti-masons polled two hundred and twenty-eight thousands votes for Wirt and Ellmaker. That the slave-holders, with considerable exceptions, were Freemasons. That secession and rebellion were "worked up" from Jackson's election to Lincoln's. (See Grecley American Conflict.) Though Jackson's firmness postponed secession till 1861, it was organized and matured by discussions held in secret; that Blue Lodges raised the money which paid for the raids on Kansas; and that the ten lodges in the District of Columbia went solid for secession; and that "Knights of the Golden Circle," "White Leagues," and "Ku-Klux Klan" were but aliases of Masonry, with the same despotic constitution, and similar tokens of recognition. Indeed, one would not know by reading Mr. Willey's book that the country was rocked on its foundations by an Anti-masonic discussion, from 1826 to 1832; that fifteen hundred lodges went down, and the entire system sunk in the North, became a Southern institution, and organized rebellion and the war. Gen. Jackson's vote in 1824 was 99. In 1832 it was 219. How so shrewd an observer as Mr. Willey, in summing up American politics, could overlook such a faction as the lodge, during those eight years, would be a marvel, were it not this omission is so fearfully common. Prof. Claudio Jannet, professor of Political Economy in the University of Paris, says, "Freemasonry enjoys the singular privilege of propagating itself in the world, without being questioned." But maugre these missions; Mr. Willey's book shows more accurate insight into the causes which produced the Rebellion than any other writer, and gives more clearly the workings of those causes than any other writer. He shows more clearly the moral force of the ballot and the necessity of a new party to carry a fundamental reform than any one who has treated of it. He says: "Assault whatever exalts itself against God, however gigantic, fearlessly and unfalteringly, demanding its annihilation, relying on Him to whom 'all power is given,' and victory is sure."

We have received from a friend in College Hill, O., $5, to aid Rev. J. G. Fee in his work at Camp Nelson. We shall be glad to receive and transmit similar donations.

We were greatly pleased to receive a visit from our substantial co-worker, Mr. M. Morse, of Worcester, Mass., who, with his wife, are spending some time in our city, and expect to be present at our annual meeting.

We have had the pleasure of a visit from Rev. M. A. Gault, who is the agent of the National Reform Association and the untiring friend of the N. C. A. We are glad to learn of his intention to be present at the annual meeting of the N. C. A.

We were also cheered by a visit from Rev. Geo. Warrington, of the Birmingham Free Press, which so ably sustains the cause of our reform in Iowa, and which we hope to see abundantly supported. While it is important that the central organs here and at Washington should be sustained, it is not less important that all our co-wokers should receive a cordial support.

Among friends from a distance who have reported their purpose to be at the June annual meeting are S. A. Pratt and wife, and M. M. Morse and wife, of Wooster, Mass; E. D. Bailey and wife, of Washington, D. C.; F. W. Capwell, of New York; Rev. W. O. Dinnius, of Ohio; John Dorcas, Esq., Rev. M. A. Gault and R. N. Lyman, of Iowa; Elder R. Smith, of Missouri. Revs. Woodsmall, and Countee will (D. V.) be here from Memphis, Tenn., to speak of the important work in the South. Still there is room and a hearty welcome for all from abroad. Send in your names.

For nearly too weeks our National Congress has wrestled with the oleomargarine question, and has not yet reached a conclusion. It is proposed that all imitations of butter shall pay a tax of ten cents per pound, which would practically amount to prohibition. We are not deeply concerned as to what shall be the decision in this question. We shall doubtless survive as a people whether we eat less or more of these greasy mixtures. The tax will help the farmers and dairymen, and be collected off the laboring poor of the cities, who buy cheap butter. As for those who manufacture the stuff we have little sympathy in their loss. In most cases butterine and oleomargarine are frauds, pretending to be what they are not, and as such, the makers de serve no sympathy. There is another business carried on that is inconceivably larger, more fraudulent, and destructive of the public good. We have never known that oleomargarine has killed anybody or seriously affected the public health. No one has been incited to murder or arson by its use, and it has sent no victims to the prison or the mad-house. The whisky business that is licensed by act of Congress is slaying its tens of thousands and taxing us by hundreds of millions. If Congress will give this matter some of the attention they are devoting to their schemes to catch votes they will better deserve the respect of their constituents.

That "Godliness is profitable," and "the way of the transgressor is hard," though very obvious truths, have been very, slow to be learned and to be appreciated. The war-taxes of the professed Christian nations are 75 per cent of their revenues. The drink bill of this nation is more than $900,000,000 a year, and the tobacco bill, $600,000,000. The cost of the late labor strike is estimated at not less than $28,000,000, which falls largely on the laboring poor. This was not only a loss to the individuals, and to the country, but there has resulted an immense amount of demoralization and crime. Like a swarm of vampires, these secret labor unions have sucked the blood of the poor, and have filled the land with distress, violence and anarchy. Next to the saloons, about the most unprofitable crop are these secret combinations.

The Odd-fellows, of Pennsylvania, held their "Grand Encampment," at Harrisburg last week. The present membership is reported as 80,824. There was a decrease during the year of 493, which to us is a gratifying feature of the annual report. The "working expenses" of the order are still marvelously and suggestively large in proportion to the amount spent in relief. The grants to widows and orphans of deceased members, as well as to outside benevolence, are provokingly small considering that they are made by a benevolent (?) order. On the whole the machine appears to be an expensive one for the members. If the "working expenses" of any church, society, or board, were as large in proportion to the money handled, there would be a great outcry by the press of the country. All seem to be satisfied, however, when the business is transacted by a secret society.—Christian Instructor.

If any body of Christians should persistently refuse to allow their ceremonies and covenants to be known; should bind their members by oath or pledge to absolute concealment, and should exercise despotic power over them, it would at once be denounced as a synagogue of Satan.

THE N. C. A. ANNUAL MEETING.

The annual meeting of the National Christian Association is fixed by by-law No. 4 on the third Thursday in June of each year. Corporate members and all friends of the N. C. A. will please notice that this occurs on June 17th, and prepare to be prompt in attendance at 10 A. M. There will be two sessions, morning and afternoon, for the transaction of business at No. 221 West Madison street, Chicago, and an evening session at some suitable place provided by the programme committee. F. W. CAPWELL, President.

W. I. PHILLIPS, Secretary.

R. W. Lyman writes: Let us nominate, and that only true, tried and able men or women. I want very much to attend your College Commencement, and should, had I means at command to bear my expenses while at Wheaton.

You cannot conceive, perhaps, how earnestly I desire that, for good to man and to the glory of our Christ Jesus, an international Christian congress should be called and assemble. That rather than church congress, unless reference is distinctly had to geographical rather than denominational churches.

In the absence of the massing of the militant army, and that under the one legitimate leader, as against Masonic blasphemy and other works of the devil, no grand conquering achievements can result.

Yours for Christ, to act in accord with his plans, ways and orders.

NOMINATIONS.

I see the Cynosure has come out in favor of nominating candidates at the coming annual meeting. We all esteem Dr. J. Blanchard very highly for his ability, and are willing to submit to him as a leader, but we are not all his chickens, though many are, and he must not look unkindly at us if we want to do our own crowing. Full-grown chickens are apt to be independent. I cannot bring myself to approve of making nominations now, notwithstanding that experience of forty years ago. But let all express their opinions freely and fully.

Before reaching out to gain new adherents, it would be well to win back tried and true friends that have been alienated, and to close up the broken ranks. Our foes are watching us keenly, and we must follow the admonition of one formerly, "See that ye fall not out by the way."

Early action in previous years has not brought us much voting strength, and as a change the nominations might be deferred. But when we do nominate, let us go around and coax men to lend us their aid and influence. Let us not put up the name of one who is afraid of being too intimate with the Blanchards.

Let us not put up for President anyone whose connection with the lodge is doubtful. He who was led by heavenly wisdom in the days of his flesh chose very unpromising human instruments to carry on his work. Let us try to find out whom God would have us select. GEORGE WARRINGTON.

A GRAND MOVEMENT—LET ALL REFORMERS ATTEND.

BELOVED:—I see in the Christian Herald there is a call for a convention of Christian workers to be held in Chicago, to commence June the 16th next, to continue eight days. There is a sound within a sound in this call. Let those who have ears to hear attend. I hope to see many of my old friends in Illinois, Wisconsin and Iowa there. What we want is to know how to work, then go at it! There is much work done, but little accomplished. Many wonder what is the matter. Come to Chicago; we may learn something new on this very point. I just came from over the mountains; the same trouble is there. They work, work, but oh, how little is done. Let us get at the trouble and remove it. Let all come to the help of the Lord. Our brother reformers in the field I hope can be there.

Let our headquarters be on June 16, 8 o'clock, a. m., at 221 West Madison St., Chicago, Ill. We can plan in harmony with the divine order for general work as well as for the convention there, etc. Yours always, for the right kind of work.

MASONIC BENEVOLENCE.

The Freemason of Detroit, Mich, says: The Christian Cynosure of Chicago, Ill., is continually saying hard things about Freemasons and other secret societies and are employing men who go about the country lecturing against those institutions.

We think the Cynosure is mistaken when they say: While the Masons have more wealth than any religious denomination, they do in the way of benevolent institutions not one tenth as much as the Methodist, the Protestant Episcopal, the Presbyterian or the Roman Catholic churches.

Will The Freemason tell us just how many Masonic benevolent institutions there are, and what number they aid, and we will compare statistics.

LITERATURE.

Among our spicy exchanges there is none that seems to grow on our approbation quite so fast as the Crank, of College Springs, Iowa. With such a propelling power as this crank, the machinery of reform ought to move on grandly in Iowa. We trust the good people will keep up the steam.

We have recived the June number of Babyhood. Babyhood Publishing Co., 5 Beekman street, New York. 15 cents per number. $1.50 per year. We have an intense love for the little ones, and rejoice in an able and wisely conducted magazine devoted to their comfort.

We have received from the publishers, John Alden & Co., The Sketch Book and History of New York During the Dutch Dynasty, by Washington Irving. To those who admire the quite humor and poetic beauty of Irving, this will be a treasure. The story of Rip Van Winkle is worth more than the cost of the book, which is beautifully bound, with 307 pages, in large, fine type.

THE HOME.

TRUST IN GOD AND DO THE RIGHT.

Courage, brother, do not stumble,
Though thy path be dark as night,
There's a star to guide the humble—
"Trust in God and do the right."

Let the road be rough and dreary,
And its end far out of sight,
Foot it bravely! strong or weary,
"Trust in God and do the right."

Perish policy and cunning!
Perish all that fears the light!
Whether losing, whether winning,
"Trust in God and do the right."

Trust no party, sect, nor faction;
Trust no leaders in the fight;
But in every word and action,
"Trust in God and do the right."

Trust no lovely forms of passion;
Friends may look like angels bright;
Trust no custom, school nor fashion,
"Trust in God and do the right."

Simple rule and safest guiding,
Inward peace and inward might,
Star upon our path abiding,
"Trust in God and do the right."

Some will hate thee, some will love thee,
Some will flatter, some will slight;
Turn from man and look above thee,
"Trust in God and do the right."

TEMPORA MUTANTUR.

BY LEVI KELLY.

That we have fallen upon troublesome times none will deny. Some see these things foretold by the sacred bards, and others believe them simply accidental.

The Holy Bible declares that "whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap." If this is true of individuals why is it not equally true as regards nations? We have been shaping this nation for thirty years past for just this crisis. Nothing is surer to produce bad fruit than teaching the young disobedience at home.

It is a rare thing to meet with a properly governed family. Domestic training is of the most vital importance. The children in the majority of homes control the parents. If a child cries the parents try to quiet it by granting its requests. At the table, especially if strangers are present, it shows its training by dipping into the best dish, and if it is not promptly gratified, strikes, kicks and bawls, as if none had so large a share of patronage as it. The parents blush, they coax, apologize, and finally indulge the little socialistic striker. It simply shows that the child has always had its own way.

What is often called love for children, the wise man Solomon calls hatred: Pro. 13:24: "He that spareth his rod hateth his son: but he that loveth him chasteneth him betimes." Parental authority must not be surrendered to please a child that hardly knows its own name. What kind words do not effect a sound sensible thrashing will. It must not be done in anger, but in love, as the wise man says. I have heard parents pray in the family that God might correct their children, while they were playing out doors, or making such a racket inside that it was an insult to God. Such training breeds contempt of God's house and his worship.

The will of the child must be broken, and that when an infant. Before it is a year old, these traits which are seen in modern lawlessness are manifested. It ought to learn the lesson of "unconditional surrender," no difference how it may cry. Many such chaps have plenty of tears laid up for such occasions; and if they have not it sounds so. You read Prov. 19:18:" Chasten thy son while there is hope, and let not thy soul spare for his crying." The neglect of this rule lays the egg for future rebellion. Horace Greeley said that if the "birch" had been honestly applied in the South it would have prevented the rebellion. How often "the old man" and "old woman" are heard. The"old woman" is bending over the washboard, and Nancy is playing on the organ, or banging her hair, or hanging on the gate. She was taught by that bent form that girls must not work or they would not stand a good chance for a husband. Well, the man that gets her will find that he married fine clothes, or a wife who makes life as bitter as death. She drives him to the saloons.

That boy was paid for the smallest duties. Now he thinks his claim established. His greatness must not be questioned. He can smoke and chew. He must be manly. He trains his mustache to add to his other accomplishments.

Oh, how often we hear: "Don't spread such trashy reading before my children." All right; but what of the majority of books in Sunday-school libraries? The children read in these books, stories, false characters, charming heroes, etc. These books are read until they cannot stand erect in the bookcase. If I may be allowed to say it, I know Sunday-School libraries that I would not give house room. The Methodists of Boston appointed a committee of women to go to all Sunday School libraries of that denomination in Boston and throw out any book that they considered improper for the children to read, and they expurgated 3,000. I am sure that nearly two-thirds would be thrown away if justice were done to our Sunday-school scholars. If they are taught light reading on Sunday by the church, what grounds are left to war on godless newspapers? Here, yes, right here, is where the taste is acquired for trashy reading. I remember many years ago that we had the Testament, and some excellent biographical books, which taught us what the founders of the churches were and did. They were read, and the young knew more of the lives of reformers, and what storms, tempests and deaths these men and women endured than now. They taught Protestantism, and the fear of God. Where are these works now? Rusting on book shelves for want of buyers.

These God-given truths that we used to read, are in part clothed in fiction to make it very pleasing,—much chaff and little wheat. It simply degrades religion, and presents to youthful minds the soft, easy, slip-shod, limp-lavender religion, without a cross or self-denial. Away with Sunday-school novels as well as all other corrupt and corrupting literature.

Yes, we need a radical reform. We need men all over this land on fire. We need a holy,humble membership. Dress is degrading females, and making the house of God largely a show of the latest style. God help us. In many cases the church of God is sold to the highest bidder. The rented pew smacks of castes. The tendency is to make style the acceptable qualification of worshipers. The poor cannot pay much; neither can they dress up to the demand. The poor have pride, and shun the house of God rather than be viewed with contempt. Mission Chapels will not do. Let, by common consent, the house of God be plain and its worshipers the same, and let the hod-carrier and the banker be equally esteemed before the great God.

Push the work. These are evil days. Christianity is spreading, but it will need a new coating in a few years. The ground must be broken anew. The battle must be renewed daily. Every inch of ground is contested. Hell and devils are now trying to make the earth pandemonium itself.

WORK OF THE PEACE UNION.

Rev. S. H. Werlein, at the American Peace Day, New Orleans Exposition:

It comes to teach men and nations how, in the midst of disagreement and conflict, it may be possible to so adjust their difficulties as to effect peace and good will between them. I venture to say that there is no question which merits more the attention of all classes and peoples than this. We give thought to commerce, to shipping, to government, to science, but I will tell you the question of International Peace underlies them all. When iron-shod war stalks through the land, it destroys the temples of knowledge, it dethrones science, it subjects the lore of the ages to the torch, and all but extirpates religion. It inflames the worst passions of men, and enthrones the brute to the almost extinction of the higher moral nature. War transform a heaven into a hell. It unmuzzles the bloodhounds of hate, and is not satisfied until it is glutted with blood. War means rapine, violence, incendiarism, murder, ruin. It can not be glossed over. We may praise the courage, and honor the patriotism, and admire the self-abandonment with which heroes have hurled themselves into the thickest of the fray, and courted death, but, after all, desolation, demoralization, the overthrow of the weak by the strong, are poor compensations of such heroic suffering, and wholesale sacrifice of life. It baptizes the land with blood, and breaks thousands of hearts; it quenches multitudes of promising lives, and fills the air with voices of lamentation, and even then fails to accomplish what less costly and more humane methods can satisfactorily consummate.

Behold the battle-fields, and the soldier-cemeteries in every land! What a dark, sad commentory on human charity and enlightenment!

"Oh! the gallant hearts that are lying cold and still
On the slope beyond the summit of the plateau of the hill!
Oh! the gallant hearts that are sobbing out their souls,
As the chilly night-wind reaches the burning bullet holes!
And oh, the writhing mass of pain close packed with the tranquil slain.
When the gray morn wakes again o'er the hills they dared to climb."

I ask: Shall the savagery of war continue to be the arbitrament of national disagreements?

Shall boycotting, strikes, dynamite and infernal machines become the efficient means of adjusting the difficulties between the laboring classes and their employers?

The Universal Peace Union, with voice loud enough to be heard in the din of the battle and the tumult of riot, cries out: "Ye be brethren. Sheathe your swords. Come, let us aid you to an agreement. Let there be peace."

No surer proof of the growth of Christian enlightenment among the nations can be given than the manifest unwillingness with which the appeal to arms is made. The voice of the nations is: "We have suffered enough. We are wearied with incessant warfare. We are tired of watching our neighbors through the eyes of armed sentinels. Give us a better plan to preserve our domains, protect our country and live in security."

It is to respond to this great need that the Universal Peace Union is addressing all its might. It advocates "mediation, arbitration and conciliation," and looks to the establishment of courts of arbitration in trade, in communities and among nations.

It is striving to teach the world the feasibility of settling all personal and national difficulties by arbitration, and showing the needlessness of standing armies, armed fleets, and the absurdity of a man transforming himself into a walking arsenal.

It declares that while it operates in the interest of peace, it knows no partiality between contestants. It is ruled in all its judgments by right and justicc.

It announces the sacredness of humanity and emphasizes the freedom of all men, and their equality before the law.

It solicits among all nations all friendly relations one with the other, and protection to life and property of all men in every land. It commends the Christian precept that the "strong ought to bear the infirmities of the weak, and not to please themselves."

ACKNOWLEDGE THE DEBT.

A venerable clergyman of Virginia said lately: "Men of my profession see much of the tragic side of life. Beside a death-bed the secret passions, the hidden evil as well as the good in the human nature, are very often dragged to light. I have seen men die in battle, children, and young wives in their husbands' arms, but no death ever seemed so pathetic to me as that of an old woman, a member of my church.

"I knew her first as a young girl, beautiful, gay, full of spirit and vigor. She married and had four children; her husband died and left her penniless. She taught school, she painted, she sewed; she gave herself scarcely time to eat or sleep. Every thought was for her children, to educate them, to give them the same chance which their father would have done.

She succeeded; sent the boys to college, and the girls to school. When they came home, pretty, refined girls and strong young men, abreast with all the new ideas and tastes of their time, she was a worn-out, commonplace old woman. They had their own pursuits and companions. She lingered among them for two or three years, and then died of some sudden failure in the brain. The shock woke them to a consciousness of the truth. They hung over her, as she lay unconscious, in an agony of grief. The oldest son, as he held her in his arms, cried—

" 'You have been a good mother to us?" '

"Her face colored again, her eyes kindled into a smile, and she whispered, 'You never said so before, John.' Then the light died out and she was gone."

How many men and women sacrifice their own hopes and ambitions, their strength, their life itself, to their children, who receive it as a matter of course; and begrudge a caress, a word of gratitude, in payment for all that has been given to them.

Boys, when you come back from college, don't consider that your only relation to your father is to "get as much money as the governor will stand." Look at his gray hair, his uncertain step, his dim eyes, and remember in whose service he has grown old. You can never repay him the debt you owe, but at least acknowledge it before it is too late.—Youth's Companion.

AN EASY PLACE.

A lad stepped once into our office in search of a situation. He was asked:

"Are you not employed?"

"Yes, sir."

"Then, why do you wish to change?"

"O, I want an easier place."

We had no place for him. No one wants a boy or man who is seeking an easy place; yet just here is the difficulty with thousands. They want easy work, and are afraid of earning more than their wages.

They have strength enough to be out late nights, to indulge in vices and habits which debilitate them. They have strength enough to waste on wine or beer, or tobacco, all of which leave them weaker than before. They have strength enough to run and leap and wrestle, but they think they have not the strength to do hard work.

Will the boys let us advise them? Go in for the hard places; bend yourself to the task of showing how much you can do. Make yourself serviceable to your employer, at whatever cost of your own personal ease; and if you do this he will soon find that he cannot spare you; and when you have learned how to do work you may be set to teach others, and so, when the easy places are to be had they will be yours. Life is toilsome at best to most of us, but the easy places are at the end, not at the beginning, of life's course. They are to be won, not accepted; and a man who is bound to have an easy place now may as well understand that the grave is about the only easy place within the reach of lazy people.—The Little Christian.

The following item from over the water gives gratifying evidence of a growing piety and spirituality among students for the ministry in Germany. It is said that "in the theological school at Frankfort the students are working for God with great earnestness. In small companies they go to villages, sing, pray, and sometimes preach. They often gather congregations of 500, and their efforts have met with good results." This statement, so far as it goes, confirms the recent report that rationalism is visibly on the decline in the various educational institutions in Europe. Earnest piety and zeal for the cause of Christ cannot co-exist with rationalism, which is simply semi-infidelity.—Missionary Record.

TEMPERANCE.

CANON FARRAR ON TEMPERANCE.

The following eloquent appeal is from Canon Farrar's address on the subject of temperance, and gives some of his reasons why he is a total abstainer:

"But, gentlemen, I can tell you in four letters of one motive for abstinence, which in my own mind was as Aaron's serpent rod, and prevailed over all the rest. It was pity, sheer human pity. I will not stop to tell you the horrible results of drunkenness which, in my own parish, under the very shadows of the great abbey, I have seen with my own eyes and heard with my own ears. If I did I could indeed say to you—

> "Come, sit you down,
> And I will wring your heart; for so I shall,
> If it be made of penetrable stuff,
> If damned custom have not brazed it so
> That it is proof and bulwark against sense."

"But I may presume that I am speaking to those who are familiar with the common facts—so common yet so ghastly—which in England, at any rate, are enough to make us blush with shame and burn with indignation. I believed, and still believe, or rather I now not only believe but know, that by becoming an abstainer, by taking part in Temperance Reform, I could help others; and if others could have known and seen all that I have seen, I believed that in their case, too,

> "Pity like a naked, new-born babe
> Striding the blast, and heaven's cherubim horsed
> Upon the sightless couriers of the air,
> Would blow those horrid deeds in every eye,
> That tears could drown the wind."

"I would then appeal to all for pity;—pity for the vast multitudes who become the helpless victims of a dead chemical product, potent to destroy the souls for which Christ died; pity for the ravages wrought by this bitter source of human woe; pity for the hundreds and thousands of men, who, under this hideous fascination, degrade their lives into misery and pollution of a long-continued death; pity for the youths who thus "pour poison into the roses of their youth," so that its root is as rottenness; pity for the hearts of mothers rent by anguish for these their ruined prodigals; pity for the wives and husbands on whose hearth burn the fires of hell; pity for the unmotherly mothers and unwomenly women who nigh turn motherhood to shame, womanliness to loathing; pity for those lurid tragedies where the virtol maddens; or is there no voice strong enough to plead like angels trumpet-tongued against the deep damnation of their bodies; pity for the little children who, in the awful language of South are, because of drink, not so much born into the world as damned into the world, born to lives of disease and degradation, or in these Christian lands yearly pass through the fire to this idol in far vaster multitudes than were ever sacrificed of old in the Valley of Hinnom to Moloch the abomination of the children of Ammon; pity for England, which now, for fully two centuries, has been writhing in these dragon-folds of licensed temptations; pity for the whole race of mankind, which sends up a cry from every polluted continent, and which yet cherishes—aye, and fondly—in its bosom this venomous and deadly asp. Alone of human woes, dear heaven, it is a curse of which the entail might be at once cut off; and yet mankind, partly blinded by conceit, partly seduced by pleasure, and, rendered callous by greed, still suffers drink for year after year, in every continent, almost in every city, to blast innumerable careers and to blight innumerable homes—a folly, which almost drives us to say with the despairing moralist that it seems as if humanity were still half serpent and yet half extracted from the clay, a lacertain brood of bitterness whose trail is on the leaf a guilty slime and in the land a useless furrow.

"Gentlemen, this cause of Temperance Reform, which in my own mind, and I believe in the minds of milllions, is mainly the child of pity, appeals to us as humanitarians; it appeals to us as philanthropists; it appeal to us with million-fold force as Christians; but if I harrowed the ground quite indefinitely, might I not assume that it should appeal to us with gigantic force merely as patriots. 'national crime,' said Oliver Cromwell, "is a thing that God will reckon for; and I wish it may not lie on the nation a day longer than you have an opportunity to find a remedy.' The drink system is a national crime. 'A prosperous iniquity,' said Jeremy Taylor, 'is the most unprofitable condition in the world.' I so hold the drink system is a prosperous iniquity. 'I do not believe,' said Burke, 'that any good constitution of goverment or freedom can find it necessary to drive any part of their people to a permanent slavery.' The drink system overcomes tens of thousands. 'If I thought,' said your own great orator, Daniel Webster, 'that there was a stain upon the remotest hem of the garment of my country, I would devote my utmost labors to wipe it off.' This is the duty of every patriot. This is what, in my small measure, according to my feeble capacity, I have striven to do. For, whatever may be the case in America, it is certainly the case in England that drunkenness and the licensed, the profitable, the wealth-producing monopoly which causes drunkenness, is a stain not only upon the hem but dyeing all the white robes of England, a stain of the deepest dye—a stain deep and crimson enough to incarnadine the multitudinous lives over which she rules."

THE SEEN AND UNSEEN.

In any such moral struggle as the temperance reform involves, he misses the sublimest vision who sees only the human forces engaged, with the human probabilities of success, and therefore stands trembling between expediency and righteousness in choice of methods.

Any contest which touches the kingdom of Christ, the welfare of humanity, and the salvation of souls, must of necessity sweep out into the unseen, and lay hold of spiritual forces.

Where is the strength of the liquor oligarchy of this country? Appetite, avarice, greed of power, political policy, all these and more, are the seen forces to be overcome; but back of them is a satanic conspiracy to ruin men in this world and the other, and to overturn the kingdom of God and of his Christ. Every blow struck by this power, therefore, is in open, bitter opposition to all Jesus came to accomplish. Not satanic influences, but Satan himself, bears rule in this gigantic national iniquity.

Wherein lies the power of the temperance movement? Truth uttered by trenchent pen and eloquent lips to which the world must needs pause and listen. Organizations composed of men who are willing to be counted for that truth, and organizations of women, who, by prayer and social influence, seek to advance it. All these and more, but back of them, in them, breathi g through them, is God himself.

Not divine influence, but Divinity in person, is on the field where eternal right is at stake, and souls are lost or won.

So this great reform, like those which have gone before it, arrays not alone the armies of earth, but other and greater armies darken the air, just beyond the line of our vision; while this contest, which stirs our hearts, moves heaven and hell.

Satan cannot, unconcerned, look on alcohol's destruction. Christ cannot, unconcerned, look upon the slaughter of souls through alcohol. This puts the battle beyond "flesh and blood" among "principalities and powers."

Now set Republican and Democratic party policies, the tricks of political shysters, the value of office, and shallow sophistries of evil legislation, under the steady blaze of God's judgment throne on one side, with the shadowy gloom of retribution on the other, and see how they look.

Face bravely all the truth now and here, for between that blaze and gloom every soul shall stand to give account, unless revelation is a delusion and the Gospel preached from thousands of pulpits in this Christian Republic a snare and sham.

In such a realm as this, traversed by such forces, "Expediency" has no place. A "choice of evils" is an impossibility. They may find room in the short-lived calculations of men, but never where the kingdom of light and the empire of darkness meet in decisive contest.

The truth admitted then (and what Christian hesitates to admit it?) that in such moral struggles the unseen are the mightiest forces engaged, there follow two inevitable conclusions. First, the final victory, however long delayed, must be with God and for the right; second, if we win in the visible and human part of the warfare, we must come to that success by the same Divine principles which are victorious in the realm of spiritual powers outside our own.

"They always win who side with God" is not only the trust of the Christian heart, but is the lofty belief of the patriot and student of history.

"God is on our side," said a comforting friend to President Lincoln in the darkest days of the civil war. "I am most concerned to be on God's side," was the solemn reply of the heart-sore, weary man who was ahead of his country's thought, and therefore misjudged.

God with men is not simply a possibility, but a fact, where any evil is to be overthrown, and his power at hand makes victory assured. "What is the condition of his presence?" must be the question of supremest moment to those who desire to see the temperance reform move on to the conquest.

In finding this we turn from halftruths and vain reasonings of men to inquire what the Lord says for himself in this matter.

"Come out from among them, and be ye separate; touch not the unclean thing, and I will receive you." This is the enlistment order, if we are going with God into the war.

Absolute separation from the evil, which is to go down, is the first condition. "Come out;" "be separate;" "touch not."

"The unclean thing" is the land of judgment and destruction; like Sodom, it waits the fire of justice and indignation, and those who have complicity with it must suffer when that storm shall fall.

"Come out;" "be separate;" "touch not," Can that mean to "work with all parties?" to compromise on "high license?" to "tax and regulate?" and, in order to reach the best method, and find, not the right, but the attainable, go on casting the ballot for those whose highest ordeal is to "regulate" and thereby perpetuate the "unclean thing?" Remember we are seeking the Divine side of the battle.

The mighty necessities of this hour and this question are not lonely in the world's history.

So Israel was separated from other nations to accomplish Jehovah's will. So Moses went to the gate with the cry of separation, when the camp was defiled by the worship of the golden calf. So Gideon found his dauntless three hundred who conquered by "lamps, pitchers," and a devoted war-cry. In this way moral victories have always been reached.

History bears witness that the devil has never been beaten by his own weapons. From behind his own defenses, the Prince of Evil comes to defeat alone by the artillery of heaven, and they who use that artillery must leave the devil's camp.

There is a deal of jelly fish to talk about good people agreeing upon the principles of the temperance reform but differing about methods, as if that was a very innocent matter to be treated with silent charity; but the sin of these good people lies in the choice of methods. The liquor traffic is a social evil considered by itself. It is a political evil through the compromise legislation which sustains it. To these propositions most good men agree. A wrong method of treating this acknowledged evil is their sin.

We are at the hour when one tremendous thing in this reform is method. "Come out," "be separate," "touch not," is the method in the unseen where the Lord of Hosts is leading to victory.—Mary P. Lathrap in Witness.

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

—The Waldensian church of Italy has effected a settlement in South America, where it occupies two parishes or colonies on the shores of the La Plata and Uruguay. True to its missionary character it is making vigorous efforts to evangalize the immense population of Italian immigrants who to the number of 100,000 annually leave their native country for the La Plata.

—The Primitive Methodists of England have sent out the Rev. R. W. Burnett to take charge of their mission work at Feruando Po, in Western Africa, from which their former missionary was expelled by the Portuguese. We hope they will allow him more freedom of worship.

—Within fifteen days after the report reached England of the murder of Bishop Hauniugton, of the Uganda Mission in East Afriea, by order of King Mwanga, the Church Missionary Society received offers from twenty-six persons to go out to their mission there. In four weeks the number had increased to fifty-three.

—The Reformed Miuisterial Association of Philadelphia have proposed to the Synods and Classes of the Dutch and German Reformed churches to take action toward the union of those churches.

—A petition signed by one thousand barbers has been sent to the Metropolitan Board of Police in Boston, rqeuesting the enforcement of the law against keeping barbers' shops open on Sunday.

—At the meeting of the Evangelical Alliance in Boston, May 10, resolutions of sympathy with the Chinese were passed, requesting Congress to pass such legislation as is necessary for their protection in this country.

—The Reformed churches comprising the Classis of Philadelphia report accessions on confession of faith to the number of two hundred and six; yet, owing to revised lists, the total of membership shows a less number than last year.

—Presbyterianism appears to have been making great progress in Japan. Its democratic character and its system of representation seem to commend it to the educated classes in the country. At a recent meeting of the General Assembly at Tokio, as many as one thousand delegates are said to have been present. The increase in the membership for the past two years was reported at seventy per cent.

—There are to-day in India, laboring side by side, representatives of thirteen different sections of the church, European and American, holding the Reformed faith in the Presbyterian form of church government.

—Pastor Gossner, the eminent evangelical German preacher and writer, founded a mission in India in 1836, which is celebrating its jubilee this year. Between 30,000 and 40,000 heathens have become Christians through its labors.

—The Calcutta Book and Tract Society is working to bring up its circulation offour-page tracts in the vernacular to a million.

—A native Corean was last month admitted into the Howard Presbyterian church of San Francisco, the first who has professed Christianity in this country.

—At the spring session of the Manhattan Congregational Association statistics from sixteen churches whose pastors are connected with the Association show a total membership of 7,553; additions within the year, 695; losses, 541. The benevolent contributions amounted to $75,089.09.

—In Utah the Congregationalists have 4 churches, 9 ministers, and 210 members; the Baptists, 2 churches, 2 ministers, and 170 members; Catholics, 4 churches, 6 priests, and 850 members; Episcopalians, 4 churches, 7 ministers, and 465 members; Methodists, 7 churches, 13 ministers, and 381 members; Presbyterians, 12 churches, 14 ministers, and 382 members; Lutheran, 1 church, 1 minister, and 40 members. Total, 34 churches, 52 ministers, and 2,498 members.

—Jenny Geddes, who threw her stool at the Dean of St. Giles, Edinburgh, as he introduced the Liturgy into its service, is to be honored by a memorial tablet there. The inscription says that she "on the 23rd of July, 1637, struck the first blow in the great struggle for freedom of conscience, which, after a conflict of half a century, ended in the establishment of civil and religious liberty."

—The annual report of the Presbyterian Home Missionary Society shows the receipts of the year were $671,718, a larger sum than last year by $40,000, although gifts in legacies were $90,000 less, or a gain in general contributions of $130,000, due largely to increased efforts to pay last year's debt. This year's debt is $43,634. Fewer men were in the field last year, and fewer Sunday-schools organized. These important interests suffered on account of the debt, now practically met, yet 16,000 communieants were added to home mission churches, 9,561 of these by confession, as the work of 1,367 missionaries. There are 2,035 Sunday-schools, with 132,128 scholars. The work of women and children for home missions was never so large. They have voted to raise $750,000 for the coming year.

—The Swedish Diet has repealed the law, subject to the approval of the Council of the State Church, authorizing it to forbid any one from preaching whose preaching led to separation from their church, and to fine him from 50 to 300 erowns, or imprison him if he continued to preach.

—The Southern Baptist Home Mission Board, of Atlanta, Ga., employs in regular service 230 missionaries, who supply the pulpit of 600 churehes. Last year they built 42 new houses of worship, and organized 67 churches. The Southern Baptist Convention meets in Montgomery, Ala., this month.

—An English clergyman, Rev. J. J. Halcombe, has published a book maintaining that a section of the Gospel of Luke, extending from chapter 11:14 to chapter 13:21, has been misplaced from its proper position, and should be inserted before chap. viii., 22. He claims, beside other strong arguments, that this re-arrangment would bring the four Gospels in perfect harmony with one another.

—It is a suggestive fact that at Lucknow, India, there is a native press employing nine hundred workmen, which issues largely the sacred writings of the Hindoos and Mohammedans. A native publishing firm at Lahore translates European infidel publications as fast as they appear and disseminates them in the various languages of India.

—The London Chronicle makes some remarkable statements concerning the missionary contributions of the native churches in the Society Islands. Raiatea, with 1,500 inhabitants, has contributed $1,224; Tahaa, with 900 inhabitants, $563; Pora Pora, with 1,000 inhabitants, $1,153. And yet there has been no missionary among them for a year.

—The Congregational Association convened May 24th, at Moline, in the First Congregational church of Moline. The opening sermon was preached by the Rev. E. Frank Howe, of Peoria, from the text, "What manner of man is this?" Mark 4: 41. "The Problem of the Great Cities," was the subject of a most suggestive paper, by Professor S. Ives Curtiss, of Chicago. The dangers imminent from the rapid growth of cities and the large increase of the foreign element were set forth.

—The convention of the American Baptist Missionary Union met on the 25th, in Educational Hall, Asbury Park, N. Y. There were at least 1,500 clergymen present. The Rev. Edward Judson, of New York, called the convention to order. The report of the treasurer, E. P. Coleman, of Boston, showed that during the past year $384,996 had been received, and $382,058 expended. The president then gave a half hour's resume of the work that had been done. At the evening session the Rev. Dr. E. W. Clark, of Assam, gave an interesting description of his life among the Assamese.

—Georgia reports in the Year Book 2,623 Baptist churches; 1,500 of which, we judge from the report made at the recent State convention, are white. The report further states that only "some 75 of these have supported weekly services." This is rather a melancholy showing. How many of the colored churches are in a similar condition we are not told. The convention heartily endorsed prohibition.

—Philadelphia has sixty-seven Baptist churches and seventeen missions. The total church membership is 19,958. There are 83 Bible-schools, with officers and teachers, 2,003, and scholars, 23,973. In this connection we might add that about one-fifth of the population of Philadelphia is in the Sunday-school. There are in the city 650 Sunday-schools, with an attendance of 186,835 scholars, and over 16,000 teachers.

—The Chinese Recorder states that a town of five hundred inhabitants near Foochow, has adopted Christianity. In the suburbs was a mission chapel in charge of a native helper, and the town was occasionally visited by missionaries of the Church of England. Last summer they became so angry with all foreigners on account of the troubles between France and China, that the missionaries were obliged to discontinue their visits, but the native preacher kept on his work earnestly and faithfully. Cholera came to the village in a virulent form, and death followed death in quick succession. The terror-stricken people fled to their gods; but the one Christian besought them to come to the true God, who could hear their prayers and save them. Because of their despair they listened, and joined with him in asking God to stay the plague; and God honored their faith, imperfect though it was, and the plague was stayed that day. The people then held a conference, and as a town they resolved to aceept the new religion, and worship the God who helped them. Although some have fallen away since, the majority remain steadfast, and have eontributed more than a hundred dollars to build a chapel.

—There are 20,000 Jews in Jerusalem, 500 in Hebron, 5,000 in Safed, 3,000 in Tiberias, 6,000 in Damascus, 2,500 in Beirut, 4,000 in Alleppo, 1,500 in other towns. Total 42,500.

—Governor J. B. Foraker, of Ohio, opened the National Church Congress by an address, and was followed by the Rev. Dr. Henry M. Ladd, of Cleveland, who welcomed those in attendance from abroad. The Rev. Dr. Joseph Anderson, of Waterbury, Conn., read a paper giving the history of the first year's work of the congress. A discussion on the "True Church; Its Essentials and Characteristics," followed, in which D. Potter, of Waterbury, Conn.; Leonard W. Bacon, D. D., of Philadelphia; the Rev. Dr. John Henry Hopkins, of Williamsport, Pa., and the Rev. F. M. Clendenin, of Cleveland, participated. At the evening session "Religion in Our Public Schools" was discussed by the Rev. D. S. Stephens, of Adrian, Mich.; Bishop Gilmore, of Cleveland; the Rev. J. Coleman Adams, of Chicago; the Rev. Dr. Leonard W. Bacon, of Philadelphia, and the Rev. William Barrows, of Reading, Mass.

—Henry Varley, the English Evangelist, who labored so long in this country, thus comments on the state of morals in the United States: "In the year 1884 no less than three thousand three hundred and seventy-seven men and women were murdered. This is an appalling fact, indicating a condition of lawlessness and a disregard of the sacredness of human life alike fearful and terrible. I believe I am right in saying that in England, with her thirty-seven millions of inhabitants, less than two hundred murders were committed in 1884. The United States, with her fifty seven-millions, had little less than three thousand five hundred. Not less alarming is the fact that one hundred and eleven only of these murderers suffered the penalty of the divine law, "Whoso sheddeth man's blood, by man shall his blood be shed." (Gen. 9: 6.) In the great majority of the American cities the Lord's day is the great day for theatrical entertainments and public sports, whilst, with scarcely an exception, elaborate and large additions of the Sunday newspapers are everywhere issued. This is not confined to what we should call the Sunday newspaper, but is precisely as though the London Times, Daily Telegraph, Standard, Daily News, and Chronicle were to publish a much larger edition on the Lord's Day morning than any other day of the week. Besides this, the Sunday issue is the special medium for making known the aggregate of the terrible crimes which are committed. In one large city a prominent judge told me that the year 1884 yielded no less than three divorce court cases a day; in round numbers, 1100 cases of divorce in that section of population, which does not exceed 100,000 men and women. Preaching in one of the prisons of the city, I counted twenty-three murders in one row of cells."

INTER-DENOMINATIONAL UNION IN JAPAN.

Now that the Cleveland Church Congress is in session, it is a fit time to notice what a long step has been taken within a few weeks toward the union of evangelical denominations among the churches of Japan. The plan now proposed goes beyond anything attempted here at home; in that denominations representing two distinct types of polity are included, namely, the Presbyterian (or Reformed) and the Congregational. We give from the Tokio Independent of April 3d, the following scheme for a creed to which churches of these and other denominations there are asked to give their adhesion:

"1. The Divine inspiration, authority and sufficiency of the Holy Scriptures; 2, the right and duty vate judgment in the interpretation of the Holy Scriptures; 3, the unity of the Godhead and the Trinity of the persons therein; 4, utter depravity of human nature in consequence of the fall; 5, the incarnation of the Son of God, his work of atonemen for the sins of mankind, and his mediatorial intercession and reign; 6, the justification of the sinner by faith alone; 7, the work of the Holy Spirit in the conversion and the sanctification of the sinner; 8, the immortality of the soul, the resurrection of the body, the judgment of the world by our Lord Jesus Christ, the eternal blessedness of the righteous, and and the eternal punishment of the wicked; 9, the divine institution of the Christian ministry, and the obligation and perpetutity of the ordinances of Baptism and the Lord's Supper."

We want one thousand orders in advance. Send in your names.

The advertisement for back numbers of the Cynosure has met with a liberal response, and is no longer needed.

Piso's Remedy for Catarrh is agreeable to use. It is not a liquid or a snuff. 50c.

CHRISTIAN NATION.

The issue of the Christian Nation for June 2d will be an exceedingly valuable one. for the reason that it will contain,

1. Portraits of the Hon. Felix R. Brunot, president of the National Reform Association; Rev. T. P. Stevenson, D. D., corresponding secretary and editor of the Christian Statesman; Rev. D. McAllister, LL. D., treasurer; Revs. W. J. Coleman, M. A. Gault, R C. Wylie, and President Scovel, of Wooster University, prominent among representative men whose eloquent voices are always pitched to the highest key in proclaiming against national evils, and urging national reform. And in the center of this brilliant group will be found the faces of our now saintly heroes, J. R. W. Sloane and A M. Milligan.

2. An accurately prepared and entertaining history of the National Reform Association and movement, by the Rev. W. J. Coleman.

3. Articles and letters upon, and indorsing, the principles of the National Reform Association, written by college and university presidents, professors, authors, ministers, judges, military men, eminent men, women, etc., etc.

Making, altogether, a paper of great attractiveness, interest and value.

Price per copy, 10 cents. Sent postpaid on receipt of price.

BETWEEN TWO OPINIONS.

BY E. E. FLAGG.

Author of "Holden with Cords," "A Sunny Life," "Little People," etc.

The Best Story of the Reform.

Price, only $1.00.

Published by THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

This latest and best of Miss Flagg's works is now ready in handsome print, neatly bound. The story begins in a quiet New England home, and paints its homely joys with a delicacy and truthfulness worthy the hand of Harriet Beecher Stowe. The scene then changes to a thriving, growing, palpitating young Western city, and with great power and startling accuracy the writer leads us behind the scenes that we may see the machinery that works the liquor traffic and labor troubles. The story of the strike, the mob, the attempted assassination, the saloon-keeper's wiles, the curse of his trade, the power of the Christian faith to change him to a messenger of mercy, the criminal and the hidden power that shields him from justice, the land robbers tricks, the dark and secret conspiracies of the lodge—these and all the incidents of the book are portrayed with rare tact and great power of description. It is emphatically a book for the hour. And what is better and yet more striking, the incidents are facts, and every one a powerful and convincing argument against the lodge and the saloon.

Every temperance man and woman should read this book. No temperance story like it was ever planned, much less ably executed. A wonderful light is thrown upon the difficulties in the way of prohibition. Learn how they may be avoided.

Every one who loves to read a good story, chaste and elegant in expression, p in thought, true in incident, deeply interesting in its narrative, should read this bc

READ THESE NOTICES FROM THE PRESS:

The Free Methodist, Chicago.

"Between Two Opinions" is a story, its incidents vouched for as facts, which presents a powerful argument on these questions and must attract thousands of readers among our thinking and observant people. The plot of the story is neither startling nor novel, but it develops a wonderful strength in following the experiences of people in the common, every-day walks of life.

Free Press, Birmingham, Iowa.

It differs from the popular story, "The Bread-winners" of a year ago. It greatly differs from that book in that it is written from the Christian standpoint, and its beautiful and touching descriptions of home life and home duties and heroic self-denyings will waken a responsive echo in every heart, that has not by dissipation lost the taste for the pure joys of home.

The Religious Telescope, Dayton.

The author, Miss Flagg, is a brilliant writer. The stirring questions in American politics are undoubtedly prohibition and the labor movement as championed by the secret unions of working men, which direct the strikes that with more and more frequency occur in our cities. "Between Two Opinions" is a story, its incidents vouched for as facts, which presents a powerful argument on these questions, and must attract thousands of readers among our thinking people.

The Christian Conservator, Dayton.

This is a charming book, written in an attractive manner. It is so full of sunshine and so radiant with light that one is enlightened, warmed, and, before they are conscious of it, set against the lodge. The style gleams, glows and sparkles. It is dignified and simple. It is the right book to place in the hands of your wife or daughter to superinduce co-operation with you in anti-secrecy work. Every minister's wife should read it, and then, if her husband is not an Anti-mason, he should take his turn next and become one.

The American, Washington.

We are reading, in spare moments, Miss Flagg's new book, "Between Two Opinions," and the estimate we have thus far put upon it is that it is masterly both in style and argument. One is insensibly made to feel that he is reading facts and not fiction; that the book is not a play upon the imagination but an unraveling of mysterious circumstances which have an important bearing upon current events.

Law and Order, Boston.

The book takes high ground for prohibition of the liquor curse, for woman's ballot for home protection, and for a better and more honest brotherhood than is forced by their obligations upon the members of secret orders. It is, therefore, a valuable book for several large classes of American readers.

Christian Instructor, Philadelphia.

There are important questions pressing upon American politics to-day; two of them are prohibition and the labor question as connected with the secret unions of workingmen. This work is an expose of the twin evils, secret societies and the saloons. The truths are given in the form of a story; not startling, but thrilling experiences of home life that are vouched for as facts. The evidences presented of the impossibility of reaching the saloon keeper so long as he and the officers of the law are sworn brothers in the den of some secret society, are conclusive enough to awaken the most careless and obtuse member of society. It is a valuable book for the masses to read.

Evangelist, Berea, Kentucky.

The object of the volume is to illustrate the practical workings of Secret Societies, and especially to show how the Lodge upholds the saloon, and this very important design is wrought out with much skill, clearness and power. By reading it temperance people may learn much about the difficulties in the way of prohibition.

The Standard, Chicago.

It is written in the interests of reform, more especially temperance and Anti-masonry. The title of the story suggests the special aim of it, which is to protest against all "halting between two opinions;" in other words, is a plea for radicalism. The story is vigorously written, and will interest even readers who do not altogether believe in its doctrine.

The Pacific, San Francisco.

It is a story intended to do service against the saloons, and in favor of Womans' Christian Temperance work, and especially against the secret orders—Freemasons, Odd-fellows, the Knights of Labor, etc. No reflecting man can doubt that any combination of picked classes and individuals is liable to great abuse. It is obvious, also, that secret orders are specially capable of being used in a selfish and unprincipled way.

HOME AND HEALTH.

HOW TO AVOID PREMATURE OLD AGE.

The following good advice is given by Dr. Benjamin Ward Richardson. The rules for the prevention of senile disease are all personal. They should begin in youth. It should be a rule among grown-up persons never to subject children to mental shocks and unnecessary griefs. When, in the surrounding of the child-life, some grave calamity has occurred, it is best to make the event as light as possible to the child, and certainly to avoid thrilling it with sights and details which stir it to the utmost, and in the end only leave upon the mind and heart incurable wounds and oppressions. Children should never be taken to funerals, nor to sights that cause a sense of fear and dread combined with great grief, nor to sights which call forth pain and agony in man or in the lower animals.

To avoid premature old age in mature life, the following are important points to remember:

Grief anticipates age. Dwelling on the inevitable past, forming vain hypotheses as to what might have been if this or that had or had not been, or acquiring a craze for recounting what has occurred—these acts do more harm to future health and effort than many things connected with real calamity. Occupation and new pursuits are the best preventives for mental shock and bereavement.

Hate anticipates age. Hate keeps the heart always at full tension. It gives rise to oppression of the brain and senses. It confuses the whole man. It robs the stomach of nervous power, and, digestion being impaired, the failure of life begins at once. Those, therefore, who are born with this passion—and a good many, I fear, are—should give it up.

Jealousy anticipates age. The facial expression of jealousy is old age, in however young a face it may be cast. Jealousy preys upon and kills the heart. So, jealous men are not only unhappy, but broken hearted, and live short lives. I have never known a man of jealous nature live anything like a long life or a useful life. The prevention of jealousy is diversion of mind toward useful and unselfish work.

Unchastity anticipates age. Everything that interferes with chastity favors vital deterioration, while the grosser departures from chastity, leading to specific and hereditary disease, are certain causes of organic degeneration and premature old age. Thus chastity is preventive of senile decay.

Intemperance anticipates age. The more the social causes of mental and physical organic diseases are investigated, the more closely the origin of degenerative organic changes leading to premature deterioration and decay are questioned, the more closely does it come out that intemperance, often not suspected by the person himself who is implicated in it, so subtle is its influence, is at the root of the evil.

When old age has really commenced, its march toward final decay is best delayed by attention to those rules of conservation by which life is sustained with the least friction and the least waste.

The prime rules for this purpose are:

To subsist on light but nutritious diet, with milk as the standard food, but varied according to season.

To take food, in moderate quantity, four times in the day, including a light meal before going to bed.

To clothe warmly, but lightly, so as that the body may, in all seasons, maintain its equal temperature.

To keep the body in fair exercise, and the mind active and cheerful.

To maintain an interest in what is going on in the world, and to take part in reasonable labors and pleasures, as though old age were not present.

To take plenty of sleep during sleeping hours. To spend nine hours in bed at the least, and to take care during cold weather that the temperature of the bedroom is maintained at 60° Fah.

To avoid passion, excitement and luxury.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. A historical sketch of the institution and a critical analysis of the character of each degree, by Prest. J. Blanchard, of Wheaton College. Moultorial quotations and nearly four hundred notes from standard Masonic authorities confirm the truthfulness of this exposition and show the character of Masonic teaching and doctrine. The accuracy of this exposition legally attested by J. O. Doesburg, Past Master Unity ☐ No. 191, Holland, Mich., and others. This is the latest, most accurate and complete exposition of Blue Lodge and Chapter Masonry. Over one hundred illustrations—several of them full page—give a pictorial representation of the lodge-room, chapter and principal ceremonies of the degrees, with the dress of candidates, signs, grips, etc. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1.00.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished, with engravings showing the lodge-room, dress of candidates, signs, due guards, grips, etc. This revelation was so accurate that Freemasons murdered the author for writing it. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Prest. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7 50. Paper cover, 35 cents; per dozen $3.50.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. To which is appended "A Revelation of the Mysteries of Oddfellowship (old work,) by a Member of the Craft." The whole containing over five hundred pages, lately revised and republished. In cloth, $1.50 each; per dozen, $14.50. The first part of the above work, Light on Freemasonry, 416 pages, 75 cents each; per dozen $7.50.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern. A book of great interest to officers of the army and navy, the bench and the clergy. TABLE OF CONTENTS: The Antiquity of Secret Societies, The Life of Julian, The Eleusinian Mysteries, The Origin of Masonry, Was Washington a Mason? Fillmore and Webster's Deference to Masonry, A Brief Outline of the Progress of Masonry in the United States, The Tammany Ring, Masonic Benevolence, the Uses of Masonry, An Illustration, The Conclusion. 50 cents each; per dozen, $4.75.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry, by E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge, No. 639, Chicago, gives the correct or "standard" work and ritual of Masonry; the proper position of each officer in the lodge room, order of opening and closing the lodge, dress of candidate, ceremony of initiation, the proper manner of giving the signs, grips, etc., are fully illustrated and explained. First three degrees. Paper cover, 35 cents.

The Mystic Tie, or Freemasonry a LEAGUE WITH THE DEVIL. This is an account of the church trial of Peter Cook and wife, of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a reverend Freemason; and their very able defense presented by Mrs. Lucia C. Cook, in which she clearly shows that Freemasonry is antagonistic to the Christian religion. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Morgan's Exposition, Abduction and MURDER, AND OATHS OF 33 DEGREES. Composed of "Freemasonry Exposed," by Capt. Wm. Morgan "History of the Abduction and Murder of Morgan;" "Valance's Confession of the Murder of Capt. Wm Morgan;" Bernard's Reminiscences of Morgan Times," and Oaths and Penalties of 33 Degrees 304 pages.

Masonic Oaths Null and Void; or, Freemasonry Self-Convicted. This is a book for the times. The design of the author is to refute the arguments of those who claim that the oaths of Freemasonry are binding upon those who take them. His arguments are conclusive, and the forcible manner in which they are put, being drawn from Scripture, makes them convincing. The minister or lecturer will find in this work a rich fund of arguments. 207 pp., postpaid.....40 cts.

Masonry a Work of Darkness, adverse to Christianity, and inimical to republican government. By Rev. Lebbeus Armstrong (Presbyterian), a seceding Mason of 21 degrees. This is a very telling work and no honest man who reads it will think of joining the lodge. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Secret Societies. A discussion of their character and claims, by Rev. David McDill, Prest. J. Blanchard and Rev. Edward Beecher. In cloth, 35c. per doz. $3 25. Paper cover, 15c. Per doz. $1.25.

Reminiscences of Morgan Times. By Elder David Bernard, author of Bernard's Light on Masonry. This is a thrilling narrative of the incidents connected with Bernard's Revelation of Freemasonry. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Freemasonry Self-Condemned. By Rev J. W. Bain. A careful and logical statement of reasons why secret orders should not be fellowshiped by the Christian Church, and by the United Presbyterian church in particular. Paper covers: price 20 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

The Master's Carpet, or Masonry and Baal Worship Identical, explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the lodge, and proves that Modern Masonry is identical with the "Ancient Mysteries" of Paganism. Bound in fine cloth, 420 pp.....75cts.

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 DeGREES OF FREEMASONRY. To get these thirty-three degrees of Masonic bondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Freemasonry Contrary to the ChrisTIAN RELIGION. A clear, cutting argument against the lodge, from a Christian standpoint. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

History of the Abduction and Murder OF CAPT. WM. MORGAN As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan. This book contains indisputable, legal evidence that Freemasons abducted and murdered Wm. Morgan, for no other offense than the revelation of Masonry. It contains the sworn testimony of over twenty persons, including Morgan's wife; and no candid person, after reading this book, can doubt that many of the most respectable Freemasons in the Empire State were concerned in this crime. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Sermon on Masonry, by Rev. James Williams, Presiding Elder of Dakota District Northwestern Iowa Conference, M. E. Church—a seceding Master Mason. Published at the special request of nine clergymen of different denominations, and others. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

College Secret Societies. Their customs, character, and the efforts for their suppression. By H. L. Kellogg. Containing the opinion of many prominent college presidents, and others, and a full account of the murder of Mortimer Leggett. 20 cents each; per dozen. $2.00.

Judge Whitney's Defense before the GRAND LODGE OF ILLINOIS. Judge Daniel H. Whitney was Master of the lodge when S. L. Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the lodge but he boldly replied to the charges against him and afterwards renounced Masonry. 15 cents each; per dozen. $1.25.

General Washington Opposed to SeCRET SOCIETIES. This is a republication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8th, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life—undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin Trial. Also the letter of Hon. Richard Rush to the anti-Masonic committee of York County, Pa., May 4th, 1831. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14th, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons, swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' LETTERS on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Thirty most interesting, able and convincing letters on the above general subject, written by this renowned statesman to different public men of the United States during the years 1831 to 1833. With Mr. Adams' address to the people of Massachusetts upon political aspects of lodgery; an Appendix giving obligations of Masonry, and an able Introduction. This is one of the most telling anti-secrecy works extant, aside from the Expositions. Price, cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00. Paper. 35 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

In the Coils; or, the Coming Conflict. By "A Fanatic." A historical sketch, by a United Presbyterian minister, vividly portraying the workings of Secretism in the various relations of everyday life, and showing how individual domestic, social, religious, professional and public life are trammeled and biased by the baneful workings of the lodge. Being presented in the form of a story, this volume will interest both old and young, and the moral of the story will not have to be searched for. $1.50 each; $15.00 per dozen.

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the five degrees of Female Free Masonry, by Thomas Lowe; comprising the degree of Jephtha's Daughter, Ruth, Esther, Martha and Electa, and known as the Daughter's Degree, Widow's Degree, Wife's Degree, Sister's Degree and the Benevolent Degree. 20 cents each; per dozen, $1.75.

Stearns' Inquiry into the Nature and TENDENCY OF FREEMASONRY. With an Appendix treating on the truth of Morgan's Exposition and containing remarks on various points in the character of Masonry, and a Dialogue on the necessity of exposing the lodge. 338 pages: cloth, 60 cents each; per dozen, $5.00. Paper covers, 40 cents each; per dozen, $4.00.

Mah-Hah-Bone; comprises the Hand Book, Master's Carpet and Freemasonry at a Glance. Bound in one volume. This makes one of the most complete books of information on the workings and symbolism of Freemasonry extant. Well bound in cloth, 589 pp.....$1.00

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery, comprising the degrees of Royal Master, Select Master, Super-Excellent Master, Knight of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00; $8.50 per dozen. Paper covers, 50cts; $4.00 per dozen.

Grand Lodge Masonry. Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Prest. J. Blanchard, at the Monmouth Convention. The un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities. 5 cents each; per dozen. 50 cents.

The Broken Seal; or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene. One of the most interesting books ever published. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper covers. 40 cents; per dozen, $3.50

Thirteen Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason. By Rev. Robert Armstrong. The author states his reasons clearly and carefully, and any one of the thirteen reasons, if properly considered, will keep a Christian out of the lodge. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the InITIATE. By Rev. A. L. Post. Proof of the sinfulness of such oaths and the consequent duty of all who have taken them to openly repudiate them. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Bernard's Appendix to Light on MaSONRY. Showing the character of the institution by its terrible oaths and penalties. Paper covers: 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

SERMONS AND ADDRESSES.

Sermon on Secretism, by Rev. R. Theo. Cross, pastor Congregational Church, Hamilton, N. Y. This is a very clear array of the objections to Masonry that are apparent to all. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Narratives and Arguments, showing the conflict of secret societies with the Constitution and laws of the Union and of the States. By Francis Semple. The fact that secret societies interfere with the execution and pervert the administration of law is here clearly proved. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. J Day Brownlee. In reply to a Masonic Oration by Rev. Dr. Mayer, Wellsville, Ohio. An able Sermon by an able man. 5 cents each; per dozen 50 cents.

FARM AND GARDEN.

STRAWBERRY JAM.

To one quart of ripe strawberries, take one pound of best white sugar; place the strawberries in a china bowl, cover with the sugar and let them stand for several hours, that the juice may draw. Then put them on the fire in a preserving kettle and stir frequently while they cook, until a thick jelly forms. You will find this excellent for mixing with creams, for blanc mange, ices, puffs, etc., for which purpose it should be mashed and strained through a fine sieve. A few drops of poke-berry jelly improves the color, making it resemble that of fresh strawberries.

TO PRESERVE STRAWBERRIES.

Preserving strawberries should not be delayed too late in the season, as the first pickings are generally the finest. Select the largest berries before they are too ripe; use the best sugar only, a pound of sugar to each pound of fruit. Let the berries and sugar stand together from evening until morning in a cool place. Then slip the whole gently into a kettle over a slow fire, and as soon as the berries are heated through, lift them off the fire with a perforated ladle and spread them on dishes to cool. Meanwhile, let the syrup boil rapidly. In ten minutes return the fruit to it, and let them simmer slowly again, until the berries are clear, when they will be sufficiently done. Put strawberries always into small jars, cover them with brandied papers, and seal tightly. Unless the fruit was in a fermented state when gathered, you will not be apt to have any trouble from its spoiling, if put up as here directed.

TO PRESERVE GOOSEBERRIES.

Select young gooseberries while they are still green. Make a syrup with one pound of sugar to each pound of fruit, adding, in the beginning, a half pint of clear spring water. Stew the berries until they are quite clear and the syrup becomes thick. Do not let the gooseberries get mashed, nor have the pan covered while they are cooking, if you would preserve their fresh green color. Put away in small, self sealing glass jars, and no fruit will keep better, or make a more desirable preserve.—American Agriculturist for June.

FARM WORK FOR JUNE.

This is the busiest of months for the farmer. Corn planting, which is "planting" par excellence, over a large part of the country, is not over before corn tillage presses, for the weeds grow very fast, and the grass grows, too, so that haying ought to begin. Millet and fodder corn must be sowed, and in many sections Swedish turnips or rutabages need to be in as early as the 25th, though in others, good crops may be depended upon when sowed a month later. Those who have orchard grass and clover in some fields will be glad that they may begin the hay harvest by cutting these long before timothy and red top meadows are ready for the mowing machine. This saves a great deal of worry, and when the timothy is ripe it may be cut at once if proper calculations have been made. As to the age at which timothy should be cut, it is well to bear in mind that for one's own use it can hardly be cut too green after the heads are well out, but for sale for city feeding it is preferred as old as it can be without the seed shelling off from the heads. It is used not so much as nutriment as for bulky food with oats or ground feed.—Ib.

MOWING THE ROADSIDES.

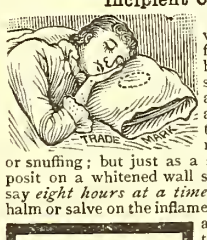
It should be part of the road-work everywhere to keep the weeds cut down which spring up along the sides of the highways; and this work should never be neglected. There is scarcely a neighborhood in which the highways do not mature enough weeds to seed half the adjoining fields. It would be to the interests of the owners of those fields to have the highways mown; but they fail to do this because the roads are public property, and they feel that every item of their care should be part of the public expense. Usually nearly all of the work could be done with a two horse mower, the scythe being necessary only where there are projecting posts, sharp off-sets in the fence, etc. Thus done, the work would cost very little compared with the damage it would avoid. If the road overseers do not feel disposed to have this work done, fearing that it is outside their duties, it should be brought up before the annual town meeting and voted upon. If properly presented before the vote is taken, very few, if any, will vote against it. It may be well to suggest that not only those who have fields by the highways will be benefited, but every man who passes along the road.—Ib.

DUCKS FOR PROFIT.

The Pekin white ducks are our favorite, and better adapted for this country than the Aylesbury. They breed very true, are of the largest size and look almost like geese. Their plumage is creamy white, of a very brilliant and rich tint. These ducks are extraordinarily prolific, laying often from very early spring late into the summer without any inclination to sit. Their eggs must ordinarily be hatched in incubators or under hens. The old standard Rouen ducks need no commendation. Their merits are well known. The heaviest of all breeds of ducks, reasonably prolific—often being autumn layers, growing rapidly, fattening easily, excellent upon the tables, favorites in the market, handsome—the drakes having brilliant irridiscent heads and exquisitely beautiful plumage, with the bright blue mirror in the wings. They contrast strongly with their sombre colored mates, which are, nevertheless, attractive from the beautiful markings of feathers.—Ib.

HORSFORD'S ACID PHOSPHATE,

For Overworked Females.



Dr. J. P. COWAN, Ashland, O., says: "It proves satisfactory as a nerve tonic; also in dyspeptic conditions of the stomach, with general debility, such as we find in overworked females, with nervous headache and its accompaniments."

ALL-NIGHT INHALATION!

"A positive revolution in the treatment of Air-Passage Diseases of the Nose, Throat, and Lungs, and, for the purpose designed, as valuable a discovery as vaccination."

THE PILLOW-INHALER.

A Speedy, Positive and Permanent Cure for Catarrh, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Incipient Consumption.

It is a hair pillow, with reservoirs of evaporating liquid, the fumes or vapor of which is inhaled all night long, whilst sleeping as usual, and without any discomfort. It is used only at night, and is perfectly safe to the most delicate. There is no stomach-dosing, douching or snuffing; but just as a smoky lamp will leave a deposit on a whitened wall so the PILLOW-INHALER, for say eight hours at a time, spreads a powerful healing balm or salve on the inflamed inner coating of the diseased air-snrfaces, from the nostrils to the bottom of the lungs, and hence into the blood. Old-fashioned inhalation, through a tube, for a few minutes a day, sometimes cured. Think of eight hours constant action, on the same principle, but intensified a hundred-fold! There are no pipes or tubes. The medicine is breathed in, not swallowed, and goes right to the diseased parts.

CATARRH. BRONCHITIS. CONSUMPTION.

HON. E. L. HEDDEN, Collector of the Port of New York, says: "I take pleasure in stating that the PILLOW-INHALER has been of the greatest relief, and I believe of permanent benefit, to my wife, who has been a great sufferer from Bronchial and Catarrhal Troubles, accompanied with distressing Asthma. I recommend its use to all persons afflicted with such maladies."

E. L. HEDDEN, 38 West 49th St., New York.

MR. H. G. TEELE, 50 Bryan Block, Chicago, Ill., says: "I suffered fifteen years from a severe case of Catarrh; coughed incessantly day and night. I bought a PILLOW-INHALER, and since using it my cough is gone; my lungs are no longer weak and sore, and I am in better health than I have been for years."

During the six years of its existence the PILLOW-INHALER has wrought cures of Catarrh, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption, that have been more like miracles than the usual treatment of disease. It is not expensive, and is within the reach of every one. Send for Explanatory Pamphlet and Testimonials, or call.

IN THE COILS;

— OR —

The Coming Conflict.

A NEW AND STRANGE STORY BASED ON STARTLING FACTS, VIVIDLY PORTRAYING A MYSTERIOUS AND DANGEROUS POWER AT WORK IN THE GOVERNMENT, THE CHURCH, AND THE HOME.

"All will agree that this is a powerfully written story."—Evangelist, (Chicago, Ills.)

"A book which we trust may have a wide circulation."—National Baptist, (Philadelphia.)

"So intensely interesting did I find it that it was hard to pause until the last sentence was read. This work places the author high among the writers of fiction."—W. W. Barr, D. D. in Christian Instructor, (Philadelphia.)

"Unless we are greatly mistaken, the work will do more to awaken the American church and people to the evils of Freemasonry than any other book recently published."—Evangelical Repository.

"The book will create a sensation in Masonic circles, and evoke criticism of a most relentless character. The conrage of the anthor in attacking snch a rock-rooted bulwark as Freemasonry is something to admire, Fanatic though he be."—Nebraska Wat hman.

"Light is needed on this subject and needed badly, and we welcome this contribntion to the literature of anti-secretism, and cordially commend it to the favorable attention of our readers."—United Presbyterian, (Pittsburgh.)

"A charming work, fit to be classed with 'Uncle Tom's Cabin;' it is indeed less a work of fiction. The volume is as valuable as a work of reference as it is agreeable, truthful and useful. Our young folks will not leave the hook, if they begin it, till they 'see how it turns out.'"—Cynosure, (Chicago, Ills.)

BATAVIA CONVENTION PAMPHLET.

A Staggering Blow!

Such was to Freemasonry the great NATIONAL CONVENTION held in BATAVIA, N. Y., September 1882. It gave the world

Thurlow Weed's Great Letter

On the abduction and murder of WILLIAM MORGAN in 1826, which has been the most widely published of any Anti-masonic document. The dedication of a noble granite monument to the memory of Morgan, and the able and eloquent addresses of the Convention make this a most valuable pamphlet.

SEE WHY.

It contains—
1. Portrait of Morgan.
2. Portrait of Thurlow Weed.
3. Fine picture of the Monument.
4. The great letter of Thurlow Weed and his affidavit—almost the last public act of his life.
5. Address by J. E. Roy, D.D.
6. The monument oration by Pres. C. A. Blanchard.
7. Addresses on "Christian Politics" by Pres. J. Blanchard, on the Character of Freemasonry by Prof. E. D. Bailey, on the "Freedmen and Secret Societies" by Rev. H. H. Hinman; and very interesting personal and historical reminiscences.

LUCILLE VERNON.

Cloth.....75 cents.

THIS is a pleasant surprise in many ways. The author is Rev. W. T. Meloy, of the United Presbyterian Church of Chicago, and the book is published by the Board of Publication of his denomination. It is a love story, not "fascinating," but with so much of genial interest that the reader is in no danger of laying it down unfinished. * * * The moral purpose of the book is to describe and vindicate Christian character, in its more heroic aspects, and it is a success. We congratulate the author and the United Presbyterian Board of Publication on this literary lily of the valley.—The Interior.

"LUCILLE VERNON" is evidently not an ideal sketch, but the fictitious names used represent to a great extent real men and women of flesh and blood. The characters of many of them are by no means attractive, but are perfect counterparts of querulous, obstinate and parsimonious professors who are thorns in the flesh of many a pastor in all the churches. But as in all the churches, there were also good and true men and women at Lansington, who upheld and encouraged the pastor. * * * In its author will be recognized the worthy pastor of the First United Presbyterian Church of Chicago, and a welcome contributor to these columns.—United Presbyterian.

The heroine, who becomes the bride of the pastor of the church at Lansington, is a wonderful exemplification of how a woman who is a true wife and help-meet may throw her life and energies into the great work of saving souls; aiding, by gentle words and sympathy, wise counsel and brave endurance, the husband having charge of a congregation where the Demon of Misrule held full sway. We follow with interest the history of the wife and husband through their hours of despondency and discouragement to the happy ending, where religion, harmony and peace have gained the ascendency and the good man and wife find their reward.—Pittsburgh Daily Telegraph.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

WASHINGTON.

Mr. Hearst, the new Senator from California, it is said, delivered a eulogy on his predecessor, Senator Miller, while in a state of intoxication, and to the disgrace of the U. S. Senate.

Mr. Gibson addressed the Senate on the subject of Mr. Platt's resolution regarding open executive sessions. Mr. Gibson denied that any necessity now existed for the discussion of treaties in secret. However desirable secrecy might have been in the early history of our Republic, it was no longer desirable.

The President has vetoed four private pension bills granting pensions to Dudley B. Branch, Louis Melcher, Edward Ayers, and James C. Chandler. The President gives his reason at length in respect to each case.

It is officially announced that President Cleveland will be married at the White House on Wednesday evening, June 2, to Miss Frances Folsom.

At the meeting of the House Committee on Education, Representative Miller, of Texas, introduced a substitute for the Blair Educational Bill. It appropriates $8,000,000 annually for ten years, to be distributed among the States and Territories according to the ratio of illiteracy as established by the census of 1880.

The bill agreed upon by the House Committee on Labor providing for the incorporation of trades unions is the work of Congressman O'Neill. The measure is asked for in the platform of the Knights of Labor and by the federation of the trades unions. An identical bill is upon the Senate calendar awaiting action.

The House Committee on Territories to-day formally directed that the Harrison bill for the admission of Dakota be reported adversely, and that the bill of Springer, providing and enabling act to admit the entire Territory, be favorably reported.

At the meeting of the House Committee on Labor, Mr. Daniels, of Virginia, was instructed at the first call of the committee to make a motion to set aside June 10 for the consideration of the substitute for the Blair Educational bill reported by the committee.

The bill to forfeit the land grant of the Atlantic and Pacific railroad, which passed the House and was reported from the Senate committee with amendments, was passed, and will now go to a conference committee. The bill provides that all lands except the right of way granted in 1866 adjacent to uncompleted portions of the main line are forfeited.

COUNTRY.

It is reported that at the recent G. A. R. election in New York, Department Commander Sayles was elected by fraudulent means.

A State conference of anti-saloon Republicans was held Wednesday at Trenton, N. J., at which resolutions were adopted approving of a strict enforcement of the existing laws, and averring that the party does not need the help of the saloons, but that "the country needs the help of the Republican party to combat the blighting curse of the saloon."

The Knights of Labor Convention at Cleveland, Friday, decided to increase the executive committee from five to eleven members. Permanent headquarters will be opened in Philadelphia, and, if necessary, the board will sit throughout the year. Mr. Powderly was authorized to recall the commissions of all organizers.

At a home-rule meeting in Columbus, Ohio, over which Governor Foraker presided, a large amount was contributed. Mr. Alexander Sullivan, of Chicago, was the principal speaker. A congratulatory cablegram was sent to Mr. Parnell by Governor Foraker.

A saloon run by a woman named Jenkins at Glendale, Ind., was burned by a mob Saturday night.

Four hundred employes of the Pennsylvania Tube Works at Pittsburg struck Thursday because a workman was discharged, and the mill was closed down.

The will of the millionare Tracy, husband of Agnes Ethel, the actress, is being contested by a daughter of his first wife, who was bequeathed but $100,000.

The Ohio Suffrage Convention, in session at Toledo, Thursday, elected officers, Mrs. Frances Casement, of Painesville, being chosen president. A resolution thanking the Inter-Ocean for publishing daily special reports of the proceedings was passed.

The Rev. A. E. Kittredge, pastor of the Third Presbyterian church, has resigned his position and accepted a call to a Reformed Presbyterian church in New York city.

The steel-plate engravings for illustrating the life of General John C. Fremont, which is now in course of publication by Belford, Clarke & Co., were not damaged in any way by the fire.

A special from Washington, Pa., to the Commercial Gazette says: "The Cameron oil well was drilled in to-day and started off at the rate of 165 barrels an hour. The flow increased during the afternoon to 193 barrels an hour or 5,000 barrels a day. This is one of the largest wells on record.

General Clinton B. Fiske was Thursday nominated for Governor by the New Jersey Prohibitionists.

Persons sinking an artesian well in the heart of Denver, Col., Friday, struck petroleum at a depth of 1,100 feet and a big flow is expected.

A mob attacked the Salvation Army at Beloit, Wis., Friday night, smashing their drums and instruments, and assaulting its members. The captain was placed in the jail to protect him from violence.

The Prohibitionists of Indiana held their State convention Wednesday at Indianapolis, and nominated a State ticket, the Rev. J. H Hughes, of Wayne county, being named for Secretary of State. The State central committee organized by selecting John Raeloff, of Grant county, chairman.

The new Edgar natural gas well and the Duff Well in Murraysville, Pa., are on fire, having been set by lightning. The flame from the former well reaches 200 feet into the air.

After services in Zion church at New York, Tuesday, the remains of Mrs. Alice Pendleton, who was killed by accident last Thursday, were temporarily interred in Woodlawn Cemetery.

The Illinois Congregational Association, in session at Moline, decided, Thursday, to hold the next meeting at Springfield. Temperance resolutions and a memorial to the State Legislature that the sale of tobacco to persons under 18 be prohibited were adopted. The President and Congress were also memorialized to pass stringent laws for the extermination of polygamy in Utah.

It is proposed to hold a centtennial exposition in Washington, D. C., on the one-hundredth anniversary of the adoption of the national constitution in 1889, and that the Central and South American States be specially invisted, and it is also proposed that this continue three years so as to include the four-hundredth anniversary of the discovery of America in 1892. The Congressional Record prints a map of the ground of the proposed exposition, and gives important statements showing the extent of commerce with those States.

The prompt passage of a law by the Rhode Island Legislature enforcing constitutioual prohibition is a most important as well as a most hopeful sign of progress in the temperance reform. So, too, is the important Prohibition Conventiou in New Jersey and the nomination of Gen. Clinton B. Fisk as Prohibition candidate for Governor of the State. Gen. Fisk has a national reputatiou as a Christiau, a philauthropist and a statesman. Like some other good men, we believe Gen. Fisk was once lured into the lodge, but have reason to think that his good sense has led him to discard and forsake its follies.

It took fifty-five policemen to aid the Calumet Iron Company in running four cars of nails from its track at Cummings to the Rock Island road. And this is after the lessons of the strikes, the boycotts, and the bomb-throwing. It illustrates the despotic power of these lodge combinations, their successful resistance to the law, and the patient endurance of a long-suffering people, that any association of men should be suffered so to interfere with legitimate business. Had one man undertaken to stop a train of cars, and it had required one policeman to arrest him and shut him up in the police station, he would have received no mercy; but when fifty-five are required, we may well question whether we have not unlawful combinations in our midst, which the whole power of the government shall not be able to suppress.

Under the head of "a startling episode" the Inter-Ocean gives an inside view of a meeting of the Select Knights of the Ancient Order of United Workmen. For once there was resistance to the despotic authority of the lodge, and the officers of the law, who were lodge members, were required to execute the commands of the Grand Commander of the State. This was forcibly resisted, and on failing to secure obedience, the said G. C. took their charter into his possession, and went out under the protection of the pistols of the policemen. The insubordinate members are declared to be all suspended from the order "for refusing to obey the commands of the Grand Commander, for riotous and unknightly conduct, and a malicious attempt ou the life of the Grand Commander." This declaration is signed by the Grand Recorder. We are greatly obliged to the Inter-Ocean and these grand officers for this inside view of the doings of these "brethren," and especially for the fact that our city police are not only sworn into this special fellowship, but are, as policemen, required to execute the laws of the order and the commands of the Grand Commander. How men who have sworn allegiance to two governments and two kinds of officers can be trusted in the execution of the laws of the city, is a mystery not explained. It is a still greater mystery how good citizens, and especially good Christians, can unite with, and help carry out a system that is at once despotic and subversive of the authority of the State.

The St Alban Legion, which is the department of the A. O. U. W, which instituted the aforesaid "episode," is one of the many secret organizations that are armed and drilled, as well as sworn to a system of secret government. There are many and their number is constautly increasing. They already include far more thau our open military organizations, and in drill and equipment are doubtless far superior. They all too have common objects and sympathies, and as against any influence or authority opposed to secret societies, would make common cause. We do not apprehend special danger from these military orders as such, for the rank and file have too great interest in the maintenance of good government to wish to subvert it. But it is not a pleasant thought that underneath and all around are host of armed bands sworn to an irrespousible despotism, and not sworn to this government. And it is an especially depressing reflection that their "mimicries of war" are educating our youth in loose notions of loyalty and in the business of humau butchery.

It is a little difficult to say whether it was malignant falsehood, or assanine stupidity that led the Conclave of the Knights of Labor at Cleveland to set forth as propositions, (1) that money ought to have a uniform value in all parts of the country, and (2) that it has not, since the rate of interest varies from two to twenty per cent. The logical conclusiou is, that Congress shall fix a uuiform rate at three per cent, and open a loan offiee in every county in the nation. Whatever faults there may be in our monetary system, want of uniformity in value is not one of them. There was a time when Western and Southern money was at a discount in New York, and New England money at a premium in Western eities. But this was under the system of State banks. Since the war we have had a national aud uniform currency. The rate of interest, too, has like any other commercial transaction, followed the law of supply and demand. With equally good security the rate has not been widely different. Some men who have taken tweuty per eent would have made a more profitable, because safer, investment at five. As a general fact, the rate of interest was never so low as at present. If it be lawful to take interest, the rate can no more be governed by law than the price of any other commodity. The law can protect the borrower from fraud and oppression, but it can no more determine what he shall pay, than what he shall eharge for a day's labor. When our national government undertakes to loan all borrowers all the money they want, at three or any other per cent, we shall speedily realize the condition of the Egyptians in the days of the famine, under the administration of Joseph. We are not so much in love with the theories of George, Most, Spies, etc., as to desire such a consummation.

THE DAUGHTER OF A KING.

She wears no jewel upon hand or hrow,
No badge hy which she may he known of men;
But though shc walk in plain attire now,
She is the daughter of a King; and when
Her Father calls her, at his throne to wait,
She will be clothed as doth hefit her state.

Her Father sent her in his land to dwell,
Giving to her a work that must be done;
And since the King loves all his people well,
Therefore she, too cares for them, every one.
And when she stoops to lift from want and sin
The hrighter shines her royalty therein.

She walks erect through dangers manifold,
While many sink and fall on either hand;
She dreads not summer's heat nor winter's cold,
For both are subject to the King's eommand;
She need not he afraid of anything,
Beeause she is the daughter of a King.

E'en when the angel comes that men call Death,
And name with terror—it appals not her;
She turns to welcome him with quickened breath,
Thinking it is the royal messenger.
Her heart rejoices that her Father calls
Her back to dwell within his palace walls.

For though the land she dwells in is most fair,
Set round with streams, a picture in its frame,
Yet often in her heart deep longings are
For that imperial palace whence she came,
Not perfect, quite, seems any earthly thing,
Because she is the daughter or a king.

THE SIN THAT SHALL NOT BE FORGIVEN AND CONNECTION WITH SECRET ORDERS.

BY REV. D. SIMON.

Earnest and devoted Christians will not be surprised to see the above heading. It seems to me they will rather be surprised, after taking a seeond thought, that these things have not been combined more frequently.

The facts which stare the Christian in the faee day after day must force upon him the conviction that there is a relation between the unpardonable sin and connection with a secret order.

We do not wish to be understood as entertaining the idea that connection with the lodge is necessarily the uupardonable sin. What we do hold, and what we shall endeavor to show in this treatise is, that connection with a secret order very frequently leads into the condition from which not even God is able to rescue him.

Let us endeavor first to understand the nature of the sin against the Holy Ghost.

It is a sin against better knowledge. This is evident from the connection in which Christ speaks of this sin. In Matthew 12, an account is given of a great wonder, Christ casting out a devil that was blind and dumb. The Pharisees knew from this miracle, as well as from others he had performed, that Christ was a teacher come from God, for, through Nicodemus they testified: "No man can do these miracles that thou doest, except God be with him." Now although they knew that Jesus was come from God, they accused him of beiug an instrument of the devil.

The miracle just performed was so evidently a demonstration of divine power, that all who heard and saw what was done must have been convinced that Jesus is of God, or that he is God. In spite of such inner conviction the Pharisees thiuk, and, amoug themselves, say, "This fellow doth not cast out devils, but by Beelzebub, the prince of devils." They knew better, but in their bitter opposition to Christ they renounee what they know to be true, and confess what they know to be false. They ascribed to the devil what they knew to be the power of God. This was blasphemy of the grossest kind.

These Pharisees were not open to conviction. When Jesus pointed out their sins they sought to kill him, and when he preached the truth respecting salvation, they hardened their hearts and refused to receive it.

They shut out of their souls the light that shineth in a dark place, and, therefore, all remained dark in their souls. They threw off all Gospel influence, for which reason that power of God unto salvation could not save them. They destroyed, for themselves, the passage of the Holy Spirit to their heart, namely, the Word of God. They banished the Holy Spirit from their presence, and despised the grace of God manifest in Christ.

The opposition to Christ and the Holy Spirit referred to here, was not that opposition found in the natural man, according to which he receiveth not the things of God, neither is able to know them, because they are spiritually discerned. Their opposition was not like that of Saul, who also persecuted Christ, but did so because, at the time, he knew no better. The sin of these Pharisees was Satanic in its nature. It originated in hell, and those guilty of it were Satan's willing subjects. They had done despite unto the Spirit of grace, and he had taken his last sad flight from them, never again to return. The sentence of eternal death has already been pronounced, and though still on earth they are fastened in the chains of eternal darkness, and no man or angel, nay, not even God, shall be able to release them from their hellish bondage. This is the terrible doom of those who blaspheme against the Holy Ghost.

But if we would rightly understand this Satanic sin, we must keep in mind that it is rather a condition than an act, or a condition into which a person is brought by degrees. By repeatedly sinning against better knowledge, and thus violating conscience, the heart of the individual gradually grows harder and harder, until eventually it has become so hard that it is past all influence for good. The curse of the law will fail to terrify, and the Gospel will fail to comfort them.

This will explain why the sin shall not be forgiven. In Hebrews 6, we are told that it shall be impossible to renew such blasphemers again unto repentance. But where repentance is no longer possible, there faith can never originate, and he that believeth not shall be damned.

The reason of non-forgiveness must then not be sought in God, or in a deficiency of his grace, or in this, that perhaps Christ's atoning death was not sufficient to cancel this sin. On the part of God there is nothing wanting. He wants all men to be saved, and to come to a knowledge of the truth. Jesus died once for all, and the Gospel is to be preached to all nations and to all creatures, that is, to every individual, and that with the sincere purpose of saving all men from everlasting ruin.

The difficulty lies with man. He refuses to be saved, and is not satisfied with the destruction of his own soul, but seeks the destruction of others, and blasphemes the God who often prevents and brings to naught his wicked counsels. The same sunshine and the same refreshing showers come upon the green and upon the dead timber. The green is revived, the dead rots, both under the same influence. So the same gracious influence proves a savor of death unto death, unto those who despise it, whilst it is the savor of life unto life, unto those who continue not to resist the Holy Spirit's influence.

Having now shown the nature of the sin that shall not be forgiven, we shall next endeavor to show that connection with a secret order may, and often does, occasion the commission of this sin.

The very entrance into a secret combination of men, and the assumption of obligations which cannot, in the very nature of the case, be understood at the time, is a sin against conscience. No intelligent Christian can enter a lodge without hearing within him that still, small voice, either saying, "Do it not," or asking the question, "Is it right?" Although satisfied that not all is right, he goes on, trying, as he goes in deeper and deeper, to train his conscience as he goes. He sees slight wrongs in every degree he takes, but as he ascends the ladder, (we should have said descends) the voice of conscience grows dimmer, until after awhile he becomes so thoroughly initiated that he ceases to feel the pangs of a disapproving conscience. He sees wrong there, but he sees wrong everywhere, and so he may be partaker of the evils perpetrated under the auspices of the lodge, and not be any worse than other people. He goes step by step, degree by degree. The whole course is a process of hardening, and so slyly is the whole work done that hundreds never realize what has been done until they are ushered into eternity.

That which hastens on the awful condition from which there is no escape, is the halo of solemnity thrown around all the proceedings, and the oaths or obligations required at every step. The Bible is used in many lodges for the purpose of removing all suspicion from the minds of Christians. Nothing can be wrong where the Bible is tolerated, yes, even used! This is the impression generally made by the presence of this blessed book. If people would only remember that the wolf at times wears sheep's clothing, and that Satan is frequently transformed into an angel of light, in order to practice deception on the souls of men!

But, lo, good men are pointed out to him, and whenever he begins to feel a little "shaky" respecting his lodge, he makes himself believe that all is right by the fact that so many good men, even ministers of the Gospel, are connected with the order.

Then his attention is called to the charity of the order, and how good it is to be charitable, and how pleasant to receive charity when in need.

By these outward appearances persons are lured into the lodge, and after in, actually prevented from looking at matters as they are.

To what extent the member of a secret order may be hardened against any and every influence outside of his lodge, is only too manifest. What Christian pastor, yea, what Christian, who has endeavored to rescue a soul from the snare of the lodge, has not repeatedly met individuals whose hearts were closed to all influence?

How frequently we are confronted with the remark: What do you know about the matter? or You don't know anything about the lodge. But suppose we happen to know something about it, and begin to speak about matters in an intelligent way, calling attention to some of their "private" affairs, and they begin to see that we know more than they had thought, they almost invariably get angry and want to hear no more from us. This is especially true when the one opposing the lodge has himself been a member of the lodge, and, therefore, testifies against what he has seen with his own eyes, and heard with his own ears. Those who have quit the lodge and now seek to save others from its snare are generally termed perjured villians. We would ask whether the same term would not apply with even greater force to those who vowed faithfulness to Christ and his church when they were received as members, and now bow the knee to the god of the lodge?

The influence of the lodge is against the influence of the church. Persons hitherto active in the church are drawn into the lodge. As their interest in the lodge increases, their interest in the church decreases. They begin to neglect public preaching, and after awhile quit altogether. They have their lodge services during the week, and it won't do to become too religious. An institution of men is thus preferred to God's institution. The Word and Sacraments are abandoned as useless things. How many thousands have thus been hardened against the church and the means of grace entrusted to her!

What accounts for the coldness and worldliness of so many congregations? The wide-awake Christian has no difficulty in seeing the cause of it. The pastor is a secretist, and many of the members of the church engage week after week with their pastor in Christless worship. They are trying to follow their pastor in the attempt to be for Christ on Sunday and against him during the week, in the attempt to gather with Christ and to scatter abroad. But, perhaps without being conscious of it, they are gradually weaned away from Christ and his church, or if they still continue, they have retained their church connection simply as a matter of form. They have become dead members of the church.

Professed Christians are frequently driven to the wall by the arguments presented against the lodge, and are necessitated to make the confession that the Christless prayers offered in the lodge are wrong, and that no Christian should offer such prayers. Many other things will also be admitted, but when we come with the divine requirement, "Come out from among them and be separate," they refuse to obey. Although convinced that their connection with the lodge is an open violation of Christian principles and disobedience towards God, they persist in their course because they expect an earthly gain in the lodge, Such conduct is sinning against better knowledge, a violation of conscience, and cannot otherwise than harden the heart. It is exceedingly dangerous to refuse to obey when God speaks in his Word. Every such refusal makes the heart harder, and if persisted in, the heart eventually becomes like the wayside and finally like a rock.

The tendency of lodge influence is to rock men to sleep spiritually. They get to be exceedingly indifferent and don't care what the Bible says, or what their pastor says, or what their true friends may say. Words spoken to them seem to be so much breath wasted, as if one had been speaking to one that is asleep or dead. We venture to say that the lodge has rocked more people to sleep in their sins, and deadened them to every sense of spiritual duty, than any other single influence.

Oh, that men would consider and escape before it is too late! Oh, that men would open their eyes and look, before they leap into the awful abyss!

Sometimes we think we have almost gained the day, a soul is almost rescued, and lo, when we speak with that individual after a few days again, we find that he is in the lodge as deep as ever, and that all our work must be done over, with perhaps no better results. Christian pastors have had patience with such persons for years without getting them out of the lodge. Almost, but not altogether. That word almost, frequently covers the most abominable hypocrisy. They want to avoid the reproof of earnest Christians, and, therefore, hide themselves behind the appearance of being almost out of the lodge. Oh, the hardness of such hearts!

It even occurs that men will apparently withdraw from the lodge, have no outward connection, and, if questioned as to their relation to the lodge, affirm that they are not members, and yet all the while continue as members of the lodge. All this outward show is intended to deceive the Christian pastor and the church. Oh, that such people would consider that, whilst it is possible to deceive men, they will not be able to deceive God, whose eyes are as a flame of fire!

And now tell me why is it that so little can be accomplished with secretists, why is it that so few come out from among them and are separate, why is it that God's Word has so little effect upon them, why is it that so many sink down into unbelief and wickedness who before were Christians? We ask, Is their awful condition not described in Hebrews 6: 2? "It is impossible for those who were once enlightened, and have tasted of the heavenly gift, and were made partakers of the Holy Ghost, and have tasted the good Word of God, and the powers of the world to come, if they shall fall away, to renew them again unto repentance; seeing they crucify to themselves the Son of God afresh, and put him to an open shame. For the earth which drinketh in the rain that cometh oft upon it, and bringeth forth herbs meet for them by whom it is dressed, receiveth blessing from God; but that which beareth thorns and briars is rejected, and is nigh unto cursing, whose end is to be burned."

And in conclusion, let such persons heed the peals of thunder which sound from the Word of God (Heb. 10): "For if we sin wilfully after that we have received the knowledge of the truth, there remaineth no more sacrifice for sins, but a fearful looking for of judgement and fiery indignation, which shall devour the adversaries. He that despised Moses's law died without mercy under two or three witnesses: of how much sorer punishment, suppose ye, shall he be thought worthy, who hath trodden under foot the Son of God, and counted the blood of the covenant, wherewith he was sanctified, an unholy thing, and hath done despite unto the Spirit of grace? For we know him that hath said, Vengeance belongeth unto me, I will recompense saith the Lord. And again, The Lord shall judge his people. It is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God."

BLASPHEMY.

BY K. A. O.

"Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain," is thundered forth from Mount Sinai by God himself in the third commandment, and under the law given to Moses, the penalty for blasphemy was death by stoning. That law of God has never been repealed, and still stands in its full force with the great Law-giver. Notwithstanding the penalty is not executed, it is still in reserve for those who persist in its violation.

In our day in all places, except, perhaps, in the sanctuary, our ears are filled with the cursing and profanity of old and young, of rich and poor, of males, and, too often, females, have fallen so low as to utter the vile oaths. On the street, in the shops, and office and business places, in all public parks and places of pleasure resort, these unholy sounds are filling the ears of our pure-minded men, women and innocent little ones, and often their little lips are trying to repeat the words long before they know their meaning or nature. Is there no way to prevent this evil, and must this infection go on unchecked and unheeded?

We appoint boards of health and establish quarantine measures for the protection of our communities against cholera, yellow fever and small-pox, and at the same time provide no barrier to the still more deadly malady to the moral health and well-being of our citizens. No person has a right to utter an oath or an obscene word in the hearing of others any more than he has a right to scatter the virus of small-pox or cholera indiscriminately in a community. In a few years there has been much said and written upon the subject of obscene literature, and some noble men have come to the front in defence of our homes against this flood of iniquity, and great efforts are being made to prevent such literature passing through the mails, which is a grand advance in the right direction. But I ask in all candor, which is the most demoralizing, for my child to quietly sit and read a vile book, or have the same thoughts communicated to it by word of mouth and coming in contact with those sowing such seeds of death?

Profanity and obscenity are twin sisters, and God has stamped the former with his greatest disapprobation, saying they shall be put to death, and no such penalty for the latter, although the apostle says, "Let no corrupt communication proceed out of your mouth."

We are living in the age and land of profanity. The system of taking unlawful and profane oaths has become so prevalent a man is often anathmaatized unless he can give satisfactory evidence that he has taken these oaths and bound himself under death penalties to keep a companion's secret, criminal or otherwise, and asking God to help him keep the same. Is it any wonder that the ungodly feel justified in profanity, when from time to time they mingle with professed Christians in giving and taking these blasphemous oaths in the lodge at low twelve? We are thus educating a generation of blasphemers, and many a (so-called) Christian and too many ministers of the Gospel of him who "ever spake openly and in secret said nothing," are aiding in this great abomination either by words of sanction or by their silence when they should cry aloud and spare not, showing God's people their sins in this respect.

Christ gives us this commandment: "I say unto you, swear not at all, but let your communications be yea and nay only." So we see that profanity is thus condemned by God's word, and there is no escaping the penalty except by hearty repentence and forsaking all such violation of his commandments.

LAWLESSNESS—ABUSE.

BY C. E. WALKER.

The Christian people who worship at Zion church, Twin Brooks township, Grant county, Dakota, having organized the Twin Brooks Auxiliary of the National Reform Association, chose a "committee on Sabbath Observance," and instructed this committee to give notice that such committee exists for the purpose of enforcing the law on "Sabbath breaking." (Dakota has as good law, perhaps, for the protection of the Sabbath as can be found.)

Instances of Sabbath desecration had been somewhat frequent, but as soon as notices calling attention to the law were posted, arrangements were made to violate the law by public sports (ball-playing) on the Sabbath.

One of the committee, Geo. A. Gunn, waited upon the boys (who ought be men, as they range in age from nineteen to twenty-eight years, some of them married), on the ball-ground on Sabbath, and kindly urged them to desist from playing, and invited them to church. (One man said whenever he did go to our church the preacher insulted him, alluding to opposing secretism.)

The boys play ball on the Sabbath, and within a mile of two places of worship. (The law of Dakota provides that no public sports shall be indulged in within a mile of religious services at any time.)

They were arrested; two plead "guilty," and were assessed a fine of one dollar each and costs; there being some inaccuracies in the papers, the others were allowed to go clear.

A notice was inserted in the Grant County Review to the effect that there would be a "champion game of base-ball" at a place named, within one mile of places holding church service, and on Sunday. The ruffians have been as good [evil] as their declared intentions; they have played ball two or three Sabbaths since—say they will continue to do so. Nothing is at present being done to stop the iniquity; but planting being about done, the farmers—only a few of them in the vicinity, though—will see to the matter a little more closely.

The Milbank Index came out with two striking notes against the anarchy, which editorials struck into the minds of some of the lawless ones deep enough to make them try to reply through the Twin Brooks correspondent of the Review, who signs himself "Sunbeam" (J. A. McGovern), and enters into a shameful tirade against H. M. Woodard, the justice before whom the boys were brought for trial, and also abuses A. W. Van Alstine, or endeavors to do so, by calling him names, all of which indicates what "Sunbeam" is.

He makes a drive at the character of all of those who are disposed to put down lawlessness, and says he ("Sunbeam") will do as he pleases on Sundays.

Some one (no name signed; only an asterisk used, but thought to be McGovern) has written a defamatory communication to the Review, abusing the writer of this article in a way that few persons would do; not many could be found so low down as to use such language and tell such absolute falsehoods as are found in the communication referred to.

Threats have been made that the U. B.'s would be buried, and "revenge" is loudly talked of, and all because we have asked that the Sabbath laws be kept.

While the writer certainly encourages the work of the committee, he has had no direct hand in enforcing the laws, but has made it a point in the discharge of duty to preach against the evils of the community, card-playing, dancing, Sabbath desecration and the lodge, distributed Anti-Masonic tracts, and talked with Masons about their anti-Christian religion, the lodge devil has rose up to crush the writer; but, praises to God, my people are with me, and we are on the Lord's side, and two of the M. E.'s, Brother and Sister T. A. Falls, are with us in the Lord's work of caring for the Sabbath.

Several correspondents in the county are taking up this question, and we shall see the lawlessness put down, ere long.

INFLUENCE OF A GODLESS CONSTITUTION.

The irreligious influence exerted by our National Constitution in its present form is illustrated by the following story from the Washington correspondence of the Chicago Inter-Ocean. The date of the occurrence is not given. The confession of sin and the petition for mercy and saving grace which the officiating minister had offered were evidently such as are appropriate in any company of worshipers. What we ask Christian men to note is the blasphemer's appeal to the constitution. This appeal is made continually by the enemies of our national Christianity. We ask every earnest and thoughtful man: Ought a Christian people to leave their fundamental constitution as a weapon in the hands of the enemies of religion? Can American Christians afford to do so? Here is the story:

Old Governor McCreery was not a religious man, and did not have much respect for religion. He preferred a race-horse to a church, and a mint julep to a hymn-book. One morning Mr. Sutherland, who was the chaplain of the Senate, had some distinguished divine as a guest, and invited him to officiate in his place on that day. The stranger, not having ever enjoyed the honor before, thought he would make the most of the case, and delivered a very fervent prayer, which was intended for the spiritual benefit of the Senators. There was more truth than compliment in his utterances, and at the conclusion of his prayer, Senator McCreery sent to the clerk's desk a resolution.

Mr. McDonald, who was then chief clerk of the Senate, always read over documents to himself carefully before he reported them to the Senate, and it was fortunate that he had this habit in this case. He took the resolution which Mr. McCreery sent to the desk, read it over, colored up to his ears, and turning around, held a whispered conversation with Mr. Ferry, who was in the chair.

Mr. Ferry declared at once that the resolution of the Senator from Kentucky was not in order. Mr. McCreery demanded that it should be read, and there was a little breeze, in which the chair conquered, as it usually does on such occasions.

Several Senators rushed up to the desk to see what the paper was about, and it was afterward passed around quite freely. It was a series of whereases, which set forth that the gentleman who had just occupied the floor did not address his remarks to the president of the Senate, as required by the rules, but to a being not recognized by the constitution of the United States, and entirely unknown to that body; and

Whereas, In the remarks of the gentleman, he asserted that the Senate of the United States was composed of men who were weak and sinful, and wanting in Christian grace; and

Whereas, If these remarks were true, the persons so described were unfit to represent the several States or to frame laws for the people; therefore be it

Resolved, That the Committee on Privileges and Elections be instructed to summon before them at once the person who had offered the prayer, and compel him to prove the truth of his assertion or retract them.

The effect, and the design of the profane author of this screed, and of its re-publication as a good joke in the secular journals, is to throw contempt on evangelical religion and to bring the custom of prayer in our legislative assemblies into popular disfavor. And when, as the result of such attacks this honored usage shall have been generally abolished as it has been already in some of our legislatures, our practice will have been drawn into harmony, in this respect, with our written constitution. —Christian Statesman.

MISSIONS AND COMMERCE.

From an admirable series of articles by the Rev. Young J. Allen, of Shanghai, China, in the St. Louis Christian Advocate, we gather the following interesting reflections:

"Modern commerce comprises and wields the mightiest body of human power that can be found in our world, and it is now concentrating all its lines of influence and intercourses, whether by land or sea, on China, and is thereby forcing this ancient, all-populous and long isolated country into immediate relations with Christendom. It was not to be supposed that a country so advantageously located, so extensive as to territory, so populous and so richly endowed by nature, and, moreover, offering so many rewards to commerce, should remain unknown, or when known should fail to concentrate upon itself the full force and volume of western enterprise. Accordingly in these latter days we see the Eastern question so long confined to Turkey and the southeast of Europe, transferred to China and the southeast of Asia, while the doctrine of the balance of power, formerly limited to Europe, has also made an equal remove and is now established in the far East. But that is not all. China is now the goal of commercial enterprise, and whether starting from Europe eastward, or from America westward, all its lines seek to terminate in China. Overland or by sea they come—through Canada, through the United States, through Central America, through Russia, through Central Asia, Persia, India, and Burmah, and from out every sea, and every year the race between the competing nations excites a keener interest, a more determined advance—which will not be deterred by barriers of nature or obstructions of man. The demands of a country so large, the wants of a people so numerous and the efforts to reach and satisfy them, have set two continents on the qui vive and are now taking their capacity of production and transport. Already the import and export trade of England exceeds 85 dollars per capita, while that of America is more than 25; but what does that signify when it is known that in China and her dependencies there are 400 millions of people as yet barely acquainted with the products of western industry, as is evidenced by the fact that their import and export trade barely exceeds half a dollar per capita or say 200 million annually. It is to reach such an Eldorado as that, that commerce calls to her assistance all the skill and resources of western capital and labor, invention and discovery, and sets all her enginery in motion.

"But ignorance and superstition in China, resolutely refusing to commerce a transit or a welcome thoroughfare, has brought commercial enterprise there to a disastrous standstill. And thus, surrounded on all sides by an untold wealth of new material, or untold resources, and an eager market for all her commodities awaiting the sight of her products, yet unable to reach or supply the other, because, forsooth, the people are too ignorant or too superstitious to provide the transport, and forbidden to take the matter into her own hands, as she fain would do, Commerce, Queen of the seas, finds herself in China transformed into another Tantalus in Tartarus." The writer draws a striking illustration from what occurred during the famine of 1878 and '79. It is estimated some six to ten millions of the population perished—perished ignominiously almost in sight of plenty, which could not reach them because there were no edequate means of transportation. Commerce lent its aid and by the help of benevolent contributions from all parts of the world piled up rice almost literally mountain high, at the nearest port, with nothing but donkeys to transport it to the smitten districts, what was taken was consumed enroute, while the donkeys themselves had to be slain because there was not food to bring them back again for a second load. One railroad would have rescued many millions, yet even in the face of famine, ignorance and superstition refused to sanction its construction.

A knowledge of the true religion sweeps away effectually all these barriers to the free and profitable intercourse of mankind. The missionary is the best pioneer of commerce. Missionary efforts have created new fields for enterprise and opened up whole peoples to intercourse with other nations. And commerce, in turn, makes way for religion. "By its irresistible force, its persistent energy, its ubiquitous presence, its aggressive spirit and the tremenduous pressure behind it, together with the pervading yeast-like activity of the colonies of living ideas which it has introduced, commerce is surrounding, impressing, leaveuing and moving all this mighty compound mass of humanity, knowu as China. It is a mighty factor in one of the greatest physical, intellectual and moral revolutions ever known in the history of nations; and this fact erects its bearings on the missionary euterprise into a subject of such momentous concern to the church."

VACATION NOTES.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 24.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—The Congregational pastors held their annual meeting this afternoou in parlor A. Palace Hotel. From twenty to twenty-five were present. Through the good offices of Rev. John Kimball, editor of the Pacific, and Pastor Witler, of the Olivet church, the lodge question was to be discussed in its relation to the Christian church. Several present were not pastors; two were ladies. Dr. J. M. Gibson, of the First United Presbyterian church, came in at my invitation. Gen. O. O. Howard had a few days before gone to Oregon on business connected with his military department. He kindly sent me word regretting the necessity of his absence. Gen. S. A. Chapin, a veteran of our Black Hawk war in Illinois, had also purposed to be present, but was out of the city on business at the time. He afterward said he might not have agreed altogether with me, yet regretted not to have heard the argument.

After listening to a paper, which I had prepared with very indifferent opportunity, the discussion went round with three minutes for each speaker. Rev. W. C. Pond, of the Bethany church, belonged to no secret church, therefore he thought he knew uothing about them, and did not believe in wholesale denunciation, but preferred by preaching Christ to keep men out of the orders. Dr. Gibson was next, and in a firm, incisive, conscieutious way that carried conviction, gave his objection to the lodge. Rev. Mr. Roall, of the Seamen's chapel, spoke with much warmth of the power of secretism for harm to the churches, and urged the duty of pastors to instruct and warn their congregations, and especially their young men. With his view substantially agreed Rev. Mr. Gulick, who was present from New Mexico and the South; Rev. Prof. Dwinell, D. D., of the Theological Seminary, whose candor and sound judgment seemed to have much respect; Rev. Walter Frear, of the West Oakland church, whose approval of the sentiments of the paper was emphatic and clear; Rev. Drs. Kimball, of the Pacific, and Beckwith, of the Third church; Rev. Mr. Cooke, the young pastor of the Tenascal church, Oakland; and Rev. W. W. Scudder, of the Orlameda church, who, in spite of his youthful appearance, preaches with grace and modest dignity over the conference. Mr. Scudder, and a brother present, are nephews of Dr. Scudder, of Plymouth church, of Chicago, and grandsons of the famous missionary to Ceylon, whose children and children's children have with singular devotion followed him into the work of Gospel ministry. Mr. Scudder told us that his grandfather, as he was setting out for Ceylon, was persuaded to join the lodge by mistaken friends, who thought an arm of flesh would help that of the Lord in times of danger. He went once or twice, and was convinced that no Christian had any business there; and so warned his sons of its iniquity. Rev. F. S. Witter and E. C. Oakley were not present during the discussion, but personally expressed their objection to the orders.

Rev. Geo. Morris, who spoke with German accent, objected to any interference with the Good Templars or Sons of Temperance, of which he was a member. An elderly gentleman, uot a pastor, assailed the paper as false. As a Mason, he knew there could be no revelation of the order, of which the beloved Washington was so eminent a patron. A Judge Terry announced himself as an Odd-fellow, and defended that order. The objections to Masonry might be all right, but respecting his order they were untrue. Dr. Beckwith said that the most unaccountable thing to him was that such brethren as these, whom he believed to be Christians, could belong to such societies. Another pastor, whose name I remember as Elroy, bore a noble testimony after the above remarks had been made. He had been led into the lodge, but when he was converted he left it with his other sins. So there seemed to be a practical agreement among the pastors present, with the exception of Mr. Morris. This was encouragement beyond all expectation, and my soul responded in praise to God.

A reporter of the Chronicle, the daily of largest circulation in San Francisco, asked for a copy of the paper for publication, saying that in college he belouged to an anti-fraternity society. The aged Freemason, after meetiug, aeknowledged that he had uever read Masonic works, and seemed to be utterly ignorant both of the literatnre of Masoury and its opponents. He said Pres. Finuey was a perjurer if he revealed Masoury, and when it was shown to him that in using that word he also was revealing Masoury, he quibbled and prevaricated—a sad picture for a professor of Christianity.

WEDNESDAY, May 26.—I have just found Rev. R. N. Johnson, of the Reformed Presbyterian Chinese Mission, in Oakland. He lives in a handsome cottage upon one of the beautiful hills of Highland Park ou the limits of Oakland city. It was his greatest desire to have been present at the Palace Hotel meeting, but he was that day called away to sacrament. He sends his Christian greetings to Pres. C. A. Blanchard, and hopes if he or auy other of the representatives of our reform come to this city, word may be sent him in time to arrange for effective meetings. Bro. Johnston is personally acquainted with many of the pastors of San Francisco aud Oakland, and was well pleased to learn that so many were in sympathy with him on the lodge question. He spoke with especial esteem of Prof. Dwinell and Drs. Kimball and Beckwith; and also of Rev. John Thompson, for many years Bible agent on this coast, but now with broken health tarrying for a season at San Diego. Him he regards as a "gem of a man," true to Christ on all public questions. I had learned with pleasure during my first visit here that Mr. Thompson was opposed to all secret orders, and admonished young men to keep clear of them.

From Visalia, after a week's experience of the restful hospitality of Bro. T. E. Kennedy and his wife, my journeying began again toward the South on the 14th. All day the flashing arms of steel drove us onward past waving grain fields fast ripening; past sheep and cattle ranches that stretched away for miles; past plains of flowers aud the sandy beds of rivers, whose waters had been quaffed dry by irrigating canals and a burning sun; past deserts of grease-wood and sage-brush, and mountain spurs pushing in from either side bar the way, until, with two great Mogul engines of six and eight drive-wheel power, we halted in a romantic valley at Calliente to get breath for a mountain climb over one of the most remarkable stretches of engineering in the country. Far above on the mountain side we could trace the iron way cut into the rock in most impossible directions. Five times we doubled back on our course, plunging through frequent tunnels, clinging to rocky paths far above deep canons, always panting up—up—until we surrounded a mountain in a circle of some three-fourths of a mile, and cross our former track, where it plunges into a tunnel eighty feet below. Curving upward still, after a time this famous loup is seen far below, like a panorama. Soon comes Mojave (Mo-have) and its desert, stretching away for 250 miles across the State. This immense dry plain furnishes the people of Los Angeles a comparison. "As dry as the Mojave desert" is their word for anything inexpressably dry or hot. But the desert is far from barren, though its distant sand hills seen across the gleaming heated plain promise nothing but unfruitfulness. We run through scattered forests of the yucca palm, whose bark, from a trunk some eight inches in diameter and ten to fifteen feet high, supplies an excellent material for paper. Large quantities are shipped to England.

At Los Angeles Rev. J. M. Hervey, pastor of the United Presbyterian church, is more than all others engaged in our reform. His people have just completed a new church, but he is himself attending the General Assembly at Pittsburgh. I made the acquaintance of several of his members, who were cordial in their indorsement of the Cynosure. There is a holiness church in East Los Angeles, which disfellowships secretism, and one or two Seventh day Advent and a Lutheran congregation. There are other brethren connected with the Pentecost and the Cullis Mission on San Pedro street. With a little effort these brethren might be gathered into quite a reform constituency, and with the Friends and holiness people at Pasadena could set a light for God against the lodge darkness of Southern California. I hope Bro. Hervey will attend the annual meeting, and consult about this matter. I have written urging him to do so.

Captain A. D. Wood, who gave up the sea for the temperance ship, is publishing the Censor in Los Angeles. I became acquainted with him in San Francisco, and that brief acquaintance was ripened into esteem for the kindness and earnestness of this brother. He has been an active Good Templar, and a member, possibly, of other secret societies, but has come to the wise conclusion that the time has come for open work in reform, and he will henceforth work with the W. C. T. U.

A day with Bro. T. K. Bufkin, of the Friends church, Pasadena, and another on the beach at Santa Monica, closed my visit in Southern California. The forenoon will long be remembered for its pleasure and its profit. With Brother and Sister Bufkin I visited three children of old John Brown, of Ossawatomie, whom I was surprised to learn were here at the foot of the mountains, a few miles from Pasadena. Sarah Brown, I knew, had given up her place in the U. S. mint here to a Democratic administration, and had retired to her mother's farm on the mountains near Saratoga in the Santa Clara valley; but Owen, I supposed, was at Put-in-Bay, Ohio. Here, however, we found Owen, Jason and his family of two generations, and Mrs. Simmons, a sister. They have entered land on a high plateau at the foot of the Sierra Madre range, and with water from the canons are constructing a little paradise of their own. Owen has a 160-acre claim on the summit of the first range 1,500 to 2,000 feet above the sea. It is a half-day's climb to reach it. In a long conversation with him I learned surely of his father's seceding from Masonry, and purpose to publish an exposition for the protection of his fellow men, but Morgan got the work out first. A long climb up the mountains, until the beautiful San Gabriel valley, the San Jacinta mountains beyond, Los Angeles with its groves, the San Fernando valley, the San Pedro range, the sea and the Catalena islands far out in the blue ocean—all lay spread like a map before us. Few outlooks on earth can furnish such a panorama. Then plunging into Millard's canon, we scrambled over miles of rocks and fallen trees, crossing an hundred times the crystal torrent, and stopping a space to admire a beautiful cascade of some 80 feet, we reached again the habitations of men. The kiud hospitality of Bro. Bufkin's home only could exceed the pleasures of such a day. H. L. K.

TO THE WORKINGMEN OF WASHINGTON, D. C.

We learn that the teachings of the American concerning the Knights of Labor have aroused bitterness among the strikers of this city, who naturally infer that their order is unfairly assailed. Not with any expectation of mollifying the feelings of those who may be unreasonable, but hoping to be understood by fair-minded men, we beg to address a few words to the workmen of this city.

1. To laboring men we claim relationship. From a salary of $5 a month as "scrub" we have past along the common road—$5 a month, $12, $15, $35, $50, $60, $75 and $150—these figures represent the ladder by which we climbed. As poor as the poorest and industrious as the most industrious, there is no part of the poor man's experience aud hardships with which we are not perfectly familiar, and even to this day we are not removed from this lot.

2. When working at a trade we came in contact with a trade union and kept out of it, though pressed beyond measure to join it. When a strike occured we remained at our post performing the old duties and refused to take advantage of an offer to fill a striker's place at an increase of 63 per cent in salary, not wishing to injure our fellow-workmen though wholly disapproving of their course. At the end of six weeks the strikers all saw their folly and the wisdom of our council to them.

3. We believe the laboring classes are at great disatvantage as compared with capitalistss and we have written constantly and earnestly in condemnation of the greed of corporations and monopolies. There is legislation urgently needed to check the merciless career of the wealthy and encourage the poorer classes.

4. It is not true, however, that the laboring people are serfs, "that they are ground to powder," that they cannot rise unless a revolution is produced, etc., etc., etc. The business enterprise of this country is in the hands of men who commenced life as common laborers and who have gained positions of honor and comfort by industry and frugality. With all their disadvantage, tens of thousands of laborers are forehanded.

5. A part of the distress among working people may be traced to their own folly or wickedness. Bad habits, a lack of industry and poor management are the causes of much poverty. True labor reformers should give due weight to such facts and devote themselves to a correction of the evil.

6. There is nothing wrong in the organiziug of laborers into associations to promote their interests. But unless such associations are rightly organized and aim at righteous ends by righteous means, there will always be more damage than good. We believe this to be the case with the Knights of Labor, and for the following reasons:

1. No good cause should swear its advocates to secrecy. Whatever is right to be done should be done opeuly and above board. We have heard all the apologies offered for the secrecy, and it has no weight with us whatsoever. The cause of the laboring people is being damaged by its cover of secrecy.

2. There are radical errors in the philosophy, so to speak, of the trades unions. They do not give sufficient importance to the value of good morals and pure religion in elevating themselves. They treat their problem as if it were purely financial, whereas it is equally intellectual and spiritual. A spirit of irreligion borderiug on atheism and tending toward socialism pervades the trades unions. This statement will, of course, be denied by many, but the proof is too ample to admit of doubt.

3. We particularly object to the prevailing notion that the exercise of force is the only method of reaching deserved results. "We'll show you" is the common spirit. There is an asspumption that more can be accomplished by war than by peace. It is not true. The reverse is true.

4. It is a sin, a crime against human rights, to force out of employment all workmen who for any reason are not members of unions. Societies which thus ignore the rights of others cannot expect a Christian people's endorsement. The idea is repugnant to every sense of right. It is unchristian, ungenerous, inhuman and sinful. It is a species of oppression not exceeded by the greatest tyrant that ever sat on a throne. There are men in this city, as capable workmen, as worthy men, and with necessities equal to other meu, who are almost driven from the field and brought to the verge of despair by unionists.

Did ever capitalist oppress employes more? And what better is such oppression in the one case than in the other? A man with a family to support, living in South Washington, obtained a job after long trial, when straightway the union men threw down their tools, refusing to work until he was discharged. In every place the same result followed and to-day his family is meagerly supported by the wife and mother, who takes in sewing. There is no defence for such a course, and Christian men, who feel a common sympathy with their fellowmen and who love them as Christ loves us, should withdraw immediately from a society which requires such treatment.

5. There are other objections to the unions but the foregoing are sufficient to account for the things we have said against them. If any laboring men think we do not represent them fairly we would like nothing so well as a visit from them, and we promise to treat their claims candidly and kindly.—American.

REFORM NEWS.

KNIGHTS TEMPLAR IN SCRANTON, PA.

I arrived in Scranton, Pa., the day followiug the great gathering of the Knights Templars. It was reported a huge affair. Over seven thousand were reported as members of their order in Pennsylvania. The report is that their parade drew more spectators than anything else heretofore in Scranton. Rev. L. D. Southworth aud I took a stroll over the busiest part of two streets. We took it for granted that the most euthusiastic of the order would manifest their attachment for their "sublime" nonsense, by red and black crosses, squares, compasses, etc. We found, over the part inspected, the symbols in the front of nine business houses and sixteen rum-holes! How significaut, and how sad to see the cross as an emblem thus shamefully prostituted! I have been informed that this order uses the name of Jesus, and that the Masons of lower degrees do not. But of what use is the name of Jesus when their principles are such that rumsellers do not object to advertise for them? I have no doubt that Jesus abominates such hypocrisy. It so thoroughly deceives many, because they make such pretenses to goodness, and there are so few ministers who dare shed light on these shallow pretenses. Think of taking oath after oath contrary to Jesus Christ's teaching, and actualy dropping his name from prayers and Scriptures, then takiug another and perhaps worse oath than the former, and then to further deceive by hollow pretense recognize the name of Jesus in such a manuer that even rumsellers can endorse them. Jews, rumsellers, Roman Catholics and Freemasous never love my preaching, for I make too much of the name of Jesus. His religion is exclusive to the extreme. In a noble sense it is intolerant. It does not tolerate worshiping at any other shrine. "Him only shalt thou serve." One of the Roman Emperors was willing to put Christ's name into the lists of gods, But when told that to receive Jesus Christ is also to reject all others, he would have nothing to do with him. One great objection to Freemasonry is the sad mixture of heathenism and religion of the good(?) and bad. A mixture of all kinds of food is not palitable no matter how good they may be separate. The religion of Jesus is good. It is the best thing in the world. It is the supreme necessity. I want mine clean and clear, without a mixture of puerility and heathenism. In fact we can have it in no other way. Wheu I see so many evils in lodgery, I do not wonder that Jesus warned us that when they say; "He is in the secret chamber: believe them not." I for one do not believe them. Yours for the war against the Secret Empire.

A LODGE APOLOGIST.

SAVANNAH, Ga., June 1, 1886.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—I received some copies of the Christian Cynosure, for which accept my many thanks. I am very grateful to the unknown friend that has paid for the paper to come to me. I am alwas glad to see both sides of a question. I may be pardoned for my stupidity, but I am forced to acknowledge that I fail to see how secret societies "profane the name of Christ," especially the society that your paper appears to be aimed at, viz., Masonry. I am of the opinion that this time-honored institution presents a fine record of charitable deeds. It has done much to ameliorate the condition of mankind. This institution is composed of some of our very best men. We should condemn very carefully, if at all, an institution that is composed of men who are as humble and conscientious as we are, and who labors just as hard for the advancement of the Redeemer's cause and kingdom. I appreciate the zeal of your paper. I must be ready and willing to defend the cause of Christ at all times aud under all circumstances. These secret societies may not be doing all the harm we imagine, especially those of us who are not members of them. A thing is not necessarily bad because we don't know it, any more than a man is necessarily bad because we don't know him. We know that much money that linger in the treasuries of some of these societies might be used to advance the cause of Christ. This is wrong, but I don't know that this is "profanity."

There are many Christian societies that are doing incalculable good, whose working may be a secret to thousands. It seems to me that it would be harsh to chide them simply because we don't know their grips, counter-signs and pass-words. Their word should, it seems, be the standard by which they should be judged. If these secret societies are banded together to do harm to the cause of Christ and mankind, as the Knights, I should want to vote a thousand times, "away with them." But if they be as the good Samaritan or as the oue that the disciples reported to Christ of casting out devils, I should say let them alone, "They that are with us, are not against us." There are many ladies' sewing societies, and they are doiug much good. If societies are organized to protect each other, to help each other iu sickness, and to bury each other, it is hard for me to see that they "profane the name of Christ." If they help themselves only, we may justly call that selfishness, but hardly "profanity." I am frank to coufess that I am of the opinion if the Christian church does its duty, that it could and would supply every need of mankind. Even now there are mauy organizations that call themselves churches that are merely societies. From reading the New Testament I get the opinion that Christ established one church. If this is true, then whatever he did not establish is not a church proper, and therefore may be a society—but must humbly acknowledge the great good many of them have done and are doing. I beg pardon, while I humbly differ. Yours, for more light, E. K. LOVE.

NOTE.—We give place to the above because we wish to deal fairly with every institution, and especially because we think our correspondent needs enlightenment. He evidently has not made these societies a matter of investigation.

Any religious worship profanes the name of Christ that studiously ignores his existence and mediatorial character. Freemasonry proper, that is, in the first seven degrees of the order, teaches men to worship, and that they may acceptably worship without either the confession of sin, the invocation of the Holy Spirit, or any mention of the Divine Mediator. In the many forms of prayer that are used in these degrees these essential elements of real worship are omitted. It is a fundamental law of Masonry that "all prayers must be of a general character, and contain nothing offensive to any conscientious Mason"—that in theory the whole Masonic world is present at each lodge meeting, and that all ceremonies are to be directed accordingly. (See Webb's Monitor, by Robt. Morris, p. 284.) As a Masonic lodge contains, in theory at least, Jews, Mahommedans, and Pagans, and as they conscientiously reject Christ as a Divine Saviour, his name must be ignored. This is profanation of both the Son and the Father, for "He that honoreth not the Son honoreth not the Father." This is the sin of sins that men should purposely ignore the Lord that brought them. But, second, men profane the name of Christ when they connect it with blasphemous ceremonies. In the Knights Templar degree every candidate at the time of his initiation drinks wine from a portion of a human skull, and declares that "as the sins of the whole world were laid on the Redeemer, so may the sins of the person whose skull this was be laid on me in addition to my own, if I ever violate this my obligation as a Knight Templar." This is absolute blasphemy.

Again, no institution presents "a fine record of charitable deeds" that consumes four-fifths of its income iu running expenses. Masonry, by its own statistics, consumes in its mere machinery more than four-fifths of all that is paid in. Such an institution may incidentally benefit some, just as lotteries and rum-selling do, but like them, it is a terrible incubus on society. Again, an institution may include men who are honorable and conscientious, and yet be bad. Many slaveholders were honest and conscientious, and yet we do not hesitate to condemn the system of slavery. We do uot make war on Christian societies, but no Christian society initiates its members by hidden mysteries, and swears them to secrecy and unconditional obedience, and no secret society is engaged in distinctively Christian work. No secret society that we are aware of makes Christian character a condition of membership, and if a Christian society were to become secret in the sense of Freemasonry or Oddfellowship, it would become a hissing and a by-word among men. Ladies' sewing societies may have privacies, but have no initiations, oaths or sworn secrets. Our friend has confounded things that are widely dissimilar, and seems to have forgotten the words of the Divine Master, "He that doeth truth cometh to the light."

IS IT RIGHT?

BRACEVILLE, Ill.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—Among the many things we would do well to consider are the following: Is it right for a minister of the Gospel or any professed righteous man to allow himself to be hoodwinked and sworn in a secret lodge? Or is it right, if he has been thus blindly led by the devil, that he should allow the devil to continue leading him? Should he remain in his service, and by all sorts of arguments and the telling of "white lies" be made a master-piece for blinding and deluding humanity? a minister? a Christian? a man called of God? Is it right? Is it right? A. LAGERGUIST.

J. P. STODDARD IN INDIANA.

CENTREVILLE, Ind., May 31, 1886.

This old and now finished town was once the metropolis of Wayne county. Its ambitious and successful competitor, Richmond, captured the court house and jail, aud took the prisoners, officers and rascals of the county to herself, mauufactories and leading business interests followed, until remaining citizens have less hope for the future of their village than pride in its early history. The G. A. R.'s were out yesterday, aud turned the Sabbath into a perfect gala-day for the girls and boys of this region in honor of the soldier dead. The crowd began to gather early, and continued increasing until their grand street parade and solemn grave decoration was over about 5 o'clock P. M., when the band ceased to play, flags were taken down, the patriotic services ended, and the weary throng dispersed. The G. A. R. was of course at the front, and the spirit of war, Sabbath desecration, and military display pervaded the whole throng. To my mind it was a triumph of sound and sin over sense and religion. There were a faithful few who quietly protested, but the unthinking masses were captivated by music and display, and swept along by the popular current breaking over the Divine law and literally trampling the holy Sabbath under their feet.

"Friends" have a house of worship and a small meeting in the heart of the town, where a few gathered for worship and received the fulfilment of promised blessings. Bro. Dillon Williams accorded me a hearty welcome, and the people gave marked attention while I spoke of things pertaining to the coming of Christ's kingdom. At the close of morning services a lecture was announced for me in Friends' house this (Monday) evening, and quite a number came forward to express hearty greetings. Rev. Small, pastor of the M. E. church, showed me much kindness, and I spoke to his people in the evening. He is a young man of great promise, and, deservedly, very popular. He gave a strong notice of my lecture, and urged all to come out and hear what the stranger had to say. I have been distributing tracts and circulating among the people to-day and find some interest, and am hoping for a good meeting to-night.

RICHMOND, May 1.—We were not disappointed in last evening's gathering at the Center. As is to be expected in this busy season, comparatively few of the laboring men were present, but enough were scattered among the women and youth to indicate a commendable desire to know something of the mysterious orders. I talked to them for a couple of hours in a general way, while they gave the closest attention. Pastors Small and Williams were present with some of their substantial members, and Bro. Peal, of the Christian church, came forward with several others to bid me God-speed in the work. As I had completed my special mission, and the season was not favorable to gather the working people, I thought it not best to attempt further meetings just now. My stay was made pleasant by the kindness of Bro. John Fait, at whose suggestion I came, and the care of his aged companion, who, like her husband, is full in the faith, though both look back over more than four score years of eventful history. Their son, Walter H., lives near them, and is in full sympathy with their views on the secrecy question. Brother and Sister Mills, Brother and Sister Moffatt extended to me the hospitality of their homes, and with others were very helpful in pushing on the good work. May the Lord reward them.

In the depot at Richmond I had the unexpected pleasure of meeting Bro. Dillon, of the Conservator, on his way to Washington, Ind., to hold a three-days discussion with a disciple minister on the fundamental doctrine of regeneration, and the agencies by which it is effected. We journied together for a time, and I was glad to learn of the brightening prospect of the Conservator and the cause it represents in the U. B. church. Bro. Dillon had hoped to be at the annual meeting in Chicago until recently, but finds that his special mission has so shaped itself as to make it impracticable. We shall regret his bodily absence, but rejoice in that he will be present in spirit and by his prayers.

PITH AND POINT.

THE ROLL.

My attention has just been directed to your article in the last Cynosure on N. C. A. roll, and I hasten to report. I am in heart sympathy with the good cause you represent. Should be at your approaching anniversary, but am about to leave for the East, to be absent some weeks. So I bid you God-speed. If you can supply my name with one more efficient (you cannot with one more interested) please do so.—E. G. HARRIS.

COMMENDATORY.

Do you know that your paper ranks among the most excellent of the earth? You never flinch. The "great" religious journals (so called) are figures beside the Christian Cynosure. And then you grow. The divine injunction to "grow in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ" does not seem to be lost on you. You heed it, and we all see it, and I trust, feel it, too, friends and enemies both. Go on in your Christian career, always aiming high, that you may lead others to obtain the blessing of those that excel.—JAMES R. SHARP.

MYSTERIOUS DISAPPEARANCES.

I am told by an elderly lady that many years since a well-dressed gentleman, apparently well supplied with money, and who was known by the appellation of Doctor, was boarding at Toddsville, N. Y. One evening loud cries were heard in a secluded place, and this individual was not again seen. As people well supplied with money are frequently murdered for its possession, most readers will give this as the probable solution of the mystery. But it was also said that this man was wont to go around at night to peek into the windows of houses, and ed we give this circumstance due weight, we are forc i to the conclusion that he had made unwelcomed discoveries and was put out of the way for concealment by a conspiracy of some sort—perhaps by a secret society, as certain of these claim the exclusive possession of "the art of keeping secrets," and Freemasonry even enacts in one of the higher degrees the death of the peeker, presumably as a preparation for real work. Can the readers of the Cynosure give like instances of disappearances under similar circumstances?

BIBLE LESSON.

STUDIES IN THE WRITINGS OF JOHN.

LESSON XII, June 20, 1886.—Jesus and Abraham—John 8: 31-38, 44-59.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Your father Abraham rejoiced to see my day: and he saw it, and was glad.—John 8:56.

TIME.—The next day after the last lesson, which was the octave of the feast, when the temple would be once more thronged by worshipers.

[Open the Bible and read the lesson.]

COMMENTS ON THE LESSON BY E. E. FLAGG.

1. True Freedom. vs. 31-39. Self confined within the limits of their narrow and foolish traditions, the Jews had no mental of spirtual liberty. They were like the Romanist who must think as his church thinks, or like the Freemason who must stand by the requirements of his order with no right of appeal either to his own reason or conscience; and with both Romanist and Mason as with the Jew the only agent that can make them free is the truth as it is in Jesus. We become free when we belong to a Master whose service is liberty, for then we are brought into perfect agreement with the highest laws of our being. But bond slaves of Satan have no idea of spiritual liberty nor can they have until delivered from the law of sin and death to which they have bound themselves. This is well illustrated in the untruthful boast of the Jews that they were Abraham's seed, and were never in bondage to any man, forgetting or ignoring their four hundred years in Egypt, their seventy years captivity in Babylon, and even then the presence of the hated Roman tax gatherer exacting the tribute to Ceasar, which, as they themselves acknowledge, was the sign and seal of their condition as a conquered people. There is here a much-needed lesson for our own American nation. What use is it to boast of Puritan ancestry if we do not do the deeds of our fathers? Or to take pride in the record of their struggles for liberty when we allow our rulers to be nominated and our elections carried by the twin powers of the lodge and the saloon, and permit morals and religion to be eliminated from politics at the bidding of party demagogues. Where is our boasted liberty if the wisest and best of the nation have lost the governing power, and it is delegated into the hands of men ready to bow to the vilest elements in the country if by so doing they can secure or keep office? There is no true freedom for a nation any more than for an individual outside of obedience to God's laws, and when its tyrants are all within, it is only evidence that it is suffering a more subtle and far worse bondage than the most oppressive yoke of a foreign power.

2. We show whether we are of Satan or of God by the works we do. vs. 40–59. There is something so sweet, so calm, so forcible in Christ's reasoning that we can only wonder it did not convince even his bigoted hearers. Their murderous disposition, their love of false teachings, their hatred of truth while very foreign to the spirit of Abraham, was exactly the spirit of him who was a murderer from the beginning and abode not in the truth. It is easy to prove any system, whether of truth or error, by the spirit of its followers. When the Jews taunt him with the two most approbrious epithets of which their language was capable, it only brings out deeper and more sublime utterances. But there is no spiritual sense in the bigoted crowd he addresses to catch the spiritual meaning. They take up stones to cast at him—the only argument they can use. We are told to try the spirits whether they are of God. Their fruits are the best test. Is it peace, joy, long suffering, goodness, faith? That system is of God which can show such a spirit in its followers, and that spirit is just as plainly of Satan which shows the opposite.

LIGHT FROM THE WORD.

Do we choose liberty or bondage? Rom. 6:16 How did Abraham see Christ's day? Heb. 11:13. Why is there not more understanding of Bible precepts in reference to the lodge, Sabbath breaking and other evils? John 8:43, 7:17.

From Peloubet's Notes.

"Then said Jesus to those Jews which believed on him." Better, who had believed him. They believed him but did not believe in him.

"If ye continue in my word." Continue to receive it, to study it, to live by it, to obey it.

"My word." My teaching, the doctrines I inculcate, the truths I teach, the commands I give.

"Then are ye my disciples indeed." True followers and learners. A disciple of Jesus is one who takes him for teacher and master; one who goes to school to him.

"The school of Christ." Jesus himself is the teacher and master, who directs our studies and guides the discipline. He is a wise, learned, loving, faithful, helpful, constant teacher. The school books are the Bible and the discipline of life. To become a member of Christ's school, to abide there and learn of him, is to be a Christian.

"And ye shall know the truth." This will be the result of continuing in Christ's word. They would know the reality of things.

"And the truth shall make you free." Free from the bondage of ignorance, error, and sin; free from the slavery of evil passions, groveling views, and corrupt propensities. The service of God is the highest freedom.

"Freedom of the children of God." Now a sinner is never free. He is not free to do wrong, for his conscience, nature, the law of God, the fear of punishment, hinder him. He cannot do right freely, for his evil nature and bad habits prevent him. He is compelled to bear the consequences of his sin against his will. But the child of God is free, just so far as he is a child of God. The freedom grows more and more complete as he becomes perfect in the Christian life.

"They answered him." The answerers are those that believed, not some others among the hearers.

"We be Abraham's seed." And therefore endowed with all the privileges of true Israelites.

"And were never in bondage to any man." These words can only mean: Often as we have been under oppression we have never acknowledged any oppressor as master, but have always submitted only from necessity, reserving our right to freedom, and striving after it.

"How sayest thou." They totally misunderstood the slavery and freedom to which he referred.

"Whosoever committeth sin." Lives in the commission of it.

"Is the servant." The bond servant, the slave, of sin. Because his evil nature and bad habits hold dominion over him, and compel him to do that which he knows is wrong.

"And the servant." Any bond servant. What follows is a general truth.

"The Son." Is not the son of God, but any son.

"Abide not in the house (household) for ever." The reference is to Hagar and Ishmael, and Isaac: the bond and the free.

"But the Son abideth ever." Consequently, these Jews, while continuing the slaves, or bond servants, of sin, had not the rights of children in the family of God, and were liable to be cut off from both the household and its general privileges at any hour when the Master should please.

"I know that ye are Abraham's seed," or offspring. The acknowledgment of their claim to natural descent from Abraham serves only to strengthen the reproof that follows.

"But ye." The Jews as a whole under their leaders, of whom these to whom he was speaking were a part, and had the same spirit.

"Seek to kill me." As in the last lesson (Chap. 7:32, 44,45.)

"Because my word hath no place." Hath not free course in you, because you do not allow my word of truth to enter your hearts and lives, and permeate your character.

"I speak that which I have seen with my Father." Implying existence with him. The son is like the father. If you were really God's children through Abraham, you, too, would love and receive these truths from your Father.

"Ye do that which ye have seen with (better, heard from) your father." As explained in verse 44, the next verse of the lesson. They were the children of Satan because they did the deeds of Satan.

"Ye are of (from) your father the devil." Because they are like him, imitate him, serve him.

"He was a murderer from the beginning." Because, from the very outset, he endeavored to seduce into disobedience, and so to destroy the human race.

"Abode not in the truth." Referring perhaps to the fall of the devil from being an angel of light in heaven.

"There is no truth in him." His heart is false, his intellect distorted, he loves what is not true, and delights in deceiving others.

"The father of it." Of lying, producing this false nature in others.

"Because I tell you the truth, ye believe me not." Because you, as children of the devil, do not want the truth or love the truth.

"Which of you convinceth me of sin?" Rather, convicteth me of sin. To convince is to satisfy a man's own mind of some particular truth; to convict a man is to prove him guilty. Imagine a pause, a moment's expressive silence, no answer from the Pharisees, and then the crushing words that follow calmly uttered, "If I say the truth, why do you not believe?"

"He that is of God (as you say you are) heareth (to believe and obey) God's words." You do not hear them, therefore you are not of God as you assert.

"Then answered the Jews." They could not answer his argument, therefore, as is common, they began to call him hard names.

"Thou art a Samaritan," i. e., an enemy.

"And hast a devil." A demon; not the same original word used by Jesus above to represent the prince of the devils, but an evil-spirit demon.

The Facts Stated.

HON. THURLOW WEED ON THE MORGAN ABDUCTION.

This is a sixteen page pamphlet comprising a letter written by Mr. Weed, and read at the unveiling of the monument erected to the memory of Capt. William Morgan. The frontispiece is an engraving of the monument. It is a history of the unlawful seizure and confinement of Morgan in the Canandaigua jail, his subsequent conveyance by Freemasons to Fort Niagara, and drowning in Lake Ontario. He not only subscribes his NAME to the letter, but ATTACHES HIS AFFIDAVIT to it.

In closing his letter he writes: I now look back through an interval of fifty-six years with a conscious sense of having been governed through the "Anti-Masonic excitement" by a sincere desire, first, to vindicate the violated laws of my country, and n xt, to arrest the great power and dangerous influences of "secret societies."

The pamphlet is well worth perusing, and is doubtless the last historical article which this great journalist and politician wrote. [Chicago, National Christian Association.] Single copy, 5 cents.

AMERICAN PLATFORM.

ADOPTED AT CHICAGO, JUNE 20, 1884

Viewing with deep concern the corrupt and unsettled condition of American politics, and witnessing with alarm the fearful prevalence of caste and clannishness by which our citizens are being arrayed in hostile bands, working secretly to compass political ends, a method directly and powerfully tending to increase corruption, to destroy mutual confidence, and hasten disruption and bloodshed; and having no hope of adequate remedy for these evils from existing parties, and believing the foundation of a party based upon the fundamental principles of the Declaration of American Independence, both inevitable and indispensable:

We, therefore, a portion of the American people, believing with our fathers that we have our rights and liberties, not from men or parties, but from God; believing in the Christian marriage, and not in Mormonism; believing in the religious democracy of the New Testament, and not in the despotism of the lodge; believing, also, with our Scotch and English ancestors, that civil government, though ordained in God, is "founded in nature, not in grace," and, therefore, that all have equal civil rights; while we abhor the idea of enforcing religion or controlling conscience by human laws and penalties as calculated to make hypocrites, not Christians, and savoring of the days of priestism, the fagot and the stake, we at the same time as firmly believe that athcism and priestcraft are twins and both alike foes to human liberty and welfare. We further most firmly believe that a government without God has none but lynch power, and is destitute of all legitimate authority to maintain civil order, to swear a witness, to try a criminal, to hang a murderer, to imprison a thief; and while we consider government without God as a mere usurpation, we regard all religions and worships invented by men, and so having no higher than human origin, as mere swindling impositions and cheats. We believe in peace and in national arbitration as a means of perpetuating it; yet we as profoundly believe that the bravery and blood of our soldiers have bought us the peace which we enjoy, and we honor the memories of the dead and will be just to the claims of the living; and we take up and prolong the strain raised by the women of this country: "For God, and home, and native land," and trust that this beautiful and patriotic motto will soon be not only echoed by their voices, but sustained by their votes.

We, therefore, solemnly adopt and present the following as containing a brief synopsis of the principles of our government, by which we intend to be governed in casting our votes. We hold:

1. That ours is a Christian and not a heathen nation, and that the God of the Christian Scriptures is the author of civil government.
2. That the Bible should be associated with books of science and literature in all our educational institutions.
3. That God reqnires, and man needs a Sabbath.
4. We demand the prohibition of the importation, manufacture, and sale of intoxicating drinks.
5. We hold that the charters of all secret lodges granted by our Federal and State Legislatures should be withdrawn, and their oaths prohibited by law.
6. We are opposed to putting prison labor or depreciated contract labor from foreign countries in competition with free labor to benefit manufacturers, corporations or speculators.
7. We are in favor of a revision and enforcement of the laws concerning patents and inventions; for the prevention and punishment of frauds either upon inventors or the general public.
8. We hold to and will vote for woman suffrage.
9. That the civil equality secured to all American citizens by Articles 13, 14 and 15 of our amended National Constitution should be preserved inviolate, and the same equality should be extended to Indians and Chinamen.
10. That international differences should be settled by arbitration.
11. That land and other monopolies should be discouraged.
12. That the general government should furnish the people with an ample and sound currency.
13. That it should be the settled policy of the government to reduce tariffs and taxes as rapidly as the necessities of revenue and vested business interests will allow.
14. That polygamy should be immediately suppressed by law, and that the Republican party is censurable for the long neglect of its duty in respect to this evil.
15. And, finally, we demand for the American people the abolition of electoral colleges, and a direct vote for President and Vice President of the United States.

THE CHURCHES VS. LODGERY.

The following denominations are committed by vote of their legislative assemblies or by constitution to a separation from secret lodge worship:

Adventists (Seventh-day.)
Baptists—Primitive, Seventh-day and Scandinavian.
Brethren (Dunkers or German Baptists.)
Christian Reformed Church.
Church of God (Northern Indiana Eldership.)
Congregational—The State Associations of Illinois and Iowa have adopted resolutions against the lodge.
Disciples (in part.)
Friends.
Lutherans—Norwegian, Danish, Swedish and Synodical Conferences.
Mennonites.
Methodists—Free and Wesleyan.
Methodist Protestant (Minnesota Conference.)
Moravians.
Plymouth Brethren.
Presbyterian—Associate, Reformed and United.
Reformed Church (Holland Branch.)
United Brethren in Christ.

Individual churches in some of these denominations should be excepted, in part of them even a considerable portion.

The following local churches have, as a pledge to disfellowship and oppose lodge worship, given their names to the following list as

The Christian Cynosure.

EDITORS.

J. BLANCHARD. HENRY L. KELLOGG.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, JUNE 10, 1886.

The Knights of Labor have sunk laborers more than twenty millions by their strike for "recognition" as an opposition and rival government to that of the United States, and they report a gain of 1,500 members per week.

MR. KELLOGG, who has not made an editorial mistake for fifteen years, hopes to be at his post to issue the next Cynosure, with his cheeks browned by a California sun, his bodily vigor increased, his mind stored, and his patriotism quickened by his voyage "across the Continent," and the sightly scene, sorrows, and hopes of our great and mighty country.

MR. COOK (Ezra A.) took the duties of publisher against the lodge when President Finney was receiving letters threatening his life, and Mr. Cook's business was threatened with boycott and his building with fire. He has issued Freemasonry Illustrated, 7 tons, and of Revised Odd-fellowship, twenty thousand copies. When asked why he went into such a business, he replied: "I feel as I did when I saw Lee and Grant facing each other and enlisted—I want a hand in this fight."

THE ADVANCE ventures to insert from California, that "Mr. Kellogg of the Cynosure read a paper on secret societies before the San Francisco clergy." The Congregational clergy of Chicago has not ventured so far at its weekly Grand Pacific meeting, though they invited an Asiatic Universalist to give them an address. It will not be long ere the descendants of the Puritans will learn that their churches are sinking, and the labor of the country is made leprous by the lodge.

NEXT WEEK THURSDAY we meet in National Council at 221 W. Madison street. The day previous is Wheaton Commencement, and the day following (Friday) the American party. The invisible inhabitants of Chicago are more than the visible, and they can attend those meetings without space. And they lobby steadily, since Lucifer's "war in heaven," to get rid of Christ. Refusing to worship Christ, turned angels to devils; the same turns earth into a hell.

POWDERLY says: "When we get our organization perfected, we shall not need any laws." It is amazing that thinking men do not see that these lodges all strike for absolute independence of the United States. As Seward said, "They seek the overthrow of every government which they cannot control." Powderly even objects to a Congressional Committee of arbitration. He wishes the laboring masses to look to "secrecy and obedience" alone for redress. This dispenses with Republican government and the Christian religion, for Republicanism means private judgment, and Christ was not a secretist.

Our excellent contemporary, Law and Order, in commenting on this proposition says: "Mr. Powderly is considered conservative, and yet it is largely within his power to order every Knight to strike. It is utterly impossible for any considerable strike to be inaugurated without being followed by attendant evils. Would it not be well to take away from this and kindred organizations the power to inaugurate a general strike, even if it be necessary to declare the organizations themselves unlawful. We may not deny the right of an individual to cease from labor (unless we consider him a vagrant), but when it comes to societies, the question is almost 'certain to assume' a different phase, the strike in the larger sense being only another name for 'conspiracy,' as the strikers immediately proceed to commit acts injurious to trade and commerce." That the Knights of Labor are an unlawful organization in the proper sense of the word is evident from the statement of law as given by Judge Mallory, of Milwaukee, in his charge to the Grand Jury: "A conspiracy to prevent, by means of threats or other unlawful means, an operative from obtaining employment in his business is indictable. It is also indictable to conspire to molest and obstruct workmen, with a view to induce them to leave their employment, and any labor organization having for its object the accomplishment of such purpose, by such means, is unlawful." Not only have the Knights of Labor and other organizations proved themselves such conspiracies, but at the late meeting in Cleveland it was finally determined that each local assembly should have the right to order strikes or boycotts at its discretion; and we have reason to expect a speedy repetition of the events of the past few months. A government that should protect all people without partiality, must suppress unlawful combinations, and in order to do this ought to, and must, demand that they shall be open to public inspection. We hold with Wendell Phillips, that "Secret societies are entirely out of place in a Republican government," and with Webster, that "The future organizations of such societies and the administration of such oaths ought to be suppressed by law."

BISHOP WEAVER AND SECRET SOCIETIES.

Bishop Weaver says in the Telescope: "Years ago, I thought it was right to exclude all members of all secret societies from church-fellowship. But now I believe that every secret organization should stand or fall upon its own merits or demerits. Any organization that holds and practices principles contrary to the Word of God may safely be excluded; but until it is known that an organization does this, its members, everything else being right, should not be excluded. I have long since abandoned the idea that secrecy is a sin per se, or that organized secrecy is a sin per se. Whatever sin attaches to an organization must inhere in its principles. If these are contrary to the Word of God, that will form a good reason for rejection; but until that is clear we do well to be more cautious, lest peradventure we should be found rejecting those whom Christ has received."

We do not condemn any one for changing when convinced that he is mistaken, but we do condemn the sophistry that seeks to make evil appear good, and good evil; that puts light for darkness, and darkness for light. As applied to open organizations, like political parties or churches, the prineiple is doubtless correct. Their character should be examined and determined by their conformity or opposition to the Word of God. But secret societies cannot be so considered, because,

1. They all deny to the church any right of investigation. They assume that no one can know their real character who has not been initiated, and that whoever has taken the obligation of secrecy and afterwards makes any revelations is unworthy of confidence. In other words the testimony of all outsiders is to be ruled out as incompetent, and all seceders as unworthy of belief, and hence no decision of the church would have any weight, if the right of concealment is admitted.

2. All secret societies claim that their principles, ceremonies, and covenants are in harmony with the Word of God, and while they do not admit of any investigation by outsiders, they do insist that many good men are members of all of these orders which would not be true if they included anything contrary to Christian principles, and that this is sufficient reason why they should be accepted without further question. In fact, this is the reason why the churches generally consent to the reception of the members of the secret societies.

3. People differ widely as to what is or is not contrary to the Word of God. Many professed Christians saw no wrong in American slavery. There are others who think it quite appropriate to drink wine and beer, smoke cigars, play billiards, and go to theaters. Freemasons tell us that while they do not admit that the obligations and ceremonies are correctly given, yet assuming them to be as given, they can see in them nothing wrong or inconsistent with Christian propriety. It by no means follows that we ought to admit slave-holders, wine-bibbers and Freemasons.

4. The practical effect of the proposed rule of admitting some secret societies and excluding others, would be to break down all barriers to the admission of any. This has been the effect when such discrimination has been attempted. No Protestant church has ever succeeded in excluding any which did not exclude all such societies.

5. Bishop Weaver says that neither secrecy nor organized secrecy is a sin per se. Perhaps not. It is a little difficult to define a sin in the abstract. Many non-slave-holders held that slavery was not a sin per se, and, therefore should not be indiscriminately condemned. Neither killing men nor selling whisky is a sin per se. Nevertheless, slavery, murder, and the liquor traffic are monstrous crimes, and their practice ought to be excluded from the church. But lying is a sin per se. The secrets of most of the orders have been fully revealed, and yet members of these orders are bound to pretend that they are not known. In other words they are bound to lie by pretending that to be false which they know to be true. Lying is not a good qualification for church membership. Organized secrecy when practiced by members of a church, is a sin against their brethren. Whenever any member of any church enters into covenant with any society or order that denies to the church all right of investigation as to his conduct in that order, or as to the character of the order itself, then such member sins against his brethren and against the church. Whenever any church member is charged with unchristian conduct in taking the obligations, performing the ceremonies or attending to the business of any secret order, and refuses to plead to the indictment, or acknowledge the jurisdiction of the church (which he must do if he adheres to the order) he sins against the church and is unworthy of Christian fellowship. "Art thou a master in Israel and knowest not these things?"

BRIBERY IN CONGRESS.

It is highly probable that bribery is increasingly common. The recent conviction of a New York alderman of accepting a bribe of $20,000 and probable impeachment of others for a similar offense, shows how common it is and that there is an awakened sense of justice demanding its punishment. The following incidents show that we have had at least some Congressmen who shook their hands from the holding of bribes.

Mr. Williams, member of Congress from North Carolina, who died in 1842, was offered a bribe under the pretense of payment for the extra trouble, and repelled it indignantly to the utter amazement and discomfiture of Col. John Anderson of Michigan, who, in a letter said, "This (offer) is confidential. In other words I give it to you as a man and a Mason and hope you belong to that order." Col. Anderson had to apologize at the bar of the House and was publicly reprimanded through Henry Clay, who decided that "this attempt to corrupt the fountain of legislation was a crime of the deepest dye." Before offering the next bribe the Colonel would doubtless take care to know that he was a Mason to whom the offer was made. Now, he would find no trouble in finding plenty of Congressmen who are Masons, and bound to conceal all a brother's secrets. It is to be hoped that some are better than their oaths. Thirty years after the above event the Illinois Central R. R. Co. wanted a large tract of land on each side of the road, and D. V. Holbrooke offered Stephen A. Douglas one-half if he would obtain it. Mr. Douglas was lame, but filled with indignation, he suddenly sprang for his crutches and dealt Mr. Holbrooke a blow on the head as he was flying from the room. There are doubtless corrupt men in Congress; but there are doubtless those who are upright and who would not for a moment tamper with bribes.

TWO INCIDENTS.

BY PRES. C. A. BLANCHARD.

A young man, active and intelligent, but a slave of drink, was awakened and converted on the occasion of Mr. Moody's January visit to Chicago, 1886. His conversion was very clear and bright, and he was very happy. After some weeks had passed his conscience began to trouble him about the use of tobacco, and as he said: It wasn't easy to talk about Jesus with your mouth full of tobacco. He decided to give it up and did so. A few days passed, and it was a hard battle. Appetite raged, he was nervous, irritable, and ill-natured. He went over to prayer-meeting, and after meeting a brother, asked him how he was getting on. He said not first-rate, and told of his change. The brother said to him: Have you taken it to the Lord? No, said he; the Lord has done so much for me, I was ashamed to bother him about a little thing like that; I think I ought to be man enough to quit alone. After a moment's conversation he knelt in prayer that God would relieve him from the raging of desire, and said he: That craving left me as if it were a bird with wings.

Last Sabbath he gave his testimony in his Bible class. This class is composed of thirty-four men, not one of whom was converted before last January. Now about eighteen are Christians. After he had done, the one who was leading the meeting said: Well, Brother ——'s remarks rather hit me. (Here he put his hand in his pocket and drew out a large plug of tobacco.) I bought this this morning, but I believe I will have to quit too, and with this he threw it out of the window.

More than two years ago, on the occasion of taking a collection for church repairs, I preached at the Chicago avenue church on the subject of tithing. Recently a lady called upon one of the Bible workers, and said my name is ——. I heard Mr. Blanchard preach on giving two years ago, and it seemed to me that what he said was according to the word of God, so I began to give to Christian work the tenth of all that I received for my work

(she is a seamstress). At once, said she, I found that I had much more to give than before, though I had given, as I supposed, liberally. It was also a source of great joy to me to have it to give, and God prospered me in my work.

After a little I remembered that of a thousand dollars received from my father none had been given to God, and it seemed to me that that should be tithed too. But it was invested, and I didn't know how to get the one hundred dollars to give, and finally I decided to earn it, and lay it aside for his work.

And now, said she, I have the money saved, in addition to my tithe which I have used all along in Christian work, and I want you to send this to Mr. Blanchard, and tell him to use it in the Lord's work, where he thinks best. And, said she, I want you to tell him how great blessing has come to my soul while I have been saving this money, and tell him to keep on preaching on that subject, for there are many who are as I was, and do not understand the Bible rule on this subject.

On prayerful reflection I have concluded to make this one hundred dollars the beginning of our new building fund for Wheaton College. In order to put up the east wing of the college at least forty thousand dollars will be required. This sum can be offered by the Lord's stewards, who read the Cynosure in a very short time, if there be a mind to work. What do you say, friends? Our institution is entirely out of debt, is manned by a scholarly and devoted faculty, has given you many excellent workers, and can give you many more, if you will equip it thoroughly. The time has come for planning large things. The powers of darkness are mustering, and on every side there are calls for educated men and women. Who will put an earnest hand on this task and help to plant here by our Western metropolis an institution which shall stand for Christ and his kingdom against all the evils open and secret of the age?

ODD-FELLOWS IN WISCONSIN.

The Odd-fellows of Wisconsin have held their annual Grand Lodge at Waukesha. The total membership of the subordinate lodges at the beginning of the year was 15,594; as compared with 15,825 at the beginning of the previous year, showing a net loss of 231. The revenues of the subordinate lodges for last year were $124,391.56. The amount paid for relief purposes was $25,318.36. The expenses of the year were $66,685.52.

We copy the foregoing from the Inter Ocean of June 2nd, and wish to call the attention of the intelligent business men in that order to the practical working of their system. The total receipts were $124,391.56, which is very nearly $8.00 per member. Of this large amount considerably more than one-half ($66,685.52) was paid out for running expenses; while but $25,318.36, considerably less than one-fourth the amount of the receipts, was paid for the relief of any one. Of the eight dollars that the Wisconsin Odd-fellow pays into the lodge for "charity" less than two dollars goes to aid in the relief of the distressed, and more than twice that amount goes for running expenses. We respectfully suggest that if the object of the order is to lay by something for a rainy day the practical workings are exceeding bad. The most villainous of our savings banks, after making deductions for all defalcations, pay back at least 25 per cent of the amount of their receipts, which Wisconsin Odd-fellowship does not. Surely this is putting money into a bag with holes. If the object is to provide for a system of life insurance it is obtained at a much heavier expense than is needful. If the object is moral culture, the churches and Sunday-schools are incomparably better. If the object is a social intercourse of a certain kind, a fondness for ritualism and spectacular performances—well as to this, tastes differ. If people like to be chained, hoodwinked, made to see ghostly sights, and listen to stale platitudes, nobody forbids them, but in the name of common sense don't call this benevolence, nor claim for it corporate privileges as one of the great institutions of the land.

THEY ARE COMING.

I am glad to announce that definite arrangements have been made with Elders Woodsmall and Countee, of Memphis, Tenn., to attend and speak at the approaching N. C. A. anniversary. If any friend of needs an extra incentive to be present it would seem to be supplied by the assurance of meeting these brethern, both of whom have testified their sincerity and courage by leaving and denouncing an institution which has both the disposition and ability to do them great injury. These brethern gladly come without fee or pecuniary reward, bringing tidings from a land and people to whom all eyes are turned, and who are destined to bear an important, if not a decisive part in the immediate future of the nation. For thirteen years Bro. Woodsmall has been going among the churches and cities of the South, like the apostles, teaching and preaching the Gospel of clean hands and pure hearts by the blood of atonement. His heart is in the work, and you who have prayed and given to the evangalization of an ignorant and oppressed people within our own country, want to take these men by the hand, bid them God-speed, and catch new inspiration from their words. The emancipation from lodge rule in church and state is through the enlightment of the bewildered masses, and if something can be done by nominations and political agitation, much more may, in the present state of our work, be accomplished by encouraging and helping those who are brought in daily contact with the men who compose the nation and east the votes we would win for Christ and his kingdom. Pres. H. H. George, a veteran and tower of strength in this work, is to be here. Bro. Curtis, from Olathe, Kas., enters his name on the scroll of honor, and Bros. Foote and Clark, "heroes of a hundred battles" and victorious in speech and song, and the personal friends of John Brown and John B. Gough, with whom they have stood shoulder to shoulder when shot and shell from the masked batteries of Slavery, Rum and Lodge went shrieking and plowing through the serried ranks of Abolitionists, Prohibitionists and Protestants against the "secret empire," will be in the corps of "sharp shooters," ready in any emergency to strike down the foe with a thrust or song.

Pres. J. Blanchard, Pres. C. A. Blanchard and the stalwarts of the "old guard," will of course be at their posts, and every possible attention will be given to the comfort of those coming, and the expenses in the city reduced to the minimum. Special rates for rooms have been secured at 167 and 169 Madison St., (East side), and meals can be had cheaply at restaurants near by.

The question is not, can you afford to come, but can you afford to stay away? Seek wisdom from God and follow as he leads. J. P. STODDARD, Sec'y N. C. A.

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE IOWA CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

Where shall we meet? Clarinda has been suggested as a good point, and we are promised a hearty welcome. Remarks on this subject are now in order. Address Rev. C. D. Trumbull, corresponding secretary, Morning Sun, Iowa. GEO. WARRINGTON, Pres.
Birmingham, Iowa.

THE N. C. A. ANNUAL MEETING.

The annual meeting of the National Christian Association is fixed by by-law No. 4 on the third Thursday in June of each year. Corporate members and all friends of the N. C. A. will please notice that this occurs on June 17th, and prepare to be prompt in attendance at 10 A. M. There will be two sessions, morning and afternoon, for the transaction of business at No. 221 West Madison street, Chicago, and an evening session at some suitable place provided by the programme committee. F. W. CAPWELL, President.
W. I. PHILLIPS, Secretary.

Elder E. L. Harris, of Delevan, Wis., called on us on his way East. He and his wife are expecting to spend the summer in Eastern New York. Brother Harris has been for years one of our most steadfast co-workers.

Rev. J. A. Richards, of Ft. Scott, Kans., called on us on his return from the East, where he has been visiting the Wesleyan conferences asking aid for the Wesleyan Seminary at Wasioga, Minn. He has been fairly successful in his work and now goes to Wisconsin. We heartily commend this faithful brother and the good work in which he is engaged.

The defeat of the Irish Home Rule Bill on its second reading in the House of Commons, by a vote of 341 to 311, marks a crisis in British politics, and presages a dissolution of Parliament and a new election attended with intense political excitement.

The Chicago Board of Trade adopted the following resolution in reference to the numerous strikes, boycotts, etc., that have, during the last few months, been such an injury to the business and especially to the laboring men of the country: "Resolved, That in the opinion of this Board, it is the imperative duty of the Congress of the United States at its present session to adopt such measures, consistent with constitutional limitation, as may be deemed most effectual to repress all attempts that may be made in future by threats, intimidation or violence to disturb the peaceful flow of commerce among the States, and to protect the rights and provide for the security of all citizens lawfully engaged in such traffic."

The proposed amendment of the Constitution introduced by Mr. Ingalls makes polygamy unlawful, prohibits any State or Territory from authorizing it, and makes it the duty of every State to prohibit it. If adopted, as it would be if presented to the States, it would cut off the last hope of the Mormons in obtaining a legal recognition for their system. We are glad that this amendment has been presented, but it should not be forgotten that the strength of Mormon polygamy is in its oath-bound concealments, and its despotic authority. It is only one of the modifications of the Secret Empire, and every blow that is given to this system of wickedness will fall with crushing weight on all the other forms of secret despotism. One reform makes way for another. The people, after much long suffering, are beginning to put away the liquor traffic. After enduring the abominations of Mormonism, they are rising in their might to destroy it. And having felt the destructive power ef scqret combinations in the strikes and boycotts of the last few years, they will decree their suppression by making all secret organizations unlawful in time of peace.

LITERATURE.

The June number of the Century maintains its high character for ability. It opens with a portrait of Benjamin Franklin and has many illustrations of marked skill and beauty. Among the notable articles, aside from the war series, are "Faith Healing and Kindred Phenomena," "Unpublished Letters of Benjamin Franklin," and "The Topics of the Times," which are of unusual ability. Among the latter are admirable articles on the "Labor Question," on "Christian Union," and the "Co-education of the sexes."

We have received from John Alden, publisher, New York, "Biographical Essays," by Thomas B. Maeauly, including essays on Lord Bacon, Warren Hastings, and William Pitt—beautifully bound, price 50 cts. All admirers of the glowing style of Macauley will greatly admire these essays. We notice also by the same publisher, "Inspiration," by Canon Farrar, and "Romano More, Ye Old Pilgrims to Ye New," by J. E. Rankin. Prices, 4 and 6 cents each.

We have also received from the above enterprising publishers "Wisdom and Eloquence of Webster," containing a sketch of his life and times, and extended extracts from his speeches and writings. In spite of some moral blemishes and some political mistakes, the historian will accord to Daniel Webster the highest place among New England's statesmen. It is pleasant to see these speeches in a neat volume of 250 pages, gilt top, price 75 cents. We only regret the omission of his denunciation of secret societies, which, he held, "ought to be prohibited by law."

The North American Review for June comes laden with its rich and varied discussion of pending questions; among which are "Socialism in America," "Free Trade in Discussion," "Edwin M. Stanton," "Why am I a Presbyterian?" "The Defense of Charleston, S. C.," "The President and the Senate," "Gladsone," "The Labor Crisis," three papers, and "Notes and Comments," including "A New Constitutional Amendment," by Senator J. J. Ingalls, and "Bric-a-brac in Literature. The articles on the labor question are timely and important.

The June number of the Old Testament Student is on our table, and presents some noticeable features. An article on the "Assyrian Eponym Canon and the Chronology of the Bible," is one that will command attention; Dr. Geo. Dana Boardman gives some valuable suggestions as to "How we Should Study the Bible;" "The Messianic Element in Haggai," is the title of an interesting paper by Prof. Denio; Dr. J. A. Smith discusses "Pagan Wisdom and Christian Inspiration," and Prof. J. P. Peters urges the study of Hebrew as an elective in college. The series of instructive book-studies in first and second Samuel, furnished by the editor, is concluded in this number. We are glad to see that other books will be similarly studied in the next volume. Following the four or five pages of notices of books and current Old Testament literature is a full index to vol. V.—a glance at which will tell far more of the character of the magazine than can be done in a paragraph like this. We notice that the publishers send a sample copy free to any one desiring it. Chicago: the Old Testament Student. Wm. R. Harper, Ph. D., editor. $1 a year. P. O. address, Morgan Park, Ill.

THE HOME.

MY REFUGE.

By Ellen L. Gorch, a Brahmin of the highest caste, adopted daughter of Rev. W. T. Stones, Bradford, England.

In the secret of His presence how my soul delights to hide!
Oh, how precious are the lessons which I learn at Jesus's side!
Earthly cares can never vex me, neither trials lay me low,
For when Satan comes to tempt me, to the "secret place" I go.

When my soul is faint and thirsty, 'neath the shadow of his wing
There is cool and pleasant shelter, and a fresh and crystal spring;
And my Saviour rests beside me as we hold communion sweet;
If I tried I could not utter what he says when thus we meet.

Only this I know. I tell him all my doubts and griefs and fears;
Oh, how patiently he listens, and my drooping soul he cheers.
Do you think he ne'er reproves me? What a false friend he would be
If he never, never told me of the sins which he must see!

Do you think that I could love him half so well, or as I ought,
If he did not tell me plainly of each sinful word and thought?
No! He is very faithful, and that makes me trust him more;
For I know that he does love me, tho' he wounds me very sore.

Would you like to know the sweetness of the secret of the Lord?
Go and hide beneath his shadow; this shall then be your reward;
And whene'er you leave the silence of that happy meeting place,
You must mind and bear the image of your Master in your face.

You will surely lose the blessing and the fulness of your joy
If you let dark clouds distress you and your inward peace destroy.
You may always be abiding, if you will, at Jesus's side:
In the secret of His presence you may every moment hide.

THE TRUE IDEAL OF NATIONS.

BY CANON FARRAR.

Woe to the nation that is not fearlessly faithful enough to grapple with its own vice and its own corruption. Woe to the nation which has become too feebly timid to repress infamy, too morally perplexed to scourge the back of crime. Let the hands of every man who stands erect, every man and woman in God's sacramental altar, tear down from its pedestal the brazen image of such a spurious freedom, and break it into pieces. Call it nehushtan, a thing of brass, nor suffer men to exclaim in anger, "Oh Freedom, what crimes are committed in thy name!"

To conclude, then, what should be the one and only true ideal of each nation, if it would indeed be a wise and understanding people? Let the frivolous sneer and the faithless deride, but there is only one such ideal. It is duty. It is righteousness. It is the law of Sinai. It is the law of Christ. It is purity of life. It is honesty of trade. It is absolute allegiance to truth. It is the inviolable sanctity of the marriage law. There is a law above all the enactments of human gods, the same in all times. It is the law written by the finger of God upon the hearts of men, and by that law, unchangeable and eternal, while men despise, fear, and loathe rapine, and abhor blood, they will reject with indignation the delusion that any iniquity and any idolatry can ever be anything to man or to nations but a ruin and a curse. If a nation be not the uplifter of this power of righteousness, it is predestinated to ultimate in an irretrievable ruin. The heathen may rage and the people imagine a vain thing, but where they strove to rear their Babels in opposition to His eternal will, God shall send forth his voice and the earth shall melt away. "For glory," said Oliver Cromwell to the men of England, "you glory in the ditch which guards your shores; I tell you that your ditch will not save you if you do not reform yourselves." It is no less true of America, I have said before, I say again, she may be the enlightener of nations, the beautiful pioneer in the vanguard of the progress of the world, but should the day ever come when she shall choose to spread a table to fortune, or to enshrine Mammon upon her altars; should her commerce become dishonest, her press debased, her society frivolous, her religion a tradition and a sham, then, though the double ocean sweep her illimitable shores, their waves shall but flash to future generations a more sad, a more desolate, and a more unending dirge. The Bible is still the best hand-book of the worthy citizen, for it teaches us many truths which make nations strong and keep them so. It will teach us firmness in the appointed, inscrutable law of human life, and in the great race of mankind we must hand down to future generations a brighter and ever brighter torch of knowledge and of love. It will teach us to know man simply as man, and to regard all men, from the highest to the lowest, as absolutely equal before the bar of justice; equally under the stroke of her sword, equally under the shadow of her shield. It will teach us that always and invariably the unjust and immoral practices of this class must be put down in the interests of the community, and that the interests of the community are subordinate, always, to those of the entire people. And it will teach us that the true glory of nations lies not in the splendid misery of war, but in the dissemination of honorable happiness and encouragement of greatness, and the suppression of vice; and it will teach us that the true wealth of a nation is not in gold and silver, but in the souls of strong, contented, and self-respecting men; and it will teach us that the true freedom of a nation lies not in the anarchic right of licensed temptation and unrestricted facilities for crime, but in the bonds of a material obedience deeply cherished by the good, but inexorably enforced on all the bad. When statesmen and nations have learned these lessons they will not be long in learning others. Nations will aim at only such condition of life and government as shall make it easy to do right and difficult to do wrong. They will see that politics, no less than individual conduct, have no other rule than the law of God. Statesmen will not toil for reward. They will not count on praise. They will hold allegiance to the loftiest ideal of godliness to be far dearer than claims of party and all the glories of place. Like Edmund Burke, they will bring to politics a terror of crime, a deep humanity, a keen sensibility, a singular vivacity and sincerity of consciousness. Like Sir Robert Peel, they will, amid the fortunes of their career, be able to turn from the storm without to the sunshine of the approving heart within. Like Washington and Lincoln, they will be just and fear not, putting their trust in God. They will not be afraid to cut against the grain of godless prejudice. They will not be sophisticated by the prudential maxims of an immoral acquiescence. They will sweeten with words of justice and gentleness the conflicts of party. They will be quick to the encouragement of virtue. They will be fixed and fearless, and all the strong and God-fearing men and women, and all the pure and noble, all the bright youth, will help them to be inviolable, inexorable in the suppression and extirpation, so far as the powers of government can do it, of all apostacy from the eternal laws of God. Happy are the people that are in such a cause. Blessed are the people that have the Lord for their God.

THE GREAT CANALS OF THE WORLD.

The Imperial Canal of China is over 1,000 miles long. In the year 1861 was completed the greatest undertaking of the kind on the European continent, the Canal Languedoc, or Canal du Nidi, to connect the Atlantic with the Mediterranean; its length is 148 miles, it has more than 100 locks and about fifty aqueducts, and its highest part is no less than 600 feet above the sea; it is navigable for vessels of upward of 600 tons. The largest ship canal in Europe is the great North Holland Canal, completed in 1825—125 feet wide at the water surface, thirty-one feet wide at the bottom, and has a depth of twenty feet. It extends from Amsterdam to the Helder, fifty-one miles. The Caledonia Canal, in Scotland, has a total length of sixty miles, including three lakes. The Suez Canal is eighty-eight miles long, of which sixty-six miles are actual canal. The Erie canal is 350¼ miles long; the Ohio Canal, Cleveland to Portsmouth, 332; the Miami and Erie, Cincinnati to Toledo, 391; the Wabash and Erie, Evansville to the Ohio line, 374.—Selected.

A CLOCK OF CLOCKS.

The famous clock of Strasburg is put completely into the shade by "the great World Clock or the ten thousand year time indicator." It was constructed in Germany during many years' labor by Mr. Christian Martin, clock-maker. The clock marks the years and leap years, and will run for a hundred centuries, when, as the bill frankly admits, its "mechanic works" will have to be changed. The face of the clock is about ten feet square, and has a large number of dials and little niches, where 122 little figures have their abiding place. These latter, as the ever ready bill explains, are "to allegorize human life." Every minute a sorrowful-looking angel hits a bell with a sledge-hammer. When he has done this fifteen times another angel in a red robe strikes the first quarter. "The Genius," dressed in a Louis XIV. costume, turns a dial so that a figure is shown. At the same time the figure of a child appears at a lower door. At the second quarter a youth appears; at the third a middle-aged man, with spectacles and a high hat, and at the fourth, a decrepit old wreck with a white wig. While all this is going on below, death, in the shape of a Comanche Indian with wings, has been vainly endeavoring to hammer a bell in an upper niche, but an angel has headed him off in every case and protected the human family "by raising the right hand in an allegorical relation," as per programme, until the fourth quarter. Then death gets the better of the struggle, strikes the hour, and bundles the old man off into eternity. The twelve apostles are trotted out each hour. Above them is a figure of Christ, "who blesses with hands each apostle in passing," as the bill states, with mathematical exactness. At morning, noon and night a number of bell-ringers ring their respective bells with vindictive energy, and an old man drops upon his knees as if some one had kicked his legs from under him. All these and many other wonders, exposing the family secrets of the zodiac, the heathen gods, the seasons, the moon, and the globe all run regularly. The whole structure is surmounted by a cock which crows at 6 and 12 o'clock.—Pall Mall Gazette.

MINISTERS' SECRET TRADES UNION.

It is well known that there are in the United States more than 170,000 clergymen, some unemployed, and nearly all poorly paid for their labor. It is proposed to organize a Union of Clerical Brain-Workers, who shall be affiliated with the K. of L. and other unions of wage workers of various names having in view the sacred rights of labor, and the best methods of securing adequate remuneration for the same The principles recognized by the U. C. B. W. will be:

First—The duty of the churches to acknowledge the supremacy of the union, and the right of the members to demand employment.

Second—The duty of the churches to employ all members of the union at the same wages, without regard to character, capacity or qualifications.

Third—All clergymen now employed in the churches shall have the right to become members of the union.

Fourth—If any refuse to join the union the churches shall summarily dismiss them, and all members go on strike.

Fifth—All churches refusing to dismiss non-union clergymen shall be boycotted, the boycott to be continued till all members of the U. C. B W. shall be employed by the churches on the terms dictated by the strikers—meanwhile representing the churches as deadly enemies of working men, and striving to reduce them to an ignoble servitude.

Sixth—It shall be the duty of clerical strikers to prevent all regular services in the churches by "drawing" fires, "killing" organs, and assisting with fife, drum, and bones in all churches afflicted with quartet or other supernatural music.

If the members of the U. C. B. W. stand firm in the assertion of these principles, though obliged to live for a time, as do the K. of L., the Typ. U.'s, and other striking wage workers, on hash and charity—the bitter fruit of self-imposed idleness—the churches will acknowledge their supreme power and yield to all their demands or shut down.

The only objection suggested to the proposed union is the dictum of St. Paul, who says a clergyman shall be no striker. But a new version may modify this language in deference to the demand of the times; then clergymen, like some other workers, can allow their ears to grow.

SAM JONES ON DOING.

Whenever a man gets up before a community and proclaims his infidelity, then I have just one question to ask another party and one to ask him. I say: "Infidel, what are you doing for the world?" And the infidel steps up and says: "I'm fighting Christianity. That's what I'm doing." "Christianity, what are you doing?" And Christianity says: "I am rescuing the perishing and saving the fallen; I am building almshouses; I am founding churches; I am speaking words of cheer to the race; I am lifting up the fallen; I am blessing the world; I am saving men from hell; I am saving them in heaven." Why, infidel, are you fighting almshouses and orphans' homes, and churches, and happy death-beds, and pardon and peace, and heaven? Oh, get out of my presence, thou great beast! Don't tell me you are fighting such things as these! You ask me, "Mr. Jones, what's your businsss in Chicago?" It's to throw my arms around every poor lost man and bring him to peace and happiness and heaven. And now, opposers, what are you doing? "I'm going to fight that man's vulgarity and witticisms until I die." Fight what! Fight what! Lord Jesus, show us that there is something ten thousand times bigger in this than the way Sam Jones preaches, and the way Sam Jones talks. Why, that's nothing but the little bubbles on the top of the ocean—that's nothing to be talking about. This is a great work of the Gospel in saving men from hell, and that is what you ought to be talking about. Let's get up higher—get up higher and unite with one another. No preacher will ever accomplish a great work in any town as long as those who profess to be with him will get to one side and say, "I am sorry he said some things," and "I wish he hadn't said some things," and "Oh, if he had only said it in a different way." I don't care for that, but what are you doing? You're putting a club in your enemies' hands to club you down with. Let's see what we can do by uniting and praying the best influences of our hearts and lives on the salvation of the town.

JOY IN HEAVEN OVER ONE SOUL.

It has come to us with a good deal of freshness of late, how dear souls are to God. We are in the habit of measuring the divine love for sinners by the sacrifice which came to its crest on the cross. No doubt that is the true measure of the divine love and the place rightly to estimate the value of a human soul in God's sight. Nevertheless when we read that there is "joy in heaven over one soul that repenteth," we get a new apprehension of how dear souls must be to God. We have known some pastors (and have had the experience ourselves not seldom) after a meeting in which special care and effort had been made to bring men to decision, to turn away discouraged and cast down because only one soul came forward to confess Christ as Saviour and Lord. But if the repentance of that one soul was the occasion of joy in heaven, not among the angels, but "in the presence of" the angels—joy in the very heart of God made manifest even in the presence of angels—how ought we to rejoice over the conversion of souls—even over one soul.

We remember that Jesus got his disciples one by one; that he preached his most famous discourses to congregations of one; namely, to Nathaniel, to Nicodemus, and to the woman of Samaria. It was to one leper that he spake a saving word; to one sinful woman that he declared forgiveness and life. One by one he gathered them. It was for one soul—the Eunuch—that Philip was taken away from the great crowds in Samaria and sent down, by the way of the desert, to preach Jesus. Let us not underrate the value of one soul. Surely when we were converted we were but one. That was a great day to us; a great joy to our loved ones, who had been longing and watching and praying for us. It was a great joy to God, who had given his Son to die for us, as really and as wholly as if we had been the only soul which had sinned and fallen away from him. Saul of Tarsus was but one soul; and yet he was dear enough to God to warrant our Lord Jesus coming from heaven to the earth, in person, to win him to himself.

The tendency in our day is to seek after great things and large, immediate and aggregated results. We want to report accessions by hundreds and thousands, and are impatient of what has been called "hand-picking" for souls. It is true that the first great ingatherings were by the hundreds; but after that, we judge, the work of saving men went on more after the fashion of winning them one by one. —Independent.

A GRAND WORK.

And all by one lady. She lives in Allegheny. Three years ago she organized a small Bible reading circle. What a heavenly idea! She saw that the papers were read; and good books were read; and bad books were read. But the bible was often left in its loneliness for days and weeks. She had felt its inspiration; she knew how refreshing were its pages. She had experienced its up-lifting power, while cares were bearing down. Her soul had sat in its light, while trouble made darkness all around. And she desired to lead others into the way of reading the Bible and resting in its heavenly bowers a while each day. Accordingly she talked the plan over among a few dear friends. They saw the value of it; endorsed it; joined in the work; organized a circle. That circle did not die out, nor break up. It grew in interest; it multiplied in numbers. The daily readings bound the several hearts together as with silver cords; and made the precious words shine under the attentive eye, like sentences written in gold Circle after circle has been organized. A membership has been gathered numbering about fifteen hundred. These are scattered through Pennsylvania and Ohio. The rules of the society are simple and effective. A reading card is employed, by the aid of which each reader can read the same portion of the divine word at the same time.

What great good has this one lady done! How many bright hours she has brought to a multitude of souls! How many everblooming flowers she has planted in weary lives! How many crooked paths she has made straight by the council that never errs. How many names she has saved from dishonor by the timely admonitions of God! How many graces she has revived by the daily showers of doctrine, distilled from the heavens! Who will originate the next heavenly idea for the glory of God and the happiness of our race?—Selected.

A CRUEL BULLET.

A riot was raging in Bay View. Great crowds were gathering on the streets; these were met by companies of police. Stones were employed by the mob; clubs by the officers. Many were hurt, but nobody was wanting to kill. Yet the surging crowd grew so large that the police were not able to hold it in check. Six companies of soldiers were then ordered out. Along the street they moved with a firm and quick step. The rioters advanced to meet them. The soldiers leveled their guns; the officers shouted to the crowd to halt. The command was unheeded. The order was then given to fire. The dread word "fire" was no more than uttered, till the guns blazed out pain and death to the dense wave of humanity that was rolling up the street The results were terrible. A number fell and expired on the spot; others were torn and bleeding under that fierce shower of lead.

That morning a mother had prepared her darling boy for school. Carefully had she washed the hopeful face, combed the flaxen hair, and arranged his clean garments. Then placing his books under his arm, she gave him the loving kiss, and said "good bye." He had gone along the street toward his school building, with expectation of soon meeting his teacher and schoolmates. But the rushing throng came swinging around the corner, and he was carried forward in the crowd. He had no power to extricate himself. Like a piece of driftwood he was driven on. As the deadly volley was poured upon the people, he fell pierced by a bullet. When raised from the street he was dead. Poor boy! He had left his mother that morning to be brought back to her arms cold in death. Little did she think as she watched him pass out of her sight, that his clean clothes would be red with his own blood when next she would see him. It was an overwhelming hour for her when his body was returned.

The children must go to school. Their mental powers are but buds, and must be cultivated at school that each bud may grow into a strong tree. But the mother must surely have many thoughts arising on the wings of prayer, while the little ones are out of sight.—Sel.

A WORD TO YOUNG CHRISTIANS.

1. Never neglect daily private prayer; and when you pray remember that God is present, and that he hears your prayer. Heb. 11: 6.

2. Never neglect daily private Bible reading, and when you read, remember that God is speaking to you, and that you are to believe and act upon what he says. I believe all backsliding begins with the neglect of these two rules. John 5: 39.

3. Never profess to ask God for anything you do not want. Tell him the truth about yourself, however bad it makes you; and then ask him, for Christ's sake, to forgive you what you are and to make you what you ought to be. John 4: 24.

4. Never let a day pass without trying to do something. Every night reflect on what Jesus has done for you, and then ask yourself, "What have I done to-day for him?" Matt 5: 13–16.

5 If ever you are in doubt as to a thing being right or wrong, go to your room, and kneel down and ask God's blessing upon it. Col. 3: 17. If you cannot do this it is wrong. Rom. 14: 23.

6. Never take your Christianity from Christians, or argue that, because such and such people do so and so, therefore you may. 2 Cor. 10: 12. You are to ask yourself, How would Christ act in my place and strive to follow him. John 10: 27.

7. Never believe what you feel, if it contradicts God's word. Ask yourself, "Can what I feel be true," and if both cannot be true, believe God and make your own heart the liar. Rom. 3: 4; 1 John 5: 10, 11.—Rev. E. Judson.

TEMPERANCE.

THE BAD, VILE, WICKED WEED.

One of the greatest curses that has ever been brought upon man since the fall has been brought on by the excessive use of tobacco. It would exhaust all the filthy adjectives of the language to give any idea of the intense loathing with which I regard this hydra-headed curse. Our distinguished physicians say (this habit was the cause of seventy different styles of disease) this habit is the cause of nearly all cases of cancer in the mouth, as in the case of General Grant.

What is the testimony of the late Dr. John C. Warren, of Boston, than whom there is no higher authority. He says: "For more than thirty years I have been in the habit of inquiring of patients who came to me with cancer of the tongue and lips whether they used tobacco; if so, whether they chewed or smoked; and if they had sometimes answered in the negative as to the first question, I can truly say to the best of my knowledge and belief, such cases are exceptions to the general rule. When, as is usually the case, one side of the tongue is afflicted with ulcerated cancer, it arises from the habitual retention of the tobacco in contact with this part. It is also an admitted fact, that has never been successfully denied, that tobacco using takes off fully from twenty-five to seventy-five per cent of the physical vigor from the system."

Another eminent physician, for a long time superintendent of the insane asylum at Northampton, Mass., says: "Fully half of the patients who have come to our asylum for treatment are the victims of tobacco." It is a sad thing to damage the body; it is a far worse thing to damage the mind, and any man of common sense knows that the nervous system immediately acts upon the brain. More than that, nearly all the reformers will tell you that it tends to drunkenness. It creates unnatural thirst. There are those who use this narcotic who do not drink, but nearly all who drink use the narcotic, so that shows there is an immoderate affinity between the two drugs. It was long ago demonstrated that a man cannot permanently reform from strong drink unless he gives up tobacco. In nearly all cases where men having been reformed, have fallen back, it has been shown they have first touched tobacco, and then surrendered to intoxicants. The broad avenue leading down to a drunkard's grave and a drunkhard's hell, is strewn with tobacco leaves.

What did Benjamin Franklin say? "I never saw a well man in the exercise of common sense that would say that tobacco did him any good."

What did Thomas Jefferson say when arguing against the culture of tobacco? He said: "It is a culture productive of infinite wretchedness."

Horace Greeley said of it: "It is a profane stench."

Daniel Webster: "If these men must smoke let them take the horse shed."

One reason why there are so many the victims of this habit is because there are so many ministers of religion that smoke and chew. They smoke until they get the bronchitis, and the dear people have to pay their expenses in Europe. They smoke until the nervous system breaks down; they smoke themselves to death. I could name three eminent clergymen who died of cancer in the mouth, and in every case the physician said it was tobacco. There has been many a clergyman whose tombstone was all covered over with eulogy which ought to have had the honest epitaph: "Killed by too much tobacco."

In the whole English language I can find no two words that strike more terror to my soul than tobacco and rum—the twin curses. They were born in hell, and the fiat of redemption has gone forth. Their lives on earth have been one of ruin to the hopes of youth and the peace of old age. They have robbed childhood of its delights. It has stolen the laugh from the lips of innocence, the bloom from the cheek of manhood; it has touched the heart of old age like the tip of a poisoned arrow.—The Ploughman.

The drink bill of the people of the United States —that is to say, the sum spent in the purchase of intoxicating liquors, to be used as a beverage—is estimated to be nine hundred million dollars a year. This huge amount is worse than wasted, since the liquors bought and consumed entail enormous evils upon the consumers and their families, in many cases pauperizing them, and in others leading to the commission of crimes. If we suppose one-half of this sum to be the annual outlay for these liquors made by the working classes, then their drink-bill each year amounts to four hundred and fifty million dollars. If again we suppo e them to save this amount by not spending it for liquor, and not wasting it on any foolish and unnecessary luxury, they would in a single year do more to improve their condition and make life happy, than can be done by all the strikes that can be gotten up for the next hundred years. It is not so much what a man earns as it is what he saves from what he earns, that tells the story as to his condition. Let him cut off his drink bill, and his tobacco and cigar bill, both of which are worse than useless, and thus save these items of annual expense; and in a few years he will find events working in his favor. Any man can do this, and if all the working classes would do it, they would have no occasion to strike for higher wages. The conflict between capital and labor is far less serious than the conflict between rum and a successful life. Rum has a much harder heart than can be found in the bosom of any employer, and is vastly more exacting in its demands.—Independent.

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

—Mrs. Van Cott has been conducting revival services at Denver, Col., where between 500 and 600 persons have been converted.

—The First Methodist church at Springfield, Ill., reports 1,600 conversions, and the meetings are still continuing with unabated interest.

—The Metropolitan African Methodist Episcopal church, of Washington, D. C., one of the largest colored churches in the United States, was dedicated May 20th. Over 5,000 persons were present. Large numbers came from Philadelphia, Baltimore and Richmond.

—A resolution was passed by the colored Baptist ministers of Louisville lately appealing to the Legislature to remove all discriminations that hinder the colored citizens from the enjoyment of equal rights with their white fellow-citizens.

—The attention of the British Consul at Madeira has been called to a recent act of intolerance in which the Roman Catholic authorities have arrested two Protestant missionaries on the charge of having spoken in a private house against "the Saints" and against "the Host."

—It is proposed to celebrate the approaching centennial anniversary of the appointment of the first Episcopal bishop in Nova Scotia by the erection of a cathedral at Halifax.

—The Moravian states that the appeal for the expatriated Moravians of Russia for aid to get to Brazil has been successful. They lacked $1,750 for their passage money, but gifts amounting to $4,500 have already been supplied.

—Mr. Ira D. Sankey has presented to the Y. M. C. A. of Newcastle, Pa., his former home, a beautiful and completely equipped brick building, with a library of 3,000 volumes, a gymnasium, reception, and study rooms. It is three stories high, 57x101 feet, costing $32,000, the furnishing being $12,000 more. It was dedicated last month.

—Miss Ward, of the Women's Union Missionary Society at Cawnpore, India, writes to the Link that they now have 173 zenanas open to their visits, with 255 pupils, besides twenty-five schools, with 371 pupils.

—The programme for the sixtieth anniversary of the American Home Missionary Society, which will take place at Saratoga Springs, June 1 to 3, has been published. The list of prominent speakers includes the names of Wm. M. Taylor, Wm. Hayes Ward, Samuel W. Dike, H. A. Schauffler, Arthur Little, Joseph Cook, D. L. Leonard, J. Hall McIlvaine and many others.

—Washington despatches say that most of the $1,000,000 necessary for the endowment of the new Roman Catholic university has already been subscribed, and that ground will be broken for the erection of buildings next Spring.

—The clergymen of Newark, N. J., held a meeting, irrespective of creed, on Monday evening, May 24, in which they discussed the subject of the frequent drinking of working-men during the hours of labor, and the best way to prevent it.

—Mr. Henry E. O'Neill, British consul at Mozambique, in a recent address at Glasgow, said: "My experience of ten years in Africa has convinced me that the mission work is one of the most powerful and useful instruments we possess for the pacification of the country and the suppression of the slave-trade."

—Mr. Nessima, the Japanese young preacher, whose conversion and Christian character have excited so much interest, recently visited an old man who had given 700 yen for enlarging a school at Kioto. He has now built a meeting-house at Annaka costing 1,500 yen, and a large primary school-house for 400 children, and says that in doing this he has tried to imitate what the Pilgrim Fathers did when they landed on our shores.

—It is a Miss Benson who has placed the sum of $200,000 in the hands of the Rev. H. S. Hoffman and Mr. C. M. Morton to establish a Reformed Episcopal divinity school in West Philadelphia. A parish is to be connected with the seminary, and the students will assist in parochial work. Thirty thousand dollars additional has been pledged for endowment.

—There are 40,430 Methodists in Kansas. Nearly one-fourth of the entire population of that State are members of some Christian church.

—The corner-stone of the new library building at Drew Theological Seminary, Madison, N. J., was laid on the morning of the 19th ult, Bishops, Harris, Foster and Hurst being present and participating in the ceremonies.

—The dedication of the handsome building erected for the School of Christian Workers in Springfield, Mass., is to take place on June 1. Addresses will be made by Mr. T. S. Cole, of Ontario; Mr. R. R. McBurney, of New York, and others. The students will attend in a body the conference to be held in Harrisburg, Pa.

—The two "missioners" who held services in St. Paul's Protestant Episcopal church in Syracuse, N. Y., during Lent, seem to have done more harm than good to the church. They are members of a "brotherhood," and they attempted to introdnce and practice certain Romish customs, including the confessional, and, as a result, the church is very much stirred up over the matter.

—Last year eleven new Methodist churches were dedicated in Chicago district. Western avenue church was built at a cost of $40,000, and on April 18 Wesley church was dedicated free of debt, at a cost of $36,000. Most of the churches were mission churches.

—The Morgan Park Seminary, at Chicago, this year, had a graduating class of fifteen, of whom nine had graduated from colleges before entering the Seminary. President Northrup delivered an admirable address to the young men. Financially the institution is prosperous.

—Southern papers are waking to the fact that Mormon missionaries are proselyting in that section more vigorously than ever. With Chattanooga as a center, 100 Mormon elders are said to be at work, and more are expected to follow in the mountain districts of Tennessee, North and South Carolina, Georgia, and Alabma.

—Reports come from the Transvaal Republic in Southern Africa, of remarkable religious interest, greatly encouraging the Wesleyan missionary. Native Christians are preaching and teaching their countrymen without pay or reward, simply from love to Christ, and the truth they feel and believe is making progress.

—The Roman Catholics have at least ten missionaries already in Corea, have purchased a site on the main street of Seoul for a cathedral, are circulating largely tracts they have prepared, and have from fifteen to twenty young natives studying for the priesthood in their seminary at Nagaski, Japan.

—The following resolution was passed by the Baptist State Convention of California two or three weeks ago: "We deprecate the anti-Chinese and anti-Christian spirit manifested among our people toward the Chinese, and we think it ought to increase the endeavors of the faithful in seeking the salvation of the heathen now in our midst." The Convention also urged constant effort in the extension of the work of evangelization among the Chinese.

—Pastor Sciarrelli, of the Wesleyan Mission in Naples, with the aid of the Hygienic Society and several workingmen's societies, has secured the passage of a law by the Italian Chambers, making obligatory the weekly Sabbath rest to children working in factories.

—There are now fourteen Baptist churches in Mexico. The pressing need at present is the purchase of a lot in the city of Mexico on which a church-building may be erected at some future day. It is difficult to buy a lot in a crowded city like the Mexican capital, without the incumbrance of useless buildings; but it is possible now to get a lot in a good location for about $6,000. Mr. S. A. Crozer, of Pennsylvania, has offered to give $1,000 toward this sum.

—Mr. and Mrs. George Muller, of the Ashley Down Orphan House, Bristol, England, are on their eleventh long missionary journey. They propose to labor in Australia for some months. Mr. Muller entered his eighty-first year when he went forth on this apostolic work. He is just as busy as ever, and just as calm. He seems to us to be the living illustration of what Dr. Austin Phelps deseribes, in one of his fine senteuces, as the "ability to carry on the complicated affairs of a laborious life with a sense of rest in a secret force, not our own, which is all the while co-operating with us."

—The Japanese are showing a strong desire to be known as a Christian nation. There is a movement among local officials to accept the Roman Catholic form. Protestants should make a general movement for a strouger foothold in Japan.

—Birmiugham Eng., people are getting themselves disliked on account of the manner in which they are cheating the mild Hindoo, by supplying them with heathen gods made of inferior wood and painted with cheap paint. This will cause the heathen to throw up the worship of idols, and another home industry will be lost.

—A petition signed by one thousand barbers has been sent to the Metropolitan Board of Police in Boston, requesting the enforcement of the law against keeping barbers' shops open on Sunday.

—The censns of 1881 showed that there were in Ireland 3,951,888 Roman Catholics, 635,670 Episcopalians, 485,503 Presbyterians, 47,669 Methodists.

—The Southern Presbyterians of Kentucky raised $100,000 in two months to endow Central University. Five individuals contributed $80,000 of it.

—The New York Episcopal City Mission reports 160 public, and 166 private services held, with an aggregate attendance of over 12,000 persons.

—A successful crusade is being carried on in Chicago by the Citizens' League, agaiust pool-rooms patronized by boys. In the month of April 219 charges were brought against saloon-keepers by the society, almost all of which were sustained by the courts.

—At a meeting of the Evangelical Alliance in Boston May 10th, resolutions of sympathy with the Chinese were passed, requesting Congress to pass such legislation as is necessary for their protection in this country.

—On the eve of a visit to Europe, the late John Welsh looked casually over the books of the Episcopal hospital at Philadelphia and noticed that its debts amounted to $18,000. Two days later, when he was on the ocean and beyond the reach of thanks, the managers received his check for the full amount.

—The growth of the Friends in the West during the past twenty years has been very large. In 1875, there was one yearly meeting, that of Indiana, with 17 quarterly meetings, and 27,300 members. Last year there were five yearly meetings, 58 quarterly meetings and 53,310 members.

—The Rev. Dr. McVickar, in an address at the enrollment meeting at Wilmington, Del., gave some very striking facts. In less than fifty years the cannibal Sandwich Islands have been Christianized, and now send missionaries to other lands. In fifteen years the cannibals of Fiji have 22,000 church members, 57,000 children in schools, and half the popnlation are church-goers. In Madagascar, in 1861, there were 2,000 Christian martyrs, and from the 50 converts left there have since sprung 5,000. Forty years ago there were no Protestants in China; nine provinces are now supplied with mission stations, and there are thousands of converts. In 1878 the missions of the world report for the year 60,000 converts.

—The Presbyterian General Assembly, in session in Minneapolis, Minn., has resolved to hold the 100th assembly, that of 1888, in Philadelphia, to commemorate the completion of the first century of American Presbyterianism by suitable exercises; to call for a thank-offering, during the two intervening years, of five millions of dollars for the Boards of the church, and to invite the Southern General Assembly, now in session in Augusta, Ga., to unite with them in this celebration. The invitation was conveyed by telegraph.

—A movement is in progress in New York City for a revival of the Evangelical Alliance of the United States and to greatly enlarge its scope and purpose. At a meeting held at the residence of Wm. E. Dodge, Esq., the plan was set forth. As an argument in favor of this action it was nrged that there are certain problems in the field of religion and morals in this country that can hardly be satisfactorily wrought ont unless the co-operation of all the evangelical Protestant churches can be secured. Among these are the relation of religion to education, the temperance question, Mormonism, the labor question, and the evangelization of the cities. It is intended to hold a meeting at Washington later in the year, to elect an executive secretary, and go to work in earnest.

OBITUARY.

Elder Noah Thomas, a well known itinerant exhorter, died at the residence of H. L. Burnside, Maryland, N. Y. He was 84 years old. His mind became disordered some thirty years ago, his derangement leading him to believe that he was to be married somewhere between 1890 and 1895, and have a son. and that the whole world would be converted. He at that time bought a wedding suit consisting of a swallow tail coat, knee breeches and silk stockings. He never wore the suit and was buried in it on Sunday. He was sick about four weeks. He never was married.

You will notice that the list of names of those ordering "Masonic Outrages," grows week by week. The orders are all the way from one copy to twenty-five. It is now evident that Mr. Hinman will not be able to complete the compilation as soon as he had hoped to. Please remember that we do not promise them at any stated time, but will mail them as soon as issued, which we hope will be during this month. Those sending for the pamphlet, with the money, will find their names in the list as an acknowledgment and receipt for their money.

Orders for "Masonic Outrages" have been received from the following:

James C Allix, Chas T Collins, Wm H Robbins, Jas Rignold, W H Parker, Mrs Rufus Parker, Jno Hines, D R Mitchell, J Ramsey, Mrs Haire, H H Cannady, S A Pratt, Mrs E A Rowley, C M Strickler, M M Ames, J C Young, F R Griffin, M Ingalsby, Jr, Chas W Morris, L T Fuller, W Lockhart, P Findlay, A C Snyder, W H Blakeslee, J Chadwick, Rev. F H Gates, H Plummer Sr, M L Howe. Prof W L McGowan, Rev E J Clemens, P Howe, H. Siemiller, J Fait, J Ring, N Miner, M Caldwell, Wm Grossman, Mrs. B F Searles, T Gibb, D J Santimier, S Bingham, A C Bundy, Rev Rice, J R Alcock.

How many more shall we hear from before another week closes?

We wish to add many more names to this list. Send your names and post-office address with the money. We cannot open a book account, as would be necessary if we did not require money in advance. When your name and money is received your order is at once entered in the shipping book and you will receive the book as soon as we can get it out. We hope to issue it by the middle of June, but cannot say positively how soon. It is being compiled by Rev. H. H. Hinman as fast as his other duties will permit.

We want one thousand orders in advance. Send in your names.

CHRISTIAN NATION.

The issue of the Christian Nation for June 2d will be an exceedingly valuable one. for the reason that it will contain,

1. Portraits of the Hon. Felix R. Brunot, president of the National Reform Association; Rev. T. P. Stevenson, D. D., corresponding secretary and editor of the Christian Statesman; Rev. D. McAllister, LL. D., treasurer; Revs. W. J. Coleman, M. A. Gault, R. C. Wylie, and President Scovel, of Wooster University, prominent among representative men whose eloquent voices are always pitched to the highest key in proclaiming against national evils, and urging national reform. And in the center of this brilliant group will be found the faces of our now saintly heroes, J. R. W. Sloane and A. M. Milligan.

2. An accurately prepared and entertaining history of the National Reform Association and movement, by the Rev. W. J. Coleman.

3. Articles and letters upon, and indorsing, the principles of the National Reform Association, written by college and university presidents, professors, authors, ministers, judges, military men, eminent men, women, etc., etc.

Making, altogether, a paper of great attractiveness, interest and value.

Price per copy, 10 cents. Sent postpaid on receipt of price.

A Wonderful Woman, A Wonderful Life, AND A Wonderful Book.

Laura S. Haviland is a quiet, gentle, unassuming Quaker woman, 76 years of age, yet vigorous, who has had a remarkable career of usefulness, and has now given to the world a remarkable history of her "Life Work" as a teacher, at an early day, of the colored refugees in Canada and in Michigan, and in other States, as a traveler down South in the guise of a "berry picker," helping out into freedom many slaves; as a nurse and preacher to the sufferers in hospitals during the war; and with Gov. St. John and Flizabeth Comstock, relieving the destitute and suffering refugees in Kansas.

BETWEEN TWO OPINIONS.

BY E. E. FLAGG.

Author of "Holden with Cords," "A Sunny Life," "Little People," etc.

The Best Story of the Reform.

Price, only $1.00.

Published by THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

This latest and best of Miss Flagg's works is now ready in handsome print, neatly bound. The story begins in a quiet New England home, and paints its homely joys with a delicacy and truthfulness worthy the hand of Harriet Beecher Stowe. The scene then changes to a thriving, growing, palpitating young Western city, and with great power and startling accuracy the writer leads us behind the scenes that we may see the machinery that works the liquor traffic and labor troubles. The story of the strike, the mob, the attempted assassination, the saloon-keeper's wiles, the curse of his trade, the power of the Christian faith to change him to a messenger of mercy, the criminal and the hidden power that shields him from justice, the land robbers tricks, the dark and secret conspiracies of the lodge—these and all the incidents of the book are portrayed with rare tact and great power of description. It is emphatically a book for the hour. And what is better and yet more striking, the incidents are facts, and every one a powerful and convincing argument against the lodge and the saloon.

Every temperance man and woman should read this book. No temperance story like it was ever planned, much less ably executed. A wonderful light is thrown upon the difficulties in the way of prohibition. Learn how they may be avoided.

Every one who loves to read a good story, chaste and elegant in expression, p in thought, true in incident, deeply interesting in its narrative, should read this bc

READ THESE NOTICES FROM THE PRESS:

The Free Methodist, Chicago.

"Between Two Opinions" is a story, its incidents vouched for as facts, which presents a powerful argument on these questions and must attract thousands of readers among our thinking and observant people. The plot of the story is neither startling nor novel, but it develops a wonderful strength in following the experiences of people in the common, everyday walks of life.

Free Press, Birmingham, Iowa.

It differs from the popular story, "The Bread-winners" of a year ago. It greatly differs from that book in that it is written from the Christian standpoint, and its beautiful and touching descriptions of home life and home duties and heroic self-denyings will waken a responsive echo in every heart, that has not by dissipation lost the taste for the pure joys of home.

The Religious Telescope, Dayton.

The author, Miss Flagg, is a brilliant writer. The stirring questions in American politics are undoubtedly prohibition and the labor movement as championed by the secret unions of working men, which direct the strikes that with more and more frequency occur in our cities. "Between Two Opinions" is a story, its incidents vouched for as facts, which presents a powerful argument on these questions, and must attract thousands of readers among our thinking people.

The Christian Conservator, Dayton.

This is a charming book, written in an attractive manner. It is so full of sunshine and so radiant with light that one is enlightened, warmed, and, before they are conscious of it, set against the lodge. The style gleams, glows and sparkles. It is dignified and simple. It is the right book to place in the hands of your wife or daughter to superinduce co-operation with you in anti-secrecy work. Every minister's wife should read it, and then, if her husband is not an Anti-mason, he should take his turn next and become one.

The American, Washington.

We are reading, in spare moments, Miss Flagg's new book, "Between Two Opinions," and the estimate we have thus far put upon it is that it is masterly both in style and argument. One is insensibly made to feel that he is reading facts and not fiction; that the book is not a play upon the imagination but an unraveling of mysterious circumstances which have an important bearing upon current events.

Law and Order, Boston.

The book takes high ground for prohibition of the liquor curse, for woman's ballot for home protection, and for a better and more honest brotherhood than is forced by their obligations upon the members of secret orders. It is, therefore, a valuable book for several large classes of American readers.

Christian Instructor, Philadelphia.

There are important questions pressing upon American politics to-day; two of them are prohibition and the labor question as connected with the secret unions of workingmen. This work is an expose of the twin evils, secret societies and the saloons. The truths are given in the form of a story; not startling, but thrilling experiences of home life that are vouched for as facts. The evidences presented of the impossibility of reaching the saloon keeper so long as he and the officers of the law are sworn brothers in the den of some secret society, are conclusive enough to awaken the most careless and obtuse member of society. It is a valuable book for the masses to read.

Evangelist, Berea, Kentucky.

The object of the volume is to illustrate the practical workings of Secret Societies, and especially to show how the Lodge upholds the saloon, and this very important design is wrought out with much skill, clearness and power. By reading it temperance people may learn much about the difficulties in the way of prohibition.

The Standard, Chicago.

It is written in the interests of reform, more especially temperance and Anti-masonry. The title of the story suggests the special aim of it, which is to protest against all "halting between two opinions;" in other words, is a plea for radicalism. The story is vigorously written, and will interest even readers who do not altogether believe in its doctrine.

The Pacific, San Francisco.

It is a story intended to do service against the saloons, and in favor of Womans' Christian Temperance work, and especially against the secret orders—Freemasons, Odd-fellows, the Knights of Labor, etc. No reflecting man can doubt that any combination of picked classes and individuals is liable to great abuse. It is obvious, also, that secret orders are specially capable of being used in a selfish and unprincipled way.

THE BROKEN SEAL;

Or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene.

One of the most interesting books ever published. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper covers, 40 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

This deeply interesting narrative shows what Masonry has done and is capable of doing in the Courts, and how bad men control the good men in the lodge and protect their own members when guilty of great crimes. For sale at 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO, by THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION

FARM AND GARDEN.

FRUIT NOTES.

The average farmer finds plenty to do this month. All kinds of crops need attention and cultivated crops especially, yet a little time can profitably be spared in caring for the fruit plants. With late fruits thinning should be attended to. Many consider this a good time to prune. If time can be spared, the work can be done, if it has not been attended to previously. I prefer earlier pruning where limbs are taken off. Small shoots can be pinched off and if this is done before any considerable growth is made it can be done much easier than later. Young trees especially should be trimmed back in order to prevent an overgrowth of wood that afterward will fail to harden. If not done before, newly set trees should be mulched early this month. Stir the soil thoroughly around the stem and then apply a good mulch of old straw bagasse or leaves. Seedlings need sufficient cultivation to kill out the weeds thoroughly and keep the soil mellow, so as to secure good, vigorous plants.

Grafts should have all the shoots taken off so that the growth will go to the graft, insuring a more vigorous plant.

Grape vines will need pinching back and especially where given a good soil, and thorough cultivation. With fruits of all kinds, tree and small, it pays to give clean cultivation. If given clean cultivation from the start the work of keeping out the weeds becomes easier every year. If you do not wish new plants, keep the runners cut off from strawberries. Larger and more vigorous plants, insuring larger and more fruit, will be secured if this is done now. Raspberries will be the better for a mulching given this month in order to keep the soil moist.

Just how much pinching back, pruning and thinning should be given to plants and grapes depends on the vigor and growth of the plants. Do not go to extremes in either direction is generally the best plan.

If the season is very dry, as is often the case, watering the strawberry plants will be found very beneficial, while on the other hand, if excessively wet, care should be taken to secure good drainage or the fruit will be in pieces as well as the plants.

In garden culture, where extra large fruit is desired, watering with diluted liquid manure will be found very profitable. If you have only secured a small supply of plants and set them out in the spring with the expectation of propagating so as to secure a larger number of plants in the fall and following spring, pains should be taken to cultivate and manure so as to receive as strong a growth as possible. Runners will start from strawberries at any time now, and in order to secure strong, vigorous plants, cultivate well and cut out a portion of the runners from each plant. Cut off the ends of black and red raspberries plants; do not let them grow too long—four feet is plenty long—some do not allow them to grow over three.

As soon as the grapes begin to grow, bag those that are fine in paper bags, such as can be readily secured from the groceryman: slip over the bunch of grapes, gather reasonably close together around the stem, and pin. Keep a close watch for insects of all kinds; do not let them get a start. It is much easier to get rid of them then than after they get fully established.

Fruit intended for market should not be allowed to get too ripe, and especially where it is to be shipped any considerable distance. Work up your home market; if you do this properly, you will find it more profitable than shipping to a distance.

Why should a hog be allowed to wallow? This is a pertinent question at this season. A hog should be allowed to wallow, first, because it reduces the bodily temperature. The nose of the hog is near the ground; his body is compact, and is composed largely of fat compared with muscle; hence he gets hot, and needs a cool wallow. Another reason for allowing the hog to wallow is that in this way he gets rid of any vermin which may be upon his body. The lice, etc., are imprisoned in the mud, and scratched off with it. But the best reason of all is that this is the hog's way of cleansing his hide, and keeping the millions of glands open. The mud and water loosens the filth, and the hog scratches himself clean. As these glands opening on the surface of the skin throw off more dead, poisonous matter, than the lungs and kidneys combined, preventing their closing is of the highest importance, and this the hog accomplishes by wallowing.

Groom the horses outside of the stables. The horse is rather fastidious, and detects any bad odor or any filth about his food. He is not apt to relish his hay and oats if the manure, etc., from his body, removed and converted into dust by the comb and brush, has settled in the feed trough. Besides, part of the matter removed from his body is the dead matter thrown off by the glands, and taking this into the stomach and lungs, as he will be compelled to do if the grooming is done in the stables, will poison his blood. Groom thoroughly. The comb is a good instrument in its place, but the brush should be used more than the comb. Clean the hide as well as the hair. Grooming is to preserve the health of the horse even more than to give him a decent appearance.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. A historical sketch of the institution and a critical analysis of the character of each degree, by Prest. J. Blanchard, of Wheaton College. Monitorial quotations and nearly four hundred notes from standard Masonic authorities confirm the truthfulness of this exposition and show the character of Masonic teaching and doctrine. The accuracy of this exposition legally attested by J. O. Doesburg, Past Master Unity □ No. 191, Holland, Mich., and others. This is the latest, most accurate and complete exposition of Blue Lodge and Chapter Masonry. Over one hundred illustrations—several of them full page—give a pictorial representation of the lodge-room, chapter and principal ceremonies of the degrees, with the dress of candidates, signs, grips, etc. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1.00.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished, with engravings showing the lodge-room, dress of candidates, signs, due guards, grips, etc. This revelation was so accurate that Freemasons murdered the author for writing it. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Prest. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper cover, 25 cents; per dozen $3.50.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. To which is appended "A Revelation of the Mysteries of Oddfellowship (old work,) by a Member of the Craft." The whole containing over five hundred pages, lately revised and republished. In cloth, $1.50 each; per dozen, $14.50. The first part of the above work, Light on Freemasonry, 416 pages, 75 cents each; per dozen $7.50.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern. A book of great interest to officers of the army and navy, the bench and the clergy. TABLE OF CONTENTS: The Antiquity of Secret Societies, The Life of Julian, The Eleusinian Mysteries, The Origin of Masonry, Was Washington a Mason? Fillmore and Webster's Deference to Masonry, Brief Outline of the Progress of Masonry in the United States, The Iammany Ring, Masonic Benevolence, the Uses of Masonry, An Illustration, The Conclusion. 50 cents each; per dozen, $4.75.

Masonic Oaths Null and Void; or, Freemasonry Self-Convicted. This is a book for the times. The design of the author is to refute the arguments of those who claim that the oaths of Freemasonry are binding upon those who take them. His arguments are conclusive, and the forcible manner in which they are put, being drawn from Scripture, makes them convincing. The minister or lecturer will find in this work a rich fund of arguments. 207 pp., postpaid.....40 cts.

The Mystic Tie, or Freemasonry a League with the Devil. This is an account of the church trial of Peter Cook and wife, of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a reverend Freemason; and their very able defense presented by Mrs. Lucia C. Cook, in which she clearly shows that Freemasonry is antagonistic to the Christian religion. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Morgan's Exposition, Abduction and Murder, and Oaths of 33 Degrees. Composed of "Freemasonry Exposed," by Capt. Wm. Morgan; "History of the Abduction and Murder of Morgan;" "Valance's Confession of the Murder of Capt. Wm Morgan;" Bernard's Reminiscences of Morgan Times," and Oaths and Penalties of 33 Degrees; 304 pages.

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry, by E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge, No. 639, Chicago, gives the correct or "standard" work and ritual of Masonry; the proper position of each officer in the lodge room, order of opening and closing the lodge, dress of candidate, ceremony of initiation, the proper manner of giving the signs, grips, etc., are fully illustrated and explained. First three degrees. Paper cover, 35 cents.

Masonry a Work of Darkness, adverse to Christianity, and inimical to republican government. By Rev. Lebbeus Armstrong (Presbyterian), a seceding Mason of 21 degrees. This is a very telling work and no honest man who reads it will think of joining the lodge. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Secret Societies. A discussion of their character and claims, by Rev. David McDill, Prest. J. Blanchard and Rev. Edward Beecher. In cloth, 35c. per doz. $3.25. Paper cover, 15c. Per doz. $1.25.

Reminiscences of Morgan Times. By Elder David Bernard, author of Bernard's Light on Masonry. This is a thrilling narrative of the incidents connected with Bernard's Revelation of Freemasonry. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Freemasonry Self-Condemned. By Rev J. W. Bain. A careful and logical statement of reasons why secret orders should not be fellowshiped by the Christian Church, and by the United Presbyterian church in particular. Paper covers; price 20 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

The Master's Carpet, or Masonry and Baal Worship Identical, explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the lodge, and proves that Modern Masonry is identical with the "Ancient Mysteries" of Paganism. Bound in fine cloth, 420 pp.....75cts.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 Degrees of Freemasonry. To get these thirty-three degrees of Masonic bondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion. A clear, cutting argument against the lodge, from a Christian standpoint. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern, and College Secret Societies. Composed of the two pamphlets combined in this title, bound together in Cloth. $1.00 each; per dozen, $9.00.

Odd-fellowship Judged by Its Own Utterances; Its Doctrine and Practice Examined in the Light of God's Word. By Rev. J. H. Brockman. This is an exceedingly interesting, clear discussion of the character of Odd-fellowship, in the form of a dialogue. In cloth, 50 cents; per dozen, $4.00. Paper covers, 25 cents; per dozen, $2.00. German edition, entitled "Christian and Ernst," paper covers, 50 cents each. The German edition is published by the author.

Sermon on Odd-fellowship and Other Secret Societies, by Rev. J. Sarver, pastor Evangelical Lutheran church, Leechburg, Pa. This is a very clear argument against secretism of all forms and the duty to disfellowship Odd-fellows, Freemasons, Knights of Pythias and Grangers is clearly shown by their confessed character as found in their own publications. 10 cents each; per dozen 75 cents.

Other Secret Society Rituals.

History of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm Morgan. As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan. This book contains indisputable, legal evidence that Freemasons abducted and murdered Wm. Morgan, for no other offense than the revelation of Masonry. It contains the sworn testimony of over twenty persons, including Morgan's wife; and no candid person, after reading this book, can doubt that many of the most respectable Freemasons in the Empire State were concerned in this crime. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Temple of Honor Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of "The Templars of Honor and Temperance," commonly called the Temple of Honor, a historical sketch of the order, and an analysis of its character. A complete exposition of the Subordinate Temple, and the degrees of Love, Purity and Fidelity, by a Templar of Fidelity and Past Worthy Chief Templar. 25 cents each; per dozen $2.00.

Knights of Pythias Illustrated. By Past Chancellor. A full illustrated exposition of the three ranks of the order, with the addition of the "Amended, Perfected and Amplified Third Rank." The lodge-room, signs, countersigns, grips, etc., are shown by engravings. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Sermon on Secret Societies. By Rev. Daniel Dow, Woodstock, Conn. The special object of this sermon is to show the right and duty of Christians to examine into the character of secret societies, no matter what object such societies profess to have. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

A Masonic Conspiracy, Resulting in a fraudulent divorce, and various other outrages upon the rights of a defenseless woman. Also the account of a Masonic murder, by two eye-witnesses. By Mrs. Louisa Walters. This is a thrillingly interesting, true narrative. 20 cents each; per dozen $2.00.

Judge Whitney's Defense before the Grand Lodge of Illinois. Judge Daniel H. Whitney was Master of the lodge when S. L. Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the lodge but he boldly replied to the charges against him and afterwards renounced Masonry. 15 cents each; per dozen $1.25.

National Christian Association.

General Washington Opposed to Secret Societies. This is a republication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8th, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life—undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin Trial. Also the letter of Hon. Richard Rush to the anti-Masonic committee of York County, Pa., May 4th, 1831. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14th, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons, swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' Letters on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Thirty most interesting, able and convincing letters on the above general subject, written by this renowned statesman to different public men of the United States during the years 1831 to 1833. With Mr. Adams' address to the people of Massachusetts upon political aspects of lodgery; an Appendix giving obligations of Masonry, and an able Introduction. This is one of the most telling anti-secrecy works extant, aside from the Expositions. Price, cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00. Paper, 35 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

In the Coils; or, the Coming Conflict. By "A Fanatic." A historical sketch, by a United Presbyterian minister, vividly portraying the workings of Secretism in the various relations of everyday life, and showing how individual domestic, social, religious, professional and public life are trammeled and biased by the baneful workings of the lodge. Being presented in the form of a story, this volume will interest both old and young, and the moral of the story will not have to be searched for. $1.50 each; $15.00 per dozen.

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the five degrees of Female Free Masonry, by Thomas Lowe; comprising the degree of Jephtha's Daughter, Ruth, Esther, Martha and Electa, and known as the Daughter's Degree, Widow's Degree, Wife's Degree, Sister's Degree and the Benevolent Degree. 20 cents each; per dozen, $1.75.

Stearns' Inquiry into the Nature and Tendency of Freemasonry. With an Appendix treating on the truth of Morgan's Exposition and containing remarks on various points in the character of Masonry, and a Dialogue on the necessity of exposing the lodge. 338 pages: cloth, 60 cents each, per dozen, $5.00. Paper covers, 40 cents each; per dozen, $4.00.

Mah-Hah-Bone; comprises the Hand Book, Master's Carpet and Freemasonry at a Glance. Bound in one volume. This makes one of the most complete books of information on the workings and symbolism of Freemasonry extant. Well bound in cloth, 589 pp.....$1.00

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery, comprising the degrees of Royal Master, Select Master, Super-Excellent Master, Knight of the Red Cross, Knight Templar and Knight of Malta. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00; $8.50 per dozen. Paper covers, 50cts; $4.00 per dozen.

Grand Lodge Masonry. Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Prest. J. Blanchard, at the Monmouth Convention. The un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

The Broken Seal; or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene. One of the most interesting books ever published. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper covers, 40 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

Exposition of the Grange. Edited by Rev A. W. Geeslin. Illustrated with engravings, showing lodge-room, signs, signals, etc. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Good Templarism Illustrated. A full and accurate exposition of the degrees of the Lodge, Temple and Council, with engravings showing the signs, grips, etc. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Five Rituals Bound Together. "Oddfellowship Illustrated" (old work), "Knights of Pythias Illustrated," "Good Templarism Illustrated," "Exposition of the Grange" and "Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic," are bound together in Cloth for $1.00; per doz., $9.00.

Sermon on Masonry, by Rev. James Williams, Presiding Elder of Dakota District Northwestern Iowa Conference, M. E. Church—a seceding Master Mason. Published at the special request of nine clergymen of different denominations, and others. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

College Secret Societies. Their customs, character, and the efforts for their suppression. By H. L. Kellogg. Containing the opinion of many prominent college presidents, and others, and a full account of the murder of Mortimer Leggett. 20 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic, with signs of recognition, passwords, etc. and the ritual of the Machiniats and Blacksmiths' Union. (The two bound together.) 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

United Sons of Industry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the secret trades-union of the above name, giving the signs, grips, passwords, etc. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Thirteen Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason. By Rev. Robert Armstrong. The author states his reasons clearly and carefully, and any one of the thirteen reasons, if properly considered, will keep a Christian out of the lodge. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate. By Rev. A. L. Post. Proof of the sinfulness of such oaths and the consequent duty of all who have taken them to openly repudiate them. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

HOME AND HEALTH.

INTERNAL USE OF HOT WATER.

The number of invalids, semi-invalids, and those in fair health, who sip hot water in the morning of each day, is astonishly large. The habit has become suddeniy fashionable; and, if we had no worse fashions to complain of, the world would be vastly improved. Still, however beneficial the free employment of hot water may be to some, it is not an agent which can be indiscreetly used without harmful effects. The employment of hot water for internal use originated in this country; and so eminent a medical authority as the London Lancet speaks of it as a "valuable American contribution to medicine." Dr. Salisbury of Cleveland claims to have been the first to suggest its use, and it is probable that his claim is well founded. Hot water is at present very much used at random, and but little is popularly known regarding the proper and safe methods of its employment. The questions relating to the proper times of admistration, the number of ounces to be swallowed(both at meals and in the intervals between), and the temperature, are very important, and should be well considered. The therapeutical uses of hot water may be varied; but it would seem that its beneficial employment is pretty well established in those diseases arising from unhealthy alimentation. In these affections, the stomach and bowels become distended and obstructed by the abnormal acetic, butyric, hydrosulphuric, lactic, and saccharic acid fermentations; and the idea is to wash away these offending matters, and thus aid in introducing normal functional action. Cold water is in most cases inadmissible, as it is apt to produce distress in sensitive stomachs, as has been stated in a former article. Hot water is well borne in most cases; but it must not be lukewarm, it must be hot. And here is a distinction it is well to observe.

Tepid water, if taken in considerable quantities, will sometimes produce vomiting; but, if the water be raised to a temperature of from 100o to 150o F., it produces downward movements of the bowels, instead of upward. Tea as drunk by dyspeptic tea-drinkers is preferred at a temperature of about 120o F., and this decoction at this temperature affords great relief to persons of weak stomachs. The demand by dyspeptics for tea "hot and weak" is founded on observation that in this form it affords genuine relief. If the tea-leaves were left out altogether, the agreeble relief would follow from the use of the hot water with a little milk and sugar added. By hot water is meant water which is so warm that it can only be sipped slowly, and not poured into the stomach as a draught. In the absence of a thermometer, the proper temperature may be determined by the effects upon the tongue and fauces; it must not be "scalding hot," but so warm as to be swallowed without inconvenience or danger.

As regards quanity no fixed rule can be given. Perhaps half a pint may be regarded as a minimum, and a pint and a half, a maximum quanity to be taken at one time. The object being mainly to wash out the alimentary canal, carrying down the slime, yeast and bile through normal channels, a few ounces can have but little effect in accomplishing such results. It is assumed that the liver and kidneys are greatly influenced by the hot water treatment, and that they are washed as well as the intestinal canal; the bile being eliminated through the bowels, and not through the blood via the kidneys.

The best time to use hot water is probably about one hour before meals, and in some instances, half an hour before retiring to bed. The most important time of all, however, is the hour before breakfast in the morning. The digestive apparatus of the weak and morbid needs cleansing after a night of rest—or unrest, as in the case of invalids. A half or whole pint of hot water taken upon getting out of bed in the morning will in most instances soon break up morbid conditions of the bowels; and natural peristaltic motions will be established even in obstinate cases.

It may be necessary, in some instances, to medicate the water slightly, and thus improve its taste, and add to its activity. A few drops of tincture of ginger, a half-teaspoonful of tartrate of soda, or sulphate of magnesia, are unobjectionable adjuncts to the water, and indeed sometimes are necessary. The practice of using hot water may continue so long as it is found to give relief, and so long as it contributes to the establishment of "inward cleanliness," and consequent robust health. Those in sound condition may use hot water with advantage occasionally throughout life.

The therapeutical influence of water, hot and cold, has been imperfectly understood by physicians; and this is not strange considering the circumstances under which it has been employed. It has been supposed, when patients were sent to famous springs for treatment, that it was the "salts" in the water to which the cures were due; but now, observing medical men look upon the "salts" with distrust, and these take at least a secondary place as curative agents in their minds. The small quantities of mineral ingredients in some mineral springs, so called, render their waters in many cases unobjectionable; but there are other famous springs, which, as stated in the last number of Science News, are decidedly objectionable.

Pure water is what is needed, and this can be obtained at any clear boiling spring in granitic regions or sections of the country. The waters of wells in the country, and aqueduct waters in many cities, are pure enough for domestic or medicinal use. The writer (editor of the News) has been compelled to nurse a defective physical organization for nearly two-thirds of a century; and among the means employed to arrest abnormal waste of tissue, or remove functional obstructions has been the use of water hot and cold. Hot water has been used for many years according to methods alluded to in this brief paper, and can attest the importance of the remedy. Those with defective organization need fewer drugs, plenty of pure water, pure air, and suitable, properly cooked foods.

HORSFORD'S ACID PHOSPHATE,

As an Appetizer.

DR. MORRIS GIBBS, Howard City, Mich., says: "I am greatly pleased with it as a tonic; it is an agreeable and a good appetizer."

ALL-NIGHT INHALATION!

"A positive revolution in the treatment of Air-Passage Diseases of the Nose, Throat, and Lungs, and, for the purpose designed, as valuable a discovery as vaccination."

THE PILLOW-INHALER.

A Speedy, Positive and Permanent Cure for Catarrh, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Incipient Consumption.

It is a hair pillow, with reservoirs of evaporating liquid, the fumes or vapor of which is inhaled all night long, whilst sleeping as usual, and without any discomfort. It is used only at night, and is perfectly safe to the most delicate. There is no stomach-dosing, douching or snuffing; but just as a smoky lamp will leave a deposit on a whitened wall so the PILLOW-INHALER, for say eight hours at a time, spreads a powerful healing balm or salve on the inflamed inner coating of the diseased air-surfaces, from the nostrils to the bottom of the lungs, and hence into the blood. Old-fashioned inhalation, through a tube, for a few minutes a day, sometimes cured. Think of eight hours constant action, on the same principle, but intensified a hundred-fold! There are no pipes or tubes. The medicine is breathed in, not swallowed, and goes right to the diseased parts.

CATARRH. BRONCHITIS. CONSUMPTION.

HON. E. L. HEDDEN, Collector of the Port of New York, says: "I take pleasure in stating that the PILLOW-INHALER has been of the greatest relief, and I believe of permanent benefit, to my wife, who has been a great sufferer from Bronchial and Catarrhal Troubles, accompanied with distressing Asthma. I recommend its use to all persons afflicted with such maladies."
E. L. HEDDEN, 38 West 49th St., New York.

MR. H. G. TEELE, 50 Bryan Block, Chicago, Ill., says: "I suffered fifteen years from a severe case of Catarrh; coughed incessantly day and night. I bought a PILLOW-INHALER, and since using it my cough is gone; my lungs are no longer weak and sore, and I am in better health than I have been for years."

During the six years of its existence the PILLOW-INHALER has wrought cures of Catarrh, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption, that have been more like miracles than the usual treatment of disease. It is not expensive, and is within the reach of every one. Send for Explanatory Pamphlet and Testimonials, or call.

IN THE COILS;

— OR —

The Coming Conflict.

A NEW AND STRANGE STORY BASED ON STARTLING FACTS, VIVIDLY PORTRAYING A MYSTERIOUS AND DANGEROUS POWER AT WORK IN THE GOVERNMENT, THE CHURCH, AND THE HOME.

"All will agree that this is a powerfully written story."—Evangelist, (Chicago, Ills.)

"A book which we trust may have a wide circulation."—National Baptist, (Philadelphia.)

"So intensely interesting did I find it that it was hard to pause until the last sentence was read. This work places the author high among the writers of fiction."—W. W. Barr, D. D. in Christian Instructor, (Philadelphia.)

"Unless we are greatly mistaken, the work will do more to awaken the American church and people to the evils of Freemasonry than any other book recently published."—Evangelical Repository.

"The book will create a sensation in Masonic circles, and evoke criticism of a most relentless character. The courage of the author in attacking such a rock-rooted bulwark as Freemasonry is something to admire, Fanatic though he be."—Nebraska Watchman.

"Light is needed on this subject and needed badly, and we welcome this contribution to the literature of anti-secretism, and cordially commend it to the favorable attention of our readers."—United Presbyterian, (Pittsburgh.)

"A charming work, fit to be classed with 'Uncle Tom's Cabin;' it is indeed less a work of fiction. The volume is as valuable as a work of reference as it is agreeable, truthful and useful. Our young folks will not leave the book, if they begin it, till they 'see how it turns out.'"—Cynosure, (Chicago, Ills.)

Thick paper, beautifuly bound, 352 pages, sent to any address for $1.50. AGENTS WANTED.

BATAVIA CONVENTION PAMPHLET.

LUCILLE VERNON.

Cloth.....75 cents.

THIS is a pleasant surprise in many ways. The author is Rev. W. T. Meloy, of the United Presbyterian Church of Chicago, and the book is published by the Board of Publication of his denomination. It is a love story, not "fascinating," but with so much of genial interest that the reader is in no danger of laying it down unfinished. * * * The moral purpose of the book is to describe and vindicate Christian character, in its more heroic aspects, and it is a success. We congratulate the author and the United Presbyterian Board of Publication on this literary lily of the valley.—The Interior.

"LUCILLE VERNON" is evidently not an ideal sketch, but the fictitious names used represent to a great extent real men and women of flesh and blood. The characters of many of them are by no means attractive, but are perfect counterparts of querulous, obstinate and parsimonious professors who are thorns in the flesh of many a pastor in all the churches. But as in all the churches, there were also good and true men and women at Lansington, who upheld and encouraged the pastor. * * * In its author will be recognized the worthy pastor of the First United Presbyterian Church of Chicago, and a welcome contributor to these columns.—United Presbyterian.

The heroine, who becomes the bride of the pastor of the church at Lansington, is a wonderful exemplification of how a woman who is a true wife and help-meet may throw her life and energies into the great work of saving souls; aiding, by gentle words and sympathy, wise counsel and brave endurance, the husband having charge of a congregation where the Demon of Misrule held full sway. We follow with interest the history of the wife and husband through their hours of despondency and discouragement to the happy ending, where religion, harmony and peace have gained the ascendency and the good man and wife find their reward.—Pittsburgh Daily Telegraph.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

WASHINGTON.

The most notable event in Washington since we last wentto press is the marriage Pres. of Grover Cleveland to Miss Francee Folsom, at the White House, Wednesday, June 2d, at 7 P. M. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Byron Sunderland, D. D. pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Washington, D. C., who is the President's pastor. He was assisted by Rev. Mr. Cleveland, the brother of the President. Mr. and Mrs. Cleveland started at once for Mountain Park in Western Maryland, where they are to spend ten days. The whole affair was conducted in dignified republican simplicity.

President Cleveland sent to the Senate the name of David F. Hawkins, of Missouri, to be Assistant Secretary of the Interior, vice George A. Jenks, resigued.

Senator Cullom submitted as an amendment to the river and harbor appropriation bill the Hennepin Canal bill.

At the National Capital Friday the House Committee on War claims listened to an argument by Judge Fullerton, of New York, representing the Confederate bondholders, who urged the redemption of those bonds by the government.

The reductiou in the public debt for the month of May was $8,828,566 and for the eleven months $96,800,264. For the fiscal year ending June 30, 1885, the reduction was $63,464,708, while for the current fiscal year it may uow be safely put at $105,000,000.

Reports of the Agricultural Department to the lower House of Congress say the wheat crops of India, Australia, and South America, already harvested, are 32,000,000 bushels less than last year, while the product of the United States promises to exceed last year's yield by fully 100,000,000 bushels. The wheat in the United States, May, 1 last was 104,000,000 bushels, against 152,000,000 bushels in 1885.

Secretary Manning, in a letter to the President, tendered his resignation as head of the Treasury Department, because of his continued ill health. President Cleveland in reply earnestly requested Mr. Manning to accept a leave of absence until the first of October.

It is understood that Secretary and Mrs. Manning will leave Washington Saturday afternoon for Hot Springs, where they will probably remain a month.

Senator Morrill has submitted a proposed amendment to Senator Platt's open executive session resolution which makes this resolution apply to reciprocity treaties instead of to nominations.

The United States House of Representatives passed the oleomargarine bill, the only amendment made being on the rate of tax, which is fixed at 5 cents per pound.

COUNTRY.

The Rev. Dr. A. E. Kittredge, pastor of the Third Presbyterian church, formally announced to his people yesterday morning his resignation of his pastorate and his acceptance of a call to New York city.

The Centralia fruit train on several successive days took out fifteen car loads of strawberries for Chicago.

The General Assembly of the United Presbyterian church adjourned Wednesday at Hamilton Ont., and will meet next May in Philadelphia. A resolution was passed prohibiting members from joining associations which might lead to acts of violence or interference with the rights of property or liberty of men.

Three additional arrests of alleged rioters were made Thursday at Milkaukee. The Grand Jury is said to be considering the case of Robert Schilling, a prominent labor agitator.

A mortgage of $8,000,000 on the terminal property of the Chicago and Great Western Railway, in the vicinity of Chicago, was filed Friday in the office of the Secretary of State of Illinois.

Gold has been discovered in the neighborhood of Louisiana, Mo., the assay showing $7 gold and $1 silver per ton.

At Cleveland Wednesday night, certain delegates of the Knights of Labor Convention charged that Mr. Powderly was scheming to become governor of Pennsylvania, and that he was running the order on Roman Catholic principles.

At Erie, Pa., Thursday the family of William Harper, comprising eight persons, were poisoned by eating rhubarb, and are in a dangerous condition.

A six foot vein of coal has been struck at Kinmundy, Ill.

The Knights of Labor Couvention at Cleveland passed a resolution Monday requesting Congress to declare the national election day a legal holiday. Propositions were submitted that patents for public lands be given only to actual settlers; that grants forfeited be immediately taken up by the government: that after 1886 aliens be prohibited from acquiring title to lands, aud that fences be removed from the public domain. Congress is asked to pass a law prohibiting minors from working in shops, factories, or mines, more than eight hours per day.

The Presbyterian General Assembly adjourned Monday afternoon to meet in Omaha next year.

We notice in the Craftsman, the organ of the secret labor unions in Washington, D. C., that a concerted movement is to be made to drive out the Chinese laundrymen of that city. It says "that the Chinese should go, is a self-evident fact; that they must go rests with our citizens." There are thirty or forty Chinese laundries in the city of Washington with its more than 200,000 inhabitants. No class of people are more industrious, peaceful and law-abiding. The pretext for the proposed raid is that in a single instance opium smoking has been discovered. We join hands with the Craftsman in seeking the legal suppression of so baneful a vice. But how about the 1200 saloons of the city that night and day dispense poison, misery and crime? We suggest an amendment: The saloon-keepers must go. We can better afford that a few Chinamen should do good laundry work for fair wages than that our national capital should be disgraced, our uational laws trampled on, and our national city made the most criminal in the land by the prevalence of this abomination. In the interests of the laboring men of Washington, D. C., we demand that the saloonists shall go.

The rioting of the Orangemen at Belfast, Ireland, which is described in this paper, was subsequently renewed with great violence, and resulted in the killing and wounding of a great number, many of whom were simply lookers-on. It should be remembered that this is only the last of a long series of riots, extending through many years, by which this secret order has brought disgrace on Protestant Christianity, on law, government, and Christian civilization. English speaking people on both sides of the water are learning the lesson that the same kind of secret idolatries that in Ezekiel's day (Ezek. 8: 18) "filled the land with violence," and provoked God to anger, are the burden and shame of our times. But for Orangeism, and the spirit it has engendered, a Home Rule measure would have been adopted that would have secured peace to Ireland and unity to the Empire. Protestants of Ulster owe it to themselves and to the Christian world that they shake off the twin demons of Freemasonry and Orangeism.

The onward sweep of the Prohibition movement is so abundantly evident that not its friends only, but its enemies and those who profess indifference, are forced to take note of it. North Carolina, which a few years ago, gave an overwhelming opposition vote to a prohibition amendment of the constitution, is now giving good majorities for local option. Raleigh, the capital of the State, has gone "dry." The colored vote, because of ignorance, is still largely on the wrong side, but even theirs is steadily changing. In the Dominion of Canada the progress of the temperance reform has been even more rapid than in the United States. Nova Scotia is the last of the provinces that has legislated on this question. It is now practically under prohibitory laws. It is said that large orders for liquors from the West Indies, France and Spain have been countermanded. The law was passed May 23, and takes effect from its passage.

"The Red American Inter-national Workingmen's Association" is the expressive title of a division of the Secret Empire on the Pacific Coast, which has for its objects the overthrow of all legitimate authority and the substitutiou of the rule of brute force. We are far from charging all members of workingmen's associations with anarchical designs, but we do affirm that the tendency in all organizations that by reason and means of secrecy, deny all resposibility to public opinion, and that subordinate the rights of the individual member to the control of the "order," do inevitably tend to the subversion of all government except that of the secret lodge. Nor is this a mere theoretical deduction. The history of secret societies all over the world, but especially in our country during the last ten years, shows that lawlessness, violence and crime have been a constant outgrowth. So long as" he that doeth evil and hateth the light, neither cometh to the light lest his deeds should be reproved," we may expect the constant association of secrecy and crime. It is high time that workingmen discarded all but open and legitimate methods.

France owes the largest national debt of all nations, has an unusual number of insane, idiots, and deformed people, and the reason given is the use of wines and tobacco. Paris has a larger consumption of alchholic drinks and a larger number of drunkards arrested than any other city.

It has long been the plea of the opponents of Prohibition that the true remedy for the evil of drunkenness is the free use of wine and beer; that those who use light intoxicants are not disposed to drink distilled spirits and are rarely the victims of intemperance. Some prominent men still cling to this absurdity, but fortunately it is being abundantly proved to be the reverse of the truth. A few years back Switzerland was pointed to as as an illustration of a people that were temperate because they used wine. Latterly the government and leading men in both secular and religious life have awakened to the fact that they were fast becoming a nation of drunkards, and that legal restraint must be put on the traffic.

France is another illustration. Between Romanism and infidelity, war and intemperance the most gifted nation in Europe seems verging on bankruptcy and physical degeneration. No where in the world is there greater need of earnest preaching and a practical application of the Gospel.

The fiscal report for the year endiug June 30, 1885, showed the tax paid for liquor to have been $1.72 for every man, woman, and child in the United States, whereas, in the State of Maine the government tax was only $0.04 per capita, in Vermont $0.03, in Kansas $0.08. Such figures prove better than any other way that prohibition does prohibit.

When the whisky men tell us that prohibition does not prohibit, but rather increases the traffic and still keep on fighting it with a determination that is worthy of a better cause, we infer that they are lying. The only wonder is that any one should think them sincere. When Masous tell us that our opposition to the lodge increases their membership and answer us with anger, falsehood and violence, we think that, like the boys who whistle when they go through the burying ground, they are trying to keep their courage up. The boys, however, are more excusable since they try to deceive no one but themselves. In either case the onward sweep of the truth is telling on the fortresses of wickedness. It is only a question of time when the lodge and the liquor traffic will be among the things that were.

The granting of an injunction by Judge Hearker restaining Grand Commander Linn of the St. Alban Legion of Select Knights from any authority to suspend members of that body pending an appeal to the Supreme Legion of Select Knights, which meets at St. Paul in October, 1887, indicates the power which the courts exercise over these voluntary organizations. We believe it to be a recognized legal principle that all voluntary organizations can be required to obey their own laws and that they can be restrained from any violation of any rule whereby any member is injured. This being conceded, it ought to follow that the courts have a right to inquire what are the laws, regulations, ceremonies, customs, and, in short, everything pertaining to such organizations. If this principal were once recognized and acted on, there would be an end to secret societies.

Dr. Abbott, of the Massachusett State Board of Health, says "there have been reported in that State during the past forty years just seventy-five deaths from hydrophobia." Now if some of the red-nosed people who have been so excited over hydrophobia will gather the statistics of the number of people killed by whisky in Massachusctts in the past forty years, it would be interesting to try the case of mad dogs vs. whiskey, and see which is the greater enemy of mankind.

We think it apparent to the most casual observer of current history that hydrophobia, like whisky, has existed for an indefinite period, and all efforts for its suppression have been largely abortive. The most that has ever been accomplished in either case has been regulation and restraint. As the license system has been maiuly relied on for the control of the whisky business we respectfully suggest that it be applied to the management of rabies. It is believed that under a judicious license system the number of mad dogs might be considerably diminished, their general character improved, and the revenues so increased that the burdeu of taxation would be materially lessened. We would urge particularly that the licensed dogs be restrained from biting minors, persons habitually afflicted with hydrophobia, or others, on the Christian Sabbath. We think, too, that the owners of such dogs should not allow them to prowl after twelve P. M., and before five, A. M., and we are inclined to favor the eight-hour rule. We wish to assure our mayor and board of aldermen, for whose benefit we make these suggestious, that in offering them we are actuated by the highest regard to all rabid and hydrophobic animals, whether quadrupeds or bipeds.

In Moses' time it seems to have been oxen rather than dogs that afflicted people and had to be provided against. It seems to have been one of the "mistakes of Moses" that he did not become the "ox that pushed with his horn," but instead, provided that "if in time past he hath been want to push with his horn" and the owner hath not kept him in, and "he hath killed a man or a woman, the ox shall be stoned and his owner put to death." That was prohibition, and shows that Moses must have been a "fanatic," that he had no just conception of the true province of civil government, which is not to teach men religion or morals, but to raise women and protect all interests, that of cattle-dealers as well as others. Wheu modern philosophy shall prevail and we shall have a revision of the Decalogue at least, if not of the whole Pentetuch, it will have been found that cattle and whisky dealers are alike engaged in business that involves momentous interests, and that they "ought to be made a source of perpetual reversion" to be distributed among the States, and thus lessen the burden of taxation for the support of paupers and criminals. Fortuuately, however, for Moses, he had no paupers to provide for, and heuce his "mistakes" are less conspicuous.

MORAL BACKBONE.

BY PETER PLOWSHARE.

Taking a stroll through this busy life we are very much impressed with the diversity of character manifested by individual members of society and by groups of such individuals. One person will demonstrate his fitness for occupying a certain position, while another will, with equal force, demonstrate his absolute unfitness to fill any place other than a corner in life, perhaps, or, like decimal ciphers, crowd a good unit further from a place of usefulness.

If you meet a person who is able to make his way against all odds, and take a firm position for right, you say, "he had moral backbone."

This is a world of labor and trial, and we are really glad it is so, and there are many persons who are able to labor and reach out a helping hand to humanity, and endure severe trials for no selfish purpose, but for the purpose of doing good; have hearts so filled with love for fellow-beings, that hardships that may be encountered are scarcely taken into consideration. Such persons have "back-bone."

There are those with whom we often meet, too, who desire to be ranked with philanthropists and list themselves with the "good fellows" of the earth. Now, if there were no difficult paths to tread, no mountains to climb, no foes to face, no battles to fight, these would be in the front, calling friends to follow. But, as it is, they emphasize the fact that they lack moral backbone.

In the days of anti-slavery agitation, how many were to be found who hated the institution of slavery as they hated the devil, yet lacked courage to make known how they felt. They were thus, by lack of moral back-bone, lending assistance to that accursed system of oppression and brutality with all their weight, what little weight they had.

Others who, in after time, when it became popular to oppose slavery, indorsed the principles of the Abolitionists, lacked moral back-bone to even "make up their minds" as to the right and wrong of slavery, acting neutral as to thought. Some of these same persons afterward said, "We knew it would be so in time;" therefore never made much ado about it.

But, on the other hand, look back to the words and actions of some of the leading Abolitionists in the earlier days of the anti-slavery movement and note how men and some of the noble women manifested to the world that they had moral back-bone by arousing the people to thought and action, though brought to face death in their efforts.

You have the history before you, and from the facts as they are presented to us let us gather inspiration for the harder struggles in the cause of right still left for us to fight out, all of which require back-bone.

Secretism is sapping the life-blood of our nation and people, and to be true to national principles of right, to the social interests of humanity and to the Lord Jesus, it is necessary that we take a firm stand against the secret empire.

To do this will require the prayerful settling down to the fact that to accomplish anything in the battle for righteousness we must determine to remain in the field of action to the end; end of life, or end of the conflict, when the cause of anti-secretism have triumphed.

Friends may become enemies; members in good standing in society may oppose; influential persons in pulpit and on platform may denounce your efforts; the press may endeavor to crush your reputation; yea, even men have been murdered for making known their opposition to the lodge-power, and the writer has in mind one who now carries a bullet in his body as he "goes about doing good" because he dared oppose the secret empire.

If you succeed in this warfare for the Saviour and humanity, courageously meeting the foe at each point, denouncing the iniquities of the lodge, and demanding the good to be separate, then you have demonstrated to the world that you possess MORAL BACK-BONE

OUR RELATION TO THE LAW OF GOD.

BY JOS. W. MORTON.

In the New Testament, as well as in the Old, the phrase, "the law," sometimes designates the Decalogue; sometimes those laws that "hang" upon the Decalogue; and sometimes, the entire body of laws, as recorded by Moses. It is our relation to the Decalogue, or Moral Law, that we are now to consider.

Every precept of the Decalogue was in full force before it was written on tables of stone. The worship of one God; abstinence from idolatry; reverence toward the name of God; Sabbath-keeping; filial and other domestic duties; respect of human life; chastity; honesty in dealings; truthfulness; abstinence from covetousness—all these were duties binding upon all men before the law was given at Mount Sinai.

The Decalogue specifies nothing besides that which was binding "from the beginning." It says nothing of circumcision, of tithing, of sin-offerings, of the Passover, of baptism, of the Lord's Supper, or of any other ceremony or ordinance that was instituted after man's relations to God and his fellow-men had been fully established. As it regulates relations that are in their nature immutable, it contains nothing that can pass away.

"Love is the fulfilling of the law." The first table enjoins love to God; the second love to man. Whoever disobeys the Decalogue, sins against love and rebels against God; for "God is love."

James says: "Whosoever shall keep the whole law, and yet offend in one point, he is guilty of all." Hence, he that breaks even "one of these least commandments," is in rebellion against God, and "shall be called least in the kingdom of heaven."

Paul says: "The law is holy, and the commandment holy, and just, and good." Hence, he that disobeys the Decalogue, or any portion of it, opposes holiness, justice, and goodness, and therefore sins.

Jesus says: "I came not to destroy, but to fulfill [the law] and the connection shows that he referred mainly to the Decalogue. Now to "blot out" the law of sacrifices, or any other ceremonial law—the "hand-writing contained in ordinances, which was contrary to us"—is strictly to fulfill it; for it was made to be blotted out; but to blot out or repeal any portion of the Decalogue is not to fulfill it, but to destroy it; for it was intended to be perpetual, and it is to be obeyed, and not abolished.

Abraham, like the modern believers, was "not under law, but under grace;" for the law, as a covenent, was not given for four hundred years after his time; but he had the self-same precepts written in his heart; and he yielded to them a true and spiritual obedience.

God promised, through the prophet Jeremiah, that he would write his laws in the hearts of his people, referring to the time of the Gospel. He does not intimate that these laws should be different from, or contrary to, the Decalogue. On the contrary, it is plainly implied, that the very same laws that were "written and engraven in stones" should be written "in the fleshy tables of the heart."

The repeal of the legal covenant, of which the Decalogue may be said to have been a part, did not repeal the Decalogue itself. Paul, after his conversion and expulsion from the Synagogue, was just as much bound to obey the moral law as he had ever been before. "Do we then make void the law through faith? God forbid! Yea, we establish the law." He was no longer bound to offer sacrifices; but he was bound to reverence God, to observe the Sabbath, to practice chastity, and to speak the truth.

It may be true, that there are higher duties required of a Christian than were enjoined upon Adam, Abraham or Moses; but it does not follow that the Christian is released from those lower duties. He is a man, as well as a Christian, and, as a man, owes duty to God and his fellow-men, the same as Adam did.

Neither Jesus nor his apostles laid down any complete code of morals. They constantly referred to "the law," as the recognized standard of right and wrong. Jesus ordained the special law of baptism, and that of the Lord's Supper.; and he gave a fuller emphasis to the law of love, especially love to the brethren; but further than this he seems not to have gone. And it is emphatically true, that he never uttered a single word derogatory to the Decalogue, or any one of its precepts.

In reality, the Decalogue is the law of Christ, as well as that of God the Father. The "Spirit of Christ" moved upon the hearts and guided the pens of patriarchs and prophets; and the Ten Commandments revealed by Christ the Word.

"God is spirit; and they that worship him must worship him in spirit and truth." All true and acceptable obedience must be spiritual;but this is perperfectly consistent with a literal obedidience. In fact, a voluntary and conscious violation of the letter of a law is impossible while the heart is engaged in its spiritual observance.

"By the works of the law shall no flesh be justified." "By the law is the knowledge of sin." "Christ hath redeemed us from the curse of the law, being made a curse for us." The law can never give life to the sinner; for his best obedience is imperfect, and he has broken it a thousand times. Neither can it shut the believer out of heaven; for he trusts in a Saviour who has perfectly obeyed it and endured its penalty in his stead. In this sense, and in no other, are believers "not under law but under grace." "Shall we sin, because we are not under law but under grace? God forbid." Shall we refuse to obey the law, because it can not give us life? Shall we refuse to eat the Lord's Supper, because that act of obedience will not save us?

In much that Paul wrote about the law, he had in view those who, "being ignorant of God's righteousness, were seeking to establish their own righteousness." Hence, he sometimes seems to disparage the law. As a matter of fact, however, he has borne the most ample and emphatic testimony in its favor. Even David himself has not magnified the law more than he.

When Paul speaks of what he calls "a shadow of things to come," he refers to those ordinances that typified the Christ and were fulfilled in him; such as new moons, feast days, annual Sabbaths, rules for eating and drinking, washings and purifications; all of which, with the sacrifices, were "nailed to the cross." The weekly Sabbath and the family, God's first and best gift to innocent man, surely were not nailed to the cross, as among the things that were "against us."

When Paul says: "The old things are passed away; behold, they are all become new," he does not mean that the Decalogue has ceased to be the perfect rule of moral conduct, and may be broken by the believer at his pleasure; but that there had been a radical change in the believer himself. The old slavish obedience has been changed to "new obedience;" harduess and impenitence, to "godly sorrow," unbelief, to faith; despair, to assured hope.

"O how love I thy law! It is my meditation all the day." "For I delight in the law of God, after the inward man." "Open thou mine eyes, that I may behold wondrous things out of thy law."

BE COURAGEOUS.

BY NINA HOWARTH.

A few months ago, while passing along a street near the heart of the city, I noticed a house under process of erection, and upon which there seemed to be a goodly number of workmen. A little past noon, on my way home, I again passed the house while the men were at their dinner. Having some Anti-masonic tracts and two old copies of the Christian Cynosure with me, I selected several leaflets and one of the papers, and, with the prayer, O God, add thy blessing, for Christ's sake! threw them in at one of the windows.

A few days since, being out for the purpose of distributing reading matter, I called at a residence on the same street, four blocks below the new building. The bell was answered by a little girl of perhaps eight summers. On asking for the lady of the house, she conducted me into the parlor, saying she would call mamma.

While waiting, I took up the Bible which lay on a table; opening it, there lay "Tract No. 1, Part First, History of Masonry" and the leaflet, "Inaction Means Death." Good! whispered my heart. I had barely time to replace the Bible, when a lady of about thirty, with a sincere, honest face, entered the room, and greeted me pleasantly. I promptly introduced my business. She seemed uncommonly interested and willing to listen, though I thought she appeared rather guarded in her speech. This I did not mind, knowing her interest should soon get the better of her discretion. Of course, I could afford to be magnanimous, and supply every deficiency.

I had not yet spoken on the subject of Masonry, when the husband returned home, and at once came in quest of his wife, who gracefully introduced us, mentioning the object of my call, etc. He was a a fine-looking fellow, and I found him politely attentive, and frank in the expression of his views, until, after dwelling at some length upon the points of my faith, I inquired if he was so fortunate as to have a life-interest in one, or more, of the numberless secret organizations with which the world was blessed to death. Then I fancied his face bore the least possible trace of annoyance, while he replied:

"No, I am not."

"I suppose you regard them as being very beneficial in their effects upon mankind?"

"Well, madam, not having had any experience in that direction, I fear I have no right to form an opinion."

"You must have witnessed events in which at least 'one secret order' was represented and bore a conspicuous part?"

"Why, I can't say that I have never seen any of their public parades; but I don't see how this display, which strikes me as being mere child's play, can affect mankind favorably or otherwise."

"Is that really all the knowledge you have of the character of secretisms?"

Here his wife turned upon him a sudden and, I thought, warning glance.

Said he: "I have no direct knowledge; how could I have without joining them?"

"Have you never seen an exposition of Masonry, or of some of its parasitical shoots?"

"But you see, one could never know anything positive for or against them unless he had been initiated into their mysteries. In this ceremony he is sworn, is he not, never to reveal any of the secrets of the institution? Now, if he violates the oath by which he was admitted to the membership of the lodge, what is his testimony worth?"

"Allow me to ask what you would do if you found yourself oath-bound to a universal band of robbers and cut-throats?"

He made no reply to this query, but I saw the thrust was conviction's poignant dart; and, deeming it unwise to press the subject further at this interview, I arose to depart, saying, "You will please excuse me for trespassing so long upon your time; besides my importunity may seem impertinent.

"Oh no," was the simultaneous response of both. "We want to hear more, if you can give us the time."

"I tell you, my friends, I neither love nor fear this power, nor can I admire the fear that is so excessive as to bind the tongue and conscience of those who know it to be a stupendous evil in the sight of God, and a pitiless tyrant in man's sight. If I stay longer, you must throw off that slavish restraint and speak your mind freely. Do you know you are now illustrating one of the most diabolical characteristics of this insubordinate power?"

"No; how so?"

"One of the strongest elements of its success is its power to intimidate; indeed, since the exposition of its secrets, its life mainly depends upon keeping the individual mind in mortal dread of its capacity and disposition to strike in secrecy and darkness all who dare antagonize, or even question, its principles, plans and purposes."

Said he: "That is just it. I am in business, and would like to succeed. I would very much object at having all the Masonic Brotherhood in this city pledged to work my moral and financial ruin. I would not like to have my name connected in any way with a public disclosure opposed to lodge power."

"Very well, your name will be withheld, if I report this interview. Now, please be less chary, and give me your opinions with regard to this secret government, stronger than any open force, upon the earth."

"I never knew anything about Masonry until last summer, when I built a house on this street, just above here. One day, when coming from dinner, the carpenter found some Anti-masonic papers lying on the floor under one of the front windows. I did not know anything of this, however, for three or four days; as the men were reading and discussing the probabilities of the truth or falsity of the statements made in them. The foreman on the job was a Mason, and had, from time to time, suggested by vague mysterious hints, that if the rest of us would join some secret brotherhood, especially the Masonic, we would soon find ourselves on the 'mount'—good fortune. Myself and two of the workmen had decided to avail ourselves of the signal benefits to be derived from an affiliation with so grand and philanthropic an institution. Had those papers fallen into the Masonic hands of the foreman, the rest of us would never have been made wiser by them. They were handed me by one of the two men who were, with myself, to join the lodge, and learn something about it. There," said he, "read these papers and let me know what you think about them."

I did so, after which I told him if he wished to unite with the Masonic lodge, or any other lodge, he could do so on his own responsibility. I should give the sham concern as wide a birth as possible.

Said he: "That is just what we say," meaning himself and the other man, who had escaped the snare.

"This is the most important decision you ever made. The pagan sun worship of the lodge is no longer a secret. Among the last of seceders were some—ministers of the Gospel and others, all honorable, God-fearing and intelligent men—who made affidavits to the genuineness of the expositions. Its entrenchments have been punctured, until all who desire to do so, may become familiar with its heathen mythology without going through its degrading initiation ceremonies, by which you sign a compact, which only the death of you can fill. Investigate this matter thoroughly, be brave and take a firm stand against it, in obedience to the will of God, and leave the result with him."

I gave him some more reading calculated to increase his antipathy to lodge government and practice; took my leave, with the promise to call as often as convenient.

To all who read the Cynosure, especially its lady readers, I would say, be persevering and courageous. If it were not for the moral and physical cowardice which this image power inspires, the ranks of the opposing party would swell to grand proportions. Those who would be ashamed to betray the least sign of fear on the battlefield of his country, when the balls are falling thick and fast around him; laying low, the comrades by his side, will unblushingly signify the most abject fear of this invisible foe, of every principle of justice and right. In the strength and confidence imparted by a consciousness of having Christ for a co-worker, let us wield the "sword of the Spirit" in combatting this fearfully constructed organization with unfaltering trust in God, with whom all things are possible.

WHAT THE PAPERS SAY.

What Mr. Powderly has done to build up the order of the Knights of Labor has been more than balanced, we think, by what Martin Irons has done to break it down. Probably it will ultimately be found the best policy for each laborer to be his own knight. In that case the worthy knights would rise to the positions they deserve, unencumbered with a load of rules, orders and assessments, by leaders, perhaps less wise and worthy than themselves. Every Knight of Labor should read the examination of Martin Irons, which will be found in this sheet.—Weekly Witness.

When every laborer "shall be his own knight," and there is free competition in both labor and capital, there will be far greater business prosperity and better rewards for labor.

"America may boast of putting down the monstrous system of boycotting, which the British Government was unable to do in Ireland, where it originated. The walking-delegates, a dozen of whom loafed for many days round a poor little woman's cake and pie bakery to prevent all people from dealing with her, will walk no more on such business. The Bakers' Union of this city employed them, as did many others, to do such work, and assessed the orders and unions to pay all such expenses, and they tamely submitted to be taxed. The picket delegates who watched if any man would dare to drive a street-car, and if he did, batter him with stones, may recline on their laurels. They will no more smash car windows or break the heads of men who have a perfect right to run those cars if they choose."—Weekly Witness.

Perhaps not. But let us not boast until we are out of the woods. The same organizations that instituted the strikes and boycotts still exist. They still declare the same purpose of controlling the labor market in their interests, and to this end have provided for the inauguration of strikes and boycotts whenever they may think themselves aggrieved. They still claim and exercise the same secret despotic and irresponsible power, and they still order their members to do unlawful acts. We are not out of danger, nor shall be, until these organizations are either suppressed or radically changed in character.

The Nation says: It is evident to even the most careless political observer that the temperance movement, which has for several years played so important a part in the politics of certain Western States, is spreading with great rapidity to nearly all parts of the Union. Its growth in New York and New Jersey during the past winter has been especially noticeable, and it is safe to say that it is causing the Republican managers in both States more uneasiness than anything else.

Speaking of those who wish to vote for a principle it says: That the temperance question furnishes such a principle, no body can deny. The increase of the liquor-selling evil is so alarming that no man who is interested in sobriety, and order, and good government can fail to be made serious by it. It confronts him on every street-corner in all our cities, and makes him inclined to cast his vote with any party which will make an honest effort to mitigate or even to suppress it altogether. Therein lies the second and greatest cause of the present temperance movement. The truth, too, of the prohibition party's charge, that neither of the regular parties can be trusted to grapple with this evil, cannot be gainsaid. The Democratic party, indeed, makes no pretensions of such purpose. The Republican pretensions are worthless, because there is no sincerity behind them.

THE ORDERING OF STRIKES.

One of the principles of the labor associations, known as the Knights of Labor, consists in the fact that the individual members thereof are practically subject to some official authority that determines for them whether they shall strike or not, and if they do strike, how long it shall continue, and upon what terms it shall be discontinued. This authority may be that of an executive committee, or it may be vested in a single person, or it may be that of the association to which one belongs. The ordinary members are expected to do, and, indeed, pledged to do, just what they are directed to do, without any exercise of their own judgment in the matter, and without reference to the consequences, either to themselves or to others. They are ordered to strike, and that is enough.

"We don't know why we are on a strike, except that we were ordered to strike," is the answer which a striker recently gave to the Congressional committee appointed to investigate the labor question. This answer covers the case of the great mass of the workingmen who engage in strikes. They strike because they are ordered to do so, even when they do not believe in the necessity or wisdom of such action, and can not obey the order without serious injury to themselves. There is a sense in which they dare not do otherwise. Not to obey the order would expose the individual to some species of penalty. He belongs to a secret society that demands his obedience, and, if he refused to obey, would violate a fundamental rule of membership, and would not be a good and faithful Knight of Labor. He might be expelled from the association, and would be sure to provoke the indignation and hostility of his associates in the society, and might subject himself to violence at their hands.

The mere statement of the case shows at a glance that the workmen who place themselves in this position dispossess themselves of a most important right—namely, the right of free and unrestrained self-control in respect to their own labor. As to what it is best for them to do, and as to what they shall do, they subject their own judgment and discretion to the arbitrary dictation of others, and virtually enslave themselves. If the position were forced upon them they would denounce it as a species of slavery, totally inconsistent with their right of free contract, which includes the right of work for any one who chooses to hire them, and upon such terms as may be mutually agreed upon. If the position were not self-imposed, it would be an outrage upon the rights of the workingman, not remotely unlike the outrage of Negro slavery in this country in other days.

We do not believe that any workingman will, in the long run, and on the whole, find himself a gainer by this voluntary surrender of his individual rights to any labor organization, or to any officer or officers appointed thereby to take charge of his interests. He has, and can have, no assurance that the organization or its officers will judge for him more wisely than he can judge for himself. He best understands his own situation, his owns wants, and what it is best for him to do. No other man has so deep an interest in his situation as he himself has, or will be likely to think so carefully on the question whether he shall quit the work of his employer or not, and then take the consequences in the loss of wages and in the difficulties of being re-employed. It costs the workingman something to be a Knight of Labor. He has to pay an admission fee as well as certain dues from time to time, in order to raise funds for the purposes of the organization. We are of the opinion that the fundamental principle upon which strikes, under the management and control of labor organizations, usually proceed, involves a surrender of individual liberty which no one can safely make, and hence, which no one should make. Every workingman had better retain and exercise for himself the right of free contract in respect to his own labor, and keep clear of any labor organization that requires the surrender of this right. Such is the practical judgment of the great mass of the wage-earners of this country, as shown be the fact that it is only a mere fragment of them that has ever had anything to do with labor unions.

The general fact which confronts the workingmen of this country, is that strikes, inaugurated and managed by such unions, have in most cases failed to improve their condition, and have also entailed enormous losses upon the strikers, for which they have received no adequate compensation in the way of benefits, while they have, in numerous cases, led to the commission of crime. This, we say, is the general fact, and it shows something essentially false and erroneous in the whole striking theory as applied by labor organizations. A remedy that works so poorly, so inadequately and so often disasterously to the real interests of labor ought not to be considered the sovereign panecea for all the ills to which labor is exposed. It furnishes no solution of the labor problem, since it entails more evils than it removes. If workingmen expect to solve this problem by strikes, then they will, if they try the experiment, find themselves mistaken. The facts, so far as the experiment has been tried, are against this theory.—Independent.

THE SECRET EMPIRE.

THE KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS.

The following statements taken from the Knights of Pythias Journal show the condition of that order in Ohio: "Number of members January 1, 1885, 12,656; initiated during the year, 1,829; admitted by card, 145; reinstated, 204; total additions, 2,178; total, 14,734. Deductions: withdrawn, 183; suspended, 1,197; deceased, 72; total deductions, 1,452. Membership December 31, 1885, 13,282; net increase for 1885, 726. Financial condition: total receipt, $101,323.13; paid for the relief of brothers, widowed families, and burying the dead, $23,101.72; number of brothers relieved, 881; number of widowed families relieved, 41."

It will be noticed, first, that like Masonry, the actual increase of the order is very small in proportion to the number of initiations. The great majority of those who are lured by curiosity or greed to unite with the lodge soon discover their mistake, so that the increase is not large.

Second, like Freemasonry the amount paid for relief bears but a meager proportion to the amount received: less than twenty-five per cent of the amount paid. There is not a Christian organization of any sort, Catholic or Protestant, that does not do vastly better than this.

RED MEN.

There are three tribes in Atlanta—the Comanches, the Cherokees and the Mohawks—all of which are composed of good, live and wide-awake men, and have a large membership. The Great Council met at Atlanta on the 11th of this moon. The Great Incohonee was present and was enthusiastically received. A grand parade was held in the morning, which was a great success, and which the daily papers of the city claim made a good impression on the pale faces who witnessed it, and will induce many to become adopted into the Order. Rev. Bro. Lee introduced the Great Incohonee to the meeting preceeding the kindling of the Great Council fire, to which the Great Incohonee fittingly responded. The Great Sachem, Senior and Junior Sagamores and others also spoke. The Great Council kindled its fire with the following chiefs present:—

Great Prophet, W. H. Hafer, No. 6, Atlanta. Great Sachem, James Humphries, No. 9, Augusta. Great Senior Sagamore, T. D. Bell, No. 1, Atlanta. Great Junior Sagamore, L. D. Duval, No. 9, Augusta. Great Chief of Records, Jacob Emmel, No. 1, Atlanta. Great Keeper of Wampum, W. J. Fletcher, No. 1, Atlanta. Great Sannap, S. C. Griffin, No. 9, Augusta. Great Mishinewa, L. G. Kirby, No. 6, Augusta. Great Guard of Wigwam, M. Kapham, No. 9 Augusta. Great Guard of Forest, L. S. Morris, No. 1, Atlanta.—Wampum Belt.

THE RED AMERICAN WORKMEN'S ASSOCIATION.

A late authoritative dispatch from Seattle, W. T., reads as follows: The United States Grand Jury has found indictments against ten leaders of the recent anti-Chinese riots in this city. The Jury's report, which was submitted recently, is an extraordinary document. It alleges that evidence has been laid before the Grand Jury sufficient to convince them that there exists throughout the country a treasonable organization known as the "Red American International Workingmen's Association." This organization is described at great length. Among other things the report says: "This association, with all its branches, is essentially anarchical in theory and practice. The main articles in its creed are

ARSON, ROBBERY AND MURDER.

Its proclaimed purpose is the overthrow of our government, and the erection upon its ruins of a so-called socialistic commonwealth. The policy pursued by this association is to secure control of all labor organizations and particularly of Knights of Labor; to see to it that the officers of all labor organizations are chosen from the scientific Socialists; to employ every means to produce discontent among the people, and to stir up on all occasions and at all such times as much strife and agitation as possible.

"More than a year ago the Pacific Coast was selected as the most favorable ground on which to start a movement for the subversion of the government. Last fall branches of this organization were established at Seattle, Tacoma, Olympia, and other points on Puget Sound. The agitation of was to be made at once the pretext and cover for the treasonable operations of the band of scientific Socialists. The labor organizations were, although unknown to the main body of members, systematically worked to promote the treasonable objects and purposes of the scientific societies. All the disturbances and outrages on Puget Sound for the last six months, arising nominally from the agitation of the Chinese question, were really fomented, incited, guided, and produced by this infamous association, whose real aims and designs have been studiously kept from the knowledge of the real workingmen of labor organizations.

"The scientific Socialists of the 'Red American International Workingmen's Association' are, as shown by unmistakable evidence before us, secretly instructing their deluded, ignorant, and brutalized followers in the means of how to seize armories and military stores; how to prevent the departure of troops from concentrating points; how to preserve order in centers of insurrections; how to imprison and destroy men of property and influence.

"To accomplish this end this association instructs its members to be particularly active in labor organizations. This red-handed body of assassins has settled upon our portion of the Union as the first point of attack. They say in their secret circulars: 'The Pacific Coast particularly, by reason of its peculiar population, its natural wealth, its position, is such that a few determined men could isolate it from the balance of the world for months of time, and the agitation already started over its whole area is peculiarly fitted to be the first to lead off in the active work when the time for that work shall come.'"

BLOODSHED IN IRELAND.

RIOTS AT BELFAST AND LURGAN.

A mob of Orangemen made an attack last night upon a tavern kept by a Catholic named Duffy. The police were promptly on the scene and, after a stubborn contest, during which they used their carbines, drove the mob away in disorder. The rioters reassembled with increased strength and again attacked Duffy's, this time overpowering the police and driving them from the place. In the first assault Chief of Police Carr was wounded. He was carried away and now lies in a critical condition. When the Orangemen returned to the fight they were accompanied a large number of factory girls, who goaded or shamed the men on to battle and formed a most dangerous element.

When the officers abandoned Duffy's the mob at once took complete possession of the tavern and it was thoroughly sacked. All the taps and spiggots were set running, and everybody was invited to help himself according to his taste. All the barrels of liquor found in stock were carried into the street, lifted up high and let fall until they broke and liberated their contents. All the furniture was carried out, piled in the center of the roadway, and burned in a bonfire to furnish the rioters with light during their debauch. Men, youths, and girls drank until they fell helpless in the gutters, the girls acting with greater fury during the earlier stages of the orgy than the men. The noise, the profanity, and the disorder were terrible.

The mob ended its work here by firing the tavern itself, and it burned to the ground. Then the stronger men, who had become infuriated and not overpowered by their potations, ran through the streets, wrecking and pillaging wherever they went and increasing their following the further they proceeded. These rioters after awhile congregated around the police station and stoned the place until they were tired. They then marched down to another tavern. The police hastened thither in advance and attempted to protect the property, but they were overpowered and driven away. The mob, left in possession, treated the tavern as they had treated Duffy's—turned on all the taps, broke the full barrels in the street, made a bonfire of the furniture, and finally set fire to the building.

The police returned and this time got the better for a time of the mob, whose ranks were depleted by the scores who had fallen away in drunkenness, and extinguished the flames before they could gain control of the structure. But the officers were unable to drive the rioters from the locality, and they remained and dominated it until morning. During the rowdyism of the night Mr. Gladstone and Mr. Parnell were both burned in effigy, and a dummy corpse labeled "home rule" was cremated.

Two men named Hart and Mason were arrested today for the murder of Thomas Gallagher, who was shot dead last night during the riot at Lurgan. Gallagher was a well-known local simpleton. He waved an Orange sash in the face of a home rule mob during an incessant fire between that mob and its Orange enemies. During the riot the situation at one time became so desperate that Mr. Mathers, a local Orange leader, publicly declared that unless the authorities did their duty he and a thousand armed Orangemen would take charge of the town. Mathers was on the point of carrying out his threat when the military appeared.

An infernal machine, consisting of a jar filled with a black substance and some clock-work, was thrown last night against the door of a Protestant house in Lurgan and exploded in the doorway. Arthur and Andrew Donelly, leading Catholic merchants, have been arrested at Lurgan on the charge of firing from their windows. A mob wanted to lynch the prisoners and stoned the police. It was finally dispersed at the point of the bayonet. The magistrates ordered that all taverns be closed at 6 P. M. Shop-keepers also closed their shops at the same hour. The managers of a number of factories have called upon the police to keep order between Catholics and Orangemen. Troops are arriving at Lurgan.

There was a little stone-throwing in Lurgan today, but otherwise the town has been quiet. A number of police were so badly injured last night that they are yet in the hospital. Twenty rioters are now under arrest. The coroner's jury found that Gallagher died from the effects of gunshot wounds, and censured the authorities for not having sufficient police to preserve order.

The rioting was renewed here this evening and the riot act was again read. The mob increased in size and began throwing stones at the police. The latter fired, killing four persons, one of whom was a bar-maid, who was looking out of a tavern window at the fighting. The mob returned the fire and a brisk fusillade was kept up for twenty minutes. Soldiers are now parading the streets to assist the police in case of necessity. The mob drove a force of 150 policemen into the barracks and then attacked the buildings, firing revolvers and throwing stones at the doors and windows. The police fired, killing five persons. Several Protestant clergymen tried to disperse the mob, but their efforts were unavailing. One of the persons killed was a widow with two children.

During the riots of yesterday 100 houses were wrecked in Belfast. After sacking the hotels many Orangemen reeled through the streets shouting, "To h—l with the pope!" Twenty-five policemen were hurt. One hundred and fifty police left Dublin for this city to-day.

REFORM NEWS.

U. P. CHURCH AND TEMPERANCE.

The committee on temperance of the United Presbyterian church, at the meeting of the General Assembly at Hamilton, Ohio, reported as follows:

"The traffic in intoxicating drinks as a beverage brings good to no one, but its terrible effects are brought beneath its baneful influence. It is an outlaw, which is trying to ascend the throne of American politics, and by its insolence and wickedness bring both the state and national governments under its misrule. It then becomes the duty of Christians everywhere, with great unanimity, while differing in methods, to place a united front against this terrible system of iniquity and do all in their power to accomplish its overthrow. Hence, it is with no little joy that we witness the great awakening and recruiting in behalf of temperance in the ranks of the Christian army a willing people in this the day of Christ's power, coming up to the help of the Lord against the mighty for the suppression of this sinful traffic. Therefore, we recommend for adoption the following resolutions:

"1. The liquor traffic is forbidden by the word of God(Heb. 2:15) and is a barrier to the growth of the church, an enemy of the home and state, and its legitimate fruit is, and ever has been, oppressive taxs, wretched paupers, cruel mad men, wasted fortunes, ruined homes and lost souls.

"2. That the general and state government in licensing, taxing or taking revenue of the liquor traffc, becomes a party in the nefarious business, and is guilty of establishing or encouraging iniquity by law.

"3. That it is the duty of the dominant political parties and of all in authority in civil government, to submit the prohibition of the liquor traffic to a vote of the people under their care, and not to bow before the Moloch of intemperance.

"4. That we unhesitatingly declare ourselves for prohibition of the liquor traffic, both state and national, and will labor by our counsels, our prayers and our votes as God gives us to see the right, for its speedy accomplishment.

"5. That in the rapid progress now being made, the cause of temperance, much credit is due to the progress and labors of the Woman's Christian Temperaance Union, and while not endorsing everything they do, notably their Sabbath meetings, we rejoice in the great and good work they are accomplishing, and bid them God speed.

"6. That the signs of the times in which we live indicate that the liquor traffic is the next great evil which the Lord of Hosts, in his great strength has arisen to destroy, and that a willing people in this the day of his power, are rapidly coming to his help, so we thank God and take courage.

"W. A. CAMPBELL, Chairman."

KNIGHTS OF LABOR.

The following report was made and adopted by the General Assembly of the United Presbyterian church at its recent meeting at Hamilton, Ohio:

The Committee on Bills and Overtures, to which was referred the memorial of the Presbytery of Albany, find it impossible to report anything of a decided character in regard to those associations known as "Knights of Labor," and other kindred associations, because we have no adequate knowledge of their true character, or of the forms and extent of the obligations which are assumed at the time of initiation. There is, however, too much reason to believe that these associations require a surrender of personal liberty to act in accordance with the individual's own conscience of right and wrong, and hence are an entanglement and snare, which we earnestly counsel all our members to avoid. Your committee would have the assembly to direct all our sessions to carry out the rules of our church in dealing with any members who have joined, or who may be about to join, any of the associations in question, as they shall obtain such positive information as will enable them to act intelligently in the case. We recommend the adoption of the following:

Resolved, That we enjoin upon all our members to abstain from connection with any association which might lead to acts of violence, or to the invasion of the rights of property or interference with the liberty of men to engage in honest labor when and where and for whomsoever they may choose.

CORRESPONDENCE.

RAILROAD MONOPOLIES.

W. C. Coleman writes: "I think the Cynosure would do well to pay some attention to railroad and other monopolies. You must know that all railroads have watered their stock from two to six times the actual cost, and that every dollar paid as dividend or interest on such stock is that much taken from producer or consumer. Here in the West the railroads get over half of what we produce for carrying the products to market."

"SOVEREIGNTY."

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—In a recent article in the Detroit Tribune, "Oneida," whosoever he may be, undertakes, with more rhetoric than reason, to make his notions of "sovereignty" a basis for the defence of the liquor business, as Jeff Davis prostituted it to the aid of the South in maintaining the right to defend and perpetuate the inhuman system of slavery. Only a part of my reply to "Oneida" was published in the Tribune as follows:

Editor Tribune:—In a recent issue of your paper a writer under the nom de plume of "Oneida" says: "The prohibition problem is one that it would seem to be necessary to have precipitated upon the public mind at regular intervals." Yes, sir—just so long as the government legalizes the pauper, and crime and misery-breeding traffic in intoxicating drinks, will the prohibition problem be precipitated upon the country! The millions of rum's murdered ghosts and women's wail of despair will haunt the people till they rise up in their might and abolish the accursed traffic! If the agitation of the subject is troublesome, put away the cause and the agitation will cease. There is "no peace to the wicked, saith my God."

"Oneida" next assumes the "general failure of prohibition,' and gives as a reason "its conflict with the spirit and theory of our government!" Strange assumptions these; neither of which is true.

1. You might as well tell us education is a failure because every community and everybody have not yet been educated! You might as well assume that science is a failure because it has not yet developed all the hidden resources of nature for the benefit of mankind, or that astronomy is a failure because it has not yet counted all the stars—ascertained their exact orbits, and measured their exact distances, etc. And why don't you assume that Christianity is a failure because it has not yet converted all peoples, and brought them under the benign sway of the Gospel? though it has converted, saved and blessed millions during its ownward march, and raised the nations up to a higher altitude of civilization.

Ths cause of prohibition has made, and is making steady, healthy, and, considering the satantic opposition arrayed against it, most wonderful progress and more wonderful the last year than ever before. In its onward march, it has, from time to time, so altered and modified the old license laws as to make them largely prohibitory already—forbidding the sale of liquor to Indians, minors, drunkards, and prohibiting its sale on election days, on Sundays, with other limitations, restrictions, etc. In fact the only thing that keeps the old barbarous license system on the statute books at all, is the prohibitory clauses it contains and the "blood-money' it brings into the treasury. In addition to this evidence of the steady progress of prohibition is the fact that several entire States have already adopted prohibition—Maine, Vermont, New Hampshire, Kansas, Iowa, and now Rhode Island, and others are nearly ready to wheel into line while four of these States have incorporated prohibition into their constitutions by large majorities, and hundreds of towns and counties, in many of the States, both north and south, have banished the vile business from their localities, and with most gratifying results.

2. And then to say prohibition is in confiict with the spirit and theory of our government is both absurd and ridiculous! Does he mean to say the government has a right to legalize such a debasing and demoralizing business in community, and yet has no right to abolish it? That it can establish an iniquitous and odious monopoly and yet cannot destroy it? That it can impose upon the people all the horrors and burdens of the liquor traffic and yet cannot protect them by abolishing it? Is it in con flict with the spirit and theory of our government to prohibit arson, theft, burglary, murder, gambling, counterfeiting, lotteries, bawdy houses, and even the sale of tainted meats, musty flour, etc., etc., and yet cannot prohibit the ten thousand-fold greater evil —the liquor traffic? The very idea of government, the very nature of government, pre-supposes and includes the idea of prohibition and penalties. Chief Justice Grier said: "The authority of a State is competent to prohibit this traffic, and should loss of 'revenue' accrue, the State would be the gainer a thousand-fold in the health, wealth and happiness of the people." GEO. W. CLARK.

THE LABOR QUESTION.

An extract from a letter written the Industrial Journal, Bangor, Me.

I have read with pleasure and pride the manner and force thrown into the discussion of the labor question in your paper. You have very ably and very justly arraigned the cause of mischief and fixed the responsibility, giving not a few suggestions as to timely remedies. This is commendable, though you are less entitled to courage than you would have been had your paper not been strictly identified with the manufacturer; yet the intelligent manner in which you have handled the questions of strikes and boycotts will win for you at a sober day the patronage of those who have been the advocates of those uncivilized inventions.

If you please, Mr. Editor, I would remind you of one mistake that you and all other papers,so far as I have read, make in speaking of the origin of "boycotting." It originated long before the ostracizing of Mr. Boycott, of Ireland. It is one of the ingenous devises of "Free" Masonry. It has been a thousand times enforced by the craft of that brotherhood to the destruction of its victims, but so clandestine has been its usual edicts that, like a baffling disease, 'twas not discoverable even in post mortem. You may be a Freemason, but if not, you need not be ignorant of the obligations binding to the death its initiated, who swear to destroy in business for certain causes of offence, and life for certain other causes, all of which is the secret boast of many a Mason that the "traitor has got his desserts." The latter day boycotting has the improved feature that its enforcement is open and its boast not a secret. This would be interesting reading if any paper dared publish it, but its truth forbids a mention that would incur the displeasue of the Imperial Wincer. E. H. C.

MASONIC RELIGION.

UNIONDALE, Ind., June 3, 1886.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—Would you please answer the following questions, and fully explain them, through the columns of your paper: Does Masonry recognize Christ by name? Can any person pray in the name of Christ in any lodge without violating his Masonic obligations? I am an Antimason, but am not fully able to explain these points. Cannot give the reasons why; would be glad for a full explanation, etc. Have you any Jewish lodges in your city? State how many Wishing you success, yours truly,

F. W. WILSON.

ANS.—It should be remembered that there are seventeen rites, including more than three hundred degrees, that are called Masonry, and that are practiced to some extent in America, but that Masonry proper, the system that constitutes the basis of all the degrees, and which include in their lodges all Masons of all kinds, consists of three degrees: the Entered Apprentice, the Fellow-Craft and the Master Mason. All the Grand Lodges represent these degrees only. Now, in none of these degrees is there any mention of Christ. They claim (falsely) to anti-date Christianity, and that for this reason they could not recognize Christ. The only part of the ritual that is regarded as an allusion to Christ is in the third degree, whereby "the strong grip of the lion's paw" the candidate, who is presumed to have laid fourteen days in the grave, is pretended to be raised from the dead. If it is an allusion to him whose voice shall raise the dead, it is a most blasphemous caricature of the Lion of the Tribe of Judah. The prayers and Scripture readings in those degrees make no mention of Christ, though they quote from the New Testament Scriptures. Next to these in order and importance are the four degrees of the Chapter: The Mark Master, the Past Master, the Most Excellent Master, and the Royal Arch. These, like the preceding, make no mention or necessary allusion to Christ. On the contrary, they, in their Scripture readings, purposely take out the name of Christ from those passages which occur in the ritual.

In the Mark Master's degree there is a quotation from 1 Pet. 2: 1–7, and in the fifth verse the words "by Jesus Christ" are omitted. In the sixth verse, "He that believeth on him shall not be confounded," is changed so as to read "shall make haste to pass it over." In the seventh verse, "Unto you therefore which believe he is precious," is made to read "Unto you therefore which believe it is an honor." In the Royal Arch degree there is a quotation from 2 Thess. 3: 6–16. In the sixth verse, which commences "Now we command you, brethren, in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ," the words "in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ" are omitted, and in the twelfth verse the words "by our Lord Jesus Christ" are left out, and in both cases the passages are quoted as though they were entire. Indeed, Dr. A. G. Mackey says: "These passages are quoted with slight but necessary alterations." To the Christian, such alterations are neither slight nor necessary.

2. Can anyone pray in the name of Christ in the lodge? To the law and to the testimony, for the question is not what may have been possibly practiced, but rather, what does Masonic law require? In the synopsis of Masonic law, as given by Robt. Morris, Past Grand Master of Kentucky, it is distinctly declared, first, that "The meeting of Masonic lodge is strictly a religious ceremony." Second, that "No lodge or Masonic assembly can be regularly opened or closed without prayer." Third, that "So broad is the religion of Masonry that the Christian, the Jew and the Mohammedan may, and do, harmoniously combine with the Buddhist, the Parsee, the Confucian, and the believer in deity under every form." Fourth. "Prayer in Masonic lodges should be of a general character, containing nothing offensive to any class of conscientious brethren. In theory, the whole world of Masons is supposed to be present at every meeting of every lodge, and the instruction, moral and religious, should be directed accordingly." (Webb's Monitor, by Robt. Morris, pp. 284, 285). As Jews, Mohammedans and Pagans would be offended by any mention of Christ as a Divine Being, his name must be omitted.

Dr. A. G. Mackey in his Masonic Lexicon, Art. Religion, says, "The religion of Masonry is pure theism (deism) on which the Mason may engraft his views, but not permitted to introduce them into a lodge."

Whether there are any lodges in this city composed wholly of Jews we cannot say, but have been informed that there are some in which nearly, if not quite, all the members are Jews. Of the more than thirty thousand Jews in this city, a large percentage of them are Masons, and some of them have been masters of lodges.

It should be added that the Knights Templar degree of the York Rite claims to be Christian, and in that respect differs from universal Masonry. Knights Templar are all members of lodges and chapters. In these degrees they ignore Christ, but in the Knights Templar degree connect it with ceremonies and obligations that are blasphemously wicked, such as drinking wine from a human skull (a sort of devils communion), and invoking two-fold damnation if the initiate shall violate his obligation as a Knight.

If our brother will read "Finney on Masonry," or "Freemasonry Illustrated," he can learn all the essential facts in reference to the system.

THE REFORMED PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH AND THE LODGE.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., June.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—The Covenanters have been in session at their annual synod here since last Wednesday. There are delegates from nearly all the congregations reaching from New Brunswick to California. The work of the church in all its departments is in a flourishing condition. Last evening the synod resolved itself into a committee of the whole to complete the endowment of Geneva College. John Hunter, of Sterling, N. Y., offered $25,000 on condition that the present endowment be increased to $100,000. To do this it was necessary to raise only $7,000. In half an hour subscriptions were received aggregating $11,000, some of the ministers present giving $500, and Walter T. Miller, of New York, giving $5,000. This places the college on a comfortable financial basis, and ensures its permanent usefulness.

A life-sized portrait of the late Dr. J. R. W. Sloane, draped in mourning, is placed at the front. He was present at our last meeting and is sadly missed. A telegram was read yesterday announcing the death, on Wednesday, of Rev. J. C. Boyd, of Utica, Ohio. He was an earnest worker in every field of reform.

The synod holds two sessions a day, and one each evening, the evening session being devoted to the discussion of reform questions.

Yesterday forenoon was spent in discussing the secret society question. Some of the brethren were very much aroused by the statement made by one of the pastors, that in some of the Covenanter congregations members of secret societies were beginning to creep in. One case was reported of a member of the church, who, when dying, was heard in moments of delirium repeating parts of the Masonic ritual. I have received the fifty copies of the Cynosure you sent, and am trying to get the brethren who do not take it to subscribe. It is a noticeable fact that all our earnest national reform workers are Cynosure readers. A man cannot be alive on the national reform issue and be indifferent on the anti-secret question.

I had the pleasure of serving on the committee to report on the question of secret societies. The following is a copy of our report which was adopted by the synod and published in the Rochester papers:

"Speculative Freemasonry originated at Appletree Tavern, London, in 1717. The idea is borrowed from the heathen. Secret societies have existed in all lands in connection with the worship of false gods. The immediate parentage of Freemasonry was the guilds of operative Masons in the middle ages, their object being to control architecture, like the present trades' unions. They are necessarily of selfish character, and charity is the veil to hide the real end. The principal feature of secret societies is the oath or promise of perpetual concealment, and often with terrible penalties annexed. The penalties have been understood by the lodges themselves to be literal, and to forfeit life and character and property. Foul murders and implacable persecutions have followed the attempts of good men to free conscience from lodge tyranny. All religions and no religions meet together and hold fraternal and religious intercourse in the lodge, Jew, infidel and heathen meet upon a common level and depart upon the square and pretend to worship a supposed being, called the Great Architect. These secret societies are, many of them, in their principles, essentially despotic, as their own authorities affirm. The so-called benevolent societies provide and hold in readiness the machinery, which bad men use for the destruction of life and property. Socialists employ them for revolutionary purposes, and conspiracy and plotting in secret have filled the world with horror and alarm. They hinder the freedom of manufactnre and commerce, and force trade into channels injurious to the public. What shall be the attitude of the church toward secretism? Our testimony is plain and explicit against it, and our members are forbidden, under pain of expulsion from the church, from joining any secret society. Christians should have 'no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness.' We rejoice in the efforts of the National Christian Association, opposed to secret societies, and our members should stand in the front ranks of this movement. What shall the end be? God will probably make the secret fraternities mutually self-destructive. 'The wicked is snared by the work of his own hands.' Secret societies are rapidly increasing. They conflict with each other's interests. There may be an explosion. The field will be cleared, and God will raise up a reformed church in a free and Christian state."

M. A. GAULT.

FAITHFUL TESTIMONY.

EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE:—This place (McCook, Neb.,) is ruled by the saloon and the secret lodges, and the churches and ministers are their defenders, especially the latter.

I took the opportunity at a prayer-meeting to read from the fifth chapter of Matthew, and when I read the passage, "Let your light shine before men," etc., I commented on the same by asking how could the lodge let their light shine, if they had any, behind curtained windows and tyled doors, etc. On the next Sabbath the pastor, W. S. Wheeler, in his discourse, brought up the subject in a very peculiar way, but in a manner to please the secret men. He said that baptism was a seal or a sign. So had the G. A. R. and Masons a sign of recognition or grip, and did not refer to it again until in class meeting, when I thought it was my time to ask the divine a few questions. I first (after giving my experience) asked him what God's appointed rite of baptism had to do with man's inventions, the secret lodges? He admitted that there was no relation between them, but had simply stated that baptism was a sign or seal, and that the G. A. R. and the Masons had their signs and grips. I then asked him what he thought about secret societies, and he thought there was no harm in them. His father, he said, was a Royal Arch Mason, and our presiding elder, P. C. Johnson, was a Mason, and that here was not a grander man on earth. I then told him that men who had belonged to the Masons, ect., did not all speak in praise of the order, as I knew a minister of the Central Illinois Conference, who told me, when asked about Masonry, that he used to be a Mason, but he had not been in a lodge for twelve or fifteen years, and he said that it was not a proper place for a minister or any other man. The pastor at this point stopped further discussion by dismissing the class. One woman said to me after dismissal, "Bro. Norval, I think more of you than ever." I inquired why, and she said, "Because you came out against secret societies, but it is not popular out here." I told her that I knew that, but I said that is not the question, is it right, and what is duty is the question of the hour. You see by this and other instances I might mention that the church and the ministry are blind watchmen giving uncertain sound for battle, and that God and righteousness have their witnesses. Yours for true righteousness,

W. O. NORVAL.

COMMENDATORY.

ORANGEBURG, S. C., May 31, 1886.

Your favor of 26th inst. was duly received. Christian Cynosure is a valuable paper, and as such it will bring new and fresh thoughts to every Christian that reads it. A great help to the minister of the Word.

I thank the friend kindly who has seen fit to send me Christian Cynosure for the space of eight months. After the expiration of the eight months which I am to receive the paper, I will try, if possible, to subscribe for it regularly, and help to spread the same here. Very truly,

J. L. GRICE,
Pastor First Cong'l Church.

PITH AND POINT.

Rev. R. Cervine, Lutheran pastor, writes: "You know the standpoint of the Scandinavian Augustinian Synod on the question of secrecy: As these secret society men are not admitted, and will be excluded from our congregations, they take revenge by a kind of boycotting. I met a friend the other day who related that being in Chicago a while ago, he spoke to a Swede, formerly a member in good standing in Rev. Ewald's church, and asked him to accompany him to some of our Lutheran churches, he having left the church for the lodge of the Knights of Labor. He replied, "No, sir, our society will not admit any of its members to be present in any church of that Synod, but for the Methodists, Waldensenians (now called the Mission Bund) we may." You see it.

At the burial of Hon P. A. Cable, at Rock Island, the faculty and students of the Augustinian College Seminary were present, and were given an eminent place in the funeral procession. According to the special wish of the family of the deceased, a Swedish funeral hymn was sung at the house by the students' choir (at the cemetery a Latin cantacle). The members of secret societies were present, of course, but were not admitted in their paraphernalia, but must attend as individuals the same as other men.

W. W. Alles, of Sheldon, Vernon county, Mo., has been a member of the Brotherhood of Engineers and Firemen, but on his giving his heart fully to God, he gave it up, and, together with his wife, are preaching the Gospel and bearing testimony against all secret societies. He says, "Our salary is stripes and abuse." He mentions a presiding elder in the M. E. church who was chaplain of the Masonic Grand Lodge of Missouri, but says that all who have professed holiness have renounced secrecy. He wishes that any who have tracts on the secrecy question would send them, and they will distribute them as far as possible, and that the county of Vernon is greatly given over to Freemasonry and whisky.

BIBLE LESSON.

Review the main facts in the life of the Apostle John, and the book of John.

SUBJECT,—THE REDEEMER OF THE WORLD.

I. HIS NATURE (Lessons 1, 11, 12). The Word of God; the Creator of all things; God himself, yet with a distinction from God; Light; Life; Living water; Messiah; the Son of man; full of grace and truth.

COMFORTS AND HELPS. From having such a Being for our Redeemer and Saviour and Friend; from such a manifestation of God; from the message he brings; from his work for men; from his divine and human nature.

II. THE BEGINNINGS OF HIS KINGDOM (Lessons 2, 3, 4). His first disciples. Small beginnings leading to great results; five or six disciples grown to many millions. His first miracle. Illustrating his transforming power over the world. His first teaching. The great doctrine of the new heart, which lies at the beginning of every Christian life.

III. MIRACLES (Lessons 3, 7, 8, 9). Teach the bearing of each upon the great work of Christ. (1) His transforming power over common things and common lives. (2) His power to aid in times of sickness and trouble, of which the world is full. (3) His making earthly troubles and relief from them the means of spiritual life and health. (4) His supplying the many needs of the soul,—the bread and the fountain of life.

IV. TEACHINGS (Lessons 4, 5, 6, 10, 11, 12). Several of the great principles of the kingdom of God are taught in these lessons. We cannot go into detail, but can impress the great truths upon the memories of the class. (1) The new birth. (2) Christ the source of supply for every need. (3) True worship of God. (4) Jesus the bread of life. (5) The gift of the Holy Spirit. (6) Freedom by the truth.

NOTES ON THE REVIEW.

In connection with the life and teachings of the Saviour, we should not fail to mention his emphatic condemnation of the system of organized secrecy, so prevalent at this day.

1. In his example. He was the Light of the world. They that follow him walk not in darkness, but have the light of life (John 8:12). He declared to the Jewish Sanhedrim that he ever spake openly among them, and in secret had he said nothing (John 18: 20). It may be safely assumed as a fundamental law that just in proportion as men become Christlike they become simple-hearted and sincere, and occasions for concealments diminish (2 Cor. 1: 12). So just in proportion as they diverge from the example of Christ do they assume that cunning craftiness by which men lie in wait to deceive (Eph. 4: 14).

2. The command of Christ, (he forbade the taking of oaths Matt. 5: 24.) "Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works and glorify your Father in heaven". Matt. 5: 16. If there is any "good work" in the lodge, it should be "before men," that the glory may be given to God, and if in the hidden arcanum of secrecy there is important truth, the world has a right to know it, and no one has a right to conceal it.

3. The declaration of Christ that secrecy is evidence of sin. He says men loved darkness (secrecy) rather than light, because their deeds were evil. "He that doeth evil hateth the light, neither cometh to the light, lest his deeds should be reproved; but he that doeth truth cometh to the light that his deeds should be made manifest, that they are wrought in God." John 3: 19–21.

4. His command to his disciples to publish the most hidden things they had received. "There is nothing covered that shall not be revealed, and hid that shall not be made known. What I tell you in darkness, that speak ye in the light; and what ye have heard in the ear, that publish ye on the housetops." Matt. 10: 26, 27.

5. The command of the apostles, (1) not to be "Yoked together with unbelievers," who make up the great mass of the secret orders, 2 Cor. 6: 14–18, and (2) to "Have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them. Eph. 5: 11.

The Facts Stated.

HON. THURLOW WEED ON THE MORGAN ABDUCTION.

This is a sixteen page pamphlet comprising a letter written by Mr. Weed, and read at the unveiling of the monument erected to the memory of Capt. William Morgan. The frontispiece is an engraving of the monument. It is a history of the unlawful seizure and confinement of Morgan in the Canandaigua jail, his subsequent conveyance by Freemasons to Fort Niagara, and drowning in Lake Ontario. He not only subscribes his NAME to the letter, but ATTACHES HIS AFFIDAVIT to it.

In closing his letter he writes: I now look back through an interval of fifty-six years with a conscious sense of having been governed through the "Anti-Masonic excitement" by a sincere desire, first, to vindicate the violated laws of my country, and next, to arrest the great power and dangerous influences of "secret societies."

The pamphlet is well worth perusing, and is doubtless the last historical article which this great journalist and politician wrote. [Chicago, National Christian Association.] Single copy, 5 cents.

AMERICAN PLATFORM.

ADOPTED AT CHICAGO, JUNE 20, 1884

Viewing with deep concern the corrupt and unsettled condition of American politics, and witnessing with alarm the fearful prevalence of caste and clannishness by which our citizens are being arrayed in hostile hands, working secretly to compass political ends, a method directly and powerfully tending to increase corruption, to destroy mutual confidence, and hasten disruption and bloodshed; and having no hope of adequate remedy for these evils from existing parties, and believing the foundation of a party based upon the fundamental principles of the Declaration of American Independence, both inevitable and indispensable:

We, therefore, a portion of the American people, believing with our fathers that we have our rights and liberties, not from men or parties, but from God; believing in the Christian marriage, and not in Mormonism; believing in the religious democracy of the New Testament, and not in the despotism of the lodge; believing, also, with our Scotch and English ancestors, that civil government, though ordained in God, is "founded in nature, not in grace," and, therefore, that all have equal civil rights; while we abhor the idea of enforcing religion or controlling conscience by human laws and penalties as calculated to make hypocrites, not Christians, and savoring of the days of priestism, the fagot and the stake, we at the same time as firmly believe that atheism and priestcraft are twins and both alike foes to human liberty and welfare. We further most firmly believe that a government without God has none but lynch power, and is destitute of all legitimate authority to maintain civil order, to swear a witness, to try a criminal, to hang a murderer, to imprison a thief; and while we consider government without God as a mere usurpation, we regard all religions and worships invented by men, and so having no higher than human origin, as mere swindling impositions and cheats. We believe in peace and in national arbitration as a means of perpetuating it; yet we as profoundly believe that the bravery and blood of our soldiers have bought us the peace which we enjoy, and we honor the memories of the dead and will be just to the claims of the living; and we take up and prolong the strain raised by the women of this country: "For God, and home, and native land," and trust that this beautiful and patriotic motto will soon be not only echoed by their voices, but sustained by their votes.

We, therefore, solemnly adopt and present the following, as containing a brief synopsis of the principles of our government, by which we intend to be governed in casting our votes. We hold:

1. That ours is a Christian and not a heathen nation, and that the God of the Christian Scriptures is the author of civil government.

2. That the Bible should be associated with books of science and literature in all our educational institutions.

3. That God requires, and man needs a Sabbath.

4. We demand the prohibition of the importation, manufacture, and sale of intoxicating drinks.

5. We hold that the charters of all secret lodges granted by our Federal and State Legislatures should be withdrawn, and their oaths prohibited by law.

6. We are opposed to putting prison labor or depreciated contract labor from foreign countries in competition with free labor to benefit manufacturers, corporations or speculators.

7. We are in favor of a revision and enforcement of the laws concerning patents and inventions; for the prevention and punishment of frauds either upon inventors or the general public.

8. We hold to and will vote for woman suffrage.

9. That the civil equality secured to all American citizens by Articles 13, 14 and 15 of our amended National Constitution should be preserved inviolate, and the same equality should be extended to Indians and Chinamen.

10. That international differences should be settled by arbitration.

11. That land and other monopolies should be discouraged.

12. That the general government should furnish the people with an ample and sound currency.

13. That it should be the settled policy of the government to reduce tariffs and taxes as rapidly as the necessities of revenue and vested business interests will allow.

14. That polygamy should be immediately suppressed by law, and that the Republican party is censurable for the long neglect of its duty in respect to this evil.

15. And, finally, we demand for the American people the abolition of electoral colleges, and a direct vote for President and Vice President of the United States.

THE CHURCHES VS. LODGERY.

The following denominations are committed by vote of their legislative assemblies or by constitution to a separation from secret lodge worship:

Adventists (Seventh-day.)

Baptists—Primitive, Seventh-day and Scandinavian.

Brethren (Dunkers or German Baptists.)

Christian Reformed Church.

Church of God (Northern Indiana Eldership.)

Congregational—The State Associations of Illinois and Iowa have adopted resolutions against the lodge.

Disciples (in part.)

Friends.

Lutherans—Norwegian, Danish, Swedish and Synodical Conferences.

Mennonites.

Methodists—Free and Wesleyan.

Methodist Protestant (Minnesota Conference.)

Moravians.

Plymouth Brethren.

Presbyterian—Associate, Reformed and United.

Reformed Church (Holland Branch.)

United Brethren in Christ.

Individual churches in some of these denominations should be excepted, in part of them even a considerable portion.

The following local churches have, as a pledge to disfellowship and oppose lodge worship, given their names to the following list as

EDITORS.

J. BLANCHARD. HENRY L. KELLOGG.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY JUNE 17, 1886

MR. KELLOGG writes from Denver that every paper in that city inserted a notice of a meeting of pastors, and others opposed to the lodge, for prayer and consultation, and if possible, to establish a meeting or monthly concert in the interest of the reform. Mr. Kellogg has spoken in two of the Denver churches, and in one he was followed by Rev. Dr. Bliss, (Congregationalist) who gave a powerful speech. Mr. Kellogg speaks of Dr. Bliss in the highest terms, and thinks the prospects of the cause in Denver highly encouraging. In the next Cynosure we expect him to be here, speaking for himself.

REV. AUSTIN WILLEY'S BOOK.—We hope our readers read, or if not, will turn back and read our notice of this excellent book. Our types, unfortunately, made us say ex-Senator Blaine iustead of Blair, warmly endorsed Mr. Willey's volume. It was Senator Blair, not Blaine.

We also omitted to say that the price of Willey's book is $2; to ministers, $1.75. It is to be had of Brown Thurston, Portland, Me.; N. Tibbals & Son, New York. E. G. Goodrich, Ohio; H. H. West, Milwaukee. D. D. McDill, St. Paul. Treasurer Phillips may arrange for a depository at 221 W. Madison street, Chicago.

REV. H. WOODSMALL, of Memphis, Tenn., addressed the Society of Inquiry in Wheaton College on Sabbath evening last on his work in the South, which work has been in seven or eight States, beginning in South Carolina and including the darkest portions of the South along the lower Mississippi counties where the negroes "Most do congregate."

In many of the counties the negroes now hold the offices, and our children and children's children must live under laws made by the votes of men who now cannot read their votes or their Bibles.

Prof. Woodsmall practiced law six or eight years in Indiana: was drawn, like St John of the same State, into seven degrees of Masonry; went South while the battle smoke of the rebellion was still lingering among guerrillas and Kuklux. He has worked thirteen years in those States, during which years he has voted but twice, though in Indiana he was a candidate for the State Senate on the Republican side in Democratic counties, and his friends were for putting him in Congress.

When we sent Mr. Hinman South, Prof. Woodsmall took him by the hand and lodged him for some weeks "courteously."

Mr. Woodsmall is but forty-five years of age, and has a clearer, better understanding of the colored people and their relation to our national destiny than any man whom the Cynosure has met.

ORANGE MASONRY.

Read in this number the bloody mob in Ireland, burning Gladstone and Parnell in effigy, and re-enacting Knights of Labor scenes; the Haymarket bomb murders in Chicago, with ten-fold horrors added.

Orangeism, named from William III. of England, Prince of Orange, who fought the battle of Boyne Water, in the revolution of 1688, like our Know-nothingism, it was Masonry, undertaking to establish Protestantism and suppress Popery. At first Orangemen were rude and illiterate Irishmen, who took the names of "Peep-of-Day Boys," "Defenders," etc., and finally became a branch of Masonry, with lodges, degrees, etc., etc., under a central government like that of the notorious London Grand Lodge at Appletree Tavern in 1717, in Covent Garden.

Its strictly Masonic character is proved by its spreading all over the British Empire, even where there were no Irishmen or Catholics. The first Orange lodge was founded in the village of Loughgall, County Armagh, Sept 21, 1795. The Appletree Tavern Grand Lodge, formed 73 years before, gave Orangeism its religious character, its cut-throat oaths, and devil-worship. The seal of the Orange Grand Lodge was transferred to London in 1821, and the Irish Grand Lodge was dissolved. The English went into it as they have into Masonry, to protect the government against the machinations of its lodges; as Orangeism was at first intensely anti-English, and the English went into it in self-defence. In all its devious shiftings of form and objects, like all its kindred, it has kept true to Powderly's "Secrecy" and "Obedience," and by its initiatory oaths, and worships, forms a false Protestantism, with a devil's ritual, and thus belongs to that army which is "The Image of the Beast." It adopted secrecy to honor Christ, who abhorred secrecy, and took on the forms, titles and gaudy shows of Popery to defeat the Pope!

Read, thoughtfully, the anti-Gladstone mob, in this number, and see if the actors in those scenes are not filled with the spirit of the god of the lodge who is "a liar and murderer from the beginning;" devil's worship, in short, hid under glowing hypocrisy.

VACATION NOTES.

DENVER, June 9, 1866.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—From Oakland to Salt Lake City; from beauty to ashes; from youth to decrepitude; from energy to stagnation; across deserts of alkali into those of ignorance, bigotry and superstition; such were my impressions after a day or two in the city of "Saints of the Latter Day;" and time only deepened and strengthened them. In how many ways do we read the character of a people: the low adobe houses with few attractions of grass plat and flower bed; the crude, barbaric wall about the offices of the church; the uncouth architecture of the immense buildings devoted to religion; the streets deep in dust, that sweep at times in flying, irritating clouds, while on either side rapid streams are wasting their energy and their usefulness—such are some of the marks quickly noted which betray the manner of life of the dominant class. But stand on a busy corner, or watch narrowly the thousands who pour the human tide out of the Tabernacle Sabbath afternoon, and you see in the faces—especially of the women—a story of ignorance, of credulity, of superstition, of bigotry, of suppressed affections, that fills you with amazement and with pity. Perhaps the contrast on coming from Oakland was the greatest possible. That home-suburb of San Francisco displays more fine-looking women than any city of its size in the world; in Salt Lake one seems to have fallen among a different race of men. I most emphatically and entirely dissent from the description of this Mormon people by some writers, who enlarge upon the industry and enterprise of the men, and glow with enthusiasm in portraying the beautiful forms of the women. Had such writers been suckled by Piute squaws, their exaggerations might be better understood. Four days, though spent with some industry of inquiry from people of all classes, from Governor Murray to hotel waiters and boot-blacks, Mormon and Gentile, is altogether too short a time to acquire an adequate knowledge of the Mormon system; but a further report of the facts I did gain must be deferred.

What glimpses of the summit of the Nevada range which flashed through the breaks in thirty-five miles of snow-sheds were fascinating and grand. Pine trees and snow banks, sharp peaks and dark gorges diverted the eye. Coming out into the plain country at Reno, that city brightened in the morning sun, more beautiful than ever. But to run out from the sterile plains north and west of Great Salt Lake under the shadow of the Wahsatch mountains is a yet more pleasing contrast; and then on to the Jordan valley, the Price river canon, the gloomy gorge of the Gunnison, and the stupendous barriers of adamant through which the Arkansas tears its way like a raging giant to the sea—it is a day's journey never to be forgotten. "I never want to take that terrible trip again," said a pursy and good-natured Philadelphian, whose pragmatic and unsentimental temper scorched rather than glowed among these majestic touches of the Creator's hand. Verily, the Denver and Rio Grande road has chosen the "crown of the continent" for its way, and one day in its pleasant cars is worth a journey from over the sea. Of its scenic wonders

> "'Twere worth ten years of common life,
> One glance at their array."

Denver is the new city. From nothing to 70,000 people in twenty-seven years is its record, and in that space no building could look old in this clear and elevated region. No weather stains mar the walls where the brick seem fresh from the kiln and the stone just cut out of the mountains. The sandstone and granite is remarkable for it soft and agreeable tones. Denver must some day be noted for its fine buildings, for rarely are cities so favored with building material. Already its city hall and court house are buildings of which Chicago might be proud; the government building is rising above the basement in solid proportions; while the finest spot on Capitol Hill has been selected and partly graded where the State will rear a noble pile. It is not a pleasant discovery to find these institutions and the whole city dominated by the lodge. Masons boast of their power over the churches as well as the public offices, and arrogantly claim that both depend upon their will. They seem not to boast in vain, for of the thirty-five or forty churches but two seem to be able to keep clear of secretism. Bro. Stamp, of the Free Methodist, and Bro. Johnson of one of the Lutheran churches, have kept their charges, at some expense of popularity, numbers and wealth. But several other churches have, under perhaps more trying circumstances, made some battle against the lodge enemy. The Swedish Lutheran, United Presbyterian and United Brethren churches are recognized in their opposition, though the Grand Army and Knights of Labor have encroached on their borders. Some of these pastors show a brave and noble spirit in the midst of trying circumstances. The young pastors Brandelle, of the Swedish Lutheran, and Stauffer, of the United Brethren, seem to me especially worthy of encouraging mention. Dr. T. E. Bliss is the sage and warrior of the reform here. One of the oldest pastors of the city, he has for fifteen years maintained an almost single-handed battle in the Congregational and Presbyterian churches. Eloquent and able as a preacher, and of wide and long experience as a pastor, he is elbowed aside by the lodge from the city pulpits, but is welcomed by a church a few miles in the country. By his aid and encouragement I was able to speak Sabbath evening in the United Presbyterian church, whose pastor, Rev. Mr. Rankins, is absent at the General Assembly meeting, and on Monday evening in the Swedish Lutheran church. At the latter, Dr. Bliss followed in a brief but powerful speech. As a result a meeting was called for this afternoon for conference and prayer and to lay the foundations of a permanent work in opposition to the lodge through the churches. Notices in the papers and an invitation to nearly all the pastors in person or by letter, brought together a fair representation of these brethren. Of the thirty or more present, about two-thirds were ministers. In my visitation of these pastors I found the uniform testimony, even from Masons, Oddfellows, Good Templars, etc., that the lodge attractions were sadly interfering with the work of the churches, and not a few were glad of the movement. Rev. F. B. Carroll, of the M. E. church South, was chairman, and Rev. Henry Stauffer, secretary of the meeting. A number of addresses were made, and the following resolutions unanimously adopted:

As Americans and Christians we have observed with regret and alarm the growing power of the multitude of secret societies whose influence we believe to be largely hostile to the work of the Christian church and the just operation of civil law.

They are but too often seen in our courts, interposing their obligations to thwart and turn aside the course of law, rendering the proceeding of justice little else than a travesty.

They are seen manipulating our politics to secure the monopoly of civil offices, forestalling in secret the unbiased preferenecs of the people.

They are seen controlling the avenues of business for their members, dictating to both the employer and the employed, and arousing an unnatural and destructive hostility between the interests that should be harmoniously laboring for the prosperity of our beloved country.

They absorb the time and demand the means of thousands which might otherwise be freely given for the upbuilding of the Redeemer's kingdom, thus very seriously crippling that agency which we believe to be the best adapted to preservation of the peace, happiness and prosperity of this nation.

They demand, in some instances under the most fearful penalties, pledges of secrecy in matters concealed, and absolute obedicnce to superiors unknown; which are in conflict, in our opinion, with the principles of a free republic, and are entirely inconsistent with a Christian profession and the rights of private judgment.

They exercise in some instanees, as has been most impressively seen of late, a terrorism over individuals and communities.

They appear too often to reject the Word of God as their divine counsellor and guide, degrading it to the low level of profanc and heathen writings.

For these and other considerations we feel called upon to lift a warning voice against the whole system of secret orders; and resolve:

1. To endeavor to aid our fellowmen to a better knowledge of the evils and dangers of secretism as we have opportunity.

2. To meet at stated seasons for prayer and consultation respecting the best means of strengthening the churches against this evil which is rapidly, as we fear, being arrayed against the interests of the kingdom of Christ.

3. In giving expression to our convictions on this subject we trust we are actuated by the principles of love to God and good-will to men, "with malice toward none, but with charity for all."

A strong committee was chosen to provide for future meetings, secure speakers and carry on the discussion.

Mention must be made of the kindness of Bro.

A. T. McDill, corresponding editor of the Christian Instructor, who has greatly assisted in this work, and father Ross and his companion, A. Hartzell, have not been lacking in zeal and interest. H. L. K.

Our most efficient agent, W. B. Stoddard, has returned from his work in Ohio,and can be addressed at this office for the present.

Mr. D. Needham, the discoverer of the Clover Cancer Cure, who is an earnest Christian philanthropist and a firm friend of our reform, has been sick nigh unto death. We are glad to find that he has so far recovered as to be able to make a pleasant visit to this office.

Brother Loggan writes: I got home (Clifton, Kan.) a few days ago from a lecture tour in the southwest part of Clay county and Wesleyan Methodist quarterly meeting. Had a very pleasant, and I trust, profitable time.

With great pleasure we announce the return of Brother H. L. Kellogg from his visit to the Pacific Coast and intervening points. He comes in excellent health, and with a rich store of valuable incidents and reflections for the readers of the Cynosure. Those who have read his interesting and valuable letters will welcome his return to the editorial control.

The manifesto of Mr. Gladstone, addressed to the electors of Midlothian, is worthy of the great mind and heart from which it originated. The London News, in its comments says: "The clear, sharp, decisive sentences brush aside with remorseless common sense the cobwebs so industriously spread to confuse and entangle the question, and the people will rally round the statesman who has the courage and capacity to lead them to a happy and honorable settlement of the great domestic quarrel." It is greatly to be hoped that the race of statesmen who have the courage of their convictions are not yet extinct, and that some men of the character of John Bright and W. E. Gladstone may yet come to the surface in our American politics.

It is proposed to use blood-hounds in hunting down the Apache Indians in Arizona and New Mexico. The plan is said to be approved by army officers; as between dogs and men the cost of life and treasure would be less with the former than the latter. But the prospect is not re-assuring. The experiment of hunting the FloridaSeminoles with hounds fifty years ago, did get rid of the brutes, and did not get rid of the Indians, which remain in the Everglades to the present day. Since they have been treated justly they have been entirely peaceful. How to dispose of the little band of savages that make all this trouble in the Southwest may be a difficult problem, but surely there is something better for them and for their white neighbors, than bullets and blood-hounds.

There is a strong drift toward the union of religious denominations. The United Presbyterian and Associate Reformed of the South, the Cumberland Presbyterians and the Protestant Methodists, and in England, the Baptists and Congregationalists, are making overtures for union. It would doubtless result in a great saving, both of money, moral and spiritual influences, and is manifestly a step towards removing the standing reproach of Protestantism—that it has wrought "schism in the body" of Christ. More and more does the heart of universal Christendom respond to the prayer of our Lord "that they all may be one, even as thou, Father, art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be one in us, that the world may believe that thou hast sent me."

ILLINOIS CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.—What shall be done in reference to the time and place for the annual meeting of the Illinois Christian Association? Last year the meeting was held in this city, but we were invited to meet in Galva. This year Champaign and Bloomington have been suggested. The State executive committee are to hold a meeting here July 13th. Will not the friends of the reform give us any obtainable light?

NOTICE.

W. B. Stoddard, agent in Ohio reports the receipt of the following contributions to the State work. G. J. Graham, Wm. Crawford, R. W. Stewart, I. W Knestrick, N. Minor, Josiah Lee, Mrs. J. A. Bingham, Mrs. Geo. Clark, A Cleveland, H. Holbrook and A. Putman, $5 each. James Patterson, James Atkinson, T. W. Stewart, Wm. Gregg and A. W. Bliss, $2 each. JohnRasor, Abraham Cox, H. G. Foster, T. C. Speer, Phileman Cromwell, W. W. Cromwell, D. Alexander, Mary Reed, Sarah Harvey, A. C. Hall, R. J. Hathaway and Mrs. M. A. Van Horn, $1 each. Joseph Wallace and Wm. Constance, $3 each. J. I Stewart, Christian Herr, R. C. Finney, Peter Doty, R. Van Horn and M. Smith, 50 cts. each. A friend, $50; J. Swank, 75 cts.; J. R. Landis, 25 cts.; Samuel Eby, $20; S. Y. Templeton, $1.50, S. C. Foster, $10, John Forbes, Sr., $2.50. Others have given pledges, some of which are now due, and should be forwarded as soon as possible to Rev. S. A. George, State Secretary, Mansfield, Ohio.

THE SINGLE EYE.

"The light of the body is the eye: if therefore thine eye be single, thy whole body shall be full of light. But if thine eye be evil,thy whole body shall be full of darkness. If, therefore, the light that is in thee be darkness, how great is that darkness!"—Matthew, 6: 22, 23.

There have been men in every age who have had an "eye single," because they have made a specality of a certain subject of reform demanded by the age in which they lived because of sin being popular or "standing where it ought not" (in the church) they have left their names recorded on the pages of history as reformers. The Word and Spirit of God urges us to emulate their example.

The single question of reform in every age has invigorated all that is real reform, because the single question has been the life of all questions pertaining to truth and godliness. The one question of reform ignored by all and the consequences would be that all questions of vital importance would die, because when all determine to do wrong, all lose the desire to do right.

In what condition would the world be in to-day, had it not been for such men as Martin Luther,whose eye was single to the necessity of antagonizing the sin that was popular in his day. If it were not for such men as Wendell Phillips in our own country, whose eye was single to the glory of God on the slavery question, professed Christians would still be buying and selling human beings, and thus repentance, conversion and a life of faith very much retarded.

The sin most popular in this age of the world is devil worship under the cloak of Christianity. Ministers and others professing godliness worship at rival altars, worship in the church of God and pass in this world for his children, then worship in the lodge where Christ is excluded from the most vital part of the worship, prayer. In the "digest of the Masonic law" by G. W. Chase it reads: "In fact, Blue Lodge Masonry has nothing whatever to do with the Bible. It is not founded upon the Bible. If it was it would not be Masonry, it would be something else."

The church and the lodge are both places of worship: one is founded on the Bible, the other is not nor is it claimed to be by its highest authority. "No man can serve two masters." But are not many Christians unknowingly trying to do what God says they "cannot."

"If our eye is single" to the glory of God, we will be true to his church only. "If our eye is so evil" that we will not try to discern the signs of the times, "our whole body is full of darkness." If we have the light and do not "let our light shine," then "the light that is in us is darkness," and is even greater than Masonic law which does not claim to be Christian.

The Spirit of the Lord is raising up a standard of reform against the popular sin of the present age. May all Christians fall in line on the Lord's side, and let their light shine. We need help for the sake of Jesus, that we may "take up our cross," in this respect, that our light may not be darkness.

CYRUS SMITH.

Clearfield, Iowa.

LUTHERAN WITNESS ON SECRET SOCIETIES.

In the opinion of a great many unsuspecting Christian people, secret societies, lodges as they are commonly called, are honest, benevolent, at any rate, quite harmless institutions. As regards the benevolence of these societies and the honesty of the members, especially of the Odd-fellows and Freemasons, the writer, a few weeks since, heard a prominent member of the two named lodges, an M. D., who is no member of any particular church, speak on those two subjects. The gist of what he said may be summed up in the following words: Viewing the matter from a general and impartial standpoint these societies are based upon the principle of selfishness. Nine-tenths of the benevolence is mere boast, one-tenth probably reality. If the Christian church does its duty, lodges are entirely superfluous. In regard to the boasted honesty of the lodgemen, the doctor said: The fact of my being a member of these two lodges does not secure to me the payment of my doctor's fees by the lodgemen, whose families have been under my treatment, any prompter or any better than by non-lodgemen. If people are not honest before becoming a member of a lodge, they will surely not become so by entering it. These things were spoken by the doctor to several young men who had asked his advice, as they intended to join a lodge. His advice was to let the lodge alone.

As to the harmlessness of secret oathbound societies, there is an editorial in the Cleveland Weekly Leader, of May 8th, devoted to a little discussion of this side of the question. This editorial will speak for itself: It is as follows: "The men of the city fire department in Pittsburg have applied for admission to the Knights of Labor. There is strenuous opposition in the order to the admission of these novel recruits, and it is quite probable that their application will be rejected. This, however, can only be considered a poor and temporary settlement of the question raised by the Pittsburg firemen. There ought to be a distinct understanding of the principle that government officials whose sole duty it is to serve the community as a whole, to guard life and property, and to execute the laws impartially, should owe allegiance to no other power or organization than that of society. It would be monstrous for the fire department of any city to be organized into a compact body under the control of a secret society which could order the men to strike and leave the city defenceless against fire, or command them to discriminate in their efforts to save property between a building owned by a Knight of Labor and one belonging to a man against whom a boycott had been declared. When Pittsburg or any other city gets its police, fire and school departments well under the control of a secret society, there will probably be an exodus of business men calculated to astonish the natives."—*H. LITERATURE.

SOCIAL PURITY LEAFLETS.—Two additional leaflets of The Philanthropist Series have been published, No. 3, "Save the Boys," by Rev. J. P. Gledstone; and No. 4, eight pages, "Social Purity, the Latest and Greatest Crusade," by Frances E. Willard. These leaflets are of great practical value, and are admirably adapted to general circulation. They should be in the hands of every father and mother in the land. Price, post-paid, No. 3, ten cents a dozen, fifty cents a hundred; No. 4, twenty-five cents a dozen; one dollar a hundred. Address, The Philanthropist, P. O. Box 2554, New York.

OUR PENAL MACHINERY AND ITS VICTIMS, BY JOHN T. ALTGELD.—Published by A. C. McClurg & Co., Chicago, 1886. This is the title of a most valuable publication, rich in statistics, able in argument and replete with the spirit of philanthropy. The author had done a good work, not merely for the unfortunate and criminal classes, but for the entire body politic. We hope to make some extracts hereafter.

FIVE-VOLUME, "BIRCH-BARK EDITION."—In this volume approximately seven hundred quotations from Mr. Ruskin's voluminous writings are classified under appropriate headings, upon the general subjects of " The Cardinal Tenets of Art," "The Graphic Arts," "Painting and Sculpture," "Engraving," "Illuminating," "Architecture." This volume is now ready. It presents, for the first time in America, a very fine portrait, taken from a recent photograph of Mr. Ruskin. Price of volume, 25 cents.

We have received the advance sheets of Demorest's Monthly for July. The table of contents for the forthcoming number is rich in promise and the extracts sent us are of great value, especially as related to the temperance reform and the labor question. We clip his article on "Moral Heroism."

"The idea of 'throwing away votes!" At the very time your cause is numerically the weakest is the very time that your individual votes counts the most. The party that triumphs by securing votes cast for it by voters who consider it a "choice of evils," will fall in disgrace, as individuals must fall who temporarily succeed by false pretenses. The voter who votes against his principles, upon considerations of expediency, involves a force for evil which is sure to return sooner or later, and torture his soul for time and eternity. Prohibition would bring more general prosperity and individual happiness than the success of any or all of the great political or morals questions of the day. The state, the home, the general government, commerce, trade, education—everything would be more secure and prosperous. Let us work, vote, and pray for prohibition.

THE HOME.

AT LAST.

When on my day of life the night is falling,
And in the winds from unsunned spaces blown
I hear far voices out of darkness calling
My feet to paths unknown.

Thou who hast made my home of life so pleasant,
Leave not its tenant when its walls decay,
O Love divine, O Helper ever present,
Be thou my strength and stay!

Be near me when all else is from me drifting,
Earth, sky, home's picture, days of shade and shine,
And kindly faces to my own uplifting
The love which answers mine.

I have but thee, O Father! Let thy spirit
Be with me then to comfort and uphold;
No gate of pearl, no branch of palm I merit,
Nor street of shining gold.

Suffice it if—my good and ill unreckoned,
And both forgiven through thy abounding grace—
I find myself by hands familiar beckoned
Unto my fitting place.

Some humble door among thy many mansions,
Some sheltering shade where sin and striving cease,
And flows forever through heaven's green expansion
The river of thy peace.

There, from the music round me stealing,
I fain would learn the new and holy song,
And find, at last, beneath thy trees of healing,
The life for which I long.

—John Greenleaf Whittier, in Atlantic Monthly.

GOD'S MANY.

[1 Cor. viii: 5, 6.]

BY C. E. WALKER.

The Ancients were given to worshiping many gods; as planets, elements, rivers' etc., and among modern heathen the same custom prevails. Worshipers bowing down to animals, images, spirits, etc. These people alluded to are called heathens. You have heard of them from returned missionaries, or, perhaps, have read of them in books and papers; but there is still another class of worshipers to which I desire to direct your attention for consideration. Possibly you, reader, may chance to belong to this last class—and if so, I hope you may read candidly and act candidly, just the same.

The class of whom I wish to speak is here divided into groups, and each group shall have a few words:

First.—In our day—called the civilized age—there are those who worship their lands, herds and flocks. They seem to have become so closely allied to their estates and animals that to talk of anything else is almost out of the question—you know it is a truism that "man, by worshiping becomes assimilated to the object which he worships." It is said that the priests of Buddha understand and teach this saying. "If men pray to Buddha and do not become Buddha, it is because the mouth prays, and not the mind. "Think of Buddha, and you will be transformed into Buddha."

Another group of this class consists of those who are bent on rolling up piles of gold and silver—for what purpose it would seem hard to tell, as they cannot take it with them—if they did, it would surely melt. these persons are worshiping their dollars, eagles and half-eagles. crushing the poor and rolling up the usury, and making themselves gods of gold and silver. Are you in this group? "The love of money is the root of all evil." Acquire money only for the use you can make of it, not for itself.

Another group worships the goddess of fashion. Oh, how many men, women and children are to-day bowing at the throne of fashion. Astounding!

Men cheating fellowmen to be enabled to appear well—to be admired—pride in the heart—women displaying the fashions at the expense of others, or by using the Lord's money. Children reared in pride, and the displays of style in dress and jewelry on these worshipers at the shrine of fashion is fitting them all for a miserable life and an endless death.

Lastly—there is a group who worship loved ones—have given the heart entirely to those who ought only have the affections—men worshiping wives, women worshiping husbands, parents worshiping children and lovers worshiping sweethearts.

Now who will say we have not among us those who do not compare favorably with the peoples of heathen lands for gods? "Gods many and lords many."

But "there is but one God, the Father, of whom are all things," and he demands the service of our hearts. He is our Father by creation, and may be our Father by adoption. The question is, will we have it so?

A gentleman once said in my hearing that "all men desire to be saved;" perhaps so—more persons want a savior—want Christ, then we are want to believe. In a case of sudden calamity they want Christ near—but—in a general way they choose to serve other gods—a number of them.

This is how they do it. Divide up the heart into compartments; one room for real estate head quarters; this room for the treasury department; another for the goddess of fashion; and the next room for an adjunct to the last to fit up for dress parade; this room for the good things for appetites and passions; another room for the lodge wherein to learn the "sublime mysteries;" and then if the cellar and garret are not full, Christ may take a seat up garret or down cellar to be convenient to eall in case of an emergency, as for instance, a cyclone is approachiug.

But mark this: God will not have a second place in the hearts of individuals or in the governments of nations. When Christ comes in to sup with us, he clears the temple, usurers, eattle-dealers, golden ornaments, lodgeites—all must go—Jesus Christ fills the heart, or does not come in. He is a prince that takes no garret apartment. Have you a personal Christ in your heart? Have you been willing to have the "house-eleaning" process carried into effect in your heart, and taken in Jesus as your Saviour? Away with all other gods, and have Jesus as your King.

THE COURAGE OF OUR LORD.

Often has it seemed strange to us that the Son of man should have avoided danger, should have retired in a desert place at the approach of persecution. Did he fear to die? No, he did not fear to die; but he was not afraid to live. There were times when to him it would have been easier to die than to live, times when his heart threatened to break beneath the load of the burden laid upon him. At such times he had but one fear—lest he should die ere he could bear his burden home. His courage was the patience wherewith he possessed his soul, his determination not to yield till his work was done, his resolution to survive, in spite of life's bitter cross, until he had carried that cross to its destined goal. What think you does he mean when he says, "I have a baptism to be baptised with, and how am I straitened until it be accomplished?" He means that he needed patience to keep his heart from breaking, patience to live on till his baptismal hour. Ponder solemnly these wondrous words of the Epistle to the Hebrews, "Who in the days of his flesh, when he had offered up prayers and supplications, with strong crying and tears, unto him that was able to save him from death, and was heard in the thing he feared" "What?" you say; "heard in the thing he feared? I never knew that Christ's Gethsemane prayer was heard at all. Did not the cross come to him in spite of his crying? Was he not called to die?" Yes; but the thing he feared was not death, but death before his work was done. He prayed to him who was able to save him from death, that he would save him till his baptismal hour, that he would grant him the strength to bear until he had borne his burden home. And verily he was heard in the thing he feared. The strength came to him after the agony, and the Father's cup ceased to tremble in his hands. The strength came to him, and the strong crying and tears fled away, and his will stood up erect in the garden and said, "If this cup may not pass away from me, except I drink it, thy will be done." In that hour the cup did pass from him, passed in the act of drinking it. The bitterness went out of it as he drained it to the dregs. The moment he gave his will to his Father, his Father gave him back his will, and he was infinitely strong. In his patience he possessed his soul, possessed it not in mere resignation, but in acquiescence, in joyousness. He went out to meet his baptism with a light heart. He climbed the ascent of Calvary with a strong step—for it is the soul that makes the strength, and he who possesses the soul is master over all things. The memory of that self-possession was in the valley of the shadow the rod and staff that comforted him. It was there that with his loudest, most triumphant voice he cried, "It is finished," Think you it is only a child's joy that there was to be no more pain? No, it was a man's satisfaction that his work had been sustained to the end. It was a joy of knowing that he had never given in, never wavered from his purpose, never yielded to the storm. He had fought a good fight, he had finished his course, yet had kept his patience; that was his crown of glory.—G. Matheson.

THE CENTRAL AND SOUTH AMERICAN STATES.

On the continent, south of the United States, are fifteen Spanish-American republics, the Portuguese-American Empire of Brazil, and four European colonies.

They have a total population of 45,000,000 consumers, and an area of about 8,000,000 square miles, or more than double that of the United States.

In climate, resources, supply, and demand they are the reverse and complement of the United States. Commercial exchanges with such countries are therefore in accordance with sound laws of trade and political economy.

They are exceedingly deficient in manufactures.

They need our railway iron and supplies, farming implements, cotton and woolen goods, boots and shoes, sewing-machines, telegraph and telephone supplies, clocks and watches, notions, and a thousand and one articles of our invention and skill.

We need their coffee and sugar, tropical fruits, hard woods, fiber plants, and other raw materials.

In brief, these countries represent twenty American Indias whose unsupplied and inviting trade-fields we will find most profitable to occupy with our surplus energy, skill, products, and manufactures. At present, however, our share of that trade is disgracefully small. Their total foreign eommeree, exports and imports of merchandise combined, is in value as follows:

The Republic of Mexico	$ 55,000,000
The five Central American republics	24,428,000
The nine South American republics	348,646,000
The four European colonies	31,950,000
The Empire of Brazil	215,061,000
Total	$675,085,000

Of this total trade the United States eontrols but $126,822,000, or less than one-fifth part, the lion's share being monopolized by Great Britain, France, and other European powers.

Of the total annual imports of these twenty countries, which amount to $303,812,000 in value, we supply but one-seventh part.

There is no better way to cure this serious defect than by inviting the several American nations together under one roof to a grand exposition.

GROWTH OF CHRISTIANITY.

A brief reference to the growth of Christianity, according to the tables given by the most generally accredited statisticians, may serve to encourage the friends of missions.

In A. D. 1000 the number of Christians in the world was estimated at 50,000,000; in A. D. 1500, at 100,000,000; in 1700, at 155,000,000; in 1800, 200,000,000; and in 1880, 410,000,000; that is, Christianity has more than doubled its number of adherents during the last eighty years.

On the authority of such men as Drs. Turner, Baird and Schem, and there are few or none better, we have the following:

"In 1830 there were in the world 288,000,000 Christians; in 1840, 300,000,000; in 1850, 342,000,000, and in 1880, 410,000,000." Thus it will be seen that during nearly ten centuries of almost exclusive papal dominion, Christianity gained only about 85,000,000. Since the birth of Protestantism, a period of about one-third as long, it has gained nearly four times as much; and since the great awakening of Protestantism in the middle of last century, it has gained 235,000,000, and is now gaining more rapidly than ever before. Yet we are told again and again by unbelievers and scoffers that Christianity is waning, and will soon be dead; and by Catholics we are told that Protestantism is dying, if not already dead. It is very probable that in both cases the wish is father to the thought, and in neither case will the thought be realized or the wish gratified.

GOOD MANNERS.

Good manners are innate with some people, with others they are more or less acquired. Where ignorance of prescribed rules exists, tact will often lead the person out of the social difficulty impending. It is important for the scholar or man of genius not to neglect the minor courtesies of social life, as is shown in the case of Carlyle; while every one can admire his splendid intellect, there are few who have the temerity to praise his crusty manners. A proper regard for the feelings of others will often cause a person ignorant of all social usages to hit the proper vein in good manners.

Heedless people bring up topics of conversation regardless of the feelings of a portion of those whom they are addressing. The latter may hold different views in religion and politics, but on goes the heedless one, ruthlessly tramping on the most tender corns of opinion, cherished by some sensitive one among the number, who is too well-bred to make any reply.—Good Housekeeping.

Life should be a constant vision of God's presence.—A. Maclaren.

THE BIRD THAT SINGS.

" You dear little birdie, who taught you to sing
Among the green blossoms and branches of spring?
I wish you would tell me; for then, don't you see,
I'd ask the same person to try to teach me.

" I wonder, whenever I hear you, if you
Have to sit in a tree for an hour or two
And practice your dear little twitter and trill,
When it is so dreadfully hard to keep still?

" When you want to play in the sunshine all day,
Does anybody hold up a finger and say,
As solemnly: 'Now, little blue-bird, stay so,
And carefully practice your "do, re, mi, do?" '

' Do you have to learn about octaves and thirds,
And chords and arpeggios and other hard words?
And those terrible scales! Why, of all that I do,
I think them the hardest to practice. Do you?

" Well, however you do, I am sure of one thing,
That I have to practice before I can sing.
And with all I may learn, and the best I can do
I never shall sing, little bird, like you."

TAKE THE PLEDGE.

The resolutions adopted by the Baptist church, of Pleasant Hill, Jones county, Iowa, are here presented in the hope that they will find a response in many churches and congregations and the principles carried out at the polls until our churches and governments shall be free from the demoralizing and dangerous effects of secretism:

Whereas, The Scriptures of divine truth teach the worship of the true and living God, the Creator of all things; and

Whereas, The same Scriptures teach that Jesus Christ, who is revealed to us by the Scriptures, is the means of man's accessibility to God; and

Whereas, The rejection of Jesus Christ in form is equivalent to the rejection of God, the Creator, himself, from all such ceremonies or acts of devotion; and

Whereas, The neglect to recognize and reverence Jesus Christ in any ritual or formula of any organization in which prayer is made a part of its formula, is a manifest disrespect to him, and also to God himself; and

Whereas, The rejection of Jesus Christ as revealed in the divine Scripture is a manifest rejection of the God revealed to us in the same; therefore be it

Resolved, 1. That all such semi-religious bodies are inconsistent with a profession of faith in Jesus Christ; and such semi-church associations are incompatible with, and contradictory of church organizations, as taught in the New Testament Scripture of divine truth.

2. That it is inconsistent with church membership for a person to belong to two religious organizations at one and the same time, in which the religious doctrines and teachings are wholly opposed and contradictory to each other.

3. That it is inconsistent to profess faith in Jesus Christ, and retain a membership in a church that receives and recognizes his authority, teaching ordinances, rights and ceremonies and be a member of an organization which is religious or semi-religious, that fail to recognize him either in public or private,

4. That all organizations using religious services in their formulas, such as prayers and acts of devotion, are properly regarded as religious.

5. That all such as discard the teachings, name and authority of Jesus Christ, are anti-Christian, and must, of necessity, be rejected by all that is Christian.

6. That it is a duty of all Christians to renounce, reject and discard from their fellowship all that disowns, rejects and discards Jesus Christ.—Living Way.

STEPHEN AYLMER'S TEMPTATION.

It was lunch-time, and workingmen and clerks were hurrying out of warehouses and workshops on their way to the restaurants. There was only half an hour at their disposal, and every minute was precious. Time did not seem of much value, however, to Stephen Aylmer, a bright young clerk who came out of Crosby's with a number of others. He turned in an opposite direction to his comrades and walked to the bridge over the river, which was not much frequented at that hour of the day. Here he leaned on the parapet, and taking off his hat that the wind might cool his heated brow, he looked off in the distance with a gaze that was full of trouble. He was wrestling with a problem that has peplexed many Christians older than he. He was wondering how it was that trouble after trouble came in quick succession on his godly parents, while wicked men enjoyed an immunity. There was a crisis at home even then. A sick father, a delicate mother, two young sisters, and an execution in the house. That was why, hungry though he was, that Stephen Aylmer did not go to the restaurant with the others to get a lunch. Money was needed at home, and while his father was sick no money could be had but the little Stephen was able to take there. It was not for himself that Stephen cared, however. The cloud on his face was drifted there by the consciousness of what those he loved were suffering.

"Is that the way you spend your time, young man?" said a voice behind Stephen.

"This is our lunch-time, sir," the young man said, as he turned and recognized a merchant with whom he had been brought in contact during his engagement at Crosby's.

"Is this where you get your lunch?"

"No, sir; I did not feel like having lunch to-day, so I came here to be quiet."

"I noticed your name on that receipt you gave me yesterday. Are you a son of Richard Aylmer?"

"Yes, sir; he is my father. He is very sick just now."

"Sorry to hear that. I knew him well some years ago. Will you give me his address? I'll call and see him."

Stephen wrote the address down for him.

"By the way," said the merchant, "was there anything wrong with your accounts yesterday? I noticed that you seemed surprised."

"Yes, sir; but there was nothing wrong. I had several accounts to pay, and Mr. Crosby gave me a considerable sum of money over what I needed to pay them. I thought there was a mistake when I found it at your office, but I have learned since that it was a test of my honesty. I am told that Mr. Crosby did it purposely."

"I do not like such tricks," said the merchant. "Did you feel tempted?"

"I am sorry to say I did for a moment. We need money badly at home, sir, and last night there was a special need. I had the surplus in my pocket, as Mr. Crosby told me to hand him the accounts this morning. The thought crossed my mind that Mr. Crosby might never ask me for it, but it was only for a moment. My father and mother have always taught us to be honest."

"And you gave it in this morning, did you? Was Mr. Crosby surprised?"

"No, sir. I expected he would be, but, you see, he knew all about it."

"Still, he ought not to put temptation in any young man's way. Good-by. Tell your father I shall look in upon him soon," and the merchant went his way, and Stephen returned to his desk.

Stephen had spoken lightly of the ordeal through which he had passed, but, in truth, the temptation had been severe. It so happened that the surplus, which he supposed to be a mistake, would have relieved his family of a pressing claim—in fact, the one for which the execution had been levied. Happily, his parents' training had been supplemented by his own conversion, and the sophistry by which Satan wins so many victims was foiled in Stephen's case.

That night as he wended his way homeward his heart was full of sadness. It might be that he would find the poor furniture which the family owned carried away in satisfaction of the debt, and he knew his father was little likely to survive such a shock. In the crowded streets his thoughts were raised to God that in some way deliverance might come. Like many other Christians, Stephen's faith in the efficacy of prayer was largely theoretic. It was, therefore, with amazement that on his arrival at home he found the whole family rejoicing over a deliverance exceeding his most sanguine dreams. Not only was the pressing debt paid and money provided for immediate wants, but an offer was awaiting him of employment at a far higher salary than he was now receiving, and with prospects of advancement. The merchant who had spoken to him on the bridge was God's agent in answering his prayer, and even before he uttered it, it had been answered. That was only the first of many experiences that Stephen could have quoted in answer, if, in after days, he had been asked, "What profit shall we have if we pray unto him?" (Job 21: 15).

TEMPERANCE.

FACTS ABOUT STRONG DRINK.

Bishop Ireland, in an address before the Plenary council in Baltimore, presented the following statistics regarding the ruin and sin resulting from the use of strong drink:

"In San Francisco last year there were arrested 25,669 people. Of these 19,500 were for drunkenness, or disturbances of the peace owing to drunkenness. In Philadelphia in 1881, 27,228 arrests out of 44,097 were for intoxication. In Baltimore in 1883, there were 7,783 arrests made, a very small number when compared to other cities, but of this number 5,313 were for drunkenness and disturbances of the peace arising from too much drink. In 1881, there were in the United States 185,769 liquor dealers—one dealer to every 270 persons, including men, women and children. The saloons are more numerous in the larger cities. In Boston there is a saloon for every 150 people; in Chicago one saloon to 140, in New York one to 135, and so on. The speaker then argued that the average number of drinking people could not possibly support the saloons, unless they drank to excess. In Boston, in 1881, the Bureau of Labor Statistics made an effort to trace back the source of every arrest made, and after a careful research they found that seventy-two per cent was due to drink."

These are words of truth and soberness; and it is a matter for thanksgiving that the bishops of the Roman Church are beginning to awake and bear testimony on this important subject, which has been so thoroughly discussed in America many years, and still calls for constant attention. It is high time this rum business was thoroughly ventilated, and the deadly and damnable character of the traffic exposed.

WHY THIS WASTE?

In a single year the American people spend thirty or fifty times as much on fermented and distilled liquors!—thirty times as much annually for ruining men!—as the gifts of seventy-five years for saving men! Taking the word of the American Board as a sample, the income of the liquor traffic for a single year would have planted 20,000 churches, gathered a membership of more than a million, with not less than three millions of attendants upon the worship of God. During the three-quarters of a century of the American Board's operations, the immense war debts of Christian nations have been contracted. These amount, at present, to four billion dollars for England, the same amount for France, an equal sum for the remainder of Europe, and nearly three billion dollars for the United States; a total of fifteen billion dollars. It is a liberal estimate to say that all Continental and American foreign missionary societies have expended three hundred million dollars since the present century opened. During that time, nominally Christian nations have spent fifty times as much in cutting each other's throats as in saving their fellow-men. Had we spent for Bibles what we have for powder and lead, we might have planted tens of thousands of churches, gathered thirty-five million of communicants, and christianized a hundred million of souls. Such a policy would have made Asia as Christian as is New England. The facts are simply overwhelming. Our cheeks should mantle with shame. We cannot press the work too closely and eagerly; for the missionary policy is the most economical for the peace of the nations. Nor will anything but the Gospel of Jesus Christ ever dissipate the standing armies of the world, and seal the sword forever in the scabbard. Here at home, too, the conflict widens and deepens. Class is arrayed against class, labor mutters against capital, the poor grind their teeth against the rich; and only as the Son of man lays his pierced hands on all hearts, can the threatening storm pass away and the heavens become radiant with eternal peace and joy.—Dr. Behrends.

Robert Gibson, well known along the Monongahela river above Pittsburg, Pa., as a man fond of the bowl, and always ready to look upon its contents, no matter their color, is now president of the Coal Valley Blue Ribbon Club, and reports himself happier and brighter at the good old age of more than sixty years, than when in the prime of his manhood.

Wm. Signet, McKeesport's, Pa., new Chief Police, never tires of telling the good things sobriety has done for him after years of slavery to liquor drinking; and to those who knew him in the old time, his story needs no telling, as they look into his eyes now.

Sunday liquor selling is still going on, but it is only a question of time until it must be crowded out, and the men (?) who carry it on brought to punishment.

As a dilapidated looking individual, sadly out of repair in the attic, from having looked through too many glass bottoms, was passing along the street a few Sabbaths ago in charge of the police, a respectable saloon keeper remarked to his cronies standing by, "Now nobody ought to sell liquor to a man like that on Sunday."

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

—In an English church in London the holy communion service is celebrated once a month in Hebrew for the benefit of some converted Jews.

—The United Presbyterian Mission in India reports a very prosperous year, and the returns of one Presbytery alone show that there are now almost double the number of communicants reported three years ago.

—At the examination of Chinese students at Wuchang last September, twelve thousand copies of the Gospel were distributed to the candidates by the missionaries of London, Wesleyan and China Inland Missions.

—Missionary Diaz (Baptist) says that about three hundred converts are waiting for an opportunity to elude the priests and be baptized by night at Havana, Cuba, and its vicinity.

—The reports which from the headquarters of the mission which has been founded by the Presbyterians at Tiberias, on the Sea of Galilee, are encouraging. It is a medical mission.

—The "India Holiness Association" has J. S. Jacobs, of Hyderabad, for president, and is about issuing two new papers in the interests of holiness, the one in Hindustani, the other in Marathi.

—English colporteurs in Persia are meeting with success in distributing the Bible in the Persian language. Even Mohammedans are pleased with Bibles offered them in their own tongue.

—The King and Queen of the Greboes have been received into the American Episcopal Mission in West Africa.

—The Presbyterian Mission in Mexico has purchased for its use one of the principal Roman Catholic churches of Zacatecas.

—The whole sum cut off by the Presbyterian Board from the appropriation for Syria last year, $7,000, was graciously made up to the mission by a New York city gentleman, who was traveling through that country and could not bear to see Christian work hampered.

—The Presbyterian General Assembly of Victoria is to celebrate its semi-centennial by raising $300,000 for home missions, sustentation, and church extension schemes.

—The American Board, and the other mission boards in this country, have united in a petition to the United States Government to prevent the exportation of liquor to Africa.

—Mr. Spurgeon preached one of the recent anniversary sermons of the Wesleyan Missionary Society in the Great Queen's Street Chapel, London.

—The Central China Religious Tract Society, at Hankow, in 1885, its tenth year, distributed 424,000 books and tracts, nearly 77,000 more than in 1884.

—The Jesuits in Maderia are active in exciting persecution against the Protestants and inciting the authorities to close the Bible depot and a Portuguese mission school that has an average attendance of forty children.

—Dr. Mackay, the excellent missionary at Formosa, who was compelled to stop his work by the French aggression, has returned and celebrated the fourteenth anniversary of his arrival at Tamsui, March 9. Hundreds of the natives converted under his labors came to the joyful fete from all parts of the island.

—The first dispensary connected with the McAll Mission has been opened in Paris.

—Some of the English rectors have had occasion to reprimand their people for going out of the church just before the sermon.

—Mr. George Muller, during his visit to Australia, is awakening great interest through his public meetings and personal labors, which are abundant, though he is over four-score years of age.

—Mr. Joseph Rabbinovich, the Jewish reformer in South Russia, continues his work at Kischieneff, where his Sunday services are crowded with men and women of Israel, thirsting for the Gospel.

—There is a great influx of Jews into Jerusalem from Roumania and Russia, where their situation is made so intolerable that they are led to think of making homes in Palestine, their ancient land.

—In order to encourage the Presbyterians of California, one gentleman has given $50,000 for the special purpose of endowing a professorship in the Presbyterian Seminary at San Francisco.

—A new Methodist University is to be built in the town of Bartley, Neb., where the Rev. Allen Bartley, a nephew of ex-Governor Bartley, has given real estate to the value of $200,000 for that purpose.

—The Presbyterian Board of Ministerial Relief reports $26,000 in the treasury.

—Most of the city Episcopal churches will remain open all summer, and many of other denominations.

—The Presbyterian Directory for Worship has been amended so as to direct a weekly offering as a part of worship.

—The Rev. W. D. Buchanan, of this city, will have charge of the Presbyterian church in Newport during the season.

—The Woman's Christian Temperance Union is making a vigorous effort to secure a day of prayer in the Week of Prayer.

—The work of Messrs. Moody and Whittle in Plainfield, N. J., has been followed by a decided religious awakening.

—The M. E. church has 225,000 negro members, who support 1,219 preachers and gave $1,000 last year to benevolent objects.

—Of 3,144 churches and chapels in forty-two Episcopal dioceses in this country, 2,182 have free seats. Of seventy-eight in this city, thirty-seven have free seats.

—"Children's Day" in the Baptist church is to be observed the second Sabbath in June. The day is now kept in nearly all the churches, except the Reformed Episcopal.

—Mr. Shorey, of the Water Street Mission (formerly Jerry McAuley's), has held his farewell service. Mr. Stephen H. Hadley, who was one of the first converts of the mission, will take his place as its conductor.

—A graduate of the Yale Divinity School at the recent Commencement was a full-blooded Indian, who took for his thesis the book of Malachi, which he had translated into Choctow, with an exegetical and critical commentary.

—The next Pan-Presbyterian Council is to be held in London, beginning June 26, 1888. The American section recommends that fewer papers be read and more time be given for discussion in the next Council than heretofore.

—At the time of the Luther Jubilee, in 1883, the idea was proposed to erect a suitable building for the Y. M. C. A. of Lubeck, Prussia. It has been successfully carried out, and on March 22nd it was opened. The building contains a large hall for religious, social, and scientific meetings, and also a hospital with many rooms.

—All the arrangements have been completed for holding the fifth annual conference of the Societies of Christian Endeavor at Saratoga Springs, on July 6, 7, and 8 next. It is intended to make the occasion one of unusual interest.

—About one-fifth of the population of Philadelphia is in the Sunday-school. There are in the city 650 Sunday-schools, with an attendance of 186,835 scholars and over 16,000 teachers. This is a good showing, but there is still great room for improvement.

—The total receipts of the Methodist Missionary Society during the first six months of the present fiscal year, from November 1st to April 30th, 1886, were $462,746.72. This is an increase over the corresponding six months of the previous year of $83,-617.04.

—At the meeting of the Congregational Association of Illinois, at Moline, last week, the most suggestive paper was one by Professor S. I. Curtis on "The Problem of the great cities." He said that in Chicago there is one church for every 2,089 inhabitants, and one saloon for every 179 persons. But extremes of society—the very rich and the very poor—are found in the cities. The only hope in the solution of this problem is found in education and religion.

—The eleventh annual report of the Mission to Lepers, in India, gives interesting accounts of the eight asylums assisted by the society. Of these asylums, four are in connection with the Church Missionary Society, two with the American Presbyterian Mission, one with the London Missionary Society, and one with Gossner's Evangelical Mission. Thus, through the means of existing agencies, Christian influence and teaching is sought to be brought on some of the most tried and suffering of our fellow-beings.

—Of India it was said eighty-eight years ago: "Among these idolators no Bibles were found, no Sabbaths, no congregations for religious instruction in any form, no house of God, no god but a log of wood or a monkey, no savior but the Ganges, no worship but that paid to abominable idols, and that connected with dances, songs, and unutterable impurities." Now there are 200,000 Christians in India.

—The report of George Muller's work for 1885 is summarized as follows: Last year, without applying to a single person, his receipts amounted to $200,000. He has received in all from the beginning more $5,000,000.

—The Indians on the Yankton reservation in Dakota celebrated Arbor day by setting out 1,000 forest trees on the campus of the gevernment industrial school, and the boys at St. Paul's mission school planted a fruit orchard. These Indians are said to be settling down to farming this season more generally than they have done heretofore, and a correspondent recently counted nine teams plowing on a ten-acre tract. They work in bands, cultivating each man's tract in turn.

—It has been proposed by missionaries in China that the new version of the New Testament, prepared by Rev. Griffith John, of Hankow, be adopted as the basis of a union version for all China. In the death of Mrs. Griffith John at Hankow, Dec. 29, 1885, the cause of Christian missions in China loses a valuable laborer. She had been in China for thirty years, and was a lady of strong character and great usefulness.

—After nine years' labor, the first revison of the Malagasy Bible is now completed. The condition of Madagascar is said to be somewhat unsettled. The country is experiencing the evil effects which always follow the path of war. Deserters and stragglers from the army are roaming through the land, forming a turbulent and disorderly element. This interferes, to some extent, with missionary work.

—The summary of the American Home Missionary Society shows the number of missionaries employed to be 1,447, a gain of 22; fields occupied, 3,005, a gain of 15; years of labor performed, 1,058, a gain of 41; churches organized, 152; new Sunday-schools gathered, 296; Sunday-school scholars, 120,000; additions to the church, 9,050; converts reported, 7,115, a gain of 2,000; church-buildings completed, 145; and churches brought to self-support, 66, a gain over the previous year of 16. The total cash receipts of the treasury for the sixtieth year, including auxiliaries, is $524,544.93. This is the largest amount ever reported, and a gain of nearly $73,000 over the receipts of the previous year.

—A very encouraging feature in the work of the United Presbyterian Board of Missions is the evidently increasing demand in both Missions for the Scriptures and religious and educational works. To meet this demand the India Mission published during the year 2,005 volumes and sold 3,939. The total sales reached 1,612 rupees (nearly $800), and much, it is believed, was done by the works thus scattered abroad. In Egypt the whole number of publications, tracts and other works was 10,000. There were sold, of the Scriptures, 9,962 copies; religious publications, 8,886; and educational, 19,324; total, 38,172. The amount secured for these various works was $8,371.46, of which $2,576.84 were for the Scriptures.

—The Japanese Gazette makes this significant acknowledgment: "We regret to say that it is our opinion that Buddhism cannot long hold its ground, and that Christianity must finally prevail throughout all Japan. We do not mean that it will do this all at once, this day, this month. In the present state of things, with the exception of the learned and most respectable class, and a few Shinto priests, all Japan to a man is Buddhist, while those of the Christian faith are not a thousandth part of the people. But Japanese Buddhism and Western sciences cannot stand together. They are inconsistent, the one with the other. Buddhism cannot be acceptable to any but ignorant believers. On the other hand, Christianity, though sometimes forced to do so, yet since it does not unite with the physical sciences, secures the faith of the higher classes. This the Buddhist can in no wise expect to do."

—Soon after the war, as the result of the agitation started by the Christian soldier, General Howard, a university for the higher education of negroes was established in Washington, D. C., and named in honor of its leading friend. The school has grown remarkably and last year numbered 445 colored students; of these 57 were females. The theological department connected with the school is an undenominational affair, the faculty consisting of Congregationalists, Presbyterians and General Synod Lutherans. At the recent Commencement fifteen young men graduated from the seminary, which department has sent out 233 men into the ministry since its establishment. Among the students are also three who intend to enter the Lutheran ministry. The beneficiary given these men is never more than one hundred dollars a year, and during the vacations they earn by the labor of hand or head whatever more they need for their studies.

How many more shall we hear from before another week closes?

We wish to add many more names to this list. Send your names and post-office address with the money. We cannot open a book account, as would be necessary if we did not require money in advance. When your name and money is received your order is at once entered in the shipping book and you will receive the book as soon as we can get it out. We hope to issue it by the middle of June, but cannot say positively how soon. It is being compiled by Rev. H. H. Hinman as fast as his other duties will permit.

We want one thousand orders in advance. Send in your names.

You will notice that the list of names of those ordering "Masonic Outrages," grows week by week. The orders are all the way from one copy to twenty-five. It is now evident that Mr. Hinman will not be able to complete the compilation as soon as he had hoped to. Please remember that we do not promise them at any stated time, but will mail them as soon as issued, which we hope will be during this month. Those sending for the pamphlet, with the money, will find their names in the list as an acknowledgment and receipt for their money.

Extracts from a few letters are given below that the donors of the Cynosure to Southern ministers may learn how their gift is received:

MERIDIAN, Miss., June 5, '86.

Yours at hand, and very thankfully received. I think your paper a very valuable one, and is very much needed among our Southern colored ministers, and people in general; for secretism has become, it seems, almost second nature with them. I believe it to be one of the greatest evils of the land, and helps greatly to hold down and demoralize our people. Please extend my heartfelt thanks to the donor, good friend, that sent me the paper, and at the expiration of the time paid for, I shall complete the year's subscription.

Your humble servant,
L. D. CUNNINGHAM.

MARYFIELD, Ga., June 7, '86.

I have received two of your papers, and after reading them I feel satisfied and glad of its reports. Iam glad to find that such news has begun among us Southern people. I desire you to send it, and gladly receive it. Your Bro. in Christ,
REV. A. HOWELL.

MONTEZUMA, Ga., June 7, '86.

Copies of the Christian Cynosure at hand; contents read; like it very much, and have decided to continue taking it. Just keep on sending it, and by the time of the expiration of the eight months, if nothing happens, I think that I will be able to pay for it myself. Your Bro. in Christ, REV. J. S. BROWN.

TROY, N. C., June 8, '86.

I feel very grateful for the gift of the Cynosure. I believe it to be the coming reform after prohibition is secured. Though we have no societies here, it is understood by all that we will receive no society men into the church, and the students of this institution are trained up to oppose secretism. Thankfully,

REV. WM. H. ELLIS,
Pastor Congregational Church.
Principal Peabody Institute.

P. S. At our State Association held in May, strong ground was taken against them and heartily applauded, though no vote was taken.

SELMA, Ala., June 9, '86.

Excuse pencil and haste, but I must acknowledge the receipt of the Cynosure and return thanks for the kindness of the donor. I am most heartily in sympathy with your good reform, and keep preaching and talking on the subject. It is difficult, however, in my busy life to keep a weekly paper read up on every one of the great reforms of the day, besides the general missionary and religious papers. However, when I had the Cynosure before, I believe I read it better than any other of my papers, for I like its tone and treatment of all questions. I will try to circulate it also after reading. With very many thanks I am yours fraternally,
REV. C. B. CURTIS.

ADA, Ala., June 4, 1886.

I have rereived your papers very regularly, and have been rejoicing over them with exceeding great joy; and I am now at work to get up a club to take the Cynosure with me. I have got some promises to take then, and will send you in a short time. REV. B. COLES.

"MASONIC OUTRAGES"

will be issued by the National Christian Association in a few weeks. All orders received before its issue will be filled at 20 cents per copy. Many have urged that this pamphlet be issued, and now that the work has been undertaken, your sanction in the shape of orders will be encouraging.

BIRNEY.

The sketch of JAMES G. BIRNEY, candidate of the Liberty Party for President, in pamphlet for 25 cents. A limited number of copies of this handsome pamphlet for sale at the N. C. A. office.

BETWEEN TWO OPINIONS.

BY E. E. FLAGG.

Author of "Holden with Cords," "A Sunny Life," "Little People," etc.

The Best Story of the Reform.

Price, only $1.00.

Published by THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

This latest and best of Miss Flagg's works is now ready in handsome print, neatly bound. The story begins in a quiet New England home, and paints its homely joys with a delicacy and truthfulness worthy the hand of Harriet Beecher Stowe. The scene then changes to a thriving, growing, palpitating young Western city, and with great power and startling accuracy the writer leads us behind the scenes that we may see the machinery that works the liquor traffic and labor troubles. The story of the strike, the mob, the attempted assassination, the saloon-keeper's wiles, the curse of his trade, the power of the Christian faith to change him to a messenger of mercy, the criminal and the hidden power that shields him from justice, the land robbers tricks, the dark and secret conspiracies of the lodge—these and all the incidents of the book are portrayed with rare tact and great power of description. It is emphatically a book for the hour. And what is better and yet more striking, the incidents are facts, and every one a powerful and convincing argument against the lodge and the saloon.

Every temperance man and woman should read this book. No temperance story like it was ever planned, much less ably executed. A wonderful light is thrown upon the difficulties in the way of prohibition. Learn how they may be avoided.

Every one who loves to read a good story, chaste and elegant in expression, p in thought, true in incident, deeply interesting in its narrative, should read this bc

READ THESE NOTICES FROM THE PRESS:

The Free Methodist, Chicago.

"Between Two Opinions" is a story, its incidents vouched for as facts, which presents a powerful argument on these questions and must attract thousands of readers among our thinking and observant people. The plot of the story is neither startling nor novel, but it develops a wonderful strength in following the experiences of people in the common, every-day walks of life.

Free Press, Birmingham, Iowa.

It differs from the popular story, "The Bread-winners" of a year ago. It greatly differs from that book in that it is written from the Christian standpoint, and its beautiful and touching descriptions of home life and home duties and heroic self-denyings will waken a responsive echo in every heart, that has not by dissipation lost the taste for the pure joys of home.

The Religious Telescope, Dayton.

The author, Miss Flagg, is a brilliant writer. The stirring questions in American politics are undoubtedly prohibition and the labor movement as championed by the secret unions of working men, which direct the strikes that with more and more frequency occur in our cities. "Between Two Opinions" is a story, its incidents vouched for as facts, which presents a powerful argument on these questions, and must attract thousands of readers among our thinking people.

The Christian Conservator, Dayton.

This is a charming book, written in an attractive manner. It is so full of sunshine and so radiant with light that one is enlightened, warmed, and, before they are conscious of it, set against the lodge. The style gleams, glows and sparkles. It is dignified and simple. It is the right book to place in the hands of your wife or daughter to superinduce co-operation with you in anti-secrecy work. Every minister's wife should read it, and then, if her husband is not an Anti-mason, he should take his turn next and become one.

The American, Washington.

We are reading, in spare moments, Miss Flagg's new book, "Between Two Opinions," and the estimate we have thus far put upon it is that it is masterly both in style and argument. One is insensibly made to feel that he is reading facts and not fiction; that the book is not a play upon the imagination but an unraveling of mysterious circumstances which have an important bearing upon current events.

Law and Order, Boston.

The book takes high ground for prohibition of the liquor curse, for woman's ballot for home protection, and for a better and more honest brotherhood than is forced by their obligations upon the members of secret orders. It is, therefore, a valuable book for several large classes of American readers.

Christian Instructor, Philadelphia.

There are important questions pressing upon American politics to-day; two of them are prohibition and the labor question as connected with the secret unions of workingmen. This work is an expose of the twin evils, secret societies and the saloons. The truths are given in the form of a story; not startling, but thrilling experiences of home life that are vouched for as facts. The evidences presented of the impossibility of reaching the saloon keeper so long as he and the officers of the law are sworn brothers in the den of some secret society, are conclusive enough to awaken the most careless and obtuse member of society. It is a valuable book for the masses to read.

Evangelist, Berea, Kentucky.

The object of the volume is to illustrate the practical workings of Secret Societies, and especially to show how the Lodge upholds the saloon, and this very important design is wrought out with much skill, clearness and power. By reading it temperance people may learn much about the difficulties in the way of prohibition.

The Standard, Chicago.

It is written in the interests of reform, more especially temperance and Anti-masonry. The title of the story suggests the special aim of it, which is to protest against all "halting between two opinions;" in other words, is a plea for radicalism. The story is vigorously written, and will interest even readers who do not altogether believe in its doctrine.

The Pacific, San Francisco.

It is a story intended to do service against the saloons, and in favor of Womans' Christian Temperance work, and especially against the secret orders—Freemasons, Odd-fellows, the Knights of Labor, etc. No reflecting man can doubt that any combination of picked classes and individuals is liable to great abuse. It is obvious, also, that secret orders are specially capable of being used in a selfish and unprincipled way.

THE BROKEN SEAL;

Or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene.

FARM NOTES.

BOGUS BUTTER IN EUROPE.

Our trans-atlantic neighbors are large buyers of "oleo," neutral oil," and other ingredients of imitation butter, yet they are no more fond than Americans of the fraudulent compounds. The Mark Lane Express, of London, in reviewing a paper on this subject, recently read by Mr. Geo. Barham, remarks: "It is a question whether the word 'butterine' ought to be allowed to be used for stuff which, as Mr. Barham says, would be more appropriately termed 'oleine,' 'lardine,' or 'tallowine.' The fats once used for lard and tallow, are now extensively converted into imitation butter, and the commodity, therefore, is much more akin to lard or tallow than to butter, with which it has no connection whatever, except that it is made to look like butter, in order to deceive the public. 'Margarine,' at any rate is a name which ought to satisfy the manufacturers and vendors of this modified tallow, and we shall rejoice, though we have small hope of being able to so so, if Parliament prohibits the use of any word containing the term "butter" as that under which margarine is to be sold in future. As Mr. Barham points out, we are behind other nations in specially legislating against butter frauds. In France the penalty for selling margarine as butter is three month's to one year's imprisonment. In Sweden it is cumpulsory to call all mixtures of fats sold for human consumption, by the name of 'margarine,' and to affix this name to every package containing it. In Denmark a law was passed last year to compel every manufacturer of artificial butter to pack it in tubs or boxes of a shape peculiar to itself, each tub to be branded as margarine. The police are entitled to search the manufactories, and if any mixture of fat is found in contravention of the act, a penalty of from £11 2s. to £111 2s. [$55.50 to $555.60] is inflicted. Even Holland, Mr. Barham says, is moving in the matter, for the Dutch ministry have undertaken to introduce into the Chamber a measure for preventing the adulteration of food, and especially the sale of butterine as butter. Mr. Barham has prepared a bill, which has been revised by the British Dairy Farmers' Association, and is to be introduced in the House of Commons by Mr. C. Laurence, if he can get a night for it. This bill provides that every margarine factory in the kingdom shall be registered and open to inspection by the officers of the Inland Revenue at all times; that the quality manufactured shall be returned monthly; that every package containing the stuff shall be branded by its name in large letters, and that the word 'butter' shall not form any part of that name. With penalties sufficiently heavy, such a measure as this would go a long way towards suppressing the fraudulent sale of margarine. Further than that, we can not ask Parliament to go. As an apparently harmless article of food, a cheap substitute for a costly commodity, margarine must be allowed to be sold to those who choose to purchase it, knowing what it is."

STRONG WORDS ON STRONG BUTTER.

Gilt-edged butter may be expensive, says the Chicago Live Stock Journal, but it is a wholesome luxury. It delights the palate, it aids digestion, it warms the body, and makes the wheels of life roll easily and smoothly along, and thus promote health and happiness, for health and happiness are associated. The man who supplies the world with fine butter is a benefactor of the race, and puts the earth he controls to good use, and is entitled to respect, encouragement and protection from the society whose happiness and welfare his labor promotes. With poor butter it is the reverse in everything. It is unpalateable, and, instead of aiding, it interferes with digestion and vitiates the blood, and is therefore unwholesome. It not only does not please anybody; it is often even loathsome. The man who makes poor butter does the world no good. His labors are worse than wasted, his products become a burden to society, and work loss to himself. He is no good on earth. His name is a by-word and a reproach, and he is unworthy of encouragement or protection. He is only a fit subject for pity and the labors of a missionary.

Exactly, and why should not the one who sells tainted butter be subject to the same punishment as the one who sells tainted meat,

No doubt a great amount of disease is engendered by impure water. Water is an absorbent of impurities, and the best way to expel them is to boil the water. This simple process liberates the noxious gases and cooks the animalculæ. After cooking the water, a good way to keep it pure is to put it in glass fruit jars, hermetrically sealed. It can thus be reduced to the proper temperature for drinking without the danger of absorbing other impurities. Pure water, pure air, wholesome food, and a clear conscience are influences that are deadly only to the business of the doctor and the undertaker.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. A historical sketch of the institution and a critical analysis of the character of each degree, by Prest. J. Blanchard, of Wheaton College. Monitorial quotations and nearly four hundred notes from standard Masonic authorities confirm the truthfulness of this exposition and show the character of Masonic teaching and doctrine. The accuracy of this exposition legally attested by J. O. Doesburg, Past Master Unity □ No. 191, Holland, Mich., and others. This is the latest, most accurate and complete exposition of Blue Lodge and Chapter Masonry. Over one hundred illustrations—several of them full page—give a pictorial representation of the lodge-room, chapter and principal ceremonies of the degrees, with the dress of candidates, signs, grips, etc. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1.00.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished, with engravings showing the lodge-room, dress of candidates, signs, due guards, grips, etc. This revelation was so accurate that Freemasons murdered the author for writing it. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Prest. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7 50. Paper cover, 35 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. To which is appended "A Revelation of the Mysteries of Oddfellowship (old work,) by a Member of the Craft." The whole containing over five hundred pages, lately revised and republished. In cloth, $1.50 each; per dozen, $14.50. The first part of the above work, Light on Freemasonry, 416 pages, 75 cents each; per dozen $7.50.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern. A book of great interest to officers of the army and navy, the bench and the clergy. TABLE OF CONTENTS: The Antiquity of Secret Societies, The Life of Julian, The Eleusinian Mysteries, The Origin of Masonry, Was Washington a Mason? Fillmore and Webster's Deference to Masonry, A Brief Outline of the Progress of Masonry in the United States, The Tammany Ring, Masonic Benevolence, the Uses of Masonry, An Illustration, The Conclusion 50 cents each; per dozen, $4.75.

Masonic Oaths Null and Void; or, Freemasonry Self-Convicted. This is a book for the times. The design of the author is to refute the arguments of those who claim that the oaths of Freemasonry are binding upon those who take them. His arguments are conclusive, and the forcible manner in which they are put, being drawn from Scripture, makes them convincing. The minister or lecturer will find in this work a rich fund of arguments. 207 pp., postpaid.....40 cts.

The Mystic Tie, or Freemasonry a League with the Devil. This is an account of the church trial of Peter Cook and wife, of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a reverend Freemason; and their very able defense presented by Mrs. Lucia C. Cook, in which she clearly shows that Freemasonry is antagonistic to the Christian religion. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Morgan's Exposition, Abduction and Murder, and Oaths of 33 Degrees. Composed of "Freemasonry Exposed," by Capt. Wm. Morgan, "History of the Abduction and Murder of Morgan;" "Valance's Confession of the Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan;" Bernard's Reminiscences of Morgan Times," and Oaths and Penalties of 33 Degrees." 304 pages, $2...

General Washington Opposed to Secret Societies. This is a republication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8th, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life—undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Mah-Hah-Bone; comprises the Hand Book, Master's Carpet and Freemasonry at a Glance. Bound in one volume. This makes one of the most complete books of information on the workings and symbolism of Freemasonry extant. Well bound in cloth, 589 pp.....$1.00

National Christian Association.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin Trial. Also the letter of Hon. Richard Rush to the anti-Masonic committee of York County, Pa., May 4th, 1831. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14th, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons, swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' Letters on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Thirty most interesting, able and convincing letters on the above general subject, written by this renowned statesman to different public men of the United States during the years 1831 to 1833. With Mr. Adams' address to the people of Massachusetts upon political aspects of lodgery; an Appendix giving obligations of Masonry, and an able Introduction. This is one of the most telling anti-secrecy works extant, aside from the Expositions. Price, cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00. Paper, 35 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

In the Coils; or, the Coming Conflict. By "A Fanatic." A historical sketch, by a United Presbyterian minister, vividly portraying the workings of Secretism in the various relations of everyday life, and showing how individual domestic, social, religious, professional and public life are trammeled and biased by the baneful workings of the lodge. Being presented in the form of a story, this volume will interest both old and young, and the moral of the story will not have to be searched for. $1.50 each; $15.00 per dozen.

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. Sermon on Odd-fellowship and Other Secret Societies, by Rev. J. Sarver, pastor Evangelical Lutheran church, Leechburg, Pa. This is a very clear argument against secretism of all forms and the duty to disfellowship Odd-fellows, Freemasons, Knights of Pythias and Grangers is clearly shown by their confessed character as found in their own publications. 10 cents each; per dozen 75 cents

Other Secret Society Rituals.

History of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan As prepared by seven committees or citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan. This book contains indisputable, legal evidence that Freemasons abducted and murdered Wm. Morgan, for no other offense than the revelation of Masonry. It contains the sworn testimony of over twenty persons, including Morgan's wife; and no candid person, after reading this book, can doubt that many of the most respectable Freemasons in the Empire State were concerned in this crime. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Temple of Honor Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of "The Templars of Honor and Temperance," commonly called the Temple of Honor, a historical sketch of the order, and an analysis of its character. HOME AND HEALTH.

RESTING AFTER MEALS.

A friend of the writer's, who has suffered from dyspepsia during almost her entire life, considers the suggestions in the following extracts from an article in a recent issue of the Journal of Health to be the most in accord with her own experience of anything on the subject lately published:

Hurried eating of meals, followed immediately by some employment that occupies the whole attention and takes up all, or nearly all, of the physical energies, is sure to result in dyspepsia in one form or another. Sometimes it shows itself in excessive irritability, a sure indication that nerve force has been exhausted; the double draught to digest the food and carry on the business has been more than nature could stand without being thrown out of balance. In another case, the person is exceedingly dull as soon as he has a few minutes leisure. The mind seems a dead blank, and can only move in its accustomed channels, and then only when compelled. This, also, is an indication of nervous exhaustion. Others will have decided pains in the stomach, or a sense of weight, as if a heavy burden was inside. Others, again, will be able to eat nothing that will agree with them; everything that is put inside the stomach is made the subject of a violent protest on the part of that organ, and the person suffers untold agonies in consequence. Others suffer from constant hunger. They may eat all they can, and feel hungry still. If they feel satisfied for a little time, the least unusual exertion brings on the hungry feeling, and they can do no more until something is eaten. It is almost needless to say that this condition is not hunger, but inflammation of the stomach. Scarcely any two persons are affected exactly in the same way, the disordered condition manifesting itself according to the temperament and occupation, employments that call for mental work, and those whose scene of action lies indoors, affecting persons more seriously than those carried on in the open air, and those which are merely mechanical and do not engage the mind.

All, or nearly all, of these difficulties of digestion might have never been known by the sufferers had they left their business behind them and rested a short time after eating, instead of rushing off to work immediately after hastily swallowing their food.

Nature does not do two things at a time and do both well, as a rule. All know that when a force is divided, it is weakened. If the meal were eaten slowly, without pre-occupation of the mind, and the stomach allowed at least half an hour's chance to get its work well undertaken before the nervous force is turned in another direction, patients suffering from dyspepsia would be fewer.

A physician once said: "It does not so much matter what we eat as how we eat it." While this is only partly true, it certainly is true that the most healthful food hurridly eaten, and immediately followed by work which engages the entire available physical and mental forces, is much worse than a meal of poor food eaten leisurely and followed by an interval of rest.—Scientific American.

SOME CAUSES OF CHOLERA INFANTUM.

It is of the highest importance to ascertain the causes of the diarrhœal diseases, because many of them are avoidable and may be mitigated by intelligent forethought. Further, this forethought must to a great degree be exercised by the parents, as the physician is not generally consulted until the mischief is done. Many causes have been assigned, but among them three are pre-eminently effective for all the variety of diarrhœa above described—namely, bad hygienic surroundings, improper diet, and the great heat of summer.

There is no element of bad hygiene that is without its influence, since every debilitating circumstance and condition is definitely favorable to the development of bowel troubles. But prominent among them are damp situation of the house, bad ventilation, over crowding and filth. The influence of dampness is well recognized, and is probably efficient partly directly, and partly by the aid it furnishes to the decomposition of refuse and filth.

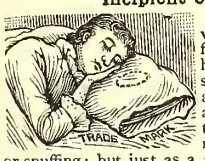
The improper diet of infants aud children is probably even more damaging than bad hygienic surroundings. Food may be unsuitable in many ways. Among the very poor and ignorant classes it often happens that the baby is allowed the same food, whatever it may be, that the family have. But among those who are not poor, and who are eager to do the best for their children, much harm is done through ignorance and misguided zeal. A multitude of foods are prepared with great care for children which are either worthless or almost certain to irritate their digestive organs. Probably the two commonest errors are in the use of foods excessively starchy and making them too concentrated or "rich," in the idea that they are thus more nutritious, the makers being entirely ignorant of the absolute necessity that the food of young children should be a thin liquid.

But even the diet of a child fed naturally may be bad, Good breast-milk is the best food for a young child; but the breast-milk may fail to be good for various reasons. The health of the mother or nurse may have been impaired, and the milk have been poor from the beginning, or it may have deteriorated simply from the age of the breast. It is an insufficient diet in either case. Deleterious changes in its constitution are less common than simple impairment of its quality.—Babyhood.

Edwin Alden & Bro., Cincinnati, O., and New York City, have just issued a very beautiful and attractive Illustrated School Catalogue containing newspaper lists, and some valuable suggestions in the direction of using illustrated advertisements. Many sample illustrations of leading colleges in various parts of the country are given with the expenses that would be entailed by using large engravings in connection with newspaper advertising. The catalogue is quite artistic, and will be sent free on application.

HORSFORD'S ACID PHOSPHATE,

Incomparable in Sick Headache.



DR. FRED HORNER, Jr., Salem, Va., says: "To relieve the indigestion and so-called sick headache, and mental depression incident to certain stages of rheumatism, it is incomparable."

ALL-NIGHT INHALATION!

"A positive revolution in the treatment of Air-Passage Diseases of the Nose, Throat, and Lungs, and, for the purpose designed, as valuable a discovery as vaccination."

THE PILLOW-INHALER.

A Speedy, Positive and Permanent Cure for Catarrh, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Incipient Consumption.

It is a hair pillow, with reservoirs of evaporating liquid, the fumes or vapor of which is inhaled all night long, whilst sleeping as usual, and without any discomfort. It is used only at night, and is perfectly safe to the most delicate. There is no stomach-dosing, douching or snuffing; but just as a smoky lamp will leave a deposit on a whitened wall so the PILLOW-INHALER, for say eight hours at a time, spreads a powerful healing balm or salve on the inflamed inner coating of the diseased air-surfaces, from the nostrils to the bottom of the lungs, and hence into the blood. Old-fashioned inhalation, through a tube, for a few minutes a day, sometimes cured. Think of eight hours constant action, on the same principle, but intensified a hundred-fold! There are no pipes or tubes. The medicine is breathed in, not swallowed, and goes right to the diseased parts.

CATARRH. BRONCHITIS. CONSUMPTION.

HON. E. L. HEDDEN, Collector of the Port of New York, says: "I take pleasure in stating that the PILLOW-INHALER has been of the greatest relief, and I believe of permanent benefit, to my wife, who has been a great sufferer from Bronchial and Catarrhal Troubles, accompanied with distressing Asthma. I recommend its use to all persons afflicted with such maladies."

E. L. HEDDEN, 38 West 49th St., New York.

MR. H. G. TEELE, 50 Bryan Block, Chicago, Ill., says: "I suffered fifteen years from a severe case of Catarrh; coughed incessantly day and night. I bought a PILLOW-INHALER, and since using it my cough is gone; my lungs are no longer weak and sore, and I am in better health than I have been for years."

During the six years of its existence the PILLOW-INHALER has wrought cures of Catarrh, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption, that have been more like miracles than the usual treatment of disease. It is not expensive, and is within the reach of every one. Send for Explanatory Pamphlet and Testimonials, or call.

IN THE COILS;

— OR —

The Coming Conflict.

A NEW AND STRANGE STORY BASED ON STARTLING FACTS, VIVIDLY PORTRAYING A MYSTERIOUS AND DANGEROUS POWER AT WORK IN THE GOVERNMENT, THE CHURCH, AND THE HOME.

"All will agree that this is a powerfully written story."—Evangelist, (Chicago, Ills.)

"A book which we trust may have a wide circulation."—National Baptist, (Philadelphia.)

"So intensely interesting did I find it that it was hard to pause until the last sentence was read. This work places the author high among the writers of fiction."—W. W. Barr, D. D. in Christian Instructor, (Philadelphia.)

"Unless we are greatly mistaken, the work will do more to awaken the American church and people to the evils of Freemasonry than any other book recently published."—Evangelical Repository.

"The book will create a sensation in Masonic circles, and evoke criticism of a most relentless character. The courage of the author in attacking such a rock-rooted bulwark as Freemasonry is something to admire, Fanatic though he be."—Nebraska Watchman.

"Light is needed on this subject and needed badly, and we welcome this contribution to the literature of anti-secretism, and cordially commend it to the favorable attention of our readers."—United Presbyterian, (Pittsburgh.)

"A charming work, fit to be classed with 'Uncle Tom's Cabin;' it is indeed less a work of fiction. The volume is as valuable as a work of reference as it is agreeable, truthful and useful. Our young folks will not leave the book, if they begin it, till they 'see how it turns out.'"—Cynosure, (Chicago, Ills.)

Thurlow Weed's Great Letter

On the abduction and murder of WILLIAM MORGAN in 1826, which has been the most widely published of any Anti-masonic document. The dedication of a noble granite monument to the memory of Morgan, and the able and eloquent addresses of the Convention make this a most valuable pamphlet.

SEE WHY.

It contains—
1. Portrait of Morgan.
2. Portrait of Thurlow Weed.
3. Fine picture of the Monument
4. The great letter of Thurlow Weed and his affidavit—almost the last public act of his life.
5. Address by J. E. Roy, D.D.
6. The monument oration by Pres. C. A. Blanchard.
7. Addresses on "Christian Politics" by Pres. C. Blanchard, on the Character of Freemasonry by Prof. E. D. Bailey, on the "Freedmen and Secret Societies" by Rev. H. H. Hinman; and very interesting personal and historical reminiscences.

LUCILLE VERNON.

Cloth.....75 cents.

THIS is a pleasaut surprise in many ways. The author is Rev. W. T. Meloy, of the United Presbyterian Church of Chicago, and the book is published by the Board of Publication of his denomination. It is a love story, not "fascinating," hut with so much of genial interest that the reader is in no danger of laying it down unfinished. * * * The moral purpose of the book is to describe and vindicate Christian character, in its more heroic aspects, and it is a success. We congratulate the author and the United Presbyterian Board of Publication on this literary lily of the valley.—The Interior.

"LUCILLE VERNON" is evidently not an ideal sketch, hut the fictitious names used represent to a great extent real men and women of flesh and blood. The characters of many of them are by no means attractive, but are perfect counterparts of querulous, obstinate and parsimonious professors who are thorns in the flesh of many a pastor in all the churches. But as in all the churches, there were also good and true men and women at Lansington, who upheld and encouraged the pastor. * * * In its author will be recognized the worthy pastor of the First United Presbyterian Church of Chicago, and a welcome contributor to these columns.—United Presbyterian.

The heroine, who becomes the bride of the pastor of the church at Lansington, is a wonderful exemplification of how a woman who is a true wife and help-meet may throw her life and energies into the great work of saving souls; aiding, by gentle words and sympathy, wise counsel and brave endurance, the husband having charge of a congregation where the Demon of Misrule held full sway. We follow with interest the history of the wife and husband through their hours of despondency and discouragement to the happy ending, where religion, harmony and peace have gained the ascendency and the good man and wife find their reward.—Pittshurgh Daily Telegraph.

Official orders to the army, issued at West Point during the revolution, have been found by Major E. C. Boynton, of Newburgh, N. Y., in possession of a Vermont family.

Rain has fallen copiously the past two days throughout the Northwest, and has greatly improved the condition of the wheat crop.

At Milwaukee Tuesday the forty-nine persons indicted for rioting, conspiracy, etc., pleaded not guilty, the defense reserving the privilege of withdrawing the pleas and substituting others.

The Masonic Grand Lodge of Wisconsin, in session at Milwaukee, expelled John W. Woodhull, the defaulting secretary, from the order. Eugene S. Elliott, of Milwaukee, was elected Grand Master.

It is proposed that blood-hounds be used in hunting down the hostile Apaches in Arizona and New Mexico, the plan being approved by old army officers.

Republicans of the second, third, and fourth Maine Districts, Tuesday, renominated Messrs. Dingley, Milliken, and Boutelle for Congress.

Prohibition State Conventions will be held at Illinois, June 23, at Springfield; Kansas, June 23, at Bismarck Grove; Minnesota, July 7, at St. Paul; Michigan, July 28, at Lansing; Connecticut, July 28, at Hartford; Wisconsin, July 28, at Madison; Pennsylvania, August 25, at Harrisburg; Maine, June 16, 17, at Portland.

The synod of the Reformed church, in session at New Brunswick, N. J., declared for temperance, but rejected a resolution in favor of prohibition.

The Republicans of Arkansas will hold their State convention July 22.

A seven-foot vein of coal was struck at Odin, Ill., Friday, at a depth of 700 feet.

Thomas Seay was nominated for governor, Friday, by the Alabama Democrats on the thirty-first ballot.

The Secretary of the Kansas State Board of Agriculture estimates the winter wheat crop at 11,000,000 bushels, or forty per cent of five years' average.

FOREIGN.

In the French Chamber of Deputies the bill expelling the princes was passed. An amendment was adopted making the expulsion of the chief pretenders compulsory, the expulsion of the other members of the former reigning families to be optional with the government.

An Orange-Catholic riot took place at Belfast Sunday during the funeral of Curran. The Orangemen pelted stones at the procession, and the Catholics in retaliation made an assault on the Orangemen and drove them away. One man was stabbed and several were cut in the head.

At Belfast, Tuesday evening, a mob of Orangemen wrecked a number of houses of Catholics, severely injuring some of them. The police fired on the mob, who replied with revolvers.

Rioting was resumed at Belfast Wednesday evening. The riot act was again read. The Orangemen began throwing stones at the police, when the latter fired, killing four persons.

Rioting was renewed at Belfast Thursday evening. The police was compelled to fire buckshot into the mob, and eventually troops had to be called, who cleared the streets.

The British government has placed the district terrorized by mobs in Ulster under martial law. No further rioting was reported Friday.

Further heavy rainfalls are reported from various parts of Germany. Several bridges were swept away and villages devastated.

At the Papal Consistory in Rome Monday Archbishop Taschereau, of Montreal, was proclaimed a Cardinal.

In the elections held in Belgium Tuesday, to replace outgoing members of the Chamber of Deputies, the Catholics gained eleven seats.

Mr. Gladstone received a dispatch from the Queen Wednesday afternoon announcing her Majesty's consent to a dissolution of Parliament. The Queen had previously asked Lord Hartington to form a Ministry, but Hartington, in reply, advised that Parliament be dissolved.

Twenty-one deaths from cholera were reported at Venice and two at Florence.

The dominion parliament was prologued Wednesday night, after a session lasting three months and ten days. One hundred and thirteen bills received royal assent.

Misrepresentation is never more real than when men make statements according to the letter and not according to the meaning of the things referred to. There has been going the rounds of the papers that Rev. Sam Small said at Columbus, Miss., that "if any man said there is no baptism but immersion he lies." Mr. Small admits that he said substantially these words, but denies that he meant to charge any religious denomination with falsehood, and that his remark was addressed to certain intermeddlers and breeders of strife.

It is highly probable that the French Government will authorize an additional loan of six hundred millions of francs for the completion of the Panama Canal. In spite of the vast obstacles—physical and climatic—that stand in the way of the completion of this vast work, it is highly probable that in time it will be finished. The immense sums already spent, as well as national pride, are guarantees that the work will not be abandoned. Great as is the past and prospective cost in life and treasure, it is far less than that of a foreign war, and in its results to the world, inconceiveably better. De Lesseps may live to sail through the great ditch. We certainly hope so.

"The Government has paid the bondholders already more than the full cost of the war. What the debt still is, is less than the profit they have made out of us.—John Swinton." When Andrew Johnson was President, he proposed that the Government should pay the bondholders six per cent interest for sixteen years and then repudiate the principle; inasmuch as they would have received an amount to which it was equivalent. We presume that it is in this way that Mr. Swinton makes out his case. It is certainly a convenient way to pay debts, but a very bad way to get credit if we ever wish to obtain it. We are much inclined to follow the teaching of the Book that reckons covenant-breaking as among the greatest of follies as well as sins, and declares that he that is to abide in the tabernacle of the Lord, is "he that sweareth to his own hurt and changeth not." Psa. 15: 4.

Among the "Masonic Outrages," which we are called to note, is the monthly outrage on decency by the paper called the Masonic World. What it says about the origin and symbolism of Masonry may have in it much of truth, but it is truth that should make pure-minded Masons blush with crimson. That Masonry was original Baal worship and that this worship had in it all the elements of nastiness, we knew before, but we were not prepared to believe that Masons would thus glory in their shame.

Whether we shall have a government of law on the one hand or anarchy on the other, will depend on whether we shall recognize God as the author of civil government and his law as paramount over all human enactments, or whether we shall ignore his authority and repudiate all responsibility except to the law of force. Practically the question is simply whether our government shall be atheistic or Christian. Take away the sense of obligation to God as the Supreme Ruler over nations, and he who demands obedience to constituted civil authorities, and there remains only the fear of force to restrain men from crimes against others. What we need most of all is the recognition of God, both as individuals and as a people, and God's word as the great charter of our liberties.

The political campaign in Great Britian has opened with intense earnestness. The question of Home Rule for Ireland masks all others. The methods of our British cousins, we are sorry to say, are not more candid and honorable than our own. Greed for official power over-rides all the demands of patriotism and philanthropy. We notice that Mr. H. W. Beecher has gone to England to mingle his voice in the conflict and in favor of Home Rule. While the sympathies of the people of the United States are quite unanimously with Mr. Gladstone, their active participation in this matter will be likely to be resented by the British people, just as we felt indignant at British sympathy and aid in the Southern rebellion. The domestic quarrels of a nation, like those of a family, may be matters of interest, but are best remedied by being severely let alone.

Considered simply in its relation to civil law, Mormon polygamy is just as truly a violation of the Divine as the human enactment. The command, "Let every soul be subject to the higher powers," requires obedience not only to laws that are just and reasonable, but also to those that are oppressive. It was the commands of Nero and of the cruel Roman power that they were required to obey. Even servants were enjoined to obey unbelieving and hard masters, and Christian wives, their heathen husbands. There is nowhere in the New Testament an intimation that any person or collection of persons has the right of revolution except by peaceful methods. The only exception to the rule of active obedience, is where the human enactment requires that we disobey God. Then we ought to obey God rather than man." Even then we have no right to forcibly resist the constituted authorities, but rather to passively submit to their penalties.

There is almost a certainty that Congress will adjourn without acting on some of the most important bills that have passed the Senate. Among them are the Anti-Polygamy, the Electoral Count, the Dakota and Washington Territories and the Blair Educational Bills. The last was practically killed by the committee to whom it was referred. They voted a final adjournment without recommendations, thus strangling it in spite of the majority of the House. This measure was one of vital importance to the future welfare of the nation. We are in a thousandfold more danger from the ignorance of our voters than from any foreign foe. We especially needed this national aid to education in the South. The ignorant freedman is but the tool of demagogues, whose vote can be used when desired or be denied him when it is thought best. The educated freedman is, and will be a most important conservator of our national unity. Our national peace, if not our national existence demands that the men who deposit their ballots should know how to read them. Those who have conspired to defeat this measure have been actuated by a determination to use the ignorance of the negro for political supremacy. An eight months' session of Congress has been mainly trifled away. The main business has been political strife. The palpable neglect of public interests calls loudly for reform.

In Moses' time it seems to have been oxen rather than dogs that afflicted people, and had to be provided against. It seems to have been one of the "mistakes of Moses" that he did not license the "ox that pushed with his horn," but instead provided that "if in time past he had been wont to push with his horn," and the owner hath not kept him in, and "he hath killed a man or a woman, the ox shall be stoned, and his owner put to death." That was prohibition, and shows that Moses must have been a "fanatic," that he had no just conception of the true province of civil government, which is not to teach men religion or morals, but to raise men and women and protect all interests, that of cattle-dealers as well as others. When modern philosophy shall prevail and we shall have a revision of the Decalogue at least, if not of the whole Pentateuch, it will have been found that cattle and whisky-dealers were alike engaged in business that involves momentous interests, and that they "ought to be made a source of perpetual revenue" to be distributed among the States, and thus lessen the burden of taxation for the support of paupers and criminals. Fortunately, however, for Moses, he had no paupers to provide for, and hence his "mistakes" are less conspicuous.

A communication in the Telescope reveals the important fact (?) that anti-secrecy churches are not purer in morals," have no more zeal for Christ," "are no more spiritual," "are no more benevolent," "have more strife" among themselves and the people, have more fanatics, grumblers and misers, have less influence, do not uphold their ministers, are shut out of all our business centers and best rural districts, and are obliged to go to the frontier and be driven back continually, the agitation of the secrecy question has paralyzed every interest, and that a certain Christian anti-secrecy paper "has made the church to stink," etc. Hence, we respectfully suggest to the Telescope and its contributor that in view of these facts (?) and for the conservation of true (Masonic) piety in the churches and the land, Masonic lodges be established in connection with all United Brethren churches as a part of the church machinery, and that all bishops, preachers and class-leaders be duly initiated and sworn.

2d. That since experience shows that the fanatical practice of praying for the overthrow of lodgery is especially distasteful to secretists and their defenders, that henceforth all allusions in prayer, direct or indirect, to any form of secret abomination be prohibited under penalty of the greater excommunication.

3d. That for the furtherance of this most desirable object there should be prepared for the use of these churches an expurgated edition of the New Testament, and that especially such passages as John 3: 19–21, Eph. 5: 11–13, and 2 Cor. 6: 14–18, together with some others, be omitted.

In connection with the above we wish to say that "pleading for Baal" has never been regarded as the high prerogative of Christian ministers, and especially when misrepresentation and defence of falsehood and fraud are a part of the programme. While we do not admit that hating iniquity is likely to diminish the spirituality of any body of Christians, we are inclined to believe that to excuse secretism in the U. B. church, or in any other church constitutionally committed against it, is not only to defend the whole secrecy system, but to condone the falsehood and fraud of those who seek membership in a church for the sake of supplanting its principles. Whether membership in secret societies is consistent with Christian character may be regarded as a debatable point, but whether lying is a part of Christian character has not been considered as needing discussion.

NATIONAL REFORM.

BY M. N. GAULT.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—The following is the report of the committee on National Reform adopted by the Covenanter Synod, which recently convened in Rochester, N. Y. It was prepared and read by Rev. David Gregg of New York, chairman of the committee. It was considered one of the best reports we ever had on this subject. It not only presents it from the standpoint of God's truth, but it shows the importance which Covenanters attach to this reform:

National Reform is paramount among all reforms. It embodies all. It is radical in its eliminations and far-reaching in its sweep. It deals with all the burning questions of the day, and furnishes arguments and impetus for the establishment and promotion of every righteous cause. It is a reform of magnificent aims. The very thought of its complete and successful issue thrills the soul of the true covenanter and expresses itself in an outburst of praise.

Our church must ever keep the cause of National Reform in the forefront, and give it the largest place in its thought and prayers and enterprise. Our interest in it indicates a standing or a falling Reformed Presbyterian church. It is the best of a man's character as a covenanter. Indifference to it is a sin against the church and a violation of covenant obligation. God and the church will not accept of anything as a substitute for a monied zeal and a personal activity in its advocacy. For incitement in the work of National Reform let us keep in remembrance the following facts:

1. It is the Lord's work. This not only means that the cause is upright, and ennobling, and God-honoring; it means ultimate victory. It means might as well as right. It means the promises. A promise believed in is a sun in the soul and a song in the heart. The God who guided us through the great anti-slavery conflict, and carried the rights of man to triumph, is with us in this greatest of moral conflicts, and he will see to it that his own rights shall be permanently secured.

2. Civil government, which we seek to unite in true covenant with God, and to bring into continued and absolute obedience to his law, is the greatest organized power on earth. It has been called the supreme arbiter of our destinies. It has to do with all our relations and interests in life. It deals with moral questions. It defines virtue and crime. It take life or spares it. It is accountable to no tribunal on earth. It is therefore essential to the well-being of man that it be made to recognize its moral personality and to feel its accountability to the tribunal of God. It must be taught that vice and virtue can be rightly defined only when the laws of God's Book are declared. A national conscience must be created and the citizens of every land must be taught that civil government is a divine ordinance, ordained for God's glory and intended to stand for his righteousness and to be the executor of his justice. The obedience which it enjoins should in all cases be such as can be rendered to it in the Lord. Its laws must be such as will command our conscience.

3. God has given us an ideal to exalt and realize. God has left no ordinance unregulated and uninstructed. He no more leaves the state to experiment with itself in order to discover what it ought to be, than he does the family and the church. The state is blessed with a pattern from the Mount, the product of God's unerring mind. Its character is delineated; so is its mission and functions. The conditions of its prosperity and perpetuity are declared. A statute book from heaven is put into its hands for administration. The qualifications of state officials are laid down, and the true and patriotic citizen is set forth in vivid ideal. It is ours to hold up the ideals of God which have originated the National Reform cause. God's glory demands this of us, and so does the welfare of our nation.

4. The government of our nation does not answer God's ideal. It fails both negatively and positively. It neglects to confess allegiance to God, and it openly repudiates him and his law, by government acts. It legalizes crime by the license of the liquor traffic. It compels the officials to violate the law of the Sabbath by its mail service. It is chargeable with violence and oppression in relation to the Chinese, who have come to our shores, and with immorality in its toleration of Mormonism, and with infidelity to its covenants in its treatment of the Indians. In these and other things it stands in dishonor before high-minded men, and in guilt before the God of nations.

5. It is our distinctive mission to press this course toward final and complete establishment.

The cause is ours by heritage. Our ecclesiastical sonship lays us under obligations to fidelity to it. We are the witnesses of God in this great department of truthly inheritance. It is the marked feature of our ecclesiastical structure, and denominational life. It is part of our church covenant. Other churches expect us to lead in its advocacy, in its financial support, and in the exposition of its principles. We welcome all colateral agencies, and the honest efforts of others who seek the welfare of our nation; but we cannot fail to see that the reforms which they seek to inaugurate are fragmentary and short lived in comparison with this reform. Their patriotism needs to be educated. For the most part others see our cause only in sections and are therefore but partial in their aims. They are as yet in the A B C of the science of National Reform. They treat it from the prudential standpoint. They are satisfied if they can secure only enough of religion in the State to prevent national disaster. This is refined selfism. It is the semblance of National Reform without the power. National Reform in full form and power seeks first of all the glory of God and accepts of escape from national disaster as a consequence.

The prosperity of the State is not first; God's glory is first. We preach National Reform because it is necessary to a full Gospel and to the declaration of God's glory. Our danger comes not from open secularism and atheism. They have been weighed in the balance of national experience and have been found wanting. The espousal of these is recognized as national suicide. Our danger comes from working from the lower and selfish motives, instead of working from the higher and God-honoring motives. We are not impelled in this work from a fear of thunderbolts, even though these be hurled by the omnipotent arm. The chief impelling force with us is a desire for God's glory. "Let the glory of God be advanced." This is the watchword of this great reform movement.

WHICH HEAVEN?

BY J. W. M

Freemasons confidently expect to go to heaven when they die. Even their most orthodox writers, such as Webb and Morris, hold out the hope that every consistent Mason will enter into eternal life.

The Masonic heaven, which is sometimes called "The Grand Lodge above," is a place to which all go who have been good Masons here below, and to which none can go but those who have been initiated. Now it is a fact well known even to the uninitiated, that any healthy man, of decent moral character, can be initiated into the Masonic order—Christian, Jew, Mohammedan, Pagan, no matter what his religious belief or practice, if he will take the required oaths and obligations. Nor is it possible that Christ should occupy the Masonic heaven, for he was never initiated into the order, and many of his bitterest enemies are to be there. The Masonic heaven, therefore, cannot be the same of which Christ is the light, and which is the future home of those who "have washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb." To which of these heavens does the Christian Mason expect to go? He can hardly hope to go to both; will he be permitted to take his choice? It would be fair to suppose that those who are good Christians, but bad Masons, will go where Christ is; and that those who are good Masons, but bad Christians, or not Christians at all, will go to the Masonic heaven, or—to hell, if there is no Masonic heaven—no "Grand Lodge above."

I would entreat every Christian Mason to weigh this question seriously and solemnly, and decide it once for all. My brother, how dare you give your countenance to the Masonic delusion, that promises eternal life to those who despise our Lord Jesus Christ?

REFORMED PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH ON KNIGHTS OF LABOR.

BY W. W. M'MILLAN.

I clip from Rochester Democrat the action of our synod, taken at its recent meeting on Knights of Labor, which may already have come into your hand. If this is of any use to you, all right. There is nothing new, but old principles are made to stick out with sharp points.

"Rev. D. S. Faris reported on the labor question. Lawlessness upon the part of the laborer and tyranny on the part of capital were condemned. The following is the sentiment of the synod: 'While recognizing the right of every man to the fruits of his own labor, whether of head or hand, and the privilege of all men to agitate and associate themselves in open and lawful societies for the purpose of securing their rights, and sympathizing with laborers as to the wrongs they suffer at the hands of grinding, soulless corporations and capitalists, and especially protesting against the God-defying wickedness of employers who exact service on the Lord's day, this synod nevertheless condemns the organization and methods of the Knights of Labor and warns our members against participation with them. First—Because they are completely organized on the principle of secrecy, contrary to our standing testimony. Second—The form of the society is that of absolute despotism; the members being under obligation to render unquestioning obedience in carrying out the dictates of their leaders, right or wrong, often in violation of the rights of their fellow citizens. Third—Because they assume to dictate to employers, not only the wages to be paid for service, but the persons to be employed, and all the conditions of the service leaving him a helpless slave in the hands of a society with which he holds no relation. Fourth—They forbid non-union men to labor, and contractors to employ them, and thus by the greatest tyranny monopolize all rights and privileges to themselves. Fifth—They compel manufactures and dealers to discharge poor men or refuse them the right to buy, or sell, or carry on their business. Sixth—They interfere with the rights of the government by dictating to legislators and executors of law, and by making void all authority except their own. Seventh—All this they do, following the example of Freemasons, by secretly pursuing the object of their vengeance, and hunting down their reputation and business in a way that prevents redress by the law. We therefore declare that Reformed Presbyterians cannot belong to these assoeiations without renouncing all the traditions of their history in favor of civil and ecclesiastical liberty and the rights of God and man. Further, we declare that our members ought to suffer rather than sin by partnership in such practices. And, further, we enjoin the members of our church, rich and poor, to stand shoulder to shoulder in opposition to this tyranny, and we pledge ourselves and our members that we will not suffer the poor to suffer unaided, but will consider what is done to persecute the least, as done to all, and we will not stand by and see our dear brethern driven under the lash of their new taskmasters, but will come to their aid with our goods, and, if need be with our lives.' "

THE TRUE CHRISTIAN SPIRIT.

"I would rather," writes Bishop Taylor, "spend the next twenty years with savages in Africa than with angels in heaven." In a preceding sentence the Bishop thus speaks of his own physical and spiritual state: "I am in good health, and abiding in Jesus all the while." The individual possessed of and actuated by the spirit revealed in the first sentence above cited, can by no possibility abide anywhere else but in Jesus. "The man who can write thus, and make his life consistent with his profession, will always," says the Indian Witness, and that very truly, "command confidence and evoke enthusiasm." Whatever Bishop Taylor does or fails to do, he will not fail to commit the church to a vast work in Africa, a work far transcending in extent all mission fields now occupied in heathen lands.

The same divine spirit which Bishop Taylor reveals as abiding in his heart, Paul, in the following statement, thus makes manifest as abiding also in his heart, and actuating his life, "For me to live is Christ, and to die is gain. But if I live in the flesh, this is the fruit of my labor: yet what I shall choose I wot not. For I am in a strait betwixt two, having a desire to depart, and to be with Christ, which is far better."

Then, as in the case of Bishop Taylor, the desire to live for the spiritual good of believers and for the sake of the suffering cause of the dear Redeemer prevails over the desire for the present bliss of heaven. "Nevertheless, to abide in the flesh is more needful for you. And having this confidence, I know that I shall abide and continue with you all for your furtherance and joy of faith: that your rejoicing may be more abundant in Jesus Christ for me by my coming to you again." Listen to this man of God once more. "Yea, and if I be offered upon the sacrifice and service of your faith, I joy and rejoice with you all. For the same cause also do ye joy and rejoice with me."

And how was this same spirit exemplified and made all-impressive in the entire mission of Christ, for the salvation of our lost race: "Let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus: who, being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God: but made himself of no reputation, and took upon him the form of a servant, and was made in the likeness of men: and being found in fashion as a man, he humbled himself and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross." Looking forward to his tragical death, and then looking beyond, to the endless results of that death, the Saviour exclaimed: "I have a baptism to be baptized with, and how am I straitened until it be accomplished;" that is, with what intense desire is my mind burdened to endure, and "finish the work which my Father gave me to do"—the work of suffering which the Father gave him to endure and perfect.

Reader, did you ever seriously reflect upon the real meaning of the following declaration of Holy Writ? "If any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his?" In Christ, love for the souls of men, and the Spirit of burning desire for their redemption ever dwelt as "a burning fire shut up in his bones." Only so far as that same burning abides in your heart, do you partake at all of the Spirit of Christ. Do not, we entreat you, banish this thought from your mind.

Think once more of the Spirit of the Eternal Father relatively to Christ, in the work which he perfected before he left the world. "Therefore doth my Father love me, because I lay down my life, that I might take it again;" that is, "lay it down for the sheep" and "take it again" for their eternal salvation. Again, "God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life."

Again, "Be ye followers [imitators] of God as dear children; and walk in love, as Christ also hath loved us, and hath given himself for us, an offering and a sacrifice unto God for a sweet-smelling savor." How marvelous must be the love of God to us, when the fact that Christ loved us and gave himself for us, was so ineffably pleasing in God's regard.

How inexpressibly impressive do such revelations of God's love to us and to the world, render such inspired utterances as the following: "Beloved, if God so loved us, we ought also to love one another." "If we love one another, God dwelleth in us, and his love is perfected in us." "He that loveth not, knoweth not God; for God is love." "He that loveth not his brother whom he hath seen, how can he love God whom he hath not seen?"—Rev. Asa Mahan in Divine Life.

CHRISTIAN STATESMANSHIP.

Any statesmanship that either ignores or antagonizes the Ten Commandments and the law to do to others as we would have them to do to us, is not statesmanship at all; it is just what statesmanship is not. This world's history is so far a handbook of the wretched failures of human society to govern and protect itself by godless laws and methods opposed to the principle of the golden rule.

There is abroad in the world an idea that nations may rightfully and properly do things that would be wrong for an individual to do. Any nation that does not discard that most fatal heresy and repent of it, is on the high-way to perdition and national extinction.

No nation can long avoid downfall and extinction that continues as England does to attempt for sordid gain to poison 400,000,000 of Chinamen with opium, and to destroy the rest of the world, including her own sons and daughters, with rum. No nation can expect without repentance and restitution to rob and murder and exterminate the native people of a continent as America is doing, and long escape the fate of the nations whose crimes have destroyed them.

No nation can avoid being cursed of God and drowned in blood—no matter how much it prays and worships unrepentingly—that sends out a deluge of poison, rum and debauchery to all its neighbor nations of the world as England and America are doing. Or that, for a miserable infamous price of blood paid in silver and gold, licenses the murder of its own sons and the unlimited ruin of its own daughters as England and America do.

In these two foremost Christian nations of the world exist the direst poverty and misery, the most cruel, rampant, bloody crime, and the most dangerous forces of anarchy, infidelity and barbarism. In both of them the idea of righteous, honest legislation in their law-making assemblies has been dead and buried long ago and can never be resurrected save by a revolution as decisive as Cromwell's, and unless we have speedy repentance and reform the contest may be one of blood and horrid cruelty.

In the Congress of the United States or in the Parliament of England, a proposition to enact a righteous law or to perform an act of justice or mercy at the expense of hazarding fifty votes to the dominant party, would be the subject of a long-drawn universal hoot of derisive scorn and contempt.

Most of the men composing these bodies profess to believe in the Christian religion, but nowhere else in the world are men more deaf to the promptings of mercy, justice and humanity. The reason is, most of them are the representatives of the dram-shop and the crime of their country. And no improvement can ever come under the reign of either of the rotten, godlesss and totally party-depraved old parties, which at present are invoking the vengeance of heaven upon their respective countries. In each of these two countries, more than 100,000 slain every year by the politician's death-traps call to heaven for vengeance. Do the people care nothing for all this?—Weekly Censor.

NOTE.—The above from the Weekly Censor, of Los Angeles, Cal., has our hearty endorsement. The Divine law holds nations just as truly as individuals responsible for conformity to its precepts. God says: "The nation that will not serve thee shall perish." The enlightened nation that is persistently disobedient to its own sense of what is just, has in it the elements of dissolution.

WHAT THE PAPERS SAY.

The Portland (Maine) Herald says the R. W. Grand Lodge reports 274,719 members, which seems to be a loss of 20,000 or more during the year. Mr. Finch reports as missionary work by the agents of the R. W. G. L. 600 lectures, 284 lodges organized, 11,449 members added at an expense of $4,111 to the R. W. G. L. That is all that has come to hand from that very unprogressive organization. The cost of that missionary field is a little more than half the total expenses of the National W. C. T. U. for the last year ($8,189), and probably the expenses of the Richmond session will use up more than the other half. And the work and results accomplished by the W. C. T. U. are so inconceivably greater, that one laments the scantiness of their treasury. The I. O. G. T. has had its day of glorious achievements, but like the old political parties it has failed to keep step with the march of human progress and is dropping behind in the places where newer organizations exist.

We are glad to note that the friends of temperance are beginning to see that there is a more excellent way. Aside from the endorsement which the secret temperance orders have given to Freemasonry and other forms of lodgery (an endorsement more powerful than almost all others combined), the inefficiency and waste of means is most conspicuous. What the temperance reform most needs is concentrated effort. So long as some of its friends persist in the secret lodge system this can never be secured.

The New York Observer says: "The average Anarchist is made up of about equal parts of atheism and ignorance. He does not hate law and order so much as he hates religion, and his skill in blasphemy is only equalled by his dexterity with a beer-mug. He is down on churches, schools, banks, and 'bloated monopolies' in general, down on the family, society, and government, down on everything except the saloon." He may be found down in the saloon.

The schools of atheism are the secret lodges, Masonic and others, where, in the name of religion, all religious distinctions are confounded and Christ is ignored. Until the Observer has the wisdom and courage to strike at the root of the evil it will accomplish but little in trying to prevent the fruits from appearing. When we get all men to accept the Divine Saviour and "the church of the living God," as the best and only needful society, we shall have neither atheism, anarchy, nor saloons.

On the evening of June 16th, at 10:30 o'clock, a dynamite bomb was hurled at the carriage-way to ex-Mayor M. M. Secor's house. The bomb exploded with a report that started the whole city. Mr. Secor drove over the fuse that exploded the bomb about fifteen minutes previous to the explosion. A Bohemian named Jambor was severely hurt, as he was traced by blood from his wounds for over a mile and a half to the residence of ex-Alderman Palico.

The above is an abundant evidence that anarchy is not dead, nor is it likely to die until the causes from which it springs cease to operate on the public mind. To most people the idea of civil government is that it is an ordinance of God, and that there is an obligation, second only to what we owe to our Maker, to obey its commands. To those who have sworn obedience to any other governments the sense of obligation is likely to be confused, and all ideas of duty to God and to man to be forgotten. Disguise it as we may, there is an intimate relation between the organizations of sworn and secret despotism and their schemes of hostility to lawful authority. The men who throw bombs are the men who are sworn to do so, in obedience to the mandate of the lodge.

STUPENDOUS SHAM.

This is the day set apart by Odd-fellows for laying the corner-stone of the Orphan's Home. They are out in all their idolatrous regalia. Look at the motley thing! Masons, Knights of Pythias, Knights of Labor, Knights of Honor, Odd-fellows, Fire Department, and what is more sad, the Sabbath-School and Young Men's Christian Association. God have mercy is my prayer. I praise God that the F. M. church has no part or lot in this grand worship of Baal. God help us to keep clear.

There are at present a thousand or more strangers in the city at a cost to each of at least $18.00. This with the $5,000 expenses paid by the city, sums up $23,000. The least value of the time of the thousands engaged in this parade is $5,000 and have you $28,000 expended in a senseless ceremony of laying a corner-stone of an institution that costs but $25,000. How long will God forbear while pretences rob the poor for their own gain? What Christian can countenance such proceedings? How many of these Odd-fellows will dance to night, go to gambling dens and get drunk? How many will pray to night and thank God for the victory over the world, the flesh and the devil. The Apostle says "Whether ye eat or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God."—F. M. Church, in the Vanguard.

THE MISTAKES OF LABORERS.

The blunder of many of the laborers is not in open partnerships, or associations for mutual protection and improvement, but in being lured into secret organizations in which they are sworn to "secrecy and obedience" to a society, selfish in its very seclusion from the common interests of society, and also pledged to obedience to autocrats, themselves often lawless, ambitious and corrupt.

There is a way to redress grievances without such unhallowed associations. Thousands in the late difficulties would have gladly continued at former wages, but struck because of their former foolish oaths and their fear of a revengeful company. The sooner the laborers get out of such conspiracies, the better.

The "Knights of Labor" have some good things in their platform. So may pirates. The very inception of this society of "Knights" was in secrecy, a concealment in civil society from the scrutiny of fair-minded men, and a separation from the common interests of society, and in its continuance and action it seeks to do just what it blames some capitalists for doing, in that it seeks to control labor. And by their blockade of business in commercial and manufacturing centers, the Knights have brought suffering upon their own members, and contempt from the orderly and better part of society.

The precedent of punishing those who repent of their folly in joining such fraternities, and boycotting men and firms who will not unite with them, is a piece of arrogance civil men and civil law will not longer tolerate.—Berea Evangelist.

There is a better way both to the capitalist and the laborer. Some men, humane and just, have, without waiting to be forced, gone forward and made amicable arrangements with their men and move on harmoniously with their business. Others have divided profits with their laborers; they furnish the capital and receive a certain per cent, the laborer the remainder. Each is interested in the manufacture of the best article, and in the best sale, and in each other's health and social well-being.

Other capitalists go farther still, and provide hospitals for their sick or disabled operatives, schools for the children of such, and church-houses as places for worship. Such capitalists work by the golden rule, the Christian sentiment. They never have strikes, nor do their workmen seek to create secret, oath-bound associations by which to control labor.

The Belfast riots may not be directly due to the appeals to religious bigotry with which Lord Randolph Churchill and other opponents of Irish Home Rule have sought to obstruct Mr. Gladstone's humane policy; but they could hardly have taken place if the religious question had not been made use of to awaken prejudices and animosities which have long been slumbering. The Belfast riots are not an achievement which the opponents of Home Rule can boast of. As a by-play they are far too serious for amusement, and far too dangerous for the mixed communities of England, to make the continuance of the agitation which produced them a political expedient of any value even to hard-pushed Tories. The murderous attacks were not the outcome of any real grievance. The Orangemen had not been wronged or oppressed or abused by their Catholic neighbors.

THE N. C. A. ANNUAL BUSINESS MEETING FOR 1886.

REPORTS OF THE PAST YEAR'S WORK AND PLANS FOR THE NEXT.

A cool and beautiful morning welcomed the annual business meeting of the National Christian Association, and the large number of corporate members who gathered early about the Cynosure office with hearty and Christian greeting, was a cheering sight. The tall form of President H. H. George, of Geneva College, was most observable among the cheerful groups, while in striking physical contrast, but the peer of any in intelligence and culture, was seen Prof. J. A. Edgren, of the Swedish Baptist Theological Seminary.

In the absence of the president, F. W. Capwell, General Agent Stoddard, called to order promptly at the appointed time, with some fifty persons present. Pres. H. H. George, D. D., was chosen to preside. The reading of a Scriptnre by the chairman and prayer by Pres. J. Blanchard opened the meeting with suitable devotion.

The business began with the reading of last year's record: the roll was called, and the following new members were received by vote after due recommendation:

Prof. J. A. Edgren, Stromsburg, Neb.
Rev. M. A. Gault, Blanchard, Iowa.
Rev. J. W. Morton, Chicago.
H. Curtis, Olathe, Kansas.
E. W. Worrell, Chicago.
W. B. Stoddard, Wheaton.
C. B. Knight Worcester, Mass.
M. M. Morse, Worcester, Mass.
S. L. Pratt, Worcester, Mass.
Mrs. E. D. Bailey, Washington.
Prof. H. Woodsmall, Memphis.
Rev. R. N. Countee, Memphis.
Prof. H. A. Fischer, Wheaton.
Mrs. J. P. Stoddard, Wheaton.
T. B. Arnold, Chicago.
Elder J. W. Brown, Chicago.
M. L. Worcester, Kingston, Ill.

The report of the Corresponding Secretary and General Agent was read, accepted, and referred to a committee on resolntions composed of J. L. Barlow, S. A. Pratt, E. D. Bailey, M. A. Gault, and H. Woodsmall. A number of letters were referred to H. H. Hinman, W. R. Hench, and E. A. Cook, as correspondence committee. For committee on nominations, Alexander Thompson, John Dorcas and M. R. Britten were chosen: and for committee on unfinished business: W. I. Phillips, E. R. Worrell and J. W. Brown.

In recognition of the convention of Christian workers, meeting in the First Methodist church, Chicago, the following resolntion was presented:

Resolved, That the National Christian Association opposed to secret societies have learned with pleasure, of the presence in this city of the first national convention of religious workers; and further,

Resolved, That we heartily invite the members of the said convention to attend the evening session of this Association, to listen to addresses of Revs. H. Woodsmall and R. N. Countee, both of Memphis, Tenn., and also both seceding members of the Masonic lodge.

E. R. Worrell, A. J. Chittendon and C. C. Foote were chosen a committee to present these resolntions.

The report of the treasurer was then read and referred to a committee: E. A. Cook, M. R. Britten and M. A. Gault.

The report of the committee appointed at the last annual meeting on an Interdenominational Conference of Christians was reported by Pres. J. Blanchard, as follows:

NATIONAL CONGRESS OF CHRISTIANS.

1. Your Committee recommend that said Congress be held in the city of Chicago during the coming autumn, the time, place, and programme to be fixed and published forthwith by a local committee of arrangements.

2. That Secretary Stoddard at once open correspondence with the committees and delegates already appointed by several Christian denominations to attend said Congress, and lay their wishes and suggestions before the local committee of arrangements as speedily as possible, that the Congress may be, as far as possible, the result of the united counsels of the prominent men who have already given in their adhesion to said Congress.

3. That the American and the various papers who have pledged co-operation in such Congress, be at once informed of our present action relating to it.

4. That a committee on the public press be appointed to procure the co-operation and aid of the press throughout the country, in such Congress, so far as possible.

5. That some brother or brethren be appointed to visit personally distinguished men in the Eastern States, and induce their attendance and co-operation in said Congress.

6. That a local committee of arrangements be at once appointed, who shall have the whole matter of such convention in charge, and at once act as a local committee of correspondence as well as of arrangements; that they at once canvass the city of Chicago for entertainment, and as soon as free entertainment is provided for at least 1,000 delegates, they are to make the same public by the press; and so often as they learn anything of interest and importance they are to publish the same.

7. We recommend that Prof. H. Woodsmall and Rev. R. N. Countee be requested to act as our committee for the Southern States, and to inform the local committee of arrangements, of any prominent persons, white or colored, whose promised co-operation they have secured.

J. BLANCHARD,
J. P. STODDARD, } Committee.
J. L. BARLOW,

The report was referred to a committe on resolutions.

In the afternoon the report of the Board of Directors was read by their secretary, Alexander Thomson. The items of business transacted by the Board have been from time to time reported in the Cynosure during the year.

The committee appointed last year to visit the Augustana Synod reported by President C. A. Blanchard and Secretary Stoddard. The delegates were kindly received and assured of warm personal sympathy, but the Synod as a body desired not to act on the matter.

The report of the committee on nominations was adopted as follows:

President, Pres. H. H. George, D. D.
Vice President, Rev. M. A. Gault.
Corresponding Secretary and General Agent, J. P. Stoddard.
Recording Secretary and Treasurer, W. I. Phillips.
Directors: Joseph E. Roy, T. H. Gault, C. A. Blanchard, E. R. Worrell, M. R. Britten, J. Gardner, L. N. Stratton, J. L. Barlow, Alex L. Thomson, H. A. Fischer, W. B. Hench.
Auditor, S. A. Kean.

The amendment to the by-law on membership proposed last year was acted upon, and By-law III. was amended to read:

"Belonging to a secret society, denying Christ, or immoral conduct, shall forfeit membership in this Association, and any member of this corporation who shall fail to report at an annual meeting of this body, either in person or by letter, for the term of three years, shall by such failure forfeit his membership in their corporate body."

A committee on Cynosure was thus appointed: J. D. Nutting, C. A. Blanchard, S. A. Pratt.

E. D. Bailey, editor of the American, representing the American Publishing Company, read the following paper and request:

To the National Christian Association:

The following is my report and recommedations concerning the Washington building:

The total receipts during the year have been $555.97, and the expenses $261.27. Net receipts $294 70. Rents in the city during the year have been lower, and there has been less demand for tenaments than during the preceding year. The expenses of the building have been mainly for three items, viz: taxes, gas, and about $50 in permanent repairs. The latter item covers certain repairs which should properly be placed with the list of repairs undertaken at the purchase of the building, since they were work left undone at that time through the necessity of economizing. There are still several things needing to be done to put the building into reasonably good repair, notably two things: the plumbing is old and constantly out of repair, and the dilapidated fence is a reproach to good order.

It is proper to state that more than half of the receipts of the building as reported above, are for rent paid by Mr. Hinman and myself for rooms necessary for the uses of our families. Our rents are $30 per month, or $335 for the eleven months last past (11 months for myself and 9½ for Mr. Hinman).

At the last meeting of the N. C. A. which I was prevented from attending by a combination of circumstances, which need not now be detailed, I asked respectfully that the rents of the building be given entirely to the Washington work instead of sending a part of it to aid in Chicago. I made the request with full confidence that its reasonableness would at once commend it to your favorable consideration. The failure to grant the request has been a very serious hindrance. We have made the best of the situation which we could, but I do not care to disguise the fact that the refusal of the request greatly hindered and jeopardized our work. I was induced to go to Washington and start a political paper with the assurance that the income of the building would furnish me a fair support. After eight months of persistent urging I consented to go. To my surprise, as soon as I was located in Washington, the N. C. A. claimed the income of the building to sustain the work in Chicago, and for the first four months after this decision I remitted to Chicago between $40 and $50 more than the amount received for rents, so that instead of receiving financial aid, aside from the rooms occupied, I was actually taxed to support the work elsewhere. My own understanding was that the money was raised to purchase the building for the benefit of the new movement, at the National Capital. So far as I can learn this was the understanding of all contributors, and the impression prevails that we are aided by the rents, whereas we are actually paying rent. Without further argument of the case, I beg to submit, in behalf of the American Publishing Company, two requests:

1. We ask that the balance of the rent for the past year, now remaining unpaid, amounting to $69.18, be remitted.

2. We ask that hereafter all the income of the Washington building be allowed for the support of the Washington work, until the work is fully self-supporting.

The latter request is made because I cannot longer sustain the work and publish the paper without this additional aid. During the past year I have not only not received a dollar for all the editorial work on the paper and for my services as secretary of the American party, but I have contributed between $500 and $600 of my own private resources to the support of the work. In addition to my labors Mrs. Bailey has devoted her entire time to the same work without a dollar of compensation. Under these circumstances I feel perfectly justifiable in saying that I cannot, and will not, longer maintain the work unless the full and unreserved use of the building and its net income be conceded to its support. If the paper and the movement it represents is not of importance enough to entitle it to this much aid, it is not of importance enough to warrant the immense outlay of money and labor which we are giving it. Respectfully submitted,

E. D. BAILEY.

The report was referred to M. R. Britten, C. C. Foote, and M. A. Gault, as committee.

The report of the committee on resolutions was read by Elder Barlow, and adopted after discussion, as follows:

The committee on resolutions, to which was referred the report of the committee on the proposed Congress of Christians recommend the adoption of the report; and the committee further recommend that the designation of the proposed Congress be "A Congress of Christians," rather than "A Congress of Churches."

Resolved, That the South, as a field for our specific work, is presenting to us an open door into which the needs of the people are loudly calling us, while the providence of God seems to say: "Enter, and concerning the work of my hands command ye me."

Resolved, That the National Christian Association maintain the position it has maintained in the past, that of an unsectarian, non-partisan movement. And that its main strength be exerted in educating and organizing a stronger public sentiment against secret societies.

Resolved, That as the pulpit, platform, and press are the great instrumentalities for the education of public sentiment we urge that the friends of the movement use every effort to reach the public mind through these agencies.

Resolved, That our agents be instructed to make special efforts to visit new fields, and present the cause wherever it is possible to obtain a hearing.

Resolved, That special pains be taken to increase the circulation of the organs of the movement, the Cynosure and Washington American.

Resolved, That the Board of Directors be advised that in the opinion of the N. C. A. steps should be taken to gather facts of a historical, statistical, esoteric, exoteric, and analytical character concerning all secret societies in this country, and that the same be published as an encyclopedia of such orders. We believe such a book would be of incalculable value to the reformer.

The Committee recommended the adoption of the report of the Secretary, Mr. J. P. Stoddard.

WHEREAS, Recent developements in our country, and largely throughout the civilized world, have been such as to arouse public attention to the existence and workings of secret, oath-bound societies as never before, showing unmistakably that the repeated charges brought against them by this organization, in its various utterances, and the warnings so often given to the public were not without foundation, nor too soon, nor too often pressed, Therefore,

Resolved, That we re-affirm our former utterances against them, as institutions whose aims, spirit and tendencies are utterly antagonistic to, and subversive of, the principles of our free government, and of the holy religion we profess, and that every development inspires us with renewed zeal and more determined opposition to their prolonged existence and Satanic operations.

An addition was made to the committee appointed last year to secure a national conference of Christians and churches, of the following names: Pres. De Forrest, of Talladega, Ga.; Pres. McCullough, of Knoxville, Tenn.; Pres. E. M. Cravath, of Nashville, Tenn.

The committee, on request from the American Publishing Company, presented a majority report granting the whole net income of the Washington building for the coming year to the Washington work, signed by C. C. Foote, and M. A. Gault. A minority report was given by M. R. Britten refusing the request. After a prolonged debate the majority report was adopted, and the addition of some $60 due for the past year was voted.

The report of the committee on Cynosure was read by Rev. J. D. Nutting, Pres. C. A. Blanchard dissenting from the third article, and S. A. Pratt being absent. An interesting discussion followed in which there was a general expression of satisfaction respecting the conduct of the paper, and the objectionable article was stricken out unanimously except the vote of the chairman of the committee. The political question was brought in with some animation, and a report of the debate would make an interesting column. The report was adopted with the exception of the third article:

Your committee is glad to learn, from the figures given by the publishing agent, of the fairly prosperous condition of the Cynosure during the present year. Its list of subscribers is slightly larger than at this date for either of the two previous years, with also an increase in the proportion of fully paid-up subscribers.

The committee, in response to a request of the agent, recommend that the advance and regular custom regarding discontinuances remain as heretofore for the present.

With regard to the editorial conduct of the paper in the future, while recognizing the faithfulness, conscientiousness and ability of its conduct in the past, we would suggest that every effort possible be constantly put forth to secure for the paper new contributors of ability, whether previously connected with our work or not, in order both to the elevation of the intellectual standard and scope of the paper, and the open enlisting of these men and their influence for the cause.

With regard to the circulation of the Cynosure in the South, your committee is exceedingly gratified with the fact that the paper is now being sent to 461 ministers in that section of the country, and would urge that this work be urged forward with all possible speed, as one of the most promising ways for accomplishing good results.

We would also urge upon all friends of the reform the importance of the work possible through our periodicals and publications, and the recognition of the fact that through their circulation, either by donations of money or by individual effort in circulating them, workers who are deprived of opportunity otherwise may become effectual preachers of the truth.

This report of the committee on correspondence was read by H. H. Hinman. It was voted to refer the letters to the editors of the Cynosure.

The editors and publisher of the Cynosure were re-elected, and their compensation referred to the Directors. A similar reference was made of the employment of Bro. Hinman in compiling statistical information and visiting the South.

The revision of the minutes was referred to the Board of Directors, and after prayer by Bro. E. R. Worrell the meeting adjourned.

COUNTEE AND WOODSMALL.

The evening session of the N. C. A. annual meeting was held in Berry's Hall, corner of Sangamon and Washington streets. The meeting was opened with prayer by Rev. M. A. Gault; Geo. W. Clark sang a stirring song, and Pres. H. H. George made a brief address showing the anti-christian and anti-republican character of the secret orders, and especially their perversion of Scripture. After another song by Mr. Clark, Rev. R. N. Countee, of Memphis, Tenn., made an eloquent address on the general condition of the colored race in the South and the influence exerted over them by secret orders, especially their influence on their religious character. He gave a sketch of his connection with the secret socities, his reasons for renouncing them, and the bitter persecutions and attempted assassination on account of his views. He asked aid for his paper, the Living Way. After a song by Mr. Clark and a collection, an address was given by Rev. H. Woodsmall, of Memphis, Tenn., who has been for thirteen years a missionary among the colored people of the South and a member of several of the secret orders. He explained the anti-republican and anti-christian character of the orders and their disastrous influence on the cause of religion and general benevolence. The address was replete with facts and arguments, and was highly appreciated by the audience. After a song the meeting was dismissed with the benediction by the president.

CORRESPONDENCE.

LETTERS TO THE N. C. A. ANNUAL MEETING.

To the N. C. A. assembled in annual meeting at their headquarters, No. 221 West Madison street, Chicago:

DEAR BRETHREN:—My plans have been laid through the year to meet with you to-day. Many a hard day's toil has been lightened by the bright anticipation of meeting and greeting brother reformers of the N. C. A. in our annual gathering. But my heavenly Father has clearly, in his providence, said to me, "Tarry thou here with the stuff." While you, my dear brethren, are permitted to go up in battle for Christ and right, I pray that the Captain of our salvation may be with you to aid in your councils and plans for the future. May his Spirit fill each heart, and love, kindness and charity prevail through the entire of the Association. May he who shall be chosen as president be filled with wisdom from above. From my own experience for the past three years I can confidently bespeak for him your kind sympathy, hearty co-operation and support. I am not insensible of the high honor conferred upon me by being chosen for three successive years as president of the N. C. A. Far short as I may have come in properly discharging the duties of the office, yet, I assure you, that the best purposes, sincerest efforts and the warmest sympathies of a heart, whose every pulsation is in full accord with the worthy objects of our valued and cherished Association, have been cheerfully given in the past, and will in the future. I bid you God-speed. Yours for Christ and reform, F. W. CAPWELL.

Hon. F. W. Capwell, President N. C. A.:

DEAR BROTHER—I shall not be able to attend the annual meeting of this week in Chicago, and I am not aware that any delegate from New Hampshire will be present. The first informal meeting of the N. H. C. A., auxiliary to the N. C. A., was held in Farmington, N. H., eleven years ago this month, and the eighth day. Looking back over the eleven years, we can say with thanksgiving, Behold, what God hath wrought! We are much indebted to the N. C. A. and its able organ, the Christian Cynosure, for our marked success and progress in reform work. It is not possible to give an exact statement of the immense number of tracts and Anti-masonic books that have been circulated during the past eleven years, nor of the reform lectures, addresses and sermons given in the State by Brothers Stoddard, Rathbun, Browne, Bailey, Hastings, Cheever, Hyatt, Hinman, myself and others. We are still at work. We commenced the publication of the Christian Witness, auxiliary to the Christian Cynosure, Jan 1, 1880, and have issued over 86,000 copies. It it now an eight-page illustrated paper, at 50 cents a year. Its circulation is not confined to New Hampshire, but it is taken in every New England State and in the remotest parts of the country. It is printed by the N. C. A., and is much indebted to Mr. E. A. Cook, its first printer, and to that body for its very encouraging success. Our interest in the work of the N. C. A. in no respect abates. The only suggestion we have to make is this: Would it not be well for Bro. J. P. Stoddard to devote his attention during the coming fall and winter to the annual meetings of the Auxiliary State Associations, and to organizing States without such associations? Tennessee, Vermont, Maine and Rhode Island need organizing. Old Massachusetts needs stirring up. Bro. J. P. Stoddard is hereby invited to attend the annual meeting of the N. H. C. A., which we expect will be held in October. Your brother, S. C. KIMBALL,
Sec'y. N. H. C A..

Hon. F. W. Capwell, Chairman of the Executive Committee of the American Party:

DEAR BROTHER—I shall not be able to attend the American Party Conference to be held in Chicago June 18th, 1886, but my interest in its work leads me to write a few words.

1. American citizens, opposed to ring rule and general rascality, must be united. Let us not wrangle over alleged mistakes of the last campaign.

2. Our union must be on our main issue of opposition to lodgeism as fatal to Christianity and just government.

3. Our position on temperance and polygamy will strengthen our party with all moral men outside the lodge.

4. As to finance, a constitutional amendment recognizing Christianity, and woman suffrage, if there be a difference of opinion among us, we shall have ample time to fight it out inside the party before the responsibility of national legislation will devolve upon us. These things should not mar our party harmony.

5 We should act so as to deserve success, whether we obtain it or not.

6. Our great mission is to clearly enunciate and successfully defend great principles rather than win hasty and superficial converts.

7. No nomination for President and Vice-President should be made except by a delegated convention of the American party officially called for that express purpose.

8. The best way to instruct our fellow citizens, and especially our lodge prohibition friends, is to convince them that we have some fixed principle and moral gristle by sticking to our own nominations.

9. Let us burn the bridge by which we left the old parties.

10. The rum policy of New Hampshire Republicans has whittled their old-time majority of thousands down to a few hundreds; and now, forsooth, their State organ has ceased to praise the license Scott law, and has a regular Temperance Department. Behold, "a convert to the lions!" But how far can such converts be trusted?

New Hampshire sends greeting, and asks for radical American principles. S. C. KIMBALL,
For Ex. Com. of American Party of N. H.

"THE PURE TESTIMONY."

BEACONSFIELD, Iowa.

A few weeks past a minister, called a come-outer, held a meeting in a school house near Beaconsfield. Last night I heard one of his converts speak in class-meeting. He seemed to have the "perfect love" of Jesus "that casts out fear," for he did not shun to take up his cross. In speaking of popular sin he spoke as if he feared God rather than man; the slavish fear was "cast out." "He that the Son makes free, is free indeed." He said of the Lodge: "I was an Odd-fellow once in good standing. I have nothing against its members. They used me kindly, but I don't belong to them now. I do not want to pay out my money to bury my soul in hell."

I believe in that kind of holiness that saves men from the Lodge as well as other sins.

In conversation with an M. E. minister on the subject of secretism, he said: "I once connected myself with the Odd fellows, but I soon felt that I wanted to be free from it." He advised others to stay out. I am informed he said in the pulpit: "I have no use for secret societies." I suppose he is proscribed as are brethern in the U. B. church who are loyal. CYRUS SMITH.

DAVID P. CAWKINS ON THE SABBATH.

EAST CHAIN LAKES, Minn.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—I am seventy-two years old; opposed to oath-bound secrecy, slavery, and the liquor traffic from my youth. I love the Cynosure and every moral reform.

I believe with you, that Jesus Christ is the only living and true God, who was once manifest in the flesh, or dwelling in a human body, reconciling men to himself; but now is the eternal quickening spirit or second Adam, the Father of spirits, the shepherd and bishop of souls, the head of the church, our law-giver, our king, our God. God sent Moses from Sinai to Egypt to lead the daughter of Jacob, who was a bond maid to Pharaoh, from Egypt to Sinai, and there Moses as high priest married her to her maker, the covenent of Horeb or Decologue law being the marriage covenent or law of the husband. (Thou shalt have no head, husband, law-giver or but me). But the wife played the harlot and was married to Baal Peor, though her husband never gave her a divorce. Jer. 31:32. Which covenent or law of mine they broke, though I was a husband to them, saith the Lord. Now the bride was under the curse of her husband's broken law. Rom. 7:2. The wife is bound by her husband's law as long as he lives. So the husband took on him a human body and soul of the seed of Abram, (Heb. 2:16) and died on the cross a substitute for his church or bride.

Now the Jewish law church was forever free from the curse of the law of her husband, who was made under the law to redeem the Jews from the curse of the law. God laid down his life for us (1 John 3:16) and redeemed his church with his own blood. Acts 20:28; 1 Peter 3:18. The husband dead, the wife or church is free from his law, at liberty to have a new husband, even one raised from the dead, and keep his law. Rom. 7:4–6. We Jews are from the law of the first husband, that law, or those ten laws being dead that bound us to him. For the body of Christ was the body of the first husband, or law-giver and king. When the body of the husband was nailed to the cross his law or hand-writing of ordinances was nailed with him and taken out of the way. Col. 2:16. The Sabbath days are a type or shadow of Christ's soul rest from law works when we drop the yoke of bondage and take Christ's yoke. Matt. 11:29. Christ said (before crucified) "the scribes sit in Moses' seat as law givers; so what they bid you, that do. Matt. 23:2. After crucified he said, (Moses' seat is overturned). All authority in earth and heaven is given to me. Now teach all nations to do what I have commanded; not what Moses commanded nor the Pope. Matt. 28:18–20. Moses commanded Israel alone to keep the seventh day holy. The Pope or the Roman church, of which he is the illegal head, has ordained to keep the Roman pagan sun day holy; also Christmas, etc., etc. The American platform says God requires a Sabbath. It is a grand mistake through Christendom. You say the Sabbath was made for all mankind. I say it was made for Jews alone; and God never required a son of Adam, outside the Jewish law church, to keep a Sabbath or holy day. The Sabbath was never made known to man till given to Moses for Israel. Ex. 16:4–26, Neh. 9:14, Ezek. 20:10–12. I brought Israel alone out of Egypt into the desert, and gave them my statutes, which if one do he shall live. (That is nine moral precepts). Moreover, beside the nine, I also gave them my Sabbaths (a typical precept) to be a sign or token between me and them, that I am the Lord who sanctifies or separates them from all nations as my chosen nation. See Ex. 19; 5–6. So we see the Sabbath was a mark distinguishing the Jews from all nations of the earth who never heard of a Sabbath. The Ten Commandment law had not been given to Gentiles yet in Paul's day. Paul being a thorough bred Jewish lawyer, was set for the defence of the Gospel or New Testament against the law of the Old Testament, which he did in all his epistles nearly. Phil. 1:17, 2 Cor., 3rd chapter.

1 Tim. 1–3. "I besought thee to stay at Ephesus, to charge some that they preach nothing but Gospel doctrine." Verse 5. Now the end, or sum total, of the command (of Christ) is charity or love, out of a pure heart, a good conscience and unfeigned faith, from which some have turned to vain jangling, desiring to be teachers of the law, not knowing what they say; affirming that the Sabbath is binding and the law perpetual. You must keep the law or you can't be saved: Acts 15:24; 21:24,25. Did not Christ say "I came not to destroy the law, but to fulfil; and it cannot pass till it is fulfilled." Yes, and when it was fulfilled, Christ, the law-giver, died a substitute for the transgressors, and when the King died his law died. When he rose again he published a new law, viz: "Repent." (Acts 17: 30). "Believe in Jesus, and love one another." (1 John 3:23) He who repents, believes, is baptised and loves his brother shall be saved. He who believes not shall be damned. Christ said to the Jews under the law, yet unabolished, He that breaks the least commandment and teaches men to do so, will be least in the kingdom; and that includes the passover and all that was written in the book of the law. For the law is one, not two. See Nehemiah 8: 1-8, 14-18. The Sabbath was made for men to keep; men were not made to defend the Sabbath, or to be lords of it. "I am Lord of the Sabbath. It is my prerogative, not yours, to say whether my disciples shall keep it or no." I say it is lawful to do well on the Sabbath. For God's kingdom is not meat or drink (or holy days). Rom. 14:17. Yours truly. D. P. CAWKINS.

NOTE—We give place to the above from our venerable brother not because we believe all that he thinks, but we think the readers of the Cynosure can afford to compare their views with those who differ.

LETTER FROM GREECE.

ANDROS, Greece, Via Syra, May 19, 1886.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—Many things prevented us from writing to you sooner. I believe that through the wires you have heard of the trouble of Greece; that she is blockaded by all the European powers except France; but lately we heard something and we are not sure whether France called her minister or not. The fleet of the five powers consists of forty-eight great vessels. This blockade is headed by Christian England and Germany. We do not feel so much pain for the Catholic nations as we feel for the other two nations. Germany made a war and took so many States from France. England began from time immemorial, and wrongs all the world around. What the European nations give Greece in the Berlin treaty, those States Greece wants now and they prevent her from taking them.

We believe that Greece is being punished for her sins, but we did not want European Turks to punish her, but Asiatic Turks. Dr. Walker, of Wheaton, had said that the rulers are chosen according to the character of the nation, and so in these times Greece had such a man at the head of the nation. Freecoopes ruled three years previous to Deleyanas. The former was raised in England; but he did nothing for religion, although he had a great many good, moral principles. He put a very heavy tax on tobacco and spirits and all the fashions. He put a very heavy tax on aristocratic things and took off the tax from the things which the poor will use. He said that if any one wishes to make a good silk dress he can pay for it. Also he said that he did this in order to make a distinction between the madam and the servant. But when Mr. Deleyanas became the secretary of the State a year ago, he made everything just the reverse from Mr. Freecoopes, and we have no words to express our ingratitude towards him.

Mr. Deleyanas took off the tax on tobacco and spirits, but he put such a heavy tax on common things and the expense of keeping the armies and the blockade now brought great poverty on Greece. When he came into power he boasted in Congress that he would decrease the expenses of the nation by 17,000,000 francs; but instead of that we believe that the national expenses will be 50,000,000 francs more than they used to be.

If there was a dim light in the Greek church he blew it out. There were twelve priests, called theologians, who used to go through Greece and preach or teach the people in the churches after their own regular church service was over. They only came to this place twice during our seven years' stay here; but after all, there is no doubt but that they do some good, for the regular priests do nothing but sing and pray in church. But Mr. Deleyanas wished to make economy, and as the twelve priests were paid by the government, he stopped them. If, with the preaching of these theologians, Greece was so bad, what will she be now? It seems that Mr. Deleyanas goes according to the French fashion of infidelity, and also that God has taken his hand away from this nation on account of its demoralization and infidelity, and it is more likely that the Bulgarians will come down than that the Greeks will go up higher. By the time you get this Greece will either be better or worse off. Yours with Christian love,

A. D. ZARAPHONITHES.

KANSAS CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

OLATHE, Kansas.

Will the friends of our cause interest themselves enough to consider where our next annual meeting should be held? Our regular time of meeting is the first Tuesday in September.

Clifton, Kansas, has been named as the place. Let us hear at once if there are any other nominations. Where can we be sustained? Where can we do most good?

That wise and timely arrangements may be made, please address promptly the secretary,

BIBLE LESSON.

STUDIES IN THE WRITINGS OF JOHN.

LESSON I, July 4, 1886.—Jesus and the blind man.—John 9: 1-17.

GOLDEN TEXT.—One thing I know, that whereas I was blind, now I see.—John 9: 25.

TIME.—October, A. D. 29.

PLACE.—Jerusalem, near one of the gates of the temple.

[Open the Bible and read the lesson.]

COMMENTS ON THE LESSON BY E. E. FLAGG.

1. Misfortunes not always the consequence or punishment of sin. vs. 1–3. The human mind instinctively recognizes a close relation between sin and suffering, and so it naturally associates extraordinary afflictions with extraordinary guilt. In every age, and among all nations, civilized and uncivilized, we find traces of this world-wide belief, but it is essentially a heathenish one. It is founded on narrow and mistaken ideas of God's government, and it often involves, as in this particular instance, a cruel injustice to the sufferer. Disease and pain are often the direct consequences of sin, but by no means always. They have a most important use as disciplinary agents, teaching patience and trust, and developing a richer and higher spiritual growth, but our Saviour, in his reply to the disciples, brings out a reason less generally recognized, yet no doubt just as valid in many other cases beside that of this single blind man: "That the works of God," that is, his healing mercies to soul and body, "might be made manifest." It is on the dark clouds of sorrow and suffering that the rainbow of God's love shines brightest; then let us not "fear as we enter into the cloud," but rather welcome the trial if through it his glory is manifested, either by delivering us out of it, or strengthening us for its patient endurance.

2. The Miracle and its effects. vs. 8–17. Incredulity and unbelief are always sure attendants of any remarkable manifestations of God's power and mercy. This is evidenced by the fact that numberless and well authenticated as are cases of faith-healing at the present day, the world generally is incredulous, and the majority of religious leaders openly antagonistic. But wonder and incredulity from the world, and even scorn from Christ's professed followers, will never move the soul that has had a personal experience of his power to save and restore. Like the blind man, it has ever one testimony: "Whereas I was blind now I see." We notice as he comes out more fully into the light his courage grows. If there is too little of martyr boldness in the church it is because there is too little of the martyr-faith. The spirit of the age is to glorify doubt, as if doubt was strength, when it was in reality weakness. Doubt never in the world nerved one single soul to any great effort. That honest, unwavering faith which can say, "This one thing I know," even when it is very ignorant of everything else, has been the supreme factor in all great movements for the elevation of humanity and the advancement of truth. But the blind man's story caused a division among those who heard it. Truth never unites heterogeneous elements, never enjoins together the believing and the unbelieving, the righteous and the unrighteous, the licentious and the pure. It is the boast of lodgery that it does this; that it unites all men of every class and creed in one brotherhood, but if it really taught the truth of God, instead of uniting men so diverse in life and doctrine, it would sunder them as widely as the poles. The world to-day is separated on the same great question that separated men then—the character and claims of Christ, and there is no testimony so powerful as this same simple witness: "One thing I know that whereas I was blind now I see."

LIGHT FROM THE WORD.

Where does Christ use the same expression to his disciples that he uses in v. 8 l. c.? Must religion be always a personal experience before our testimony can be of any value? ch. 3: 11. 1 John 1: 3.

From Peloubet's Notes.

"And as Jesus passed by." As he was some time passing along on his way.

"He saw a man." It was he who saw the blind man, not the blind man who came to him.

"Which was blind from his birth." Of the six miracles connected with blindness which are recorded in the Gospels, this is the only case described as blindness from birth. The sad history of this man, "blind from his birth," may have been already familiar to his disciples, as he was evidently a well-known beggar in Jerusalem.

"And his disciples asked him, saying, who did sin," etc. This question grew out of the fact that it was the common opinion among the Jews that every trouble and misfortune was the direct result of some special sin.

"Jesus answered, Neither hath this man sinned, nor his parents," i. e., so as to be the cause of the blindness.

"But that the works of God." The works of God here meant are primarily his saving, redeeming works.

"Should be made manifest." Christ turns the attention of his disciples to a new aspect of the case. Instead of groping back into the hidden mysterics of the divine purposes, and striving to trace the connection between sin and suffering, they were to look forward and see what the mercy and grace of God would accomplish.

"I (better, we) must work the works of him that sent me, while it is day," i. e., while the fitting opportunity lasts, as the daylight is the fitting time for our daily work.

"The night cometh, when no man can work." He does not except even himself from the proverbial law. The day of opportunity passes, never to return.

"As long as I am in the world, I am the light of the world." It was prophesied that the Messiah should open the eyes of the blind (Isa. 29: 18; 35: 5; 42: 7). The direct reference is to Christ's fulfilment of these prophecies (Luke 4: 18, 21). But it is true, in a larger sense, that just so far as Christ is in the world, and accepted by the world, he becomes its light, intellectual, moral, and spiritual.

"He spat on the ground, and made clay of the spittle." Was there efficacy in the clay? The Jews thought that clay was good for the eyes, but of course there was no power in it to give sight to the blind. It is noticeable that Christ never cured without giving the healed something to do, as a test of his faith and obedience.

"And said unto him, Go, wash in the pool of Siloam," i. e., wash off the clay that has been put upon your eyes. This was a test of faith and obedience.

"The pool of Siloam" is identified with a pool or tank still found in the vicinity of Jerusalem, which stands to the south of the temple mount, and consists of an oblong tank, partly hewn out of the rock, and partly built of masonry, measuring about fifty three feet in length, eighteen feet in width, and nineteen feet in depth, with a flight of steps leading down to the bottom.

"Which is by interpretation, Sent." Or sending, i. e., outlet of waters.

"He went his way." He believed, he obeyed, and it was done unto him according to his faith.

"The neighbors," etc. These would be the ones to recognize the man in his changed condition, and to report the marvelous change in him.

"That he was blind," The best critical authorities read, that he was a beggar. He now abandoned that occupation, and this circumstance first attracted notice. Hence their first question, "Is not this he that sat and begged?" implying what he was accustomed to do.

"He is like him." They would not believe that such a miracle had been wrought, and therefore argued that they must have been misled by a striking resemblance. The opening of the eyes would naturally change the whole countenance.

"I am he." This settled the question of fact, but still they could not conceive how the change could take place.

"He answered." He tells the story of his healing.

"A man." Better, the man; one well known.

"Where is he?" appears to be asked, not in a spirit of enmity, but simply from a natural curiosity and interest to see him who had wrought the cure.

"I know not." Jesus did not wait for the man to return to him, but went on with his disciples to the work he was seeking when they passed by the blind man.

"They brought to the Pharisees," etc. These friends and neighbors are perhaps well meaning people, not intending to make mischief.

"And it was the Sabbath day," etc. There were two counts in their indictment. (1) He had made clay, and (2) he had healed the man. In neither case did he break the fourth commandment, even in its strictest construction, but only their Pharisaic caricature.

"Then again the Pharisees also." As not content with the report of others.

"This man is not of God, because he keepeth not the Sabbath day." The logic is simply, God ordained the Sabbath; but God will not contradict himself, and indorse a man who defies his laws. The fault of their logic was in a misunderstanding of the facts. Jesus did not break God's Sabbath, but their Sabbath.

"Others said, How can a man that is a sinner do such miracles?" The logic of this is based on the same principle as that of the others.

"They say unto the blind man again." Each side hopes to find something in his account that will favor them. He finds Jesus afterwards, and becomes a true disciple. His spiritual as well as his bodily eyes were opened.

OBITUARY.

MOSES FERRIN was born at Horton, N. H, August 27th, 1798, and died in Ellington, N Y., May 13, 1886. He was the father of eleven children, seven of whom are still living.

In his family he was an affectionate husband and a gentle, tender father. He endeared himself to all his children. His most intimate friends knew him as a straight forward man in all his business transactions. He impressed everyone with honesty of character, sincerity of convictions and generous nature. Bro. Ferrin was an earnest Christian man. For years he was a member of the Baptist church in Cherry Creek. His piety was unquestioned and his words pure and true.

During the time of Morgan's abduction and murder he espoused the cause of the Anti-masons. His strong, deep and earnest nature would not permit him to feebly oppose an institution in which he felt men's convictions were over-ridden by those high in office, and that truth and justice was trampled down to satisfy the pride, ambition and selfishness of the few. His strength of character was seen when he put his whole soul into the contest against the wrongs of secret societies. In opposing these he felt that he was opposing those who loved darkness rather than light because their deeds were evil. There was coupled with his strong, deep, earnest nature corresponding enlightened convictions. He was mild and considerate of others' opinions, but this made him no less bold and positive in advocating his own convictions. He was consequently a power. Truth and justice advance through such channels.

Bro. Ferrin's sincerity was likewise shown in his sacrifice of time, money and energy to further his convictions of right and justice. He circulated books and tracts freely among his friends in order that they might share his knowledge of the truth.

Would to God that the mantle of his earnestness and conviction might fall upon the rising generation, so that when some form of error, wrong or injustice is seen, they would feel strong enough and deep enough to oppose it with their whole heart.

A few days previous to the death of Bro. Ferrin, his wife peacefully fell asleep to awake in eternity. She was born in Hamburg, N. Y., July 11, 1805 She was a faithful Christian, and for years was connected with the Baptist church.

These aged persons lived together as husband and wife for more than sixty years. Their married life was very happy. Their mutual dependence and sweet and tender relations were a blessing to themselves and their children. We rest assured that they walk to-day the streets of the New Jerusalem together, happy in their Father's house.

AMERICAN PLATFORM.

ADOPTED AT CHICAGO, JUNE 20, 1884

Viewing with deep concern the corrupt and unsettled condition of American politics, and witnessing with alarm the fearful prevalence of caste and clannishuess by which our citizens are being arrayed in hostile bands, working secretly to compass political ends, a method directly and powerfully tending to increase corruption, to destroy mutual confidence, and hasten disruption and bloodshed; and having no hope of adequate remedy for these evils from existing parties, and believing the foundation of a party based upon the fundamental principles of the Declaration of American Independence, both inevitable and indispensable:

We, therefore, a portion of the American people, believing with our fathers that we have our rights and libertics, not from men or parties, but from God; believing in the Christian marriage, and not in Mormonism; believiug in the religious democracy of the New Testament, and not in the despotism of the lodge; believing, also, with our Scotch and English ancestors, that civil government, though ordained in God, is "founded in nature, not in grace," and, therefore, that all have equal civil rights; while we abhor the idea of enforcing religion or controlling conscience by human laws and penalties as calculated to make hypocrites, not Christians, and savoring of the days of priestism, the fagot and the stake, we at the same time as firmly believe that atheism and priestcraft are twins and both alike foes to human liberty and welfare. We further most firmly believe that a government without God has none but lynch power, and is destitute of all legitimate authority to maintain civil order, to swear a witness, to try a criminal, to hang a murderer, to imprison a thief; and while we consider government without God as a mere usurpation, we regard all religions and worships invented hy men, and so having no higher than human origin, as mere swindling impositions and cheats. We believe in peace and in national arbitration as a means of perpetuating it; yet we as profoundly believe that the bravery and blood of our soldiers have bought us the peace which we enjoy, and we honor the memories of the dead and will he just to the claims of the living; and we take up and prolong the strain raised by the women of this country: "For God, and home, and native land," and trust that this beautiful and patriotic motto will soon he not only echoed by their voices, but sustained hy their votes.

We, therefore, solemnly adopt and present the following, as containing a brief synopsis of the principles of our government, hy which we intend to be governed in easting our votes. We hold:

1. That ours is a Christian and not a heathen nation, and that the God of the Christian Scriptures is the author of civil government.
2. That the Bible should be associated with books of science and literature in all our educational institutions.
3. That God requires, and man needs a Sabbath.
4. We demand the prohibition of the importation, manufacture, and sale of intoxicating drinks.
5. We hold that the charters of all secret lodges granted by our Federal and State Legislatures should be withdrawn, and their oaths prohibited hy law.
6. We are opposed to putting prison labor or depreciated contract labor from foreign countries in competition with free labor to benefit manufacturers, corporations or speculators.
7. We are in favor of a revision and enforcement of the laws concerning patents and inventions; for the prevention and punishment of frauds either upon inventors or the general public.
8. We hold to and will vote for woman suffrage.
9. That the civil equality secured to all American citizens by Articles 13, 14 and 15 of our amended National Constitution should be preserved inviolate, and the same equality should be extended to Indians and Chinamen.
10. That international differences should be settled by arbitration.
11. That land and other monopolies should be discouraged.
12. That the general government should furnish the people with an ample and sound cur-

13. That it should he the settled policy of the government to reduce tariffs and taxes as rapidly as the necessities of revenue and vested business interests will allow.
14. That polygamy should he immediately suppressed by law, and that the Republican party is censurable for the long neglect of its duty in respect to this evil.
15. And, finally, we demand for the American people the abolition of electoral colleges, and a direct vote for President and Vice President of the United States.

THE CHURCHES VS. LODGERY.

The following denominations are committed by vote of their legislative assemblies or by constitution to a separation from secret lodge worship:

Adventists (Seventh-day.)
Baptists—Primitive, Seventh-day and Scandinavian.
Brethren (Dunkers or German Baptists.)

J. BLANCHARD. HENRY L. KELLOGG.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, JUNE 24 1886.

WHEATON COLLEGE is near by. It has just closed its annual gatherings, and naturally, if not necessarily, fills large space in this number. President C. A. Blanchard, who a few years since buried the young and beloved mother of his children, has borne up bravely and well, and God is still with him. Devout, calm, eloquent, and exceedingly able, he wins

"Golden opinions from all sorts of people," and the college prospers under him. Masons listen to him with candor and delight when he tears their idolatry in pieces, and holds up the shreds to their astonished gaze. So was it with Ezekel 33: 32.

President George is more like Elijah, and his and other colleges are wheeling grandly into line. We intend to notice them all. They "are in our hearts to live and die with them."

The Baccalaureate sermon by the senior editor of the Cynosure will (D. V.) appear in our next number. It has been prepared with some learning and great labor. If desired, it can be made a tract or pamphlet. Some have already asked it.

THE N. C. A. ANNUAL MEETING has come and gone, and the records are found in this number. They should be carefully read. The attendance of the members was respectable, if not large; double or treble that of former years, and a fine enthusiasm pervaded the entire session of the body. We (1st) voted to fix the National Congress of Churches in Chicago. Time next autumn.

2. To commit the Congress in this shape to a local committee of arrangments to have charge of the whole matter.

3. To change the name from Congress of Churches to CONGRESS OF CHRISTIANS.

4. To send some brother or brethern East to secure the attendauce of distinguished men.

For the rest, read the minutes. The visit and speaking of Prof. Woodsmall and Rev. R. N. Countee fully equaled or excelled our high expectctions from their coming. They spoke well in Wheaton College Chapel and their meeting in the hall on the Washington Boulevard produced a strong effect on the city and people from abroad. Dr. Roy, of the American Missionary Association, came into the Board of Directors, and his coming and co-operation are an important event in our cause. In short, the deep piety, fine enthusiasm, and holy determination of the body of men is full of auguries for good.

Next day, June 17th, the conference of the "Committee and voters" of the American party opened in the morning and held till night. The records will indicate their action. A sub-committee of nine were appointed to hold frequent meetings and push toward a National Nominating Convention. This sub-committee located so near each other as to make frequent meetings possible, is to be strictly auxiliary to the National Executive Committee who are scattered from North Minnesota to Washington, D. C. and from Wyoming county, N. Y. to Gentry county, Mo., and of course cannot meet. The members of the Executive Committee, however, are ex officio members of their auxiliary, sub-committee, and will be notified of its meetings; and Messrs. Capwell, Jerome, Howe and perhaps Prof. Bailey, are expected to attend the meetings of the sub-committee. It was voted to call a National Nominating Convention, not later than June, 1887; to move the American Party out of harbor at that time with our Federal ticket at mast-head, and open our batteries in advance of all other parties, platforms and nominations. Read and re-read the records.

WHICH GOVERNMENT?

The following is a part of a Boston telegram, and shows the respect which Knights of Labor have for the civil law:

At Stoneham, Mass., June 8th, half the members of a military company refused to obey an order of their captain which conflicted with one issued by the Knights of Labor. The company was ordered to start for the State muster ground at South Framingham. The captain had arranged to have his company transported from the town to the railroad station two miles distant, on the only line of horse cars which the town boasts. During the recent labor troubles the Knights of Labor placed a boycott on the railroad company and established an independent line of coaches. When the company reached the cars that morning more than half the members refused to take their seats. The captain was thunderstruck at this disobedience of his command, and again ordered them to board the cars. The men stubboruly remained standing in the line. They explained that they belonged to the Knights of Labor, and they could not enter the cars unless the boycott placed on the company by the executive committee was removed.

We have little interest in the military companies of Massachusetts or elsewhere, except to make sure that they shall never be called into the murderous business of war, but we have a deep interest in the supremacy of civil law. When those who profess to be the defenders of the State openly avow their obligation to another government, and peremptorially refuse to obey constituted authorities, and such men are but a portion and the representatives of half a million of others sworn alike to secrecy and obedience, there is surely an occasion for alarm. Already most of our police force of this city and elsewhere are in sworn fellowship with, or obedience to, this or similar secret organizations. In a recent instance they were called on to execute the edicts of a Grand Commander, and attempted to do so. It becomes the people to seriously consider how many governments we shall have, and whether our civil and military officers shall be sworn to another besides that representing the national, state, and municipal law.

This may certify that I have examined the books, notes and other assets belonging to the National Christian Association, held by W. I. Phillips, Treasurer of said Association, and find them all correct, according to the statement given in the books and vouchers of said Association as made and showed by Treasurer this day. S. A. KEAN.

Chicago, June 12, 1886.

Rev. N. M. Minne has removed from Fowler, Ind., to Pullman, Ill.

The Craftsman (Labor Union) says that "a break in the Master Builders Association has set the wheels of industry in motion." Yes, and a break in a great many secret associations, unions and assemblies would give personal freedom not only to their members, but to multitudes outside. Nothing would do more to set the wheels of industry in motion,

ANNUAL REPORT OF THE CORRESPONDING SECRETARY AND GENERAL AGENT.

In my report I must of necessity be brief. Your Treasurer will report the funds and financial transactions of the year. The publishing department will be reported by the one to whom you committed this interest at your last meeting. The editors of the Association's organ will doubtless add to weekly reports in the Christian Cynosure any information desired. The Secretary of your Board of Directors will submit a synopsis of their doings, as required in By-law No. 12, which combined reports give you the office work of the year.

I have attended nine anti-secret conventions and delivered 91 addresses during the year. Owing to what seemed a justifiable diversion from the direct work of the Association, I remitted one month's pay from my salary in settlement.

The summer months, for obvious reasons, are not favorable to the lecture work, and little was done on the field until the hurry of harvest was over. The real campaign opened with a four-day's meeting in Wheaton, beginning August 21st, and closing with a convention in the court-house on the 25th, addressed by President C. A. Blanchard and Dr. J. E. Roy, of this city. The plan was that of an institute, the day sessions being devoted to drill and discussion of methods of work and ways to reach the people. Pres. J. Blanchard, Elder J. L. Barlow, Pres. C. A. Blanchard, Elder J. F. Browne, Pres. L. N. Stratton, and several others participated in the meetings, which were, I believe, productive of much good. The railroad and necessary expenses of brethren from abroad was paid from the N. C. A. treasury, and results, in my judgment, show that it was a wise appropriation of funds. From this meeting the workers started out with new courage to enter their respective fields with better preparation than ever before. Bro. Browne returned to his post at Berea, Ky., as teacher, preacher and lecturer at that important educational center. Bro. Dissette traveled and lectured in Illinois, Bro. Bancroft renewed the conflict in Wisconsin, Bro. Hawley began his work in Iowa at their State meeting, August 26th; Bro. Loggan took Kansas as his field; W. B. Stoddard faced the secret powers in Ohio; Bro. Day and his colleagues kept a vigilant watch upon the craft in Michigan; Bro. Kimball has been steadily and faithfully at work scattering the seed in New England; Bro. Hinman, as is his wont, has been dealing blows right and left; Bro. Fenton has given "no rest to the widow's son" in St. Paul and Minneapolis; Bro. M. A. Gault, like the Irishman, has made it a point to hit a head whenever a head was within his reach; Bro. Warrington has kept up a steady fire through the Free Press; Bro. M. N. Butler has been devoting his energies to organization and the equipment of the American party. Bro. Bailey has not shunned to declare the counsels of God against the hidden things of dishonesty, often exemplifying the proverb that "a soft answer breaketh the bones." Pres. C. A. Blanchard has gladly responded to as many calls as his numerous duties would permit. Pres. J. Blanchard has been in labors abundant at home and abroad which have been noted and rejoiced in by the readers of the Cynosure. Bros. Foote and Clark have been marvelously sustained, on the heaven side of their 70th mile-stone, to go up and down through the land, preaching, talking and singing the gospel of purity, prohibition and reform. Mrs. Cook and her associates have kept up the Band of Hope with good effect and interest, while the facile pen of the gifted authoress, Miss Flagg, who has furnished the cause with two timely and much-needed books ("Holden with Cords," and "Between Two Opinions,") has been increasingly active.

The number of pastors who have "no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness," and who actually reprove them, is constantly increasing. The religious and secular press find in the labor troubles occasion to break the silence they have so persistently maintained, and an occasional utterance in Congress by men like Edmunds and Hoar, or a cautious word of censure from some popular pulpit is heard heralding a resurrection day at hand, when the lodge must give account of its deeds or be cast into the bottomless pit of popular scorn and merited contempt. The industrial masses north and south, who have been swindled and sworn into they know not what, soon tire of a bondage and taxation that brings them only empty titles, broken promises of substantial good, and the humiliation of being driven from an honest employment where they earn their daily bread by the commands of autocrats, whom they must sustain with ample means, while their rents are unpaid and their children are without food. The fact, in a word, is, men who have surrendered their private judgment, and paid their initiation fees and dues into these bogus, co-operative, benevolent, patriotic, oath-bound secret associations, find that "it don't pay." To all but a few leaders the investment is a "dead loss," and that man is indeed blind who cannot see that we are rapidly approaching a point when in some way, which will be God's way, the "secret empire" must follow the curse of slavery to a grave of shame and everlasting contempt.

The time is favorable for the prosecution of the work undertaken by the National Christian Association, and never before were the fields so white with waving harvests as they are to-day, and never was the demand to thrust in the sickle and reap more imperative than now. The disquietude prevailing in Europe, and the intense anxiety with which every movement of a suspicious character is noted by foreign powers, in anticipation of some violent outbreak, is echoed and intensified by the popular mind in this country, where a large majority of thinking men, in business, as well as in civil offices and the ministry, look anxiously for latest reports and contemplate the future with grave misgivings. Joseph Cook said recently to Mr. Kellogg and myself in an interview at the Palmer house, "That man does not live who can predict with any degree of certainity the condition of this country five years hence." As described in the graphic imagery of the Bible, "If one look unto the land, behold darkness and sorrow and the light is darkened in the heavens."(Isaiah 5: 30). And it shall come to pass that when they shall be hungry,they fret themselves and curse their King and their God and look upward. And they shall look unto the earth, and behold trouble and darkness, dimness and anguish, and they shall be driven to darkness." (Isaiah 8:21,22.) This alarming state of affairs results largely from the profanation of the oath and the worship which God orders and sanctions as the end of the strife among men and the only way of approach to himself, and many are beginning to see that the secret lodge system is at the bottom of this apostacy. The National Christian Association has done very much in calling attention to this fact and impressing it upon the consciences of Christian men, but its work is just begun. The thousands of lectures and sermons that have been delivered by your agents, the hundreds of thousands of tracts that have been furnished and sent out at the expense of your treasury, and the far too limited number of copies of your organ that have gone out weekly laden with facts and charged with pointed shots, have created a demand which should follow as rain after drops that preceed abundance of waters.

What the country needs first and most of all is Christ, the only Saviour of men; and next to this want, underlying all others, is information respecting the secret false worships that are divorcing the hearts of men from the three institutions which God has set up: the state, the family and the church. God reveals himself as "Father," and speaks of his redeemed ones as "children." "Children of light" "of the day," constituting a family; "the household of faith," and any departure from that worship which he has ordained in his household he denounces as adultry, "spiritual adultry." But the god of this world has so blinded men by the glare of his wreckers' decoy, and bewitched them with his sorceries, that they fail to apprehend the religions and true nature of the lodge system as the great and gilded temple of spiritual prostitution, set up over against every family and every church in our land. It is this fundamental fact that, not the world only, but the church and the ministry, need to be shown, and under God, it is the province of the N. C. A. to proclaim this truth upon the housetop and compel men, however unwilling, to hear, and then make them understand it.

What the National Christian Association most needs is a pentecostal baptism, making all, members of one body in Christ, its living head, and giving to each the endowment of power from on high, and next to this a greatly enlarged constituency. No great movement involving large expenditures and depending upon the sympathies and co-operation of friends for money and moral support can long and successfully prosecute its work without a constituency. The late war illustrates the conditions necessary to achieve success in moral reforms. Neither Lincoln nor Grant put down the rebellion. It was the people's fight and under God the people's victory. Loyal men of all parties and every religious sect made common cause against a common foe, filling up the ranks and furnishing the sinews of war, not as conscripts and mercenaries, but because they were each a part of the Union and the movement to preserve it "one and undivided. The cause was worthy the sacrifice, and all minor questions of politics and church creed were swallowed up in the one absorbing effort to put down the rebellion.

So as it seems to me the system of wickedness antagonized by the National Christian Association is of sufficient magnitude to justify the sacrifice of very much for its overthrow, and that its movement should be so directed that every genuine opponent of the lodge will feel that he is more than a looker-on; that he is in reality part and parcel in the struggle; that whether he is an American, a Greenbacker, a Prohibitionist, a Republican or Democrat in politics, a Quaker, a Lutheran, a Baptist or Presbyterian in faith, he finds in the National Christian Association, what loyal men found under the stripes and stars, a place to fight against a giant system of wrong. Other organizations have their special objects. Some social, some benevolent, some political, and some educational, each urging a specialty to which its best efforts are devoted. The National Christian Association has announced opposition to secret societies as its specialty, and committed to you the guidance of its movements, the control of its finances, the utterances of its publications and the methods of its work, within limits fixed by the by-laws under which you act. The wisdom and ability with which this trust is executed, will largely determine the numbers of your constituency, the circulation of your literature and the extent of financial and moral support upon which you can safely depend. If friends have confidence in the measures you adopt and the stability and wisdom with which you execute them; if the real friends of the cause feel that they are the National Christian Association, as the loyal people felt that they were the government during the war, they will rally to the support of the cause, and the conflict will be pushed with vigor, but not otherwise.

The country is aroused as never before on the labor question, and people more ready to hear. The pretext for inaugurating a conflict between employers and men in their service was so obviously Masonic in principle and its method of procedure, that there was no mistaking its origin in the lodge. There were facts and forces back of those violent demonstrations which arrested public attention, but even the unthinking could not fail to see that the strength of the whole strike movement lay in its oath and the arbitrary power committed to the generals of a secret army. A single individual whose services were not acceptable to his employer was discharged, and suddenly, as if inspired by some omnipresent genius of evil, men appeared on the scene giving commands with assurance which were obeyed without question. The mystic sign, the ominous token, or the magical word, given, handed or uttered by some wandering exorcist, arrested the labors of uncomplaining operatives, shut the doors of immense manufactories, stopped trains on the track and laid an embargo on the industries of the nation. An extended scheme, rapidly maturing into a skillfully adjusted system of coercion, intimidation, boycotting, and armed violence in extreme cases, stepped forward and after calling a halt, demanded recognition and the right to negotiate on terms of equality with lawful corporations, with State officials and the national government. The turbulent element, ever on the alert, seized the opportunity offered by a temporary suspension of law and order, to disseminate treason against civil authority and advocate anarchy as the sovereign remedy for the workingman's wrongs, and the only full and final solution of the labor question. The movement proceeded just far enough to give a specimen of what might be expected should lodge rule ever dominate and the secret empire become the ruling power in the land. The whole scheme was concocted under oaths of obedience and silence, and in direct hostility to that open, honorable dealing which commends itself to every upright man. Christ asserts, and all history in all ages confirms his words, "Everyone that doeth evil hateth the light, but he that doeth truth cometh to the light;" and it should be demonstrated that all societies, orders or associations, whether called Freemasons or Knights of Labor, or what not, founded upon secrecy, silence and the surrender of private judgment, are in principle identical and should be treated as so many departments in the grand conspiracy against him who ever spake openly and strictly enjoined upon his followers that they should walk in the light even as he is in the light.

One economic and effective way of bringing this fact before the people, is by means of published documents, and I would suggest that a two or four page tract stating briefly points of identity between secret orders, would find many readers at the present time, and if widely circulated do an incalculable amount of good.

As you are all aware the opposition to the lodge system is not confined to any particular ecclesiastical body or civil association. There are in all churches and parties men who see and deplore this evil, whose sympathy, co-operation and support is greatly needed in carrying on our work, but the endorsement and active support of ministers and leading members in ecclesiastical bodies opposed to secret societies, is most needed in reaching the membership of the churches which they represent. If possible those men representing the Agustana Synod of North America, the United Presbyterian Church, the Wesleyan Connection, the United brethren who are loyal to the church as it is, the Free Methodist, the Quakers, the Seventh-day Baptists, the Reformed Presbyterians and the great body of Lutherans, should be brought into more active connection with the Association, sothat they will attend its meetings, write for its organ, and be more than simply passive in their attitude towards the organization itself. Unless this co-operation can be secured the subscription list of your organ and the circulation of your literature will stand at zero. The average agent in your employ, visiting these churches will as a rule be heard respectfully, encouraged by kind words and perhaps a hat collection to meet current expenses because the men's heart are in the cause; but so far as feeling that their shoulders are under the burden, and that they are responsible for sustaining the Association is concerned, they are practically outsiders. Of course with such feelings they could not be expected to sacrifice much to attend the meetings of the body or contribute largely to its support. If, gentlemen, without sacrificing the principles of the Association committed in trust to your care, you can adopt measures and inaugurate a line of work that will make these religious bodies feel a deep interest in the Association and a responsiblity for its maintenance and support as their representative in the field of conflict, you will do much, very much to increase the circulation of anti-secrecy literature and promote the financial and every other interest of the general cause.

Your Board of Directors have carefully considered some measures looking to the awakening of a more general interest not only in the cause but in the N. C. A. as an agency for its promotion, which will be submitted in the convention with their report for the year. Other methods and ways will doubtless be suggested and duly considered by this body during its sessions.

I have only to say in conclusion that the year has been one of activity and earnest work in the office, and that unity of spirit and the bond of peace among your agents has added not only strength but pleasure to the work, which demands diligence as well as sacrifice in its prosecution. I wish to thank you for your patience, forbearance and kindness to me as your employe, and ask you to unite with me and with each other in fervent prayer that we may be baptized by one spirit into one body during this meeting. That we may see eye to eye, and when the work of this annual meeting is done that we may go to our respective fields of labor with renewed courage to stand shoulder to shoulder in this great contest. J. P. STODDARD.

We have received from Rev. J. Rutty, of Meridian, Kas., and from Rev. C. Foote, of Detroit, Mich., $10 each, which has been sent to Rev. J. G. Fee, to aid Southern work.

Our brother of the Lutheran Standard will excuse us if we are unable to see that liberty to be in error is the equivalent of "liberty to do wrong," and that there are mistakes that are not sins,—errors in judgment that are consistent with excellence of Christian character. We do think that our brother errs as to the propriety of observing Christmas, Easter, etc., but we do not wish to insist that he shall be governed by our convictions until he accepts them.

We have received No. 1, Vol. 1, of the Orleans Advocate published weekly at Orleans, Neb., Rev. C. M. Daymon, editor, and devoted to general affairs, to education, morality and religion. It is a small, but neat and ably conducted journal. Thoroughly reformatory in spirit it represents the interests of the growing Christian college in that place. All subscription receipts, after paying expenses, will be paid into the treasury of that institution. We bespeak for our new contemporary an abundant support.

—The New York conference of the African Methodist Episcopal church has commended the stand taken by Professor Taylor, Superintendent of schools at Vincennes, Ind., in behalf of equal rights.

—The First Baptist church at Fort Wayne, Ind., has enjoyed marked divine favor in the last few years. Since January 1st, the pastor, Rev. S. A. Northrop, has been permitted to baptize one hundred and twenty-two. The average additions during four years have been one hundred and five each year. The growth has not only been remarkable, but healthy. In this four years' time about sixteen thousand dollars has been raised for current expenses and missions.

THE HOME.

"THE BURDEN."

To every one on earth
God gives a burden, to be carried down
The road that lies between the cross and crown;
No lot is wholly free;
He giveth one to thee.

Some carry it aloft,
Open and visible to any eyes;
And all may see its form, and weight, and size;
Some hide it in their breast,
And deem it thus unguessed.

Thy burden is God's gift,
And it will make the bearer calm and strong;
Yet, lest it press to heavily and long,
He says: Cast it on me,
And it shall easy be.

And those who heed his voice,
And seek to give it back in trustful prayer,
Have quiet hearts that never can despair;
And hope lights up the way
Upon the darkest day.

Take thou thy burden thus
Into thy hands, and lay it at his feet,
And, whether it be sorrow or defeat,
Or pain, or sin, or care,
Leave it calmly there.

It is the lonely load
That crushes out the life and light of heaven;
But, born with him, the soul restored, forgiven,
Sings out through all the days
Her joy, and God's high praise.

"SEEING HIM WHO IS INVISIBLE."

It is said of Moses, in the Epistle to the Hebrews, that "he endured as seeing him who is invisible." The idea here conveyed is that Moses realized to himself the existence, attributes and authority of God, and obeyed him as fully and completely as he would have done if God had been to him a visible person and he had seen him with his carnal eyes. He never actually saw God in the literal sense, yet his mental apprehension was, for all practical purposes, the equivalent of actual sight. He acted "as seeing him who is invisible." Paul says to the Corinthians: "For our light affliction, which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory, while we look not at the things which are seen, but at the things which are not seen." The things not seen were the things that controlled his mind, moved his heart and regulated his practical life. He thought of them without seeing them, and believed in them without seeing them, and made them as real and impressive to him as they would or could have been if they had been objects of direct and actual sight. It is this attitude of mind, this vivid and intense realization of the things invisible and eternal, and the quickened and all-controlling faith which makes these things real to the soul, so well illustrated in the life of Moses and that of Paul, that are most needed in this world, alike by the impenitent and by those who claim to be Christians. Both classes are so much occupied with the things seen and temporal, and so accustomed to treat them as realities, and all else as either not real or not more than half real, that the things which can be apprehended only by faith are largely displaced from their minds. Their animal senses run away with their thoughts and keep God and the great things of eternity out of those thoughts. This is the great reason why the impenitent pay so little attention to the claims of God and the interests of their souls. They have so much to do with this world that they leave in their minds no room for any care about the next world. It is also one of the great reasons why Christians are so feeble and ineffective in their spirituality, and often apparently more interested in what they can gain here than in what is to be gained hereafter. An intense, all-absorbing and realizing faith that fully believes, and holds the object steadily before the mind, is the mental posture needed to make God the great governing power of the soul, and cause it to "endure as seeing him who is invisible."—Independent.

CHRISTIAN ENDURANCE.

But there is no greater strength ever manifested on earth than that of quiet endurance. I have known, and so have you, those on whom for years there has not risen a single unclouded day; those, too, who knew all the gladness of life, but for whom the sun was darkened long before it had climbed to its meridian height; those whose bereavements had involved the loss of everything that seemed to make life precious; those who have been rendered permanently helpless by chronic disease, and can never hope for a painless waking hour or a night of restful sleep; those whose penury has been absolute and entire, with no prospect of relief. Among these have been the bravest, strongest souls that I have ever known; and it has seemed to me that no emergency of outward action, not even the foremost of the sacramental host, in waging the great conflicts in behalf of the truth and the right, has equaled theirs, which could endure without murmuring, and could render constant thanks to God for the heavenly manna which has fed them, for the living waters of which they have drank deep draughts, for the hope, full of immortality, which has never for a moment forsaken them.—A. P. Peabody, D. D.

THE WORKINGMEN'S FRIEND.

The observance of the day of rest by abstaining from the ordinary labors of life, and turning the mind expressly to the teaching of religion and the care of the spiritual nature, is one of the primary teachings of Christianity. And upon it hang the best interests of society, while it is deeply related to home-life and personal character.

The Sabbath is the workingman's friend. It was made for man—for a world of toilers. It is also the friend of the capitalist. He will receive higher and better work from men who rest upon the Sabbath and appropriately use it. The right observance of it, it need hardly be said, tends to healthfulness, industry, intelligence, sound morality.

On the score of social economy—not to speak of the higher plane of spiritual life—it becomes of inestimable importance for employers to secure for their workmen the full enjoyment of the Sabbath, and to set them the example of the right use of it, and for the workingmen rightly to guard and use their day of rest. The Sabbath-keeping people will have more true comfort and self-respect and enjoyment of life. Here, as elsewhere, obedience to the law of God is the surest way to healthiest living, to soundest secular prosperity.—Rev. Joseph Few Smith, D. D.

THE POWER OF A LIVING BIBLE.

In his father's house a young lady resided who was a relative of the family. Her fretful temper made all around her uncomfortable. She was sent to a boarding-school, and was absent some time. On her return she was so changed that all who knew her wondered and rejoiced. She was patient and cheerful, kind, unselfish and charitable. The lips that always used to be uttering cross and bitter words now spoke nothing but sweet, gentle words. Her infidel cousin George was greatly surprised at this. He watched her closely for some time, till he was thoroughly satisfied it was a real change which had taken place in his young cousin. Then he asked her what had caused this great change. She told him it was the grace of God which had made her a Christian and changed her heart.

He said to himself, "I don't believe that God has anything to do with it, though she thinks he had. But it is a wonderful change that has taken place in her, and I should like to be as good as she is. I will be so." Then he formed a set of good resolutions. He tried to control his tongue and temper, and kept a strict watch over himself. He was all the time doing and saying what he did not wish to do and say. And, as he failed time after time, he would turn and study his cousin's example. He would read the living Bible, and said to himself, "How does it happen that she, who has not as much strength of character as I have, can do what I can't do? She must have some help that I don't know of. It must be, as she says, the help of God. I will seek that help." He went into his chamber and prayed to that God whose very existence he had denied. He prayed earnestly. God heard him, and he became a Christian.—Young Men's Christian Magazine.

GOD FIRST.

A young boy lived with his parents in a hovel in great poverty. One bitter day they were without fuel. The mother requested him to cut down for their use an aged pear tree which stood near their dwelling. The child heard the request, twice requested, twice repeated, in silence. After his mother had the third time commanded him, he said:

"Mother, I ought to obey you, but I must first obey God. The tree is not ours. It belongs to our landlord. God says, 'Thou shalt not steal.'"

The mother answered nothing, but for two days longer endured the cold, and then commanded that the tree should be cut down. The boy said:

"Mother, the Good Being has often supplied our wants when we have been in trouble. Let us wait until this time to-morrow, then if we do not find some relief I will cut down the tree in obedience to your command."

The mother yielded, and the boy went into his little room, and kneeled down and asked his Heavenly Father for help, expecting to receive that for which he pleaded. The next morning, near by, a cart containing a load of coal was broken down. Going out to assist the man, he confided to him his trouble. The owner of the coal, touched by the tale of distress, left it all there for the boy and went on his way.

By common consent the Cumberland Presbyterian Assembly reserved the report on union with the Methodist Protestant church for the action of the next assembly. This action was anticipated, and is not to the prejudice of the project.

WITH ALL YOUR MIGHT.

If you've any task to do,
Let me whisper, friend to you,
Do it.

If you've anything to say,
True and needed, yea or nay,
Say it.

If you've anything to love,
As a blessing from above,
Love it.

If you've anything to give,
That another's joy may live,
Give it.

If you know what torch to light
Guiding others through the night,
Light it.

If you've debt to pay,
Rest you neither night nor day—
Pay it.

If you've any joy to hold,
Next your heart, lest it grow cold,
Hold it.

If you've any grief to meet,
At the loving Father's feet,
Meet it.

If you're given light to see
What a child of God should be,
See it.

Whether life be bright or dear,
There's a message sweet or clear,
Whispered down to every ear—
Hear it.

WHEN TO BECOME A CHRISTIAN.

"Mother," a little child once said—"mother, how old must I be before I can be a Christian?" And the wise mother answered, "How old will you have to be darling, before you love me?" "Why, mother, I always loved you. I do now and I always shall," and she kissed her mother; "but you have not told me yet how old I shall have to be." The mother made answer with another question: "How old must you be before you can trust yourself wholly to me and my care?" "I always did," she answered, and kissed her mother again; "but tell me what I want to know." And she climbed into her mother's lap, and put her arms about her neck. The mother asked again: "How old will you have to be before you do what I want you to do?" Then the child whispered, half-guessing what her mother meant, "I can now, without growing any older." Then her mother said: "You can be a Christian now, my darling, without waiting to be older. All you have to do is to love, and trust, and try to please the one who says, 'Let the little ones come unto me.' Don't you want to begin now?" The child whispered, "Yes." Then they both knelt down, and the mother prayed, and in prayer she gave to Christ her little one, who wanted to be his.

VISIT TO HINOYEKI.

Feeling the need of a change of scene and work, I took Nozawa San and went for a ten days' sojourn to Hinoyeki, our country preaching place.

The village is cosily situated in a pretty valley, which is intersected by two quite large streams and numerous smaller ones. These are all branches of one river and I feel certain that many of the little streams are flowing in artificial channels, dug for the purpose of irrigation.

We were favored with bright weather nearly all of the time, having but one rainy day; for this we were very thankful, as it enabled us to explore the surrounding country, and the people to come out to the evening meetings.

The country is very lovely at this season of the year and the well-kept farms, with their growing wheat, looked like beautiful gardens. The farms are not fenced off, but are separated by raised, narrow paths. But wheat is not the only crop which has reached an advanced state of growth. We saw also large patches of onions and other vegetables, and fields of buckwheat in blossom.

As we walked along the roads and by-paths, our way was literally strewn with pretty wild flowers, some of which were the familiar violets, dandelions and buttercups. The wood violets, which we found, were very lovely and far larger than those growing in the woods at home. By the side of the streams and under the trees were numerous ferns, and clinging to many of the trees were the ivy and other beautiful vines.

The wayside idols and shrines were too numerous to mention; but I rejoice that the majority of those which we saw were in a very dilapidated condition. There are also numerous temples in the village and near at hand, but these also bear marks of neglect.

We found several temples which were being occupied as dwellings, and though the altars and idols remained, yet the bell ropes were tied up out of reach, showing the worshipers had deserted them. But we also saw a number of new wayside shrines, with offerings before them; and at a little village about two miles to the south or southeast, a large temple in good repair; this is dedicated to the worship of Fudo Sama, the god of fire. This is a fierce-looking person, represented as sitting in the midst of flames and having a sword in hand. He is supposed to be the strongest of gods and he has many very devout worshipers in Japan.

The temple of which I have been speaking is beautifully situated in a grove at the foot of a low mountain. The altar is beautiful and bore manifest tokens of care. Before it sat a priest in prayer, and judging from what I could see of the side of his face, I imagine that he was an aged man. He seemed so earnest; and I could not help wondering if he really thought that hideous idol could save him. The sight was oppressing, and I was glad to turn away and contemplate the glorious works of our God.

We took one of the several paths leading up the mountain, and though not going quite to the summit, yet reached a point from which we obtained a grand view of the beautiful valley before us.

Far off in the dim distance was a range of pretty mountains; at their foot villages nestled here and there, and in the middle ground was the little village we had just left, with its quaint straw roofs, on the bridges of almost all of which were some growing plants, whose bright green leaves contrasted beautifully with the weather-colored straw of the roofs. Then nearer the point of view and in the foreground was the pretty village in which the temple stands, while between stretched were the beautiful fields. As I gazed upon the lovely scene stretched out before me like a grand panorama, I could say with David, "Thou hast made me glad through thy works."

But time will not permit me to tell of all the interesting and beautiful objects which we were permitted to see and enjoy, during our stay there.

While we sought to obtain physical benefit and used every opportunity of getting out among the glorious creations of God, yet our rest would not have been half so enjoyable and time would have dragged had we not had plenty of work to do for the Lord. In all our walks we took tracts which we gave to almost every one we met; this was one of the ways in which we scattered the seed and reached those who could not or would not attend the meetings we held.

During the ten days we held twelve meetings for children and grown people, especially striving to gather in the women; and besides we assisted in the Sunday-school on Sunday morning and taught the Bible class in the afternoon. The attendance was encouraging and many manifested real interest in what they heard. In reference to this place we must repeat our Saviour's words, "The harvest truly is plenteous, but the laborers are few." We would have been glad to have stayed longer and labored among the people, but our work here could not be longer left alone.

One afternoon we went to a neighboring village at which we have a preaching place and held a very interesting meeting. It was really inspiring to see with what eagerness many listened as we talked. Many had never heard before, but at the close of the services expressed themselves pleased with what they had heard. They wished us to hold another meeting there, but we could not.

The native pastor stationed at Hinoyeki, and who has the care of the work in the neighboring villages, is a delicate man and has been sick a great deal, which has rendered it impossible to do as much work as is necessary for the advancement of the work there. The field, as far as we were able to judge during our short stay, is a good one and promising.

We returned, leaving the results of our labors all with the Lord. We may never know in this world how much fruit resulted from the seed sown, but we know this, that our labor was not in vain in the Lord.—Ada B. Johnson, in the Evangelical Messenger.

TEMPERANCE.

THE EVOLUTION OF A CRANK.

Some cranks revolve and others evolve. This crank has done both. He has revolved in his mind certain facts, and evolved from them certain fancies and conclusions.

Of course, coming from a crank, these are of no value; but they may be of interest as a matter of curiosity. One of these fancies is that the politicians of both old parties in our country occupy themselves chiefly in that animated game, "Simon says thumbs up." The Simon in this case is usually the liquor-seller.

At another time it seems to this crank as if the two old parties were playing at see-saw. The "teeter" rests on a barrel marked "Old Bourbon," or "XXX Ale." On the end is the Republican party, and on the other end is the Democratic party, each trying to see which is the heavier. But in the middle stands the saloon-keeper, with one foot on one side of the barrel and the other foot on the other side, and by leaning his weight to this side or that, he determines all the ups and downs.

These are fancies the crank has evolved. Now for a few of the facts.

The first fact is that within the last four years eleven Republican and eight Democratic State Legislatures have refused even to allow the people to vote on the question of saloons or no saloons.

When the crank went to school he used to be taught that this is a country of the people, for the people, by the people. Our State legislators don't seem to think that this applies when the saloon is at stake. May be not. They ought to know.

Another fact is that while the Federal Congress has within the last few years appointed commissions to investigate into the tariff question, the silver question, the grasshopper plague, the pneumonia epidemic among cattle, and the hog cholera, and many similar commissions, it has, year after year, at the crack of the liquor-dealer's whip, voted down the bill to create a commission which should report on the effects that the liquor traffic has upon society. And the funny thing is that it doesn't make any difference whether it is a Democratic or Republican Congress, the bill is always snowed under just the same.

The crank has an idea that the effects of the liquor traffic are almost as important to the country as the effects of hog cholera, cattle pneumonia, and Kansas grasshoppers. Congress, it seems, doesn't agree with him. The crank can't help that. He would if he could.

Another fact is, that we have been having pretty hard times. One million men, they tell us, were a short time ago out of work in this country. Think of that! The crank saw mills closing, factories shutting up, merchants failing; but he looked in vain to see the saloons shutting up.

The crank did some ciphering.

If the 190,000 saloons average sales of $10 a day each, that makes about $600,000,000 for the year. A heap of scads, isn't it? That's what the saloons get. What do they give?

The crank has shut his eyes and dreamed a dream.

He fancied he saw that $600,000,000 going into shoe stores, groceries, bakeries, dry-goods stores, meat shops, etc., instead of into saloons. When he saw that, he saw the shoe factories opening and hanging out signs: "Men Wanted." Cotton and woolen mills began to clatter like mad. Farmers began to talk about the boom in provisions and staples. The railroads began to call for more cars and rails. Rolling-mills began to jump to meet that call. Business woke up all along the line.

At the end of the year, when the $600,000,000 had all been spent, the crank looked to see what had been received in return. He saw stout shoes on the youngster's feet, jackets on the boys, jerseys on the girls, gowns on the mothers, and every man had a Sunday-go-to-meeting suit. He saw, too, carpets on the floors, flour in the larder, coal in the cellar.

But there were some things missing. Many a man had lost a red, red nose, and many a woman had lost a black, black eye. Pity, wasn't it!

The crank opened his eyes and stopped dreaming.

He looked into the revenue reports and found that the 190,000 legalized dram-shops are still in existence. He found that they are growing more numerous every year. He found that from 1863 to 1873 the amount of liquor of all kinds consumed in the United States averaged six gallons per year to every man, woman and child, and from 1873 to 1885 the amount averaged nearly nine gallons. He found that there had been an increase in the use of every kind of liquor.

He asked himself if this isn't fast becoming the land of spree and the home of the knave.

He looks at Brooklyn and sees 36 per cent of the Republican primaries and 48 per cent of the Democratic primaries held in saloons. He looks at New York, and finds there 60 per cent of the primaries held in saloons. He looks to Boston, Philadelphia, Chicago, St. Louis, Cincinnati and other cities, and finds matters in the same state.

The crank feels bad over these and similar facts. He does indeed. He is mad, and would be ashamed of himself if he wasn't. He wouldn't own a sixteenth cousin who could think of those things without growing mad.

He has cogitated—even a crank can sometimes cogitate.

He has reflected that, while he has heard good words spoken for wine, beer, ale and alcohol, in many forms, he has never yet heard a man who could say anything good for the saloon.

He has reflected that if the law is justified in saying that all saloons must close on Sunday, in order to preserve the sanctity of the Sabbath, it ought to be justified in saying they must close on week-days, in order to preserve the sanctity of the man himself, for whom the Sabbath was made.

This crank has been told public sentiment isn't ready for prohibition. He is sorry to hear it. But the question for him seems to be, Is he ready for it? He finds he is unanimously ready, so he believes in showing his colors and working to make the rest of public sentiment ready.

This crank has been told also that we can't make men sober by law. He isn't so sure of that; but he will try to swallow the statement just to be be obliging. Still, he thinks we can at least stop making men drunk by law, and give them a chance to sober up themselves. He'll be satisfied with that. There is nothing mean about him.

He has been told that prohibition doesn't prohibit, and he believes it. He believes also that an ax doesn't chop, no matter how sharp it is. But he has a sneaking idea that a strong man can make the ax chop, and a Prohibition party prohibit. You must excuse him; he is only a crank.

The crank hears quite frequently that moral suasion ought to do the work. Perhaps it ought. But certainly it doesn't. Even a Fourth of July eagle can't fly on one wing. The crank thinks the temperance reform has been trying long enough to fly on the one wing of moral suasion. He wants to see the other wing of legal suasion begin to flop as well.

He thinks there are two things to be dealt with: (1) the private ; (2) the public traffic. He believes that the appetite is to be struck at through the church, the home and the temperance societies. He thinks the dram-shop should be struck at through the law.

When we are trying to reform a drinker, the crank thinks that hearts are trumps. Where we are fighting that public institution, the legalized dram-shop he thinks that clubs are trumps.

The crank understands that the only expression of his opinions which is recognized by law and by government is the expression through the ballot-box. He has learned that if a man swears three times a day for 164 days out of the year that he believes in prohibition, and then votes an anti-prohibition ticket, that vote is the only declaration that is legally noticed and recorded.

Therefore the crank votes the prohibition ticket.

He believes, with Lord Dundreary, that a bird of a feather is a blanked fool to flock all alone by himself. He sees also that when a man is converted to the Gospel, the best thing to do is to get him into a church organization. He thinks it just as wise, when a man becomes convinced that the saloons must go, for him to join the organized party that says the same. He has joined it, and is now an A No. 1 crank.

Here endeth the evolution of a crank, which can be obtained, for distribution by other cranks, of the Voice, New York.—Christian Press.

Accomack county, Va., Garrett county, Md., Newton county, Ga., have carried Prohibition by large majorities. At Oxford, in the latter county, sixty-four colored men voted; fifty-eight of them voted Prohibition. Most of the fifty-eight can read. It is remarked that the best taught are the most pronounced for Prohibition.

WHEATON COLLEGE COMMENCEMENT.

Another prosperous year has closed at Wheaton, the institution is practically out of debt, the number of students is increasing and the principles of the college are becoming more widely accepted among the churches. The anniversary season opened on Sabbath, June 13th, with the Baccalaureate sermon by Pres. J. Blanchard, and in the evening an address before the Society of Inquiry by Prof. H. Woodsmall, of Memphis. The annual sermon before the Theological class was preached in the afternoon by Rev. A. J. Chittenden.

The fifth year since the founding of Wheaton Theological Seminary was closed and the third anniversary held Monday evening. A larger attendance than usual encouraged the friends of the class.

A. A. Martin, of Wasioja, Minn., gave the first oration, on the topic, "From Darkness to Dawn;" A. A. Parker, of Ripley, Ohio, spoke on "The New South," a plea for the colored race, which he is a fine representative: A. W. Parry, of Melrose, Ill., on "Christianity: The Conservator of Civilization," and J. O. Shaver, of Center Chain, Minn., on "What Is to Be?" in the realm of religious philosophy.

President L. N. Stratton followed with an address on the "Methods and Prices of Success." It was announced that President Stratton had received the title of D. D., from Blackburn and Otterbein universities on successive days.

The meeting of the Alumni Association on Tuesday was an occasion of happy and hospitable greeting. The literary exercises were an essay by Miss Elsie Dow, of Sycamore (Ill.) High School, on "The Greek Question," and an address by Rev. J. L. Fonda, of Rantoul, Ill., on "The Student and the Problem of Life."

The exercises of commencement were held Wednesday in the hall of the college, through whose doors crowded a vast throng of friends of the class and of the institution. "Esse quam Videri" glowed in green as the class motto. President C. A. Blanchard presided, and was attended by the faculty, the Board of Trustees and others, among whom were Professor H. Woodsmall and Rev. R. N. Countee, of Memphis, Tenn.; Rev. M. A. Gault, Western Secretary of the National Reform Association, and George W. Clark, of Detroit.

The exercises were opened by the singing of Dudley Buck's "Festival Hymn" by the Philharmonic Society, and prayer by Rev. Walter L. Ferris, of Dundee, Ill.

The salutatory by Miss Alma Blount, of Byron, Ill., was a graceful introduction to the literary efforts of the class, and her oration on "The Right of Revolution" happily described the noble mission of governments, the exceptional necessity of revolutions, and the abhorrent methods adopted by the anarchists of Europe and America.

Miss Harriet Childs, of Wheaton, followed in an animated though somewhat overdone style on the prophetic fulfilling of the hopes of idealists and enthusiasts who march before the ranks of their generation. Her subject was "Daydawn or Twilight."

Miss Alice M. Hadley, of Oak Park, read an essay, "What is it Worth?" The inquiry was directed toward a liberal education. It is worth the sacrifice, was the answer, after a fair exhibition of its benefits.

W. F. Grote, of Wheaton, spoke on "The Nation's Duty," on the question of labor and illiteracy. The so-called Knights of Labor he condemned and received a round of applause. Secretism has always been the curse of the world. In secret conclaves the anarchist prepares his plots and charges his bombs. Such organizations deserve only condemnation in a free republic. Secret societies, says Wendell Phillips, "are entirely out of place in a republic, and no patriot should join or uphold them." Our illiteracy is growing into a mountain of ignorance, and America's neglect of this danger already moistens the seeds of dissolution. The rocks that lie in our way and threaten the safety of the State are communism, secretism and vicious ignorance. We can never hope to succeed and prosper as a nation upon the ethics of barbarism.

Miss Hattie M. Johnson, of Eola, Ill., wrote of "Mountains" as the stepping places of earth toward heaven; the home of patriotism swathed in the air of liberty; the background of great cities; where the poetic fancies of the ancients made the unapproachable abode of their deities.

Miss Jessie L. Ward, of St. Charles, Ill., spoke with an eloquent emotion a hearty good word for the plodders of earth, having for her subject "The Tortoise and the Hare."

S. A. Manwell, of Brandon, Iowa, is a clear and forcible speaker, with some experience in public life. On "The Relations and Duties of Man" he propounded at once a high criterion and maintained the duty of intellectual culture, moral training and religious devotion.

C. D. Clark, of Turner, Ill., was manifestly a popular student, as his appearance was greeted with a round of applause. The subject of his oration promised also something out of the sophomorical rut. "The Voter's Responsibility" he discussed with candor and frankness, and gave an ethical and courageous exposition of some of the highest responsibilities of American citizenship, withdrawing also the curtain from the pictures of corruption in Aldermanic boards and the houses of Congress.

Carleton N. Gary, of Wheaton, was also introduced amid the applause of his fellow students. America as "Our Great Inheritance" was his theme, and special attention was given the question of foreign immigration. While we welcome from abroad the thousands who come to us with a love of our institutions—American at heart—we must have more stringent limitations to citizenship. If Chinese labor is too cheap, that of aranchists is too dear. The liquor traffic and foreign vote, Mormonism and foreign converts, Sabbath violation and foreign societies, these are questions we must meet and answer. Mr. Gary closed with the valedictory in a fine, manly style.

President Blanchard announced the college year closed, free from debt of any kind, and before conferring the degrees, asked for a song from the old abolition vocalist, Geo. W. Clark. The veteran responded amid the great enthusiasm of the audience.

In the afternoon aa address was given by Rev. R. N. Countee, pastor of the colored Tabernacle Baptist church, Memphis, thrilling in its story of the beginning of the redemption of the colored Baptist churches from the lodge thraldom. The concert of the musical conservatory in the evening, preceding the President's levee, was well sustained and patronized.

The meeting of the Board of Trustees was marked by no unusual business, except the resignation of Prof. O. F. Lumry, who has been for some thirty years connected with the institution, and of Miss A. J. Carothers, for several years Lady Principal. Prof. Lumry was moved to this step by his convictions on the subject of endowments and interest, which he believes to be wrong, and the college is thus partially sustained. The Board parted with him with regret on account of his long and valuable services in the institution.

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

—The Rev. D. A. McGregor, of Stratford, Ont., has been elected to a professorship in the Toronto Baptist College.

—The Rev. G. W. Greenwood, of Conklin, N. Y., has returned to Brooklyn to take charge of the West End Mission in 47th Street.

—The New York Ministers' Conference, on Monday, listened to addresses by Dr. H. L. Morehouse, Dr. A. H. Burlingham, and the Rev. W. H. Sloan, of Mexico.

—In Hayti, a man brought up in the Roman Catholic faith lately came to a Baptist missionary to request baptism. He had read no other religious book but one of Mr. Spurgon's sermons.

—It is a fact showing that civilizing influences are at work in the heart of Africa, that the natives last year bought ten tons of soap from the Scotch Mission at Livingstonia.

—Mr. W. T. Russell, a Scotch gentleman formerly resident in Calcutta, has given $85,000 recently for Christian female education in India.

—Two lady physicians of the M. E. Women's Foreign Missionary Society in India, and one assistant, treated during the year 1885, 28,253 patients.

—The Southern Baptist Home Mission Board employs in regular service 230 missionaries, who supply the pulpits of 600 churches. Last year they built forty-two new houses of worship, and organized sixty-seven churches.

—Since the year began the church at Rome, N. Y., has received an accession of seventy members by baptism, and several more by letter. Both the church and pastor, Dr. H. H. Peabody, are seeing that prosperity can continue under a long pastorate.

—The fourteenth anniversary of the Sunday-school of the Marcy Avenue church, Brooklyn, was held on Sunday evening. The annual report was read by Mr. Theo. M. Banta, superintendent. He stated that forty-three from the school had joined the church during the year. More new scholars had been added to the Sunday-school during the past year than in any year preceding, as they had taken in 535 new members, making an average of nearly eleven for every Sunday in the year. The membership of the school numbers 1,228, including 126 officers and teachers; and the average attendance is about 900. There were recitations by several of the scholars, and an earnest address by Dr. W. C. P. Rhodes, the pastor.

—Mrs. Senator Stanford, of California, has purchased her father's homestead at Albany, N. Y., at a cost of $250,000, where she will found and maintain a home in which children of widows and dependent women can be cared for during the working hours of the day.

—The receipts of the Baptist Home and Foreign Missionary and Publication Societies last year were $1,103,957.. The contributions to the Presbyterian Home Missions were $671,629, and to Foreign Missions, $745,144, or $1,416,873.

—Among the contributions on Easter day at Grace Protestant Episcopal church, Philadelphia, was a check for $45,000, the entire collection amounting to over $54,000. The check was given by Miss Catharine Wolfe, for the purpose of buying a church in Mulberry street for the use of the Italian mission.

—Rev. C. DeHeer, missionary of the Presbyterian Board at Benita, writes to the Evangelist that a generous lady has given that mission the means to translate and publish "Pilgrim's Progress" in the Benga language. Bunyan will now tell his immortal dream to the natives of West Africa.

—The eleventh annual report of the mission to lepers, in India, gives interesting accounts of the eight asylums assisted by the society. Of these asylums four are in connection with the Church Missionary Society, two with the American Presbyterian Mission, and one with Gossner's Evangelical Mission.

—The eighth annual meeting of the Baptist Women's Missionary Society was held in Newton, Mass., May 5. Effective missionary work has been done among the Indians, the Chinese in California, and the Mormoms in Utah, and a school has been opened in Mexico. Twenty-eight teachers have been supported, the treasury receipts being $31,694, a balance remaining of $1,000.

—A lady has placed the sum of $200,000 in the hands of Rev. H. S. Hoffman and Mr. C. M. Morton for the purpose of establishing in West Philadelphia a divinity school for the Reformed Episcopal church. With the seminary a church is to be established, and the parish and the seminary are to be so connected that the pastors shall be professors, and the young students are to assist in parochial work. It is said that $100,000 will be spent upon the buildings, which are to be erected in a lot already purchased at Chestnut and Forty-third streets.

—The friends of the Brooklyn Baptist Home for the Aged held their eleventh anniversary on Thursday last. Mr. Charles H. Dutcher presided, and introductory devotional exercises were conducted by the Rev. S. Giffard Nelson, and Dr. W. C. P. Rhodes. The Rev. J. C. Allen delivered an address which elicited warm commendation for its appositness and eloquent presentation of the claims of the indigent on Christian sympathy and help. After a fine solo by Miss Mundell, the Rev. Edward Braistin delivered a thoughtful address, especially urging the extinction of a $600 debt against the Home for current expenses. The Rev. John Humpstone pronounced the benediction. The strawberry festival, continued during the evening, was largely attended.

—There was a large attendance at the session of the Chicago Baptist Association. The annual sermon was delivered by the Rev. A. J. Sage. The Rev. H. Woodsmall outlined the work of the Home Mission Society among the freedmen of the South, and the association promptly raised $100 of the $600 required to place the Rev. Mr. Garnett in that field. H. R. Clissold and the Rev. J. W. Waddell showed what the City Mission Society was doing to Evangelize Chicago. The Central Baptist church will establish two missions on the North Side. Dr. Goodspeed said the Morgan Park Theological Seminary had outgrown its building, and needed a new one costing $50,000, of which $31,000 had been subscribed. Dr. N. Wood followed with a plea for the University of Chicago. He said that its future would be glorious.

At the evening session the report of the Committee on Foreign Work was read, showing satisfactory progress. The report said the explosion of the bomb in the haymarket had dispelled many delusive hopes and scattered cherished notions as to the actual condition of affairs.

Mission work in the city was also fully discussed, and also the best plan by which the most good could be accomplished.

How many more shall we hear from before another week closes?

We wish to add many more names to this list. Send your names and post-office address with the money. We cannot open a book account, as would be necessary if we did not require money in advance. When your name and money is received your order is at once entered in the shipping book and you will receive the book as soon as we can get it out. We hope to issue it by the middle of June, but cannot say positively how soon. It is being compiled by Rev. H. H. Hinman as fast as his other duties will permit.

We want one thousand orders in advance. Send in your names.

You will see by the report of the Committee on the Cynosure at the annual meeting, that the year was closed with a few more subscribers than we began with one year ago. This is encouraging, indeed.

The American Newspaper Directory, issued May, 1886, says: "Circulations have generally decreased during the past year."

The success during the hard times of the year past, has been your success as well as ours. Will you join hands with us for another long pull, and strong pull to place the Cynosure into as many homes as possible? Will you renew promptly, and, so far as possible, look after the subscription list in your neighborhood?

Four hundred and sixty-one Southern ministers are now reading the Cynosure!

Does your minister have the reading of the paper? Can you donate anything to the fund for sending the Cynosure to Southern ministers?

"MASONIC OUTRAGES"

will be issued by the National Christian Association in a few weeks. All orders received before its issue will be filled at 20 cents per copy. Many have urged that this pamphlet be issued, and now that the work has been undertaken, your sanction in the shape of orders will be encouraging.

Advertisers who wish to secure the attention of the best class of purchasers, will find it to their advantage to secure space in the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE.

BETWEEN TWO OPINIONS.

BY E. E. FLAGG.

Author of "Holden with Cords," "A Sunny Life," "Little People," etc.

The Best Story of the Reform.
Price, only $1.00.

Published by THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

This latest and best of Miss Flagg's works is now ready in handsome print, neatly bound. The story begins in a quiet New England home, and paints its homely joys with a delicacy and truthfulness worthy the hand of Harriet Beecher Stowe. The scene then changes to a thriving, growing, palpitating young Western city, and with great power and startling accuracy the writer leads us behind the scenes that we may see the machinery that works the liquor traffic and labor troubles. The story of the strike, the mob, the attempted assassination, the saloon-keeper's wiles, the curse of his trade, the power of the Christian faith to change him to a messenger of mercy, the criminal and the hidden power that shields him from justice, the land robbers tricks, the dark and secret conspiracies of the lodge—these and all the incidents of the book are portrayed with rare tact and great power of description. It is emphatically a book for the hour. And what is better and yet more striking, the incidents are facts, and every one a powerful and convincing argument against the lodge and the saloon.

Every temperance man and woman should read this book. No temperance story like it was ever planned, much less ably executed. A wonderful light is thrown upon the difficulties in the way of prohibition. Learn how they may be avoided.

Every one who loves to read a good story, chaste and elegant in expression, p in thought, true in incident, deeply interesting in its narrative, should read this be

READ THESE NOTICES FROM THE PRESS:

The Free Methodist, Chicago.

"Between Two Opinions" is a story, its incidents vouched for as facts, which presents a powerful argument on these questions and must attract thousands of readers among our thinking and observant people. The plot of the story is neither startling nor novel, but it develops a wonderful strengtb in following tbe experiences of people in the common, everyday walks of life.

Free Press, Birmingham, Iowa.

It differs from tbe popular story, "The Bread-winners" of a year ago. It greatly differs from tbat book in that it is written from tbe Christian standpoint, and its beautiful and touching descriptions of home life and home duties and heroic self-denyings will waken a responsive echo in every heart, that has not by dissipation lost the taste for the pure joys of home.

The Religious Telescope, Dayton.

The author, Miss Flagg, is a brilliant writer. Tbe stirring questions in American politics are undoubtedly prohibition and the labor movemeut as championed by tbe secret unions of working men, whicb direct the strikes that with more and more frequency occur in our cities. "Between Two Opinions" is a story, its incidents vouched for as facts, wbich presents a powerful argument on these questions, and must attract thousands of readers among our thinking people.

The Christian Conservator, Dayton.

This is a charming book, written in an attractive manner. It is so full of sunshine and so radiant with light tbat one is enlightened, warmed, and, before they are conscious of it, set against the lodge. The style gleams, glows and sparkles. It is dignified and simple. It is the right book to place in the bands of your wife or daughter to superinduce co-operation with you in anti-secrecy work. Every minister's wife should read it, and then, if her husband is not an Anti-mason, he sbould take his turn next and become one.

The American, Washington.

We are reading, in spare moments, Miss Flagg's new book, "Between Two Opinions," and the estimate we have thus far put upon it is that it is masterly both in style and argument. One is insensibly made to feel that he is reading facts and not fiction; that the book is not a play upon the imagination but an unraveling of mysterious circumstances which have an important bearing upon current events.

Law and Order, Boston.

The book takes high ground for prohibition of the liquor curse, for woman's ballot for home protection, and for a better and more honest brotherhood than is forced by their obligations upon the members of secret orders. It is, therefore, a valuable book for several large classes of American readers.

Christian Instructor, Philadelphia.

There are important questions pressing upon American politics to-day; two of tbem are prohibition and the labor question as connected witb the secret unions of workingmen. Tbis work is an expose of the twin evils, secret societies and the saloons. The truths are given in the form of a story; not startling, but thrilling experiences of home life that are vouched for as facts. The evidences presented of the impossibility of reaching the saloon keeper so long as he and tbe officers of the law are sworn brothers in the den of some secret society, are conclusive enough to awaken the most careless and obtuse member of society. It is a valuable book for the masses to read.

Evangelist, Berea, Kentucky.

Tbe object of tbe volume is to illustrate the practical workings of Secret Societies, and especially to show how tbe Lodge upholds the saloon, and tbis very important design is wrought out with much skill, clearness and power. By reading it temperance people may learn much about the difficulties in the way of prohibition.

The Standard, Chicago.

It is written in the interests of reform, more especially temperance and Anti-masonry. Tbe title of the story suggests the special aim of it, whicb is to protest against all "halting between two opinions;" in other words, is a plea for radicalism. Tbe story is vigorously written, and will interest even readers who do not altogether believe in its doctrine.

The Pacific, San Francisco.

It is a story intended to do service against the saloons, and in favor of Womans' Christian Temperance work, and especially against the secret orders—Freemasons, Odd-fellows, the Knights of Labor, etc. No reflecting man can doubt that any combination of picked classes and individuals is liable to great abuse. It is obvious, also, that secret orders are specially capable of being used in a selfish and unprincipled way.

HOME AND HEALTH.

HOW MEN SHOULD EAT.

Those who have little time for exercise, and are compelled to live chiefly within doors, must endeavor to secure, or should have secured for them as far as possible by employers, by way of compensation, a regular supply of fresh air without drafts, an atmosphere as free from dust and other impurities as can be obtained, with a good supply of light, and some artificial warmth when needed. These necessities granted, cereal foods, such as well made bread in variety, and vegetable produce, including fruits, should form a great part of the diet consumed, and with a fair addition of eggs and milk if no meat is taken, and little of other animal food than fish. On such a dietary, and without alcoholic stimulants, thousands of such workers as I have briefly indicated may enjoy, with very little exercise, far bettter health and more strength than at present they experience on meat and heavy puddings, beer, baker's bread, and cheese. Of course there are workers who belong to neither of the two extreme classes indicated, and whose habits cannot be described as sedentary, but who occupy a middle place between the two. For such some corresponding modification of the dietary is naturally appropriate. But it is a vulgar error to regard meat in any form as necessary to life, if for any it is necessary, it is for the hard-working, outdoor laborers, and for these a certain proportion is no doubt desirable. Animal flesh is useful, also as a concentrated form of nutriment, valuable for its portability, and for the small space it occupies in the stomach—unrivaled in certain circumstances. Like every other description of food, it is highly useful in its place, but it is by no means necessary for a large proportion of the population. To many it has become partially desirable only by the force of habit, and because their digestive organs have thus been trained to deal with it, and at first resent a change. But this being gradually made, adaptation takes place, and the individual who has consumed two or three meat meals daily, with some little discomfort, chiefly from often being indisposed to make active exertions, becomes after sufficient time has elapsed, stronger lighter and happier, as well as better tempered and manifestly healthier on the more delicate dietary sketched.

People in general have very inadequate ideas of the great power of habit alone in forming what they believe to be innate personal pecularities or in creating conditions which are apparently part of a constitutional necessity, laws of their nature, and essential to their existence. Many of these peculiarities are solely due to habit, that is to long continuance in a routine of action, adopted it may be without motive or design; and people are apt to forget that if a routine of precisely opposite character had been adopted, precisely opposite conditions would have been established, and opposite peculiarities would have become dominant, as their contraries are now. Alternations in the dietary, especially of elderly persons, should be made gradually and with caution. This condition fulfilled, a considerable change may be effected with satisfactory results, when circumstances render it necessary. To revert once more to the question of flesh eating, it should be remarked that it appears to be by no means a natural taste with the young. Few children like that part of the meal which consists of meat, but prefer the pudding, the fruit, the vegetables, if well dressed, which unhappily is not often the case. Many children manifest great repugnance to meat at first, and are coaxed and even scolded by anxious mothers until the habit of eating it is acquired. Adopting the insular creed, which regards beef and mutton as necessary to health and strength, the mother often suffers from groundless forebodings about the future of a child who rejects flesh and manifests what is regarded as an unfortunate partiality for bread and butter and pudding. Nevertheless I am satisfied, if the children are allowed their own instinct the result would be a gain in more ways than one. Certainly, if meat did not appear in the nursery until the children sent for it, it would be rarely seen there, and the young ones would, as a rule, thrive on milk and eggs, with the varied produce of the vegetable kingdom. —Sir Henry Thompson in the Nineteenth entury.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. A historical sketch of the institution and a critical analysis of the character of each degree, by Prest. J. Blanchard, of Wheaton College. Monitorial quotations and nearly four hundred notes from standard Masonic authorities confirm the truthfulness of this exposition and show the character of Masonic teaching and doctrine. The accuracy of this exposition legally attested by J. O. Doesburg, Past Master Unity ☐ No. 191, Holland, Mich., and others. This is the latest, most accurate and complete exposition of Blue Lodge and Chapter Masonry. Over one hundred illustrations—several of them full page—give a pictorial representation of the lodge-room, chapter and principal ceremonies of the degrees, with the dress of candidates, signs, grips, etc. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1.00

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished, with engravings showing the lodge-room, dress of candidates, signs, due guards, grips, etc. This revelation was so accurate that Freemasons murdered the author for writing it. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Prest. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7 50. Paper cover, 35 cents; per dozen $3.50.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. To which is appended "A Revelation of the Mysteries of Oddfellowship (old work,) by a Member of the Craft." The whole containing over five hundred pages, lately revised and republished. In cloth, $1.50 each; per dozen, $14.50. The first part of the above work, Light on Freemasonry, 416 pages, 75 cents each; per dozen $7.50.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern. A book of great interest to officers of the army and navy, the bench and the clergy. TABLE OF CONTENTS: The Antiquity of Secret Societies, The Life of Julian, The Eleusinian Mysteries, The Origin of Masonry, Was Washington a Mason? Fillmore and Webster's Deference to Masonry, A Brief Outline of the Progress of Masonry in the United States, The Tammany Ring, Masonic Benevolence, the Uses of Masonry, An Illustration, The Conclusion. 50 cents each; per dozen, $4.75.

Masonic Oaths Null and Void; or, Freemasonry Self-Convicted. This is a book for the times. The design of the author is to refute the arguments of those who claim that the oaths of Freemasonry are binding upon those who take them. His arguments are conclusive, and the forcible manner in which they are put, being drawn from Scripture, makes them convincing. The minister or lecturer will find in this work a rich fund of arguments. 207 pp., postpaid.....40 cts.

The Mystic Tie, or Freemasonry a League with the Devil. This is an account of the church trial of Peter Cook and wife, of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a reverend Freemason; and their very able defense presented by Mrs. Lucia C. Cook, in which she clearly shows that Freemasonry is antagonistic to the Christian religion. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Morgan's Exposition, Abduction and Murder, and Oaths of 33 Degrees. Composed of "Freemasonry Exposed," by Capt. Wm. Morgan "History of the Abduction and Murder of Morgan;" "Valance's Confession of the Murder of Capt. Wm Morgan;" Bernard's Reminiscences of Morgan Times," and Oaths and Penalties of 33 Degrees 304 pages.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin Trial. Also the letter of Hon. Richard Rush to the anti-Masonic committee of York County, Pa., May 4th, 1831. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14th, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons, swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

In the Coils; or, the Coming Conflict. By "A Fanatic." A historical sketch, by a United Presbyterian minister, vividly portraying the workings of Secretism in the various relations of everyday life, and showing how individual domestic, social, religious, professional and public life are trammeled and biased by the baneful workings of the lodge. Being presented in the form of a story, this volume will interest both old and young, and the moral of the story will not have to be searched for. $1.50 each; $15.00 per dozen.

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' Letters on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Thirty most interesting, able and convincing letters on the above general subject, written by this renowned statesman to different public men of the United States during the years 1831 to 1833. With Mr. Adams' address to the people of Massachusetts upon political aspects of lodgery; an Appendix giving obligations of Masonry, and an able Introduction. This is one of the most telling anti-secrecy works extant, aside from the Expositions. Price, cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00. Paper, 35 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

Mah-Hah-Bone; comprises the Hand Book, Master's Carpet and Freemasonry at a Glance. Bound in one volume. This makes one of the most complete books of information on the workings and symbolism of Freemasonry extant. Well bound in cloth, 589 pp.....$1.00

FARM AND GARDEN.

GROWING CELERY.

Not many years ago celery was considered as a crop only to be grown in the gardens of the wealthy where the cost of cultivation was not regarded. Thanks to the market gardeners about New York, the cultivation of celery has been greatly simplified; the old laborious method of planting it in trenches has been discarded, and now anyone who can raise cabbages can grow celery. The dwarf varieties—of which there are several—are to be preferred to the tall growing kinds, and as each of the principal seedsmen has his favorite tested sort it is safe to follow his advice as to the variety. The important point is to secure the celery plants, and if one is not to cultivate largely, and can readily purchase the plants, it will be the cheapest to buy from those who grow them for sale. Of course, all cannot purchase plants, and the majority must grow them. Those who have not already sown the seeds must purchase the plants, as the sowing should have been made two months ago. Market gardeners set their celery on land from which an early crop of cabbages, cauliflowers, onions, etc., has been taken; as the soil had been highly manured for these, it remains rich enough for the celery. The soil being plowed and harrowed, it is marked off in rows three feet apart, and the plants set at every six inches in the row. After the plants are set, the soil should be pressed very firmly against the roots with the foot. On land not already rich, the rows must be manured; mark out the rows four feet apart, and throw out furrows with the plow. Spread well decomposed manure in the furrows, knocking the lumps apart, and throw the soil back over the manure. Harrow and roll thoroughly, mark again, and set the plants at one foot apart in the rows. Nothing more is to be done to the celery except to cultivate it thoroughly and keep it clear of weeds until September, when it is prepared for taking up, as will be directed at the proper time.—American Agriculturalist.

UNTHRESHED OATS FOR HORSES.

Unthreshed oats are better feed for horses than the grain alone, or the grain and straw both fed, but separately. The albuminoid ratio of the grain of oats is 1.61; of the straw of oats, 1.299. The food for horses at ordinary work should have an albuminoid ratio of 1.70. Hence, the grain of oats should be mixed with food having a lower albuminoid ratio. We might get a ration—having the proper ratio—by using corn with the oats. But it is well known that for grain to be well digested it must be eaten with some sort of stover to form the necessary bulk in the stomach. For stover we might use timothy, which has an albuminoid ratio of 1.81, and would give the necessary bulk. But it is much better to have the grain and the stover eaten together. We may cut the hay, mix it and the grain together, and moisten the mixture; but we accomplish the same thing more economically by feeding unthreshed oats, for then the grain, all the chaff and a good part of the straw are masticated together. By thus feeding oats we not only improve the albuminoid ratio of the ration and provide the necessary forage masticated with the grain, but we save the expense of threshing. Oats to be fed in this way should be cut before they are quite ripe, cured thoroughly, and then moved away. They are just the feed for winter, when the horses require carbo hydrates; and because of their manner of feeding are so well digested, and are so well suited to the wants of the horse that he will do a great deal better upon them than he would upon almost any other food.

SHOCKING GRAIN.

In the saving of grain there is no more important work than the shocking of it. If poorly shocked it is certain to be damaged. It seems necessary to leave it in the field to cure after being cut, and yet it so often suffers damage that we might well hope that shocking could be avoided altogether. The only remedy, however, is to shock well, which is rarely done. Very few know how to shock properly; and yet others shock poorly because of indolence. It is poor policy to have the shocking done by boys. The use of the self-binder must remove all excuse for the work being done by them. Surely, enough men can now be got to do this work. The self-binder is usually set to make rather large bundles, and they are always compact. Hence not more than twelve of these bundles should be put in a shock. If more are used, the grain will not cure properly; and more are not required to give the shock the needed stability. Two persons should always work together. Let each take two bundles and set the two pairs together. Then let each man set one bundle at the end nearest to him alternating with the two already set. Two bundles at each side, alternating with those previously set, and the two cap sheaves, complete this model shock. Each bundle should be driven down solidly into the stubble. All should lean slightly towards a common center. Do not place the shock in a depression; but this is the only excuse for not placing them in a straight line—making the loading less inconvenient. For cap sheaves select long, slender bundles. Break them thoroughly, and be careful to place the tops toward the prevailing winds. After the ten bundles are set, gather their tops in your arms and draw them together. When the cap sheave is placed, do not pat it down with a stroke in the middle, but by bringing an arm down across each end. Spread the cap sheaves to cover the entire shock. Any whisp of grain standing out can be tucked in.

If the bundles are small, as they must be in short grain bound by hand, as many as eighteen may well be put into the shock. In ordinary grain, fourteen hand bound bundles may well be put into a shock — three being placed at each side, instead of two as directed above. Wheat, if well ripened, may be shocked when damp, but oats never. Oats dry out very slowly in the shock; and if shocked when damp, especially if that dampness proceeds from dew, will mould. Shocks properly set will not fall down unless in the force of a wind storm. If they should fall down in a hurricane, set them up again as soon as dry, placing the bundles in the same positions that they occupied before.

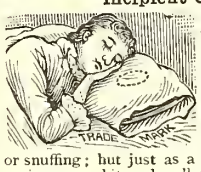
HORSFORD'S ACID PHOSPHATE,

A Valuable Remedy for Gravel.



Dr. T. H. NEWLAND, Jr., St. Louis, Mo., says: "I have used it in diseases of the urinary organs, such as gravel, and particularly spermatorhœa, with very good results, and think it a very valuable remedy in those diseases.

ALL-NIGHT INHALATION!

"A positive revolution in the treatment of Air-Passage Diseases of the Nose, Throat, and Lungs, and, for the purpose designed, as valuable a discovery as vaccination."

THE PILLOW-INHALER.

A Speedy, Positive and Permanent Cure for Catarrh, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Incipient Consumption.

It is a hair pillow, with reservoirs of evaporating liquid, the fumes or vapor of which is inhaled all night long, whilst sleeping as usual, and without any discomfort. It is used only at night, and is perfectly safe to the most delicate. There is no stomach-dosing, douching or snuffing; but just as a smoky lamp will leave a deposit on a whitened wall so the PILLOW-INHALER, for say eight hours at a time, spreads a powerful healing balm or salve on the inflamed inner coating of the diseased air-surfaces, from the nostrils to the bottom of the lungs, and hence into the blood. Old-fashioned inhalation, through a tube, for a few minutes a day, sometimes cured. Think of eight hours constant action, on the same principle, but intensified a hundred-fold! There are no pipes or tubes. The medicine is breathed in, not swallowed, and goes right to the diseased parts.

CATARRH. BRONCHITIS. CONSUMPTION.

HON. E. L. HEDDEN, Collector of the Port of New York, says: "I take pleasure in stating that the PILLOW-INHALER has been of the greatest relief, and I believe of permanent benefit, to my wife, who has been a great sufferer from Bronchial and Catarrhal Troubles, accompanied with distressing Asthma. I recommend its use to all persons afflicted with such maladies."

E. L. HEDDEN, 38 West 49th St., New York.

MR. H. G. TEELE, 50 Bryan Block, Chicago, Ill., says: "I suffered fifteen years from a severe case of Catarrh; coughed incessantly day and night. I bought a PILLOW-INHALER, and since using it my cough is gone; my lungs are no longer weak and sore, and I am in better health than I have been for years."

During the six years of its existence the PILLOW-INHALER has wrought cures of Catarrh, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption, that have been more like miracles than the usual treatment of disease. It is not expensive, and is within the reach of every one. Send for Explanatory Pamphlet and Testimonials, or call.

IN THE COILS;

— OR —

The Coming Conflict.

A NEW AND STRANGE STORY BASED ON STARTLING FACTS, VIVIDLY PORTRAYING A MYSTERIOUS AND DANGEROUS POWER AT WORK IN THE GOVERNMENT, THE CHURCH, AND THE HOME.

"All will agree that this is a powerfully written story."—Evangelist, (Chicago, Ills.)

"A book which we trust may have a wide circulation."—National Baptist, (Philadelphia.)

"So intensely interesting did I find it that it was hard to pause until the last sentence was read. This work places the author high among the writers of fiction."—W. W. Barr, D. D. in Christian Instructor, (Philadelphia.)

"Unless we are greatly mistaken, the work will do more to awaken the American church and people to the evils of Freemasonry than any other book recently published."—Evangelical Repository.

"The book will create a sensation in Masonic circles, and evoke criticism of a most relentless character. The courage of the author in attacking such a rock-rooted bulwark as Freemasonry is something to admire, Fanatic though he be."—Nebraska Watchman.

"Light is needed on this subject and needed badly, and we welcome this contribution to the literature of anti-secretism, and cordially commend it to the favorable attention of our readers."—United Presbyterian, (Pittsburgh.)

"A charming work, fit to be classed with 'Uncle Tom's Cabin;' it is indeed less a work of fiction. The volume is as valuable as a work of reference as it is agreeable, truthful and useful. Our young folks will not leave the book, if they begin it, till they 'see how it turns out.'"—Cynosure, (Chicago, Ills.)

BATAVIA CONVENTION PAMPHLET.

A Staggering Blow!

Such was to Freemasonry the great NATIONAL CONVENTION held in BATAVIA, N. Y., September 1882. It gave the world

Thurlow Weed's Great Letter

On the abduction and murder of WILLIAM MORGAN in 1826, which has been the most widely published of any Anti-masonic document. The dedication of a noble granite monument to the memory of Morgan, and the able and eloquent addresses of the Convention make this a most valuable pamphlet.

SEE WHY.

It contains—
1. Portrait of Morgan.
2. Portrait of Thurlow Weed.
3. Fine picture of the Monument.
4. The great letter of Thurlow Weed and his affidavit—almost the last public act of his life.
5. Address by J. E. Roy, D.D.
6. The monument oration by Pres. C. A. Blanchard.
7. Addresses on "Christian Politics" by Pres. J. Blanchard, on the Character of Freemasonry by Prof. E. D. Bailey, on the "Freedmen and Secret Societies" by Rev. H. H. Hinman; and very interesting personal and historical reminisences.

THIS is a pleasant surprise in many ways. The author is Rev. W. T. Meloy, of the United Presbyterian Church of Chicago, and the book is published by the Board of Publication of his denomination. It is a love story, not "fascinating," but with so much of genial interest that the reader is in no danger of laying it down unfinished. * * * The moral purpose of the book is to describe and vindicate Christian character, in its more heroic aspects, and it is a success. We congratulate the author and the United Presbyterian Board of Publication on this literary lily of the valley.—The Interior.

"LUCILLE VERNON" is evidently not an ideal sketch, but the fictitious names used represent to a great extent real men and women of flesh and blood. The characters of many of them are by no means attractive, but are perfect counterparts of querulous, obstinate and parsimonious professors who are thorns in the flesh of many a pastor in all the churches. But as in all the churches, there were also good and true men and women at Lansington, who upheld and encouraged the pastor. * * * In its author will be recognized the worthy pastor of the First United Presbyterian Church of Chicago, and a welcome contributor to these columns.—United Presbyterian.

The heroine, who becomes the bride of the pastor of the church at Lansington, is a wonderful exemplification of how a woman who is a true wife and help-meet may throw her life and energies into the great work of saving souls; aiding, by gentle words and sympathy, wise counsel and brave endurance, the husband having charge of a congregation where the Demon of Misrule held full sway. We follow with interest the history of the wife and husband through their hours of despondency and discouragement to the happy ending, where religion, harmony and peace have gained the ascendency and the good man and wife find their reward.—Pittsburgh Daily Telegraph.

The Pennsylvania Railroad Company has instituted a reform which will receive the support and encouragement of all good citizens, and will lead the way for a great change in Sabbath railway business. Its managers have agreed to make no more contracts for Sabbath excursions, and a few weeks ago ordered all trains not loaded with stock, on the main line, to stop from six o'clock Saturday night till next day midnight, and the men to be sent to their homes. Highly gratifying reports of the effect upon the men are given, and the new movement seems to be immediately a great success.

An incident in the life of the late James Kennedy, of California, is one of the most remarkable examples of the profitableness and good policy of Sabbath-keeping. In 1852 he headed a party on the overland trail from Illinois. Every Saturday night he ordered a halt, and conducted religious services on the Sabbath. After a few weeks along that toilsome journey, the impatient ones decided to push on without the Sabbath rest. Others followed their example until Mr. Kennedy, with his household and stock, was left alone. He pushed on with genuine Scotch determination, reaching California unmolested by the hostile Indian tribes, through whom his journey lay, and with teams and stock in good condition and not one missing. The rest of the party began to arrive some ten days later, and came straggling in for three weeks, all complaining of Indian depredations, lost stock, and the starving condition of the rest. The command of God and the nature of man and beast are one in demanding a Sabbath.

A Prohibition State convention met at Springfield, Ills. last week to nominate candidates for State Treasurer and Superintendent of Public Instruction. The delegates numbered several hundred—an intelligent, earnest and clean-looking body of men and women. Their platform reads like an American declaration, but for the omission of a plank on the secret lodge. It begins: "We reverently recognize the supreme authority of Almighty God," endorses woman suffrage, the W. C. T. U., and the Christian Sabbath "as a boon so valuable to Christianity that the State can not be true to its trust which neglects to guard it from desecration." Hon. Henry W. Austin, a business man of this city residing in Oak Park, was nominated by a lawyer and an Anti-mason as State Treasurer, and Prof. U. C. Gilman of Quincy, for the office of State Superintendent. Mr. Austin has long been identified with the temperance work in Illinois, having secured the passage in the Legislature of valuable laws for the restriction of the liquor traffic. He is a Christian man, reared an Anti-mason and has not forgetten the lessons of his youth. He was two years ago voted for by Americans and Prohibitionists for Congress. This is an excellent nomination which should be maintained by Christian and reform voters at the ballot box. The Prohibitionists of New Jersey have nominated Gen. C. B. Fisk, the Methodist philanthropist, for governor on a platform recognizing the Sabbath and acknowledging God to be the "rightful sovereign of men, from whom the just powers of government are derived."

The secret society known as the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers has been much complimented during our late strikes for its conservative policy in contrast with the hot heads of the Knights of Labor led by Irons. But this very exemplary lodge is now seen to be no less dangerous to community and hostile to the real interests of labor than the other. A reunion of the lodges of the North-west was held at Madison, Wis., and was attended by some 500 members. They held a secret session in the Capitol building and had speeches from Governor Rusk and others,—and all on the Lord's Day. The engineers reached the city at about 10 A. M., held two sessions and left at 8 in the evening! Rev. W. A. McAtee, a Presbyterian pastor, had the Christian courage to denounce this Sabbath desecration and criticized the Governor for allowing such misuse of the buildings of the State. The people of Wisconsin should not deal with a slack hand in letting their Governor know that he was not elected by Freemasons or heathen.

Canadian annexation is a slumbering question in the provinces we have always supposed to be most directly concerned, but across the high tides of the Bay of Fundy our Yankee spy-glasses may see the Stars and Stripes already waving. The late election in New Brunswick is said to have been attended by an unusual frankness of expression concerning a separation from the British government. An old sea captain at Digby took his hatchet, clipped the limbs from his highest spruce tree, and nailed the United States flag at the top with the remark: "That is our next question to vote on, and you will find before long that two-thirds of us are of that way of thinking." There is surely no good reason why American affairs should not be so administered as to compel the admiration and attract the citizenship of all nations.

If our Chicago experience is worth anything our Canadian brethren are nursing a viper that may sting at some unaware moment. Just across the river from Ottawa, the capital, and within two furlongs of the Parliament buildings, detectives have unearthed a socialist lodge with fifty members, full brothers of Spies, Most and Parsons. Late correspondence with the Chicago gang was found, offering to give lessons in the fine art of making and handling dynamite. On the walls of the room where the fiendish lodge meets are these cheerful mottoes: "Down with the Church, State, Capital, and other Villainies;" "Liberty or Death;" "Long Live Socialism;" "We Shall Conquer through Blood," and the detectives give this as their oath: "As we and ours have been daily oppressed and our lives crushed and murdered, so shall we blast, hunt, kill and avenge: as we have been despised, so shall local tyrants, preaching hypocrites, soulless monopolists, and scoundrels be annihilated by dynamite, by lead rope, fire, or any other means or manner devised and ordered by this group. My friends shall be your friends, and your enemies mine. We shall have pity on none, refuse mercy to all, and have nothing but swift destruction for traitors. I promise, I swear, I will perform, and never falter. Heaven shall witness and hell shall testify to the righteousness of our cause and to the fidelity of each member."

Mgr. Germano Benedetto Francesco Paolo Stranico, an Italian aristocrat and the Pope's messenger or "Ablegate," with Count Mucciola as guard of honor, arrived off New York last week Tuesday. This titled delegation bore some articles of dress to the new Cardinal, Archbishop Gibbons of Baltimore; these were no less than the "beretta" and the "zuchetta." They are made of fine silk and carefully placed in boxes similar to jewel cases. But what are these wonderful garment, sent under guard and with royal pomp? One is a square, red hat, the other a red skull cap—that's all! Why not send them by mail then? Ah! mark why these baubles were more to be guarded than gems. The beretta is an emblem of the dignity and authority of the cardinal's office; the zuchetta signifies the physical power of the church of Rome. These representations of an alien power, which claims dominion over the government of the United States, are sent to be put on the head of an ecclesiastic with all the pomp and circumstance of the old world despotisms. How is the affair viewed at Washington? Is not the presumption checked? Is it not regarded as an invasion of ideas hostile to our American institutions? "Under orders from Washington" a U. S. cutter runs down the New York harbor to get these baubles of popery and bring them ashore. Now let Mr. Cleveland get a steamer ready for the next band of returning Mormon missionaries.

THE DECISION.

BY REV. LEWIS JOHNSTON.

Hath light communion with the night?
What union Christ with Belial's sons?
What concord hath the wrong with right?
Believers with denying ones?

There is no middle ground on which
Thy friends or foes may take a stand:
Thou hast declared, and each must pitch
Upon thy right or thy left hand.

And we upon thy side would stand:
Lo, at thy feet the nations bow,
To stamp this as Immanuel's land.
Aid us; and be this our vow.

The highest, mightiest, of our land
Must own thy Word the nation's guide;
This, willing people shall demand,
Affirming they are on thy side.

ADVANCE THE BANNER OF REFORM.

BY REV. DAVID M'FALL.

The work in which we are engaged is arduous, the difficulties numerous, the resistance they offer hard to overcome. If we looked only at this side of the conflict, we might well become weary and faint in our minds. But these costs have all been counted, and their sum total, while a maker of amazement, is no longer a source of despair. But the per contra is glorious and far overshadows them.

The cause is God's and must prevail. The combined hosts of darkness might as well think to arrest the stars in their courses as to repress any movement inspired by the Spirit of God and carried forward in his name and by his assistance. Opposition in such a cause only accelerates the onward motion. Of this the past is a faithful and unequivocal witness. The best interests of the human heart are also with us. I do not underestimate the power of selfishness, nor the energy born of despair with which the ungodly seek to cover up a record that is shameful. These forces are not to be despised; still they belong to the wicked and consequently to the weak side of human nature. The good and true are far more powerful, and these are with us; and when once the forces are mustered and the battle put in array the victory will not long be in doubt. As an ancient philosopher has said, "The good will be uppermost and the bad undermost, forevermore."

Moreover the trend of providence is on our side. Providence is God in motion. The mighty movements that we witness are the wavings of his hand. As we look upon these to-day we cannot help but give them a lunge into the hosts of darkness and yet there is chestnut word against his fellow. For years we have been warning the nation by word and pen of the menace to law, order and free institutions that lies concealed in secret orders. The warning has been allowed to pass "like the idle wind which it reports not." But what an emphasis God has given to it. It has been uttered as with a voice of thunder throughout the land. And while we need hardly expect the nation to awake at once to the voice of judgment, that has been so long deaf to the voice of mercy, we may be reasonably sure that God will not cease until the ear is unstopped and obedience rendered to his most righteous law. I shall not be surprised if secret orders become yet more powerful, and work yet farther destruction; but when the end comes, and a great and free people rise in their might to crush them, as Hercules strangled serpents in his cradle, I predict that the spring of 1886 will be regarded as the beginning of that end. To the events of this year this enemy will look back as the beginning of his downfall. The crack of John Brown's rifle at Harper's Ferry was the death-knell of slavery; and the oppression, tyranny, and lawlessness of secret orders in this day will yet be regarded as the death-knell of the whole system. In the meantime it is ours to maintain the testimony against them, to instruct those who will receive instruction, and so to prepare the way for his glorious coming who shall yet take to himself the nations.

East Cambridge, Mass., June 15, 1886.

WEEK-DAY SERMON.

BY E. E. FLAGG.

"He calleth his own sheep by name!" There are wonderful depths of meaning here for the soul that longs for what true love must always long for—a personal place in the heart of its Saviour, a place all its own and not another's, and never by any possibility to be given to another. We don't like to be ciphers; we all of us rather be independent units, having each our own individual value. We don't want to be numbered or ticketed or classed. And just because God's word is divine there is this constant appeal to one of the deepest instincts of our nature.

But while Christianity thus glorifies and exalts the individual, all the opposing systems of secret lodge worship have a tendency the other way—to dwarf the individual and make him lose his identity in the masses. Anti-Christ never calls his own by name. He glorifies the race and humanity in general at the expense of the individual. This is the spirit of communism, socialism, nihilism, with their denial of all right to private opinion or freedom of personal action; but it is a lying spirit, for history has demonstrated over and over again that the race will never rise except as the individul particles which compose it rise; and Christianity shows itself to be the truth of God by being the direct antipodes of this spirit, with its jealous guarding of every separate individuality, its priceless value set on every human soul, its constant presenting of a personal Saviour who will never forget to all eternity the name of the humblest and weakest sheep in all the vast flock of his redeemed.

But even the increasing prevalence and power of secret orders to the thoughtful Christian is only a sign that we are not merely on the threshold of the latter days, but living in the very midst of that wonderful drama pictured forth by the beloved Apostle in colors of such mingled gloom and glory. While the blue waves dashed around his island prison, and the haughty Roman world, sunk in luxury and vice and cruelty was mixing the cup of her own destruction, the exile of Patmos saw past the mists of eighteen centuries what is being fulfilled to-day before our eyes. He saw the world-wide worship of the image of the beast; he heard the decree go forth from the dragon power, which created it to deceive and destroy, "that no man might buy or sell save he that had the mark or the name of the beast or the number of his name." The natural gravitation of the anti-Christian elements of society into secret oath-bound organizations is only the mustering of the hosts of darkness for the last great contest between Jesus and his arch foe. But as we rally for the struggle, as the ranks of evil grow stronger and more arrogant, one thought should be enough to nerve the humblest private to deeds of valor—the Captain of our salvation knows us each by name. And when we fall, as fall we must, earth and time may lose the record, but on this day of brightness and bird-songs, and June roses opening their great, royal hearts to the sunshine, I think of the many who have fought the fight before us—brave, true, loyal souls, whose names we do not know, and never will know. What matters it? Every grass-blade that springs on their forgotten mounds, every flower that blooms, or zephyr that breathes above, only whispers the words of our text, "HE CALLETH HIS OWN SHEEP BY NAME."

"MASONIC LIGHT."

We stated some time ago that the Knights of Labor were only popularizing cardinal Masonic principles. "Grand Master" Powderly now affirms the same thing in his defence of the boycott, which he declares to be a long used Masonic weapon. The trouble is, "Masonic Light" as to the terrible power of a secret lodge to injure an opponent, has spread faster than Masonic cunning. The Knights, however, are not wholly inexpert in Masonic cunning. While in the very act of destroying millions of property and threatening thousands of lives, in actual insurrection in three States so that a standing army is required to prevent murder and pillage, the whole blame is saddled on a few score of ranting anarchists. This secret lodge flurry has already cost the country $20,000,000, and probably $100,000,000 will not cover the indirect damages. St. Paul's school, at Concord, N. H., wishes to expend $100,000 in building, but no contractor dares take the job for fear of the boycott. Unless the secret lodge plague is stayed, our country will fast descend to the miserable condition of Turkey and Ireland. "Grand Master" Powderly has indiscreetly announced that when the Knights of Labor are fully organized they will have no need of law. It is still possible that the majority of the American people would as soon be governed by public law enacted by their representatives as by the edicts of a secret lodge. France tried lodge rule until its rivers were red with human blood. The hope of the country is in the awakening of the church to see the peril and avert it. There is not a moment to be lost. The secret lodges are drilling an army, and when this alien force comes in collision with the government, a civil war will ensue. Daniel Webster, the ablest lawyer our country has produced, well said: "Secret lodge oaths should be prohibited by law."

LODGE DECOYS.

The difference between pretense and reality is often hard to tell. To-day, in our country, the counterfeit is gilt with golden truth, and the hypocrites of the Judas stamp associate with the purest and the best in every walk of life, and in every association for benevolent work, and in every church for the promotion of Christianity. We need not wonder, therefore, that as slavery had, so lodgery has its defenders who justify its abhorrent principles by admiration for its avowals of beneficial purposes.

The Cleveland convention of the Knights of Labor furnishes evidence enough that the secret orders are de facto natural alliance against the first principles of the civil and religious liberties enjoyed in these United States—not more united, however, than are the secret orders the world over in general, and in our own favored land in particular.

Hooks are baited to deceive the fish. The bait is good, the fish sees no hook behind it. So with multitudes of men who are influenced by the surface of things without being able to penetrate through them. They know not of the hook until too late. The "Knights of Labor" and the grand titles of other orders, dazzle the eye and win the abject submission of men who would never have dreamed of entering lodgery, had they seen the hook. But alas! being caught, they are thereafter utterly helpless and are ready for the frying pan.

We find good people like Frances E. Willard dancing attendance at Cleveland and paying compliments to Powderly's bait (temperance), and thus tempted to allow their great moral influence in the temperance reformation to be cast into the scales in favor of one of the greatest dangers which lurks like a cancer in the United States. As well might we approve Masonry because some deny the murder of Morgan, as approve of the intoxicating delusions of the orders and titles of lodgery because Powderly has cunningly baited the hooks of the Knights of Labor with temperance, or denies that the murders of the Chicago police by the fostered Socialists is not chargeable to the anti-Christian fundamental character of the very first thing required at the door of every lodge, viz., the oath or promise of concealment of things unknown—the very opposite of the oaths required to promote truth and justice in our civil courts—for such oaths bind one to tell what he knows and not to conceal what another may tell him. Such oaths are surely of those prohibited by Moses and by Christ. T. H.

THE SERMON.

BACCALAUREATE ADDRESS AT WHEATON COLLEGE COMMENCEMENT, JUNE 13TH, 1886, BY PRES. J. BLANCHARD.

Take heed that no man deceive you.—Matt. 24: 4.
For that day shall not come except there be a falling away first.—2 Thess. 2: 3.
Just and true are thy ways, thou King of saints.—Rev. 15: 3.

"A falling away" has preceded every "coming of the Lord." For proof, look at society before Noah and Moses, but especially in the time of Christ, when the only temple of God on earth had become "a den of thieves." And, ever since Christ, the same "falling" has preceded recovery; as in the days of Alfred, Wickliffe, Huss, and Luther. When Luther first met Tetzel, forgiveness was sold in advance for every crime. And, even in our own day and nation, Drs. Thornwell, of South Carolina, and Dr. Palmer, of New Orleans, with other divines, justified slaveholding by the Word of God; and Roger B. Taney, Chief Justice of the United States, sold his own nephews and nieces, children of his brother, along with their mother, by public outcry, from the same block and advertized in the same hand-bills with his hogs, horses and mules. Such was the "falling away" which preceded "the coming of the Lord" for the deliverance of our slaves.

But there is now upon us, a "falling away," as much more fearful than that civil apostacy as the Bible is greater than the Declaration of Independence, or the claims of God superior to the rights of man. It is an incipient general apostacy in religion.

Dr. Thomas of Chicago, who has been thrust from the Methodist Episcopal church, has taught that Moses copied the pattern of "the Ark of the Covenant" found among the tools of Egyptian priests, thus contradicting the Bible account of the origin of that ark. Prof. Swing, of the same city, went out of the Presbyterian church for deriding its old, obsolete ideas, and for loose, Scriptureless teaching; and both have a large following because they omit the ground-doctrine of Christ and the Bible, that men must be born again or be lost.

If these heresies were broached only by a few eratic geniuses, the danger were trivial; but they leaven orthodox denominations. In a late New York Independent, a Methodist Episcopal bishop, Foster, has this bold utterance: "Convince me that there is a God at the head of the Universe who, without fault of theirs, or any chance of escape, will damn the dead, living, and yet to live, millions of heathism, and you make it forever impossible that he should be worshiped by any but devils, and by them only because he becomes their chief." And this same bringing of God and the Bible to the bar of human judgment, is seen in the "Progressive Theology" of Andover, of which Dr. Goodwin, of Chicago, said to the American Board, "It spans the gulf of perdition with a rainbow of hope."

This falling away is Protestant. But tried by its "fruits," Rome is already fallen away. The ignorance and squalor of the masses in Italy, the seat of the miscalled "Holy See;" the popular degradation of Mexico, Spain, south Ireland, and generally of the seat of the Romish beast, whose janizaries run most of our saloons, which in turn produce most of our crimes, and furnish most of our prison population,—these with myriad other facts, prove that if Protestantism is falling, Rome is already "fallen away." Paganism is incapable of falling, because already down; as its millions who do not wear clothes, even, abundantly prove. The predicted "falling away" has no reference to them, but only to Christians looking for the coming of Christ.

SATAN'S TIME SHORT.

There are writers, who, collating our census, seem to prove, in spite of Moody and others who assent that the masses are forsaking the churches, that the per cent of church-membership, since 1799, has gained steadily on our whole population. But this, if true, does not disprove a general falling away of churches which are filled with false doctrines, spurious worships, Sabbath-breaking, neglect of family prayer, and general worldliness. Both these statements may be true. Churches may increase while piety declines. There is a double action always going on, by which society is growing better in one spot and worse in another. Reforms move up stream, while the main current is flowing down. And the tides of reform which shall cover this earth with the knowledge of the Lord as the waters cover the seas, like ocean-tides, have their ebbs as well as flows; but the flows are always gaining on the ebbs, till the tide is full. And, hence, the predicted "falling away" before Christ's coming, though sad and dreary, is no "sign of despair." On the contrary, the universal rally and violence of Satan may only be proving that his time is short.

But what is the meaning of this universal even among good men? Is the Bible grown obsolete? The sum of its teachings are supreme love to God, and equal love to man; and these two all-comprehending precepts are as good for other worlds as for ours. Have men discovered that these two glorious precepts are fallacy and fiction,—incapable, when obeyed, of harmonizing and happifying our race? Has sin ceased to be its own chastiser; or will eternity change the nature of sin from what we see it in time? No, none of these. But the objection of these good men is arithmetical. They object that God should damn so many and save so few. Of the fourteen hundred millions of people on our globe there are, say Bishop Foster and his coadjutors, some one thousand millions who have not had a fair chance for self-recovery from sin. Two hundred and fifty millions do not even wear clothes. And they complain that, according to ideas commonly received from the Bible, this vast majority of our fellow creatures are "going away into everlasting punishment". And for six thousand years back this vast human majority has been pouring into realms where there is not so much alleviation as one drop of water would afford to one "tormented in flame". Bishop Foster and his Andover friends can have no patience with God, if he has permitted such a horrible disproportion of misery to obtain. None but devils could worship him, if he has allowed it. We must have probation after death, that this ghastly majority may be reduced by saving some more heathen.

Now these good men do not claim that none will be lost; or that Paul is mistaken when he describes the heathen as "without natural affection, implacable, unmerciful," or that Peter was unjust to describe the saloonists and dynamiters of his day, as "natural brute beasts, made to be taken and destroyed." They do not deny the universal prevalence of evil; or, that sin breeds a torment worse than "fire and brimstone," because more enduring. And their insisting on the numerical majority of the lost, implies, if it does not assert, that if proportions were changed, if few were lost and many saved, the acts of God in creation and punishment might be borne with, and men, instead of devils, might worship him.

Let us weigh and analyze this argument. The whole scope of the Andover invention of a post-mortem probation, is to increase the number of the saved, by giving those heathen and others a fair chance in eternity, who are supposed not to have had one here. But in this these objectors treat God as we treat a man; excusing him if he makes few mistakes and condemning him if his failures exceed his successes. In this they limit God, and are liable to the rebuke, "Thou thoughtest that I was altogether such an one as thyself."

But, waving this just objection to their doctrine, let us meet it on its own assumption that if only few out of the millions were lost, God would be worthy of our worship; while if myriads fail, he can only be worshiped by demons. Are they sure that a MAJORITY WILL BE LOST.

A majority of our race, for whom Christ suffered, die in infancy, of course sinless, and not liable to punishment. Then, who knows how many heathen are like the centurion, whose faith Christ approved; or like Cornelius, whose prayers were heard; or the Syrophenician, whose daughter Christ healed; or the widow of Sarepta, to whom Elijah was sent. May not these approved classes shift the majority from the lost to the saved? We are ignorant how numbers may foot up at the end of the world. A single century of millennium may out-number ages on ages of sinful population. In our ignorance of the whole matter eternity may bring bring out millions of facts which may change, to us, the whole aspect of God's work. We know too, that God is not the author of sin, but "wickedness proceedeth from the wicked." Then also, there is the Saviour's doctrine of few and many stripes; and that the sins of ignorant millions may be winked at; giving the eternal world a hue, and aspect not conceived of here. So the suffering of the lost may be less than than the pain of a pimple or a gnat. But, waving all these, how can it be certainly known that their arithmetical objection to God for losing a majority of souls, may not on other substantial grounds foot up against the objectors?

There are more than thirty millions of star-worlds within reach of telescopes; and the nebulae and the white track of the milky way, are supposed by astronomers to be light from worlds far beyond, in depths of infinity, which

"Nor glass can reach nor science can define."

We know too, that Christ created these worlds. (Heb. 1: 2.) and is thus "the beginning of the creation of God." (Rev. 3: 14.) and that John saw heaven opened and the inhabitants of that infinitude of worlds mingling with the population of our earth, and joining in the song of Moses and the Lamb. Satan, too, was cast out of these worlds into our afflicted planet, which seems to be the Richmond of his rebellion, and though the angels who did not sin, needed not to be washed by his blood, they were certainly sheltered by his power, when "there was war in heaven;" and they are, in number beyond all human computation to be reckoned among those saved by Christ, though not "redeemed by his blood:" and thus his work, finished on the cross, reaching the farthest star, giving stability to government are eternally barring out future revolt, filled all heaven with the songs which John heard. And these countless myriads, "which no man could number," must be counted and out-counted by the objectors before their argument, based on the transient moral conditions of our earth, where Satan is a god, will stand. And these words known and unknown, unite in declaring God's ways of dealing with sin and sinners on this globe, to be

"JUST AND TRUE."

Let us draw near to these heavenly hosts, and see if we may understand their sentiments, catch their inspiration, and share their approval of God's ways. But we must first pause a little on the terms and teachings of this wonderful Revelation in which these songs and shoutings were heard.

A way is a path, hardened by frequent footfalls. This is the meaning of the Hebrew word derek, translated "way" in the text. But this low, literal sense is not what the word means when applied to God. God is not a man to travel and re-travel till his path is made hard. His ways are everlasting. In his way, the end is included in the beginning, and the beginning in the end; so that he can say with absolute literalness: "I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end, the first and the last." His way of doing things, like his duration, is one eternal now, and this Divine person, who, three times in the Apocalypse, declares himself "beginning and end," is Christ. The book itself is "The Revelation of Jesus Christ," and it is not only revelation; but prophecy as well, "to show to his servants the things which must shortly come to pass." Prof. Moses Stuart, who united sincere piety to vast scripural learning, says: "This book contains the down to the close of time."

In the first chapter, John, in the spirit, "sees Christ "as the sun shineth in his strength;" and heard his voice, "as the sound of many waters." He is the Lion, opening the seals of history; the Lamb in the midst of the throne; the Conquerer whom the armies of heaven follow; and the God whom the hosts of heaven adore. The book itself is a kaleidoscope of propheey, in which the instrument receives twenty-one turns: seven seals opening; seven trumpets sounding; and seven vials poured out. The curtain then rises; the Holy City, the abode of God, descends to earth, and a "great voice out of heaven" proclaims: "The tabernacle of God is with men;" to wipe away earth's tears, and to wind up its history. The fifteenth chapter is a transition chapter between the woe-trumpets and vials; and the text is the shout of those who have gotten the victory over the beast, and over his image; standing on a sea of glass mingled with fire and crying, "Just and true are thy ways, thou king of saints." The ways here so sublimely praised, are God's dire overthrow of "Babylon," the beast and, "his image."

We shall not linger among these stupendous symbols. "It lies," says the learned Stuart, "on the face of the whole book that the theme of the writer is the triumph of Christianity for a long series of years, and its termination in an endless period of glory and happiness." But this march to glory and victory leads us through woes, judgments and commotions; the seals, trumpets and vials. And the same learned writer tells us that: "That the custom of representing fierce, persecuting states and empires by wild beasts was current among the Hebrews long before the time of John." And as the end draws nigh, and the idolatrous beasts grow hateful and unpopular, comes into the arena of this vision, having the power of the beast itself though but a hollow, flitting image of it. Can we find certainly what Babylon, the beasts, and their Image mean?

AN EMPTY, SHADOWY "IMAGE OF THE BEAST"

The Apocalypse has been comparatively a closed book to the church by reason of the endless absurdities of interpretation by those who knew not the difference between symbolie writing and literal. Grotius, a statesman, made the locusts from the smoke of the pit to mean the taking of "certain Gallilean towns." Sir Isaac Newton, a mathematician, finds the numeral letters in the Greek Lateinos for Latin, or the man of Rome, to amount to 666, and thinks they designate the rise of the Popedom; and I have seen a respectable camp meeting preacher, who certainly knew the pond, near Rochester, N. Y., from which issued the "three unclean spirits like frogs," under the sixth seal.

I propose to give no Apocalyptic interpretations of my own; but only that in which the soundest modern writers substantially agree. Scott, Doddridge, Barnes, and above all Stuart, consider Rome "the seven-hilled city" to be the modern Babylon, the seat of the world's idolatries. This the book itself plainly intimates. Rev. 17: 9, 18. No other city was reigning over the "kings of the earth" when John wrote. They agree that the seven-headed beast was Rome pagan, which filled the catacombs under the city, and largely the world outside with martyred dead; and that the second beast, with a lamb's horns, but a dragon's mouth, means Rome papal, the same perscuting power in the lineaments of a lamb. Both beasts were one secret empire, uniting idolatry with cruel despotism.

Then comes the image of the first beast, made not by saints, but promiscuously by them that dwell on the earth, as Masonic and other lodges are now made up. Concerning this Image, Doddridge says: "What the image of the beast is, distinct from the beast himself, I confess I know not." The other writers of his day and precediag him, are equally ignorant and equally confused. If it should turn out that our secret ldoge system of combined despotism and false worship is actually the Image seen by John, Doddridge might well confess that he knew it not, for he was only fifteen years old when the present lodge system sprang up in an obscure tavern in London; though individual lodges united by nothing but their idolatry, in the hands of French popish priests fifty years before Doddridge was born, (1649) restored Popery and the Stuarts to the throne of England (Rebold p. 54). There is now issued from the Wesleyan printing house, in Syracuse, N. Y., written by Rev. Richard Horton, (1871,) a small volume to show that the "Secret Empire" of the lodge is the predicted "Image of the Beast." I took this little book to Prof. Boardman and faculty, of the Theological Seminary of Chicago. After some months, he reported that he had read, and could find no error or flaw of interpretation in it. The arguments in favor of Horton's interpretation and that our Secret Lodge Empire is the image of the Romish beast, are succinctly these:

1. Its universality. The lodge is not local or limited, but extends around the globe, claiming, like Romanism, jurisdiction over mankind.

2. The lodge, too, like the Image, is the child of Popery. Fifty years before the Apple-tree Tavern Lodge, Romish priests in France, by Masonry, restored the Stuarts and Popery to the throne of England. Its popish origin thus identifies the lodge with the Image which was made on motion of the second beast or Popery, by them that dwell on the earth," promiscuously, as the lodges are now. The lodge surely seems to be that Image. Rev. 13: 14.

3. The lodge, too, like that Image, is murderous, causing those who reject its worship to be killed (Rev. 13: 15): as many have been, and would be now, if they would not lose more than gain by it.

4. Like Rome, it promises salvation by its ceremonies.

5. Like Popery, the lodge denies the right of private judgment. Even Mr. Powderly's lamb-like lodge, requires absolute "secrecy" and "obedience."

6. Demanding the expulsion of non-Union laborers, proves the lodge to be the Image which causes that none might buy or sell who had not his mark. Rev. 13: 17.

7. The lodge offers itself as a Saviour, or substitute for Christ, as does the Beast-image; thus proving them one. The Holy Catholic church is not Popery. The church admits, teaches, and worships Christ. Popery is pope-worship. It regenerates a man by baptism, sanctifies him by priestly absolution, and sends him to heaven by extreme unction, or saying masses for his soul. But there was neither pope nor beast nor Image till the Holy Catholic church had stood for centuries. And when the Beast and his marked worshipers shall be "both cast alive into the lake of fire, burning with brimstone," whatever that fearful fate may be, it was the opinion of my venerable teacher, Dr. Lyman Beecher, that the Holy Catholic church would survive, and, rescued and restored from the foul idolatries of beasts and Beast-image, join the ransomed in the song of Moses and the Lamb.

Thus I have given the interpretation of these symbols in which the best, most learned, and holiest men in Europe and America have agreed, down to

Mr. Horton; from whose book the Congregational Seminary of Chicago does not dissent. And if this galaxy of piety and learning are not mistaken, Rome is modern Babylon, and her image is the lodge; and seals, and trumpets, and vials, open, proclaim and pour out the wrath of God on these human substitutes for the religion of Christ, and those who have gotten the victory over the Beast and his image shout, "Just and true are thy ways, thou King of saints." But even if the learning and piety of Europe and America should have mistaken the meaning of these symbols, still this whole book of Revelation is a deluge of God's wrath on sin and sinners, and glorified saints proclaim his vengeance "just and true."

This Revelation is future history pictured by cartoons and tableaux; as illustrated papers picture events already past; with this difference, that the Apocalypse pictures the fate of the church and the whole world instead of particular events, personal or national. As Prof. Stuart has it, "It paints the fate and fortune of the church down to the close of time."

I present these themes as provocatives to thought. Certain it is that this dark and dreadful system challenges recognition as a government, claims to control our commerce, is disintegrating our churches, murdering our citizens, blowing up our buildings, endangering the governments of America and Europe, sheltering liquor and so crime, and substituting assassination for reform. But let us return to the book.

Bishop Foster and the Andover Progressives object that God should punish hosts of idolaters. But this whole book from the first seal to the last vial is a continuous panorama of God's wrath. The sixth seal opens with the white horse and his conquering Rider with his bow and crown; followed by a train of horrors, ending in the horror of all horrors, "the wrath of the Lamb." Then, after a brief silence in heaven, the woe-trumpets sound, and again horror follows horror, each more dreadful than the last, till the whole moving tableaux ends suddenly in—"The kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord." And yet this joyous proclamation is followed with seven vials poured out, in reading which one is astonished at the power of our language to depict such scenes of terror.

Yet even after this we are told that the rest of the men, not killed by these plagues, repented not of their worship of devils and idols, their murders, sorceries and thefts. Rev. 9: 20, 21.

Our object is not to copy the book, but to show that the mock-mercy of religious skeptics objects to the very "ways" of God which saints in heaven laud, viz., his punishing the sins of men,

ESPECIALLY THE MOTHER-SIN—IDOLATRY.

If one objects that the language of this book is tableaux, cartoon and pantomime, and therefore may exaggerate, let him remember that Christ's literal language in Matthew is equally terrific. And yet, walking through the scenes of this book till the brain reels and the heart stands still at its terrors, we hear the inhabitants of heaven burst out, "Just and true are thy ways, Lord God Almighty!"

So Lincoln stood on the piazza at Washington when crape hung at almost every door-knob in the land, and fields of battle from Vicksburg to where he then stood had rocked and reeled till their thunders and groans had died to echoes and grown still, and proclaimed to the thousands there gathered: "If God wills that all the wealth, piled by the bondsman's two hundred and fifty years of unrequited toil, shall be sunk, and every drop of blood drawn with the lash shall be paid by another drawn with the sword, as was said three thousand years ago so it still must be said, 'The judgments of the Lord are true and righteous altogether.'" And all who had prayed and toiled and suffered for the salvation of the country and the overthrow of slavery said, "Amen."

But the mock-vindicators of God, who invent post-mortem apologies for his justice and sell his truth for the world's favor, these men never meddle with reforms till they become popular, or are sure soon to become so. They allow national evils to grow till they call down divine vengeance; and so they bring on men the very punishments, in time, which they seek to disprove in eternity, as contrary to the nature of God. That same progressive Andover, fifty years ago, when war might have been averted, implored us to be silent concerning slavery; and its faculty have since refused an eloquent young man, endorsed by some of the noblest men in Massachusetts, leave to address their students against the lodge whose halls were the secret council-chambers of the rebellion: and thus, by their not doings, helped hang our heavens with crape. Herr Most and his atheists keep saloons, breed vice and crime, and then assassinate rulers who seek to maintain order by suppressing crime. But these reasoners allow slavery and the lodge to make earth a hell, and then if God allows evil to pursue sinners hereafter as he does here, during voluntary continuance in sin, they tell us none but devils can worship him. They hold God answerable for the violation of his his own benign laws; sit in judgment on the Almighty;

> "Snatch from his hand the balance and the rod;
> Rejudge his justice, be the god of God."

But though we cannot make and govern worlds, nor wisely censure those already made, reason, religion, experience, and this marvelous book of Revelation teach us that God is good, and his ways just and righteous, even in his "strange work" of punishing sin. This wonderful book is a series of tableaux, or plates in the war against idolatry, down to the final gathering of Gog and Magog in the battle-day of God. No human mind can conceive, or uninspired words utter, the terribleness of what men are here described as suffering from the wrath of God against what seems to some men the little harmless hocus pocus of idolatry. The first woe-trumpet brings "hail and fire mingled with blood." The second sounds, "and a third part of the sea becomes blood." The third, and a "third part of the waters become wormwood and many men die of the waters." The fourth, and an angel flies through mid-heaven, saying, "Woe! woe! woe! to the inhabitants of the earth, by reason of the other voices of the three angels yet to sound." Such are the trumpet-scenes. And the seals and vials are but the first and third acts in this inconceivably horrible drama. Does any one say these are but pictures after all? So they are; but pictures never reach the realities of battle-fields. Yet, gazing on these terrific realities, angels and martyrs glorified exclaim, "Alleluia: just and true are thy ways."

But one seriously demands, Why such an ado? What is the matter with a little by-play of idolatry? The matter is this: from kissing one's hand to the moon, in the days of the Patriarch Job, to sun-worship by solemn cir-cumambulation in a Masonic lodge every act of idolatry, however contemptible, is an expedient to un-God our globe, by getting rid of Christ. It is following that archangel, fallen, who refused to worship him. And every little contrivance or idol-shrine, is a fort in that war once waged in heaven. This—this is the matter! To dispense with Christ is to leave our ruined race with no Mediator by whom to reach God and heaven. The sins of men are numberless: idolatry is one.

"But how can we worship a God of vengeance?" I answer, How could Lincoln worship him? He saw through the smoke and roar and shrieks and agonies of battle, the piled up fetters, smiling fields, and restored order of happy millions. He heard through the din the songs of mothers blending with the sweet prattle of their children, the Union preserved, and the majesty of law restored, "whose seat is the bosom of God, and her voice the harmony of the world." And, holding the hand of a dead soldier in his, and looking out over the fresh graves of half a million more, he calmly lifted up his voice and cried, "The judgments of the Lord are true, and righteous altogether."

"Oh, yes," cries another, "the justice of the Lord may be very fine for the saved; but how about the lost?"

I answer, How about Herr Most and his atheists? They have chosen their way and mean to keep it: and it would seem that, to change them, God must annihilate them and begin anew. Surely it would be no mercy to drag them, against their wills, into one of Mr. Moody's meetings. Nor will it do to take the ground that there is no evil. He who complains that there are any atheists, must settle that matter with God.

No! Lincoln and the Apocalypse are right. God's ways are right, even when he punishes sin. And as to the duration of that punishment, without repentance, it must continue till right and wrong change nature.

If one asks, "How can we enjoy heaven while the lost are outside?" I answer: How can we enjoy our Union with some unreconstructed rebels down South? How can we enjoy life and health while others are in the agonies of death? Or how can we honor our neighbor, Judge Drummond, if he should imprison murderers for life? Justice! Justice!! Justice!!! is the glory of God and the good of men. Then look! See how this Revelation comes out.

The union of the universe preserved; rebellion forever ruled out; no need of rebellion because no wrong; the beasts and their image and all who worship them, shut away in their own chosen lodge, where Christ is not worshipped, but Satan is; heaven opened revealing the white horse and his conquering Rider; and, through the opened portals, all worlds locking arms, "And God wiping away all tears from their eyes." "And there shall be no more death; neither sorrow nor crying;" neither shall there be any more pain for that myriads upon myriads in the infinitude of those worlds from which the Dragon was originally cast out!—all this John describes in this exalted language: "And I heard, as it were, the voice of a great multitude, as the voice of many waters; and as the voice of mighty thunderings, saying: Alleluia, for the Lord God omnipotent reigneth. Let us be glad and rejoice, and give honor to him; for the marriage of the Lamb is come, and his wife hath made herself ready. And there shall be no more curse; and the throne of God and of the Lamb shall be in it; and his servants shall serve him: and his name shall be in their foreheads; and there shall be no night there; and they need no candle, neither light of the sun, for the Lord God giveth them light, and they shall reign forever and ever. And he said unto me, these sayings are FAITHFUL and TRUE.

Now let any thoughtful person walk through this picture gallery of events, and ask himself, If these are but pictures, what must the realities be! The union of worlds preserved, the peace of eternity assured, and the record of sin and suffering barring out secession, rebellion, and revolt. And let this thoughtful person pause at the end of this glowing Apocalyptic corridor, and gaze on this group of glory, beauty, and bliss, and then say whether there needs to be some post-mortem Protestant purgatory, to withdraw from their own chosen place, the "despisers" who "behold, and wonder, and perish" in order to give them a chance for salvation in eternity, which they scoffed at and rejected in time!—and this, to exculpate God for punishing sin, which we daily see and know that he does and will do!

AMMRICAN PARTY CONFERENCE.

Conference of members of the American party met at 221 W. Madison street, at 10:20 A. M. E. D. Bailey chosen as chairman; E. R. Worrell, secretary.

Opening prayer by M. A. Gault. Remarks were made by E. D. Bailey, mentioning the forces of evil that are dangerous to the American Republic, and pointing out the necessity of an expression of opinion by members assembled as to methods to be pursued by in destroying these evils. Song, "Good Time Coming," by Geo. W. Clark.

It was voted that the chair appoint a committee on resolutions: J. Blanchard, J. L. Barlow, C. C. Foote, C. B. Knight, M. A. Gault, were appointed.

It was also voted that the chair appoint a committee on nominations: E. A. Cook, H. H. Hinman, S. A. Pratt, were appointed.

It was voted to hear a paper prepared by Pres. J. Blanchard, which was read and referred to the committee on resolutions.

It was voted to spend a little time in free conference. Speeches were made by M. N. Butler, of Missouri; Rev. H. H. Hinman; Elder Lyman, Arcade, N. Y.; Elder J. L. Barlow, Wheaton, Ill.; President L. N. Stratton, D. D., Wheaton, Ill.; E. R. Worrell, Greenwood, Ill.; C. B. Knight, Worcester, Mass., J. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.; C. C. Foote, Detroit, Mich.; Rev. M. A. Gault, Blanchard, Ia.; W. J. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.; Ezra A. Cook, Chicago, Ill.; John Dorcas; E. D. Bailey, Washington, D. C.; Geo. W. Clark, Detroit, Mich.; Elder J. R. Smith, Marysville, Mo.

Voted to adjourn to meet at 2:15 P. M., after song by Geo. W. Clark and benediction (12:30 P. M).

Conference of American party met after recess, 2:15 P. M.

National Committee.—F. F. French, Vermont; J. S. Rice, Maine; F. W. Capwell, New York; N. Callender, Pennsylvania; L. N. Stratton, Illinois; Jesse Ward, Alabama; R. N. Countee, Tennessee; Chas. Paget, Arkansas; J. F. Galloway, Florida; M. R. Britten, Wisconsin; E. G. Paine, Minnesota; A. F. Dempsey, Dakota; H. Curtis, Kansas; E. B. Graham, Nebraska; E. Tapley, Mississippi; E. D. Bailey, District of Columbia; J. M. Scott, Ohio; Israel Hess, Indiana; S. C. Kimball, New Hampshire; S. A. Pratt, Massachusetts, P. Bacon, Connecticut; A. M. Paull, Rhode Island; G. W. Needels, Missouri; H. A. Day, Michigan; J. N. Norris, Iowa; Robert Armstrong, New Jersey.

Executive Committee.—F. W. Capwell, chairman; E. D. Bailey, secretary; J. A. Conant, E. G. Paine, Geo. W. Needels, E. A. Cook, Jerome Howe, L. N. Stratton, M. N. Butler were reported by the nominating committee.

The resignation of E. D. Bailey as secretary of the executive committee of the American party was tendered. Voted nay.

As the stars in their courses fought against Sisera, so he who "guides Arcturus and his sons" seems to be fighting against those gods whom the hosts of Sisera worshiped; therefore,

Resolved: 1. That the American party stands on a high vantage ground, by the action of the idolatrous and dissolute secret labor unions.

2. That as we now have two years before the next Presidential election, we must not be caught in a dilemma. We must vote in 1888 for no candidate but one of our own nominating,—one who will not only say to us in private that he "stands on every plank of our platform," but who will stand on it and stump for it.

3. That we give special prominence to the prohibition plank of our platform, and hold ourselves ready to blend and co-operate with all Prohibitionists who are clean of the lodge; but we can never co-operate with the Prohibition party while any of its recognized leaders are bound by secret lodge-oaths to distillers, brewers, and saloonists; such oaths being stronger than their prohibition professions.

4. That in the absence of the chairman of our National American Committee, it is neither wise nor courteous to nominate a federal ticket at this time; especially since we have provided for a National Congress of Christians soon to meet in this city. Our National Nominating Convention should follow, not precede, our said Congress.

5. That we create a sub-committe, auxiliary to the National Executive Committee, to co-operate with them and act under their advice; which sub-committee shall hold frequent meetings for consultation and correspondence, to prepare the way for a National Nominating Convention as early as June, 1887, and unite with the National Executive Committee in calling such a convention when all shall agree.

6. What we now suggest is, if God shall send some colored man fit to bear our colors and speak for our principles, that we are in favor of placing him on our ticket as candidate for Vice President, thus placing the first ticket for a white nation with colored blood on it, before our country.

Resolved, That we favor the submission of the question of Constitutional Prohibition of the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors as a beverage, and the fact that seventeen State Legislatures have refused to let the people express their convictions on this question, calls for our most earnest remonstrance.

SUB-COMMITTEES.

L. N. Stratton, J. L. Barlow, C. F. Hawley, H. H. Hinman, H. A. Fischer, E. A. Cook, J. Blanchard, C. A. Blanchard, T. H. Gault.

—Mrs. Mary B. Willard, editor of the Union Signal, and Mrs. L. A. Hagans, of Elmhurst, Ill., during their summer journeyings on the continent will attend the German temperance conference to be held in Hamburg, and also the German Methodist conference at Zurich, which will be presided over by Bishop Foss of the United States. Mrs. Willard expects to present the World's W. C. T. U. at this meeting, and in this way will reach a large number of the ministers of Germany and urge them to come out and work to save the Faderland from the curse of intemperance.

REFORM NEWS.

BRO. HAWLEY AS A HARVESTER.

A JUBILEE FOR OUR SUBSCRIPTION LIST.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—Soon after my labors at Geneva Lake, I returned to Illinois and spent the Sabbath at Aurora, and spoke in the Free Methodist church. I was obliged to decline the invitation of the pastor of the Baptist church, to occupy his pulpit, as I had already accepted the invitation of the Free Methodist pastor. After some private labor, I returned to Wheaton, and was requested, by Secretary Stoddard, to go to Moline and attend the annual meeting of the Illinois State Association of the Congregational churches, and convey to them a circular letter, prepared by a committee of the Illinois Christian Association, discussing secret societies from the stand point of the labor troubles.

I distributed tract literature in Rock Island and Moline; and, by invitation of the pastor, preached in the Congregational church of Moline, where the State Association met, the evening of the following Sabbath.

I then went to Orion, and called upon pastor Orlander, of the Swedish Lutheran church. I found him in hearty sympathy with our reform work. He subscribed for the Cynosure and introduced me to one of his leading men, who lives in the country, on the road to Andover. I went home with him and spent the night, and he, also, subscribed for the Cynosure.

From his place I went to Andover and called upon Rev. E. Carlson, who is President of the Augustana Synod of the Swedish Lutheran church. He expressed his sympathy with our reform work and subscribed for the Cynosure. I then returned to Orion, taking subscribers by the way, securing eleven in all, while giving private lectures and distributing tracts.

I then went to New Windsor where I distributed tracts, and conversed with the people, and took five subscribers to the Cynosure, one of whom, however, was a Viola man whom I met on the street.

From New Windsor I went five miles into the country, to spend the Sabbath, and by invitation of Rev. O. C. Bedford, pastor of the Wesleyan Methodist Hopewell church, I preached to his people Sabbath morning, and went with him to his home near Viola. In his neighborhood I took four subscriptions to the Cynosure.

I went into the village of Viola, and had an interew with the pastor of the United Presbyterian, and also of the Presbyterian church, and got nine more subscribers. From Viola I went to Aledo where I gave private lectures, and distributed tracts, and took five subscriptions.

From Aledo I went to Woodhull, and while distributing tracts and conversing with the people, got five subscribers more. Wyanet was the next point, and while laboring in that vicinity, I took six subscriptions to the Cynosure; one of whom, however, Elder Wm. Pinckney, the president of the Illinois Conference of the Wesleyan churches, receives his paper at Princeton. From Wyanet I came on to Aurora, distributing tracts upon the cars, and in the city of Aurora, while waiting for a train. I arrived at Wheaton on Saturday night before the Wheaton Commencement week, and the week of the meetings of the N. C. A. in Chicago.

Many items that might be of interest to some, must be omitted from this report. One adhering Freemason subscribed for the Cynosure. He was determined to take more degrees in Masonry he said, but he would like to read a little on the other side. After taking his subscription, I called his attention to the advertisement of "Freemasonry Illustrated," and told him that if he would prefer to look before he leaped he would find Masonry correctly revealed in that and other works.

Dr. Roy's speech on the labor question, the last evening of the State Association, was good. He spoke of the secret labor associations as a development of the invisible empire of secrecy, destructive alike to civil government, and to individual liberty.

In my own heart, the conviction is deepening that God will work with us, to pull down those strongholds of Satan, the saloon and the lodge. The church will not always shelter the lodge, through which Satan is working to divorce men from Christ and from civil government. And the state will not always license the saloon that breeds disorder and crime. Satan may blind the minds of the voters, and for a time continue the license system; and he may continue for a season to deceive the very elect, and secure for the organized infidelity of the lodge the indorsement of large portions of the visible church. But Christ is working by his Spirit and providence, to give power to the truth. It must prevail! The saloon and lodge MUST GO! The church will cease to shelter the lodge; the state will cease to shelter the saloon; and public sentiment will demand that these schools of infidelity and despotism, of immorality and crime, shall be closed forever.

Yours, in the faith and love of Jesus.

C. F. HAWLEY.

N. C. A. BOARD MEETING.

The first business meeting of the new Board of Directors met last Wednesday afternoon. There were present: T. H. Gault, J. E. Roy, J. L. Barlow, C. A. Blanchard, E. R. Worrell, John Gardner, H. A. Fischer. After prayer, Dr. Roy was elected chairman.

Secretary Stoddard reported the expenses of the annual meeting as $120.15; the receipts $84.20.

The salaries of the officers of the Association and directors of the Cynosure were continued as last year. It was voted concerning the annual convention in the South, to instruct the General Agent to make inquiries and recommend a place for the anniversary, and that Pres. E. H. Fairchild, of Berea, Ky., Prof. H. Woodsmall, of Memphis, Tenn., Pres. J. S. McCullough, of Knoxville Tenn., Revs. B. A. Imes and R. N. Countee, of Memphis, be a committee to assist in securing a place of meeting and making arrangements. Several speakers were also suggested. It was voted that the following be a committee to secure entertainment for the conference of Christians, proposed to be held in Chicago: J. Blanchard, J. M. Hitchcock, A. J. Bailey, F. Britten, T. H. Gault, Mrs. E. A. Cook, Mrs. M. C. Baker, J. B. Blank, Rev. L. G. Abrahamson.

This committee was empowered to add to their number one member from each church in the city.

In accordance with the recommendation of the annual meeting, H. H. Hinman was engaged for the year to work in the South and gather statistics.

The discussion of agents was taken up. It was urged that an agent to look after the State work and push it forward to the utmost, was needed in addition to the work devolving on the General Secretary. It was voted that the sum of $25 per month in new Cynosure subscriptions be given by the N. C. A. to every State association which is employing a State agent and doing an effective work. It was also voted that a committee be appointed to inquire and recommend a special agent for the field work, and J. P. Stoddard, J. L. Barlow and H. A. Fischer were appointed to report such a man if possible.

ANTI-SLAVERY HISTORY: DECORATION DAYS.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—I wish to thank you for your notice of my "Anti-slavery History in State and Nation." Such intelligent appreciation encourages the hope for its usefulness in the present and future, for which alone it was written. In Hebrew history the people were charged with disregarding the terrible lessons of penal justice sent to warn and save them, and this compelled their national destruction. Is not history now "repeating itself?" Where has the first warning been heard from our late fields of blood?

You question, and with good reason, the continuance of our decoration celebrations if they are kept within the narrow, unintelligent limits of the past. It is right to heap flowers on the graves of those who gave their lives for their country in the war; but what caused the war? What brought our country into that necessity? No finite being can affirm which was the more guilty party, the North or the South. Let this true history be studied and materials enough will soon be found to make such occasions the most priceless in our public life. It would inspire anew the old Fourth of July, and bring back again the vital principles of our nation's life to the heads and hearts of the people, the consequences of their betrayal, and the tremendous responsibility of individual American citizenship. Both Christian discipleship and citizenship were laid on Baal's altar of political partyism, the machine of office-seekers, and this filled those soldier's graves. Here is but one of the lessons of that history. Let it be read and weighed, and its terrible lessons presented on those occasions, and instead of fostering sectional hostility they would tend to bring both sections together in deep regret for the past, and united fidelity to duty in the future. Will not thought furnish citizens aid in making the awful lessons of the past the warning and safety of our country's future?

You speak of some omissions in my history, respecting work done for the cause of freedom by President Blanchard, and Freemasonry. It was not my object to write Masonic history; and the hardest of the work was to leave out so much valuable matter as our plan required, and still present a clear outline of the great contest against slavery. The excellent work he did is several times noticed, but I regret that more was not recorded; and should another edition be demanded, it will be. I was thorougly opposed to Masonry, but was not aware of all the facts stated in its relation to slavery. History should preserve the warning. It is cheering to see that this "Anti-slavery History" is going into Sabbath-schools as "just the book for our boys to read."

LETTERS TO THE ANNUAL MEETING.

POLITICAL NOMINATIONS QUICK AND STRONG.

We, that is, Bro. Wilson, T. B. Wilson, wife and myself, have consulted somewhat upon the matter of nominations, and we are all agreed that nominations should be made, and the campaign ball set rolling at the earliest possible day, and the subject kept before the people till the election. The more we reflect upon President Blanchard's suggestion in last week's Cynosure in reference to Bro. Woodsmall, the more we are pleased with the idea, if there is a reasonable hope that his labors in the South would result in turning the colored people away from the lodges, thus throwing the balance of power upon the right side.

We shall hope and earnestly pray that the wisdom necessary to the great occasion may rest upon the convention, directing harmoniously to the right conclusions. Mr. Pomeroy doubtless will acquiesce in whatever best promises to bring about the triumph of righteousness in the land, and "bide his time." REV. W. W. AMES.

Menomonie, Wis.

THE TIME TO TO STRIKE IS—NOW.

I must deny myself the pleasure and profit of meeting with you, but my heart and sympathies are with you and my prayers will ascend to the eternal throne in unison with yours, on behalf of the same great cause. The times in which we live, as it seems to me, are calling us to greater earnestness and effort in the cause, for the promotion of which you meet together. The spirit of anarchy and lawlessness which prevails to such an alarming extent, and which is shaking the very foundations of the social fabric finds its inception and inspiration in the dark and idolatrous kingdom of secretism. Without secretism this spirit would be powerless. Hence, now is our opportunity to make men see, if they will at all see, the evil and danger involved in the principle of secretism. WM. WISHART, D. D.,

Monmouth, Ill.

When it comes it will surprise alike both friends and foes. REV. D. MCFALL.

DOWN WITH SECRET CONSPIRACY.

I am still in sympathy with the work of the organization, voting, however, the Prohibition ticket. The events of the last few weeks demonstrates the necessity of an organization opposed to secret societies, and that men bound together by the bonds of oaths and penalties may and do conspire against the rights and liberties of their fellow citizens. The question naturally arises, how can these be most successfully met and combatted? I see no better way, or one which gives promise of better results, than to pour the light of the Gospel and of an enlightened public opinion on their principles and practice. The political press will do nothing for fear of driving away votes from their respective parties, and it only remains for those who have convictions on the subject to stand by them. I read the Cynosure with much interest, and am desirous of promoting its interest as far as I can. C. QUICK.

Weston, Mich.

MAKE HASTE SLOWLY.

I do not favor nominating candidates at the present time, for several reasons,—the most weighty of which to me is, Public sentiment is fast uudergoing a change on all reform questions. And who knows of the "Freemonts" and "Lincolns" God may bring to the front in the next two years, from the now conservative portion of our best men? We had better, it seems to me, make haste slowly, and continue in prayer, and labor the next eighteen months, than repeat the mistake of four years ago.

I was sorry to see in the Voice the semi-endorsement of the Knights of Labor by the leading members of the W. C. T. U. in a letter sent to their convention assembled, if I remember correctly, at Cleveland.

I also notice with regret that several organs of the Prohibition party are throwing "sops" to the Knights of Labor. J. A. CONANT.

Willimantic, Conn.

IT COMES TO STAY.

The cause of Anti-masonry is making some progress in this part of our field of labor. It is not, however, progressing as rapidly as could be desired; but one consolatory thought is this, when Anti-masonry once finds entrance into the human heart, like the grace of God, it comes to stay. I have an unwavering faith in the final triumph of the Anti-masonic movement; though I believe we have much labor to do, and many sacrifices to make, and great sufferings to bear, before we see the day of triumph.

With great humility I beg leave to add a word of counsel. I am apposed to any great haste in the choice of candidates for President and Vice President. Our past experience that way should be a sufficient warning. J. W. MOSS.

Cameron, W. Va.

MEMBER FOR LIFE.

I cannot attend the meeting of the Association on account of age and infirmities. I am eighty-four years old. I attended the convention at Syracuse and joined the Association in 1874, and have never voted otherwise since. Sometimes I have been alone in my town and sometimes not. Last year, and the year before, we had six votes in this town; this spring I stood alone.

There is a strong Advent and Seventh Day element in this town who ought to be Prohibitionists but are not. They claim to believe that if the Prohibitionists should get into power they would pass Sunday laws, etc. Therefore they go against them as they think, in self defense.

I do not know how long a name should be kept on the roll, but I wish to keep mine thereon as long as I live; and I enclose herein $1 for the use of the Association to be used where it will do the most good. HIRAM PRESTON.

FRONTIER LABORS.

GREY EAGLE, Minn., June 8, 1886.

DEAR CYNOSURE.—Our presiding elder having urged me to be present at the United Brethren camp meeting to be held near Browerville, Todd county, Minn., I arranged to attend, and leaving Twin Brooks, Dak., I drove over a beautiful prairie country a distance of over 120 miles. I arrived at Grey Eagle, Todd county, Minn., where I wished to visit friends and do some work for the Lord. Saturday evening, I listened to a grand sermon by Bro. Frank Childs, (of the Free Methodist church) of Alexandria, in which he manifested his determination to declare all the counsel of God. On Sabbath I was invited to occupy the pulpit in the new U. B. church, and while there before that people, I was struck with the appearance of a large number of G. A. R. badges, and only made too sad by a knowledge of the fact that a large per cent of these G. A. R. men are members of the U. B. church. But I had a good opportunity to strike the lodge a blow, which called out loud "amens" from the pastor, Bro. I. N. English, who, while an anti-secretist, has been unable to purge the church of the lodge. He has conversed with me freely upon the "commission" business of General Conference of '85, and declared himself on the Lord's side, and says he will aid me in the coming annual conference, to set before that body the Commission in a better light. So far, he is the only member of this conference who stands with me, unless one or two others whom I have not yet seen prove to be loyal. I am distributing anti-secrecy tracts, and using my influence to open the eyes of the blind.

Last winter, during a grand revival here at Grey Eagle, one Odd-fellow was prostrated before the altar, and after a time, he cried out, "Lord, I give it up! I give it all up!" "What do you give up, brother?" said Bro. English. "The lodge!" answered the Odd-fellow, and he has kept his word.

I am urged to return from camp meeting (to which I go to-day) and deliver a discourse upon "secret organizations," and I will so arrange, D. V., to wake up the people. C. E. WALKER.

BIBLE LESSON.

STUDIES IN THE WRITINGS OF JOHN.

LESSON II, July 11, 1886.—Jesus the Good Shepherd.—John 10:1-18.

GOLDEN TEXT.—I am the good shepherd: the good shepherd giveth his life for the sheep.—John 10:11.

[Open the Bible and read the lesson.]

COMMENTS ON THE LESSON BY E. E. FLAGG.

1. The test of false teachers. vs. 1–5. If John could say a few years after Christ's ascension, "Even now are there many false prophets gone out into the world," much more is it true after the lapse of eighteen centuries. Every age has had its various forms of false teaching, more or less mischievous, and in none have they been so many, so subtle, and so dangerous as in our own. Let none be deceived who bear in mind this simple test: Only they who enter in by the Door are true teachers. Freemasonry by its persistent ignoring and contemptuous rejection of the one name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved, proves itself a false religion. It seeks to climb up some other way than through Christ.

"And when he putteth forth his own sheep he goeth before them,"—not simply to lead the way, but as guardian and defender. There can be no sorrow, no trial, no temptation befall us, but Jesus goes before. And it is thus in a fainter degree with all true shepherds of souls. When London was stricken by the plague, the banished non-conformist ministers came back and, fearless of contagion, preached and prayed, and comforted the dying, while "the hireling shepherds" appointed by court patronage, fled in terror from their smitten congregations. But Christ's true sheep will not follow strangers. There is a divine instinct within them which answers only to the Shepherd's voice. There is that in the humblest true teacher which no wolf in sheep's clothing can counterfeit, however gifted with eloquence or learning.

2. The door of the sheep. vs. 6–18. Christ alone is the true Door. All systems of salvation which open a false door to men, do it by ignoring and excluding him. This is eminently true of the universal religion of Masonry, which recites the same burial service over the ungodly and immoral as over the Christian; promises to the candidate, light, knowledge, regeneration and heaven at last; and so blinds men by its falsehoods that, though the Door always stands open, they grope in vain to find it. Hirelings leave the sheep to the wolves. The good Shepherd giveth his life for the sheep. The Socialistic leaders, who are working so much mischief with the laboring class, never court posts of danger. They may plan, but the execution, the most dangerous part, they leave to their tools. It will be a sad day for the masses of laboring men when they turn aside to follow such false teachers. "And other sheep I have which are not of this fold." Here we have a bright glimpse of the oneness of the church universal; of that time when all barriers of sect and creed shall melt away, and there will be in truth but one fold as there is but one Shepherd.

LIGHT FROM THE WORD.

How did the prophets allude to Christ as a Shepherd? Is. 40:11; Ez. 34:12, 23; 37:24. How to hireling shepherd? Ez. 34:2-6; Zech. 11: 16, 17.

From Peloubet's Notes.

A sheepfold in the East is not a covered building like our stables, but a mere enclosure surrounded by a wall of loose stone with thorn bushes upon the top, or a palisade, and is usually an effective barrier against wolves. The door consists of a few sticks laid across the entrance, and here the shepherd and his dogs watch all night.—Van Lennep. The sheep are brought into it in the evening, several flocks being generally assembled within it. The shepherds, after committing them to the care of a common keeper, the porter, who is charged with their safe keeping during the night, retire to their homes. In the morning they return, and knock at the closely-barred door of the enclosure, which the porter opens. They then separate each his own sheep, by calling them; and after having thus collected their flocks, lead them to the pastures.—Godet.

The door was the appointment of God, the consecration to God's service, a character fitting for that service, preparation by the knowledge of the truth, by spiritual experience, by the presence of God, to enable the disciples to shepherd the sheep. Later the figure is changed, and Christ himself is represented as the door, all the above being found in him.

"But climbeth up some other way." So as not to be seen by those who have the care of the sheep. Therefore they climb secretly over the wall, in order to steal the sheep from the fold. Thieves sometimes climb up the wall and push aside the bushes, and sheep-stealing is as much a profession in Turkey, as horse-thieving is in some other countries.—Van Lennep. These are they who enter the ministry, or become teachers and leaders of religion, from selfish motives, without entire consecration to God, without entire devotion to the good of men, simply to gain honor, or money, or a living, or an easy life.

"To him the porter (the doorkeeper of the fold) openeth." "The Holy Spirit is especially he who opens the door to the shepherds; see frequent uses of this symbolism by the apostles (Acts 14:27; 1 Cor. 16:9; 2 Cor. 2:12; Col. 4.3); and instances of the porter shutting the door" (Acts 16:6,7).—Alford.

"By name." It is a remarkable fact in oriental husbandry, that in a flock of hundreds or thousands each individual sheep has its name, knows it, and is known by it.—Cowles Jesus takes a living, personal, peculiar interest in each redeemed soul; bending over it continually with infinite tenderness, watching each doubt, each fear, each trial, each temptation, each fall, each rising again, each conflict, each victory, each defeat, watching each and all with a solicitude as special and particular as if it were upon it that the exclusive regards of his loving heart were fixed. No vague, indefinite, indiscriminate superintendence is that which the great good Shepherd still exercises over his flock, but a care that particularizes each separate member of it, and descends to the minutest incidents of their history.—Hanna

"He goeth before them." He is a perfect example of what he would have us to be; he lays no burden upon us that he does not bear himself; he has gone before us through the gates of death, to lead the way to heaven.

"All that ever came before me are thieves and robbers." The meaning of the words must extend much farther, and must embrace all who had sought to turn the people from waiting for the promise which God had given, or had substituted other principles of national life for the hope of the Messiah. Such had long been the practical effect of the ruling and teaching of Pharisees and Sadducees. They are certainly, perhaps mainly, thought of here.—Schaff.

"But the sheep did not hear them." The true people of God did not go after these false Messiahs, nor obey the false teachings of the Pharisees. The true people still hoped for the Messiah as promised, and looked for spiritual redemption, and did not join in the selfish policy of the Pharisees. They saw in Jesus the marks of the true Messiah.

"I am the good shepherd." Not simply "a" but "the good shepherd" foretold in the Scriptures (see Ps. 23; Isa. 40:11; Ezek. 34:11-23; 37:24; Zech. 13:7; compare also Heb. 13:20, 1 Pet. 2:25; 5:4).—G. W. Clark. The word translated "good" cannot be adequately translated; it means "beautiful, noble, good, as opposed to "foul, mean, wicked." It sums up the chief attributes of ideal perfection. Christ is the perfect shepherd, as opposed to his own imperfect ministers; he is the true shepherd, as opposed to false shepherds.—Cambridge Bible.

"The wolf catcheth them, and scattereth the sheep." Any and every wilful and determined opponent to truth and righteousness is a wolf. The wolf at this particular juncture was the Pharisaic party, which was ravaging the church of God, and binding heavy burdens on the people.—Abbott. Those who do not receive Christ as the only way of salvation, who do not preach Christ as the only hope of men, who stand between Christ and the sinner, or who otherwise block up the entrance through which alone both shepherd and sheep must get into the fold, they are the thieves, who would steal the flock; hirelings, who care not for the flock; wolves, who devour the flock.—Jacobus.

"And other sheep I have, which are not of this fold." The Gentiles who were not in the kingdom of God, but would be brought in as members of the church he was soon to found. He does not say "of another fold," as if there were then another true church, but "not of this fold," scattered abroad, without fold as yet.

"That I might (may) take it again." Dr. Abbott varies this meaning. "The meaning is interpreted by Christ's declaration to his disciples: 'He that loseth his life for my sake shall find it.' Christ lays down his life by his humiliation, his incarnation, his passion, and his crucifixion, that he may take it again in the life of the myriads whom he has redeemed from death by his own death. He takes it again when he sees of the travail of his soul, and is satisfied (Isa. 53:11), which he does when those who have been washed and made white in the blood of the Lamb stand before him (Rev. 7:14,15). So every mother, laying down her life in continued self-sacrifice for her children, takes it again in their developed manhood and womanhood."

The Facts Stated.

HON. THURLOW WEED ON THE MORGAN ABDUCTION.

This is a sixteen page pamphlet comprising a letter written by Mr. Weed, and read at the unveiling of the monument erected to the memory of Capt. William Morgan. The frontispiece is an engraving of the monument. It is a history of the unlawful seizure and confinement of Morgan in the Canandaigua jail, his subsequent conveyance by Freemasons to Fort Niagara, and drowning in Lake Ontario. He not only subscribes his NAME to the letter, but ATTACHES HIS AFFIDAVIT to it.

In closing his letter he writes: I now look back through an interval of fifty-six years with a conscious sense of having been governed through the "Anti-Masonic excitement" by a sincere desire, first, to vindicate the violated laws of my country, and next, to arrest the great power and dangerous influencee of "secret societies."

The pamphlet is well worth perusing, and is doubtless the last historical article which this great journalist and politician wrote. [Chicago, National Christian Association.] Single copy, 5 cents.

AMERICAN PLATFORM.

ADOPTED AT CHICAGO, JUNE 20, 1884

Viewing with deep concern the corrupt and unsettled condition of American politics, and witnessing with alarm the fearful prevalence of caste and clannishness by which our citizens are being arrayed in hostile bands, working secretly to compass political ends, a method directly and powerfully tending to increase corruption, to destroy mutual confidence, and hasten disruption and bloodshed; and having no hope of adequate remedy for these evils from existing parties, and believing the foundation of a party based upon the fundamental principles of the Declaration of American Independence, both inevitable and indispensable:

We, therefore, a portion of the American people, believing with our fathers that we have our rights and liberties, not from men or parties, but from God; believing in the Christian marriage, and not in Mormonism; believing in the religious democracy of the New Testament, and not in the despotism of the lodge; believing, also, with our Scotch and English ancestors, that civil government, though ordained in God, is "founded in nature, not in grace," and, therefore, that all have equal civil rights; while we abhor the idea of enforcing religion or controlling conscience by human laws and penalties as calculated to make hypocrites, not Christians, and savoring of the days of priestism, the fagot and the stake, we at the same time as firmly believe that atheism and priestcraft are twins and both alike foes to human liberty and welfare. We further most firmly believe that a government without God has none but lynch power, and is destitute of all legitimate authority to maintain civil order, to swear a witness, to try a criminal, to hang a murderer, to imprison a thief; and while we consider government without God as a mere usurpation, we regard all religions and worships invented by men, and so having no higher than human origin, as mere swindling impositions and cheats. We believe in peace and in national arbitration as a means of perpetuating it; yet we as profoundly believe that the bravery and blood of our soldiers have bought us the peace which we enjoy, and we honor the memories of the dead and will be just to the claims of the living; and we take up and prolong the strain raised by the women of this country: "For God, and home, and native land," and trust that this beautiful and patriotic motto will soon be not only echoed by their voices, but sustained by their votes.

We, therefore, solemnly adopt and present the following, as containing a brief synopsis of the principles of our government, by which we intend to be governed in casting our votes. We hold:

1. That ours is a Christian and not a heathen nation, and that the God of the Christian Scriptures is the author of civil government.

2. That the Bible should be associated with books of science and literature in all our educational institutions.

3. That God requires, and man needs a Sabbath.

4. We demand the prohibition of the importation, manufacture, and sale of intoxicating drinks.

5. We hold that the charters of all secret lodges granted by our Federal and State Legislatures should be withdrawn, and their oaths prohibited by law.

6. We are opposed to putting prison labor or depreciated contract labor from foreign countries in competition with free labor to benefit manufacturers, corporations or speculators.

7. We are in favor of a revision and enforcement of the laws concerning patents and inventions; for the prevention and punishment of frauds either upon inventors or the general public.

8. We hold to and will vote for woman suffrage.

9. That the civil equality secured to all American citizens by Articles 13, 14 and 15 of our amended National Constitution should be preserved inviolate, and the same equality should be extended to Indians and Chinamen.

10. That international differences should be settled by arbitration.

11. That land and other monopolies should be discouraged.

12. That the general government should furnish the people with an ample and sound currency.

13. That it should be the settled policy of the government to reduce tariffs and taxes as rapidly as the necessities of revenue and vested business interests will allow.

14. That polygamy should be immediately suppressed by law, and that the Republican party is censurable for the long neglect of its duty in respect to this evil.

15. And, finally, we demand for the American people the abolition of electoral colleges, and a direct vote for President and Vice President of the United States.

THE CHURCHES VS. LODGERY.

The following denominations are committed by vote of their legislative assemblies or by constitution to a separation from secret lodge worship:

Adventists (Seventh-day.)

Baptists—Primitive, Seventh-day and Scandinavian.

Brethren (Dunkers or German Baptists.)

Christian Reformed Church.

The Christian Cynosure.

EDITORS.

J. BLANCHARD. HENRY L. KELLOGG.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, JULY 1, 1886.

"He may censure who hath written well." A minister who administers the communion to the lodge every time he administers it, is not in a state of mind to censure those who insist on a divorce of Satan's religion from Christ's. He cannot see clear for the beam that is in his own eye. Tom Corwin, in the United States Senate, said, "Put one slave-holder with forty-nine non-slave-holders, and the one will find means to control the forty-nine in nine cases out of ten." So one Freemason will hang a jury or corrupt a church.

"And I contended with them, and cursed them, and smote certain of them and plucked off their hair." Neh. 13: 25. This was Nehemiah's mode of church-discipline, to get rid of idolatry by compelling men to put away idolatrous wives. The terrible plagues in Egypt were each a bolt hurled at idol-worship. The execution of the three thousand who clung to the cattle worship of Egypt; the forty years' march by the motions of a cloud, moved by Jehovah, the invisible God, did not prevent relapse into idolatry, which wiped out the Hebrew commonwealth by four captivities. Seventy years' drill under heathen task-masters still left this thirst for false worship which Nehemiah was cursing.

ANOTHER PIONEER GONE.—We give elsewhere from the Galesburg press the obituary of John G. West, at unusual length, because his was an uncommon life. And many readers of the Cynosure—all, indeed, who love the prairies and their pioneers will be glad of the pictured memories of the past, when prairie wolves, prairie chickens, and prairie flowers had not been driven off from these natural flower gardens of God. The senior editor of the Cynosure was Mr. West's pastor when he first came to be president of Knox College; and "preaching in the school-house near Bro. John West's," was the standing Sabbath afternoon notice for years.

Miss Mary Allen West, of the Union Signal, is daughter of the Nehemiah West, Esq., of the obituary notice. The Wests were New York Anti-masons, and their principles never bleached out. Mr. John West was a patron of the Cynosure, gave it material aid in its early struggles, and was always to be relied on for anti-secret meetings in Knox county.

ON THE STOCKS.

There are three important conventions now on the stocks; viz., The national congress of Christians in Chicago, next autumn; the southern convention early in the winter; and a national nominating convention somewhere, next June, 1887. Earnest committees have these three conventions in hand. There is an "American Congress of Churches," whose chief organ is the Church Union, which says: "The American Congress of Churches has for its object to promote Christian union and to advance the kingdom of God, by a free discussion of the great moral and social questions of the time. This is a good enough programme for our Chicago "Congress of Christians." but among the prominent men who are committed to it, we see some who are members of secret societies, and who protest against discussing them. It is, however, intended to visit the Christian Union in New York and see if the American Congress will not coalesce with ours: or, if not, whether it will admit a paper on the secret lodge system. It has held two strong meetings, viz., one in Hartford, Conn., and another in Cleveland, Ohio. Dr. Howard Crosby has given their ablest speech, and he is the author of one of our anti-secret tracts.

The southern convention is being strongly pushed by Secretary Stoddard. It may be held at Nashville or Memphis, Tenn., and Presidents Fairchild of Berea, Ky., McCullough of Knoxville, Tenn., and such men as John G. Fee, Prof. Woodsmall and Rev. Mr. Countee of Memphis, with many others like them are a sufficient guarantee that effectual work will be done reaching throughout the entire South.

If these two conventions are owned and blessed of God, the national nominating convention next June, a year hence, will be a cloud, rising out of the sea of American politics, somewhat larger than a man's hand.

The Prohibition party must shake off its secret barnacles or God will shake it off. A party made up in part of secret temperance lodges, pledged or sworn to conceal their proceedings from the open temperance alliance is a monster, like a calf with two heads, one black and the other white; and the black head will suck all the milk and starve the other. There are Good Templar's lodges in Washington, D. C., but St. John had hardly so many friends there as the fingers on one hand. When these secret fungi are scraped off the Prohibitionists and Americans may become one reform party, recognizing God, the Bible and the Sabbath.

PROF. LUMRY AND HIS BOOK.

Oscar F. Lumry came to Wheaton as a teacher in Illinois Institute, became Professor of Languages when the Institute became Wheaton College, and in the two has taught over thirty years. During this period the College has shown its appreciation of him by paying him a higher salary than it has paid any other professor in the present faculty; and, now that he has resigned this professorship that he may become an author and a candidate for Congress, parts from him with regret.

Prof Lumry's book, "National Suicide and Its Remedy," will be read with profit even by those who do not accept its doctrine, that taking interest for money loaned, one or more per cent, is sin, taking something for nothing. For, as Goldsmith said of his Vicar of Wakefield,

E'en his failings lean to virtue's side."

It will not convince men that it is sin for men to hoard money enough to build a ship, mill or railroad; or that it is sin to help an active man to build a mill by lending him money at a reasonable rate, and receiving interest if the mill is a success and gives good meal to the hungry poor, who were pounding their corn in mortars. But no one can read Mr. Lumry's book, which is written with strength and learning, without seeing more clearly than before, why usury is unpopular and misers despised.

There is no natural love of money or liquor. The tastes of the drunkard and the miser are acquired, one by excitement, the other by gain, both which are naturally agreeable to men, and both enslaving in excess. Slave-holding had no excess. Property-ownership of human beings is inherently atrocious in the superlative degree. However loving and kind the owner, the property tie repealed and rent asunder wages, marriage, property, self-ownership, all the rights which God gave to distinguish men from things. Interest is not so. If a man loves his neighbor as himself, lend only to those fit to use money; and if unfortunate share their losses, and in extreme cases forgive the debt, as thousands have done—that man is a benefactor, not a sinner.

But these men are not the ones Prof. Lumry is driving at; but rather at those intended by the Scripture, "He that is greedy of gain troubleth his house," and their name is legion.

In our late war the bankers made a detestable record, and Mr. Lumry's book does justice to it. No one can read the history of the first issue of greenbacks which were discredited by the law that made them, by making them par to pay soldiers but not to pay customs; so that the banks could and did charge from forty to sixty cents for a gold dollar: no one can read that record without seeing that their syndicates at Washington were what poor old Thad Stevens called them, "harpies", preying like buzzards on the bleeding carcase of the country.

The writer saw Mr. Stevens carried in his chair to the head of his "Committee of Ways and Means," to carry us through the fire and blood of rebellion, where he sat till he died. "I don't like to use harsh phrases," said the dying patriot, "but these harpies" —and then paused to strengthen his argument by softening his terms. "Tell Mr. Stevens" said Chief Justice Chase to the writer, "that when he dies the spinal column has gone out of the House." Mr. Lumry's book is severe, but not so severe on the syndicate of the bankers as is the record of the Senate during the greenback discussion. "Great men have great weaknesses;" as witness Sir Isaac Newton, Sheridan and others; and Prof. Lumry may not be an exception. But his book is a strong protest for the poor; and if he holds his light at times a little beyond the truth, he will only make it seen more clearly by the masses by whom his argument deserves to be read and pondered.

THE RESPONSIBILITIES OF CAPITAL.

At the Congregational General Association of Illinois, in Moline, an evening was given to this general subject. One speaker presented the Grievances of Labor; James Clafflin, the Christian Way; and Rev. Jos. E. Roy, the Responsibilities of Capital. One of these was to help on all ameliorative measures, co-operation, arbitration and proper legislation; another, to accept the obligation devolved upon it by Christianity; and another, to share the burdens in partnership with labor. One of these burdens, or grievances, was that it had to contend with gigantic secret organizations. This labor conflict, it was said, is associated with the most astounding developments of the secret society system, that the world has ever seen. Switching off from the issue of Labor vs. Capital, the leaders now present the claims of union labor versus independent labor. The secret society laborers assume to decide that non-secret society laborers shall not have the liberty of working for whom they choose. The question has come to this: whether a man who does not choose to join such an organization shall have the privilege of earning his living by honest labor. Yet, when this becomes a "strike," with deadly fury against independent laborers, it comes back also upon the employers in the arrest and the derangement of their business. The government will become crippled for repressing disorder, when a few officials in secret conclave can precipitate 150,000 or 500,000 votes upon a political issue. In this unequal conflict of capital and labor, thus consolidated by secrecy, there will come the prospect of redress in the reaction that must follow on in the country against the whole system of the secret empire within the realm of a democratic government. Against the honest, patriotic law-abiding working-men, there seems to be a double conspiracy, that of the anarchists to decoy them into treason, and that of the secret labor unions to entice them into an allegience that is against a true sovereignity. Andbetween these upper and nether millstones capitalwill have a hard grind.

—The Chicago Daily Sun, a one-cent paper started not long since, has passed into the control of the Knights of Labor, and will henceforth be conducted as an organ of the lodge.

—Dr. H. S. Berry concludes a series of three articles on the lodge question in the last numbers of the Living Way of Memphis. He discusses the subject dispassionately and ably.

—A leading writer in the College Springs Crank, whom we guess to be Dr. William Johnston, estimates at their true value the hearty expressions of sympathy in our reform work, expressed by the pastors of San Francisco and Denver.

—In 1870 a tract was published from the Cynosure office, entitled "Masonry; a View from a Woman's Standpoint." The tract has long been out of print, but some copies are doubtless in existence. The author desires to obtain a few copies; any one who can accommodate her, will please send to this office.

—The Supreme Council of the Royal Arcanum held its ninth annual session at Philadelphia, June 1st. The present membership is 66,000 with 975 lodges. During 1885 the benefits paid aggregated $1,260,500; total expenses for the same time $33,-509.76. The order is obligated for benefit certificates out-standing to the amount of $180,709,500, or about $2,900 for each member.

—The trial of the anarchists in this city began early last week and up to Saturday night but four jurors had been selected. Their examination was severe: some were refused for belonging to the lodge, and others for not belonging to the church. Captain Black, the counsel for the defense, is a leading Presbyterian, an able lawyer and sympathizer with laborers in their real troubles.

—Dr. A. E. Kittredge, late of the Third Presbyterian church in this city, is accredited a member of the Royal Arcanum. He must not regard it as very complimentary in the order to elect a Chicago business man "Supreme Chaplain" over his head, especially since the new officer seems to have no religious record worth noticing in the organ of the order.

—A word of commendation from such a champion as Dr. J. N. Norris, of Birmingham, Iowa, may not sound as sweet to every ear as to the editor's, but it will do no harm for all to read: "The Cynosure is A, No. 1, was always good, is growing better and better; is a 'terror to evil doers and a praise to them that do well.' Its friends need not blush to lay it along side of any paper published in the whole country for the soundness of its teachings in morals, politics and religion."

—In response to a letter from workingmen and employers Col. Elliott F. Shepard of New York has written a document of great value on "Labor and Capital are One," which is being circulated freely by a friend of the workingmen of America. Written in a style clear, strong and earnest, the writer maintains his position beyond controversy, and takes a noble stand for Christianity, for the Sabbath, for manliness of character as opposed to the secret oaths of the lodge, and for the Golden Rule and the example of Christ. A more practical, useful and ably written argument on the labor question we have not before seen. Mr. J. J. Moore, Continental Hotel, Chicago, is agent for the gratuitous circulation of the pamphlet. Apply to him in person or by letter.

—Prof. G. M. Elliott, of the Reformed Presbyterian Seminary at Selma, Alabama, sends us three copies of a monthly publication begun by him in March, to promote Christian religion and education among the colored people for whom he is laboring. The paper is the Guiding Star, which is very near the English of the Cynosure. From the numbers now issued, and the well-known character of Bro. Elliott, we can safely commend his paper to the colored people and their friends, North and South. Like Bethlehem's star it will aim always to direct to Christ, THE Light and Way and Life, "who lighteth every man that cometh into the world." May Prof. Elliott have abundant success in his venture. The Cynosure has received occasional contributions from his pen, which now we must forego, or cull in substance from his paper, of which he writes: "It will aim to be on the side of every good cause. It will espouse most heartily the principles of the National Christian Association. We feel that the lodge is working great detriment among the colored people by its rapid spread among them. We wish the Guiding Star to be a strong agency in arresting its progress among these people, who are ignorant of the devices and deceptions of the lodge."

THE CAMPAIGN OF 1886.

The harmonious and effective annual N. C. A. meeting just past furnishes the starting point for a grand year's work. Plans for a conference of Christians in Chicago this fall and a National meeting in Tennessee during the winter are deserving the prayerful consideration of every disciple of our common Lord. The committees to whom the detail of arrangements have been assigned are at work on preliminaries and will soon be ready to snbmit plans. Every one who takes an interest in either or both of these conventions and who has a plan to offer, or a suggestion to make, should write at once and give the cause and the committee the benefit of his thoughts. These two meetings are not the children or special favorites of committees, but they belong to the friends. If they succeed it will be your success and that of the cause you love. If they fail it will be your failure and a temporary check on the cause you desire to advance. Send along your suggestions, watch for the plans. Pray for the committees and the cause, and keep it before the people in your own neighborhood. The Chicago meeting will accommodate people in the North. The Tennessee meeting friends at the South, and out of the two, if grandly sustained, will come efficient faith and courage to assure a rousing meeting as far west as Denver, and perhaps on the Pacific coast.

A word to officers of associations in States organized and to friends in States wishing to organize. It is my purpose to attend your State meetings where possible, and if in case I should be unable to do so, to see that competent assistance is furnised when desired. There is no reason in the world why the present should not far exceed any year in the past in the outward March of our reform. Faith, effort and high resolve for God and humanity are called for. Will you furnish them ?

Please report here early by letter so that I can arrange my programme for the campaign.

J. P. STODDARD.

PERSONAL NOTES.

—Elder I. Bancroft has accepted a call from a church in Spirit Lake, Iowa. He found the lecture work too exhausting for his years, yet wished not to be an idler in the vineyard.

—Alexander Thomson, of the N. C. A. Board, is passing the summer on his 20-acre fruit farm near Saugatuck, Mich.

—Rev. A. J. Chittenden of the College Church, Wheaton, was sent by his neighbors as delegate to the State Prohibition convention at Springfield, Ill.

—E. D. Bailey, editor of the American, returned to Washington last Thursday. Mrs. Bailey remains a few days to visit friends and relatives in Wheaton.

—Bro. H. H. Hinman, having been relieved from his labor on the Cynosure last week, has since given his entire attention to his pamphlet on "Masonic Outrages" which is nearly completed.

—Prof. A. R. Dodd, of Amity College, College Springs, Iowa, has been invited to the principalship of Houghton Seminary, N. Y., by the board of trustees, has accepted the position, and will enter upon his work at the opening of the school year in September.

—H. W. Johnston, senior editor of the Western Crank, of College Springs, Iowa, was a graduate and valedictorian at Amity College, June 10th. He conducts an able and lively paper, and has abilities which will make him a power for Christ and reform.

—Pres. C. A. Blanchard is engaged to preach the annual prohibition sermon on the Lake Bluff Assembly grounds, July 4th. His discourse last year was printed in the Chicago papers and widely circulated in tract form. Miss F. E. Willard speaks on the same day.

—W. R. Hench, elected member of the N. C. A. Board at the annual meeting, is removing from Bartlett, to Malta, Ill., where he will pursue his chosen vocation as teacher.

—Elder J. F. Browne, after some years' labor and self-denial in Kentucky, is proposed as Wisconsin State lecturer, and the engagement is nearly completed. He is now with his wife visiting friends in New Hampshire.

—Mr. Albert Guild, brother of W. K. Guild, of Wheaton, and of Dr. E. C. Guild, of Bartlett, died suddenly while riding in the streets of Aurora with the latter, last week.

—Mr. Carpenter has been gradually growing more and more feeble for months and is now confined to his room and visited only by his physician, attendants and personal friends. When last conversed with by any friend from this office his interest in the progress of the N. C. A. work was unabated. It would be a matter of deepest gratitude to God if he could again arise and take part in the counsels of the reform.

—Elder H. L. Limbocker, of Manhattan, Kansas, called at the Cynosure office last Tuesday. The Kansas breezes are kind to his years, and his tall, erect form and kindling eye promise yet many years of good service for the Lord.

—With Bro. Limbocker came in an old-time friend of his, Elder Daniel Holmes, a reformer by nature and practice, who manifested a warm interest in the work of the National Association. As he met our song king, Bro. Clark, there was a mutual recognition after many years of separation, and amid embraces and tears of joy they recounted the old battle-days of Abolition, in which both had often stood shoulder to shoulder.

—Bro. Clark had another happy meeting with Mrs. Haviland in the office, just before he took train for Detroit. Mrs. Haviland has been absent several weeks in Kansas looking after her wards—the thousands of colored exodites who have settled in that State. She finds them prospering, and gaining in independence and the means of self-support. She invested several thousand dollars in land to be divided in small farms for the refugees, according to the bequest of the donor, a benevolent lady. The purchase is in Morris county near Dunlap, the seat of the Associate Presbyterian institution in charge of Prof. Atchison and Mr. and Mrs. Snodgrass. It was while speaking in this place that Bro. Starry was smitten down by a stone from the mob outside.

—Mr. Charles B. Knight, an old citizen of Worcester, Mass., has been traveling for a short time through the West. With Brethren Pratt and Moore he attended the N. C. A. annual meeting and the political conference. Bro. Knight believes in Americanizing the Prohibition party and is confident that suitable effort would secure that result. He attended the Illinois State Prohibition convention at Springfield last week and spoke ably at a union service in Wheaton, Sabbath evening. He reports about two-thirds of the saloons of the city of Worcester closed up since the 1st of May under the no-license rule of the present city officers.

THE IOWA WESLEYAN MINISTERIAL ASSOCIATION.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—The Ministerial Association of the Iowa Conference of Wesleyan Churches, while in session at Masonville, June 17th, adopted the following resolution:

Resolved. That we, the members of the Ministerial Association of Iowa Conference, as an organized body, do declare our sympathy with the cause of reform and the laborers in said cause; and that we are much intereated in seeing executed the proposition to hold a National Convention of Reformatory churches; that the churches may perceive the depth of iniquity to which men go who are secretly banded and sworn together; that they may more fully comprehend the nature of these anti-Republican, anti-Christian leagues and their unscrupulous and arbitrary encroachments upon the church of Christ; and that some high standard may be raised upon which the churches will agree to unitedly labor for the downfall of this arrogant enemy of justice in courts, of purity in politics, and of the Christian religion.

A COVENANTER TESTIMONY.

Rev. D. B. Wilson, clerk of the late Synod of the Reformed Presbyterian church meeting in Rochester, New York, in May, sends the following action of that body on the tobacco question:

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON TOBACCO.

The cultivation, manufacture, sale and use of tobacco are in a measure under ban in the Reformed Presbyterian church. Tobacco is prohibited to theological students. Presbyteries are enjoined to refuse license to any who are addicted to its use. Presbyteries are justified in refusing appointments to any laborer who may be assigned to them, and is a user of tobacco. Ministers, elders, deacons and Sabbath-school teachers are admonished to abstain from the use of this filthy weed. Members of the church are warned against its use as a blemish on Christian character.

These injunctions are not without reason. Rarely, if ever, does tobacco prove any benefit or meet any want. In almost every case it is a positive injury. It weakens the nerves and the brains, impairs the sight, disturbs the action of the heart, enfeebles the organs of digestion, and very often causes incurable disease. It diminishes the capacity for mental labor; sometimes insanity is traceable to its use. Another objection to its use may be expressed in the terse language of a professor of Yale: "The tobacco user is giving forth pestilential vapors from all the pores of his skin; he is the embodiment of perpetual miasma; a walking distillery of deadly essence."

States are taking action with reference to this acknowledged evil. Many States require scientific education in their public schools with reference to the injurious effects of this narcotic. The use of tobacco is prohibited to the pupils of our military and naval academies. Some colleges forbid its use by their students. Is it not time for the church to take an advanced step in this reform? We have the exhortation in the holy Word, "Keep thyself pure;" and, again, " having therefore these promises, dearly beloved, let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God."

We recommend the adoption of the following resolutions:

We hold that the habitual use of tobacco in the usual forms as well as the cultivation and sale of tobacco for such use, are inconsistent with the Christian profession, and our members are solemnly enjoined not to engage in or continue in this business.

2. We earnestly and affectionately urge every member of the church who is addicted to its use in any form, to break off the habit at once.

3. That we renew the injunction to the Presbyteries, not to license any one to preach, nor to ordain any one to the ministry, who persists in the use of this filthy weed.

4. That Sessions be enjoined not to ordain any one to the office of elder or deacon, who is addicted to this habit.

5. That Sessions be instructed to strongly urge youthful applicants for membership in the church, to refrain from using tobacco.

Respectfully submitted.

—How do our Odd-fellow lady friends relish the following elegant simile from the pen of "Past Grand," John W. Bourlet, Jr.: "The Rebekah degree is as essential to the order as a tail to a kite—without it, both would be deprived of a most important auxiliary."

—The Odd-fellows' Sovereign Grand Lodge has forbidden under the highest penalty, any member to read "the unwritten work of the order." This looks like locking the stable door after the horse is gone. E. A. Cook of Chicago, has already sold 20,000 copies of the "unwritten work."

—Prof. Hartman of Berlin, has published a book showing the folly of the evolution theory.

—The United States Jury at Seattle that indicted the ten anti-Chinese rioters, ascribed all the trouble to the secret societies.

—Four thousand striking miners at Irwin, Pa., who have been out three months, voted Monday to return to work at old rates.

—P. C. Davis, Master Workman of the Knights of Labor Assembly at Pacific, Mo., has been sentenced to the penitentiary for two years and fined $500 for his part in the recent strike.

THE HOME.

SAVIOUR, I A WEARY CHILD.

BY MRS. I. K. DE WOLF.

Saviour, I a weary child
Would on thee recline,
Listen to thy accent mild,
Hear that I am thine.

'Tis thy boundless love to me
Dies gates my fear:
'Tis because I trust in thee
Thou art ever near.

When new dangers round me press,
And the way seems long,
I'll to thee my prayer address,
And to thee my song.

While I crave thy constant care,
And in thee abide,
Thou wilt all my burdens bear—
Thou, the Crucified.

LABOR ON: REST COMETH.

Finish thy work, the time is short;
The sun is in the west,—
The night is coming down: till then
Think not of rest.

Rest: Finish all thy work, then rest;
Till then, rest never.
The rest prepared for thee by God
Is rest forever.

Finish thy work, then wipe thy brow.
Ungird thee from thy toil,
Take breath, and from each weary limb,
Shake off the soil.

Finish thy work, then sit thee down
On some celestial hill;
And of heaven's everlasting bliss
Take thou thy fill.

Finish thy work, then go in peace,—
Life's battle fought and won;
Hear from the throne the Master's voice,
"Well done! well done!"

Finish thy work, then take thy harp,
Give praise to God above;
Sing a new song of mighty joy
And endless love!

A POLICY OF SCRUTINY.

The Current remarks, while speaking of certain gigantic swindles and speculations, accomplished by the influence and under the auspices of well-known and greatly honored names, "The safety of business men lies in a policy of scrutiny."

This suggestion is most important. Of all things which the devil and his servants dislike, a policy of scrutiny is among the things least in accordance with their tastes. They like sleek men that sleep well o'nights, men who eat good dinners, enjoy good fellowship, take everything for granted, and believe that everything is "all right." They want no lean and hungry investigators prowling around their premises, to find out what they do or why they do it. They prefer to be let alone, and allowed to manage their business in their own way.

In this case alluded to, it was claimed that funds were being used in connection with government contracts, and that such profits were made as allowed the payment of interest to depositors of from three to five per cent. per month; which was ten or fifteen times as much as the interest paid by the government upon its bonds. Investing in such a concern was simply a practical way of saying, "We are willing to join our hands with a set of rogues who are swindling the government at such a rate that they can afford to pay from forty to eighty per cent. per annum for money to carry on their operations."

Of course the whole story was a falsehood, but there were men who were willing to accept it as truth, and to act upon it as legitimate; and invest their money in such a plan for the wholesale fleecing and plundering of the people through the government. And to such schemes as this, men of the highest standing lent their names and influence until at last the downfall came, and the garnered wealth of the rich, as well as the scanty pittance of the indigent, went down into the one common whirlpool of utter and irretrievable ruin. Rogues told lies, eminent men believed them, and honest people thought that all was right. It was a general period of gush and guess, ending in ruin and perdition.

We have not seen the end of these performances. There is no end to such transactions. The fools are not dead. The generation of vipers shows no signs of extinction or deterioration. The millenium that was to have been heard of some time ago, has not yet come. The dignity of humanity asserts itself in defalcations and deviltries. The conservative power of education is exhibited in legions of shrewd and cunning rogues, and the gullibility of poor human nature still absorbs the whole, and pays liberally for the priviliges of being humbugged, cajoled, and swindled.

Will the people learn better? Probably not. Men who have the elements of roguery within them are the very men who are taken captive by the rogues. They gravitate toward such men, and the honor that is among thieves is of a quality not altogether to be relied upon.

There is a lesson here for a few men, those who have wisdom enough to heed it; and that is, attend to your own affairs, and do not put yourself in the power of men whose acts are beyond your control. Do not trust to great names; do not make haste to be rich; if any one promises you a chance to make enormous profits, or receive enormous interest, set it down as a fact, that while he is pretending to rob and plunder some one else, for your benefit, the outcome of his project will probably be to plunder you for his own benefit.

"Lay not up for yourselves treasures on earth." The money which ought to have been given to the poor, or to help forward the work of God in the earth, is often hoarded to go into the hands of men who will waste it in riotous living, and defy law and go unwhipped of justice. Let the stewards of God have a care how they waste his money, lest they hear in an unexpected hour the words: "Give an count of thy stewardship, for thou mayst be no longer steward."—Armory.

ABETTORS OF INIQUITY.

Men and women of average respectability, who profess to be averse to crime and anarchy, nevertheless aid and abet iniquity in various ways.

By low talk and profanity—in which vileness is promulgated.

By attendance upon theaters and shows—where crime is taught, in dazzling and attractive object-lessons.

By beer and dram-drinking, and favoring drinking-houses and free drink—where and wherein crime is manufactured.

By favoring or belonging to secret societies—where crimes are sometimes planned, and ofttimes covered up.

By Sabbath-breaking and dishonesty—in which the law of God and the rights of man are practically defied.

By craven neglect or refusal to stand by the right—whereby sin, and impurity, and crime, are allowed to stalk abroad without rebuke, and without shame.

What is needed is principle—solid and strong for God and man. Principle—moved by the Holy Ghost, to open and inundate aggression against all Satanic influences whatever. But again, principle—as holy as God, and permeated with love; to draw as well as fight, and to save both the tender and the hardened, as far as possible, from earthly wrong, and from eternal death.—Harvester.

LIGHT AND LIFE.

Light is essential to life; darkness tends to death. The pestilence "walketh in darkness"; and many diseases increase their ravages where sunlight is excluded. The sick room should be the sunniest room in the house. In fact there would be less need of sick rooms, if people walked in the light and lived in the sunshine. The pale face of many a feeble woman tells the careful observer that her life is largely spent in the shade of a sunless kitchen, on the north side of the house. When we enter a room void of sunlight we feel a depression and a lack; something is needed to cheer and brighten everything. Diseases are more fatal, and deaths more frequent, on the shady sides of streets; and in hospitals patients are more sure to recover, if placed in the sunniest wards. For many diseases there is no cure like sunshine.

A plant growing in a cellar fails to take up those elements necessary to strength and vigor; and many a man employed in a sunless office dies of dyspepsia, simply because his system, like a plant, cannot take up and digest those elements essential to growth and vigor without sunshine.

God has filled the world with sunshine. He has shed its brightness far and wide. The world bathes and swims in an ocean of light, which is not only poured directly upon the earth, but is reflected by the atmosphere which surrounds it. Let us take good care that we get our part of the sunlight; that we do not walk in darkness, when God so abundantly provides light and life for mankind.—Ex.

SWALLOWING WINDMILLS.

The tax levied on human credulity by some of the scientific theories of the day, is thus illustrated by C. H. Spurgeon in the Sword and Trowel:

"There is a quaint story of a giant who had long fed upon windmills, and at last was choked by a pat of butter; and assuredly his counterpart may be seen in the evolutionists of our day, who are unable to receive the Bible account of the creation. The hypotheses of our present philosophers are enough to tax the credulity of a monk of the middle ages, yet many take down these windmills as pigeons swallow peas. The teaching of revelation is fitted for the capacity of a child, but our wise men are choked with such simple fare. We confess we have not enough faith to be an infidel, or an agnostic, or even an evolutionist. We find ourselves for once standing up for reason, and demanding that our faith shall not be overstrained. We can believe what is revealed; for, sublime as it is, there is a kind of truthlikeness about it; but we cannot believe what we are now taught with such tremendous authority, for, in the first place, it is not worth believing, and in the next place it looks so dreadfully like a lie that we had rather not. No, thank you, dear sir, we will keep to our bread and butter; our throat is not yet adapted to the disposal of windmills."

STRETCHING THINGS.

"I'm 'most dead! It is as hot as fire, and I've been more than a dozen miles after that colt!"

Andrew threw himself at full length on the lounge, and wiped the perspiration from his forehead.

"Where did you go?" inquired the father.

"I went over to Briggs' corner and back by the bridge."

"That is a little less than a mile and a half. Is it so very warm, Andy? It seems quite cool here."

"No, not so dreadful, I suppose, if I'd take it moderate; but I ran like lightning, and got heated up."

"You started about five o'clock, my son; and now it lacks a quarter of six," said his father, consulting his watch.

"Yes, sir; just three quarters of an hour," answered Andrew, innocently.

"Does it take lightning forty-five minutes to go a mile and a half?"

"I didn't mean exactly that, father; but I ran all the way, because I expected the whole town would be here to-night to see my new velocipede," explained Andrew, reluctantly.

"Whom do you expect, Andy? I wasn't aware that such a crowd was to be here. What will you do with them all?"

"Jim, Eddy and Tim told me they'd be 'round after school, and I wouldn't wonder if Ike came too. That's all."

"The population of the town is 5,000, and you are expecting three persons. Well, as you are very sick, I'm glad no more are coming. You couldn't play with them at all."

"Sick!" cried Andrew, springing to his feet. "Who said I was sick?"

"Why, Andrey, you said you were almost dead. Doesn't that mean very sick?"

"You are so particular, father, about my talking. I don't mean exactly what I say, of course. I wasn't nearly dead, to be sure; but I did some tall running, you bet. There were more than fifty dogs after me, and I don't go much on dogs."

"Quite a band of them! Where did they all come from?"

"There was Mr. Wheeler's sheep dog and Rush's store dog and two or three more; and they made for me, and so I ran as fast as I could."

"Five, at the most, are not fifty, Andrew."

"There looked to be fifty, anyway," answered Andrew, somewhat impatiently. "Carter's ten-acre lot was full of dogs, just making for me; and I guess you'd have thought there were fifty, if it had been you."

"Ten acres of dogs would be a great many thousands. Have you any idea how many?"

Andrew did not like to calculate; for it occurred to him what a small space ten or fifteen thousand sheep would occupy when camping, and ten acres of dogs would be past calculation.

"But," his father continued. "I know of no better way to break you of the foolish habit of exaggeration that to tell the children of the trouble you had in going after the colt. You ran like lightning, encountered ten acres of dogs—which would be hundreds of thousands—traveled more than a dozen miles to get one and a half miles in a straight line, expected to find five thousand people here to examine your new velocipede, and when you reached home you were nearly dead!"

"Please don't, father! The boys and girls will laugh themselves to death; and I won't exaggerate again if I live to be as old as Methuselah!"

"Laugh themselves to death at a simple story like this? I hope not, but rather hope it will set them to watching their own manner of telling stories, so as to be sure they do not greatly overstate them. Habit, my son, grows with years, and becomes in time so deeply rooted that it will be impossible for you when you become a man, to relate plain, unvarnished facts, unless you check the foolish habit in which you indulge every day, of stretching simple incidents into the most marvellous tales." —Selected.

THE WONDERFUL BAOBAB.

We read wonderful stories of the immense trees one sees in California, but they sink into insignificance beside the baobab tree which is found in many parts of Western Africa, principally just south of the Desert of Sahara. It is not distinguished for its extraordinary height, which rarely reaches over one hundred feet, but it is the most imposing and magnificent of African trees. Many, it is said, are over one hundred feet in circumference, rising like a dwarf tower from twenty to thirty feet, and then throwing out branches like a miniature forest to a distance of one hundred feet, the extremities of the branches bending toward the ground.

The botanical name of this curious tree is Adansonia digitata. The first, in honor of its discoverer, Adanson; and the second, descriptive of its five-parted leaf. Its leaves are large, abundant and of a dark green color, divided into five radiating lanceolate leaflets. The flowers are large and white, hanging to peduncles of a yard in length, which forms a striking contrast to the leaves. Its fruit is a soft, pulpy, dry substance about the size of a citron enclosed in a long, green pod; the pulp between the seeds tastes like cream of tartar, and this pulp, as well as the pressed juice from the leaves, is used by the native Africans for flavoring their food. The juice is greatly relished as a beverage, and is considered a remedy in putrid fevers and many other diseases.

The baobab tree is said to attain a much greater age than any other tree, thousands of years being hazarded as the term of life of some specimens. It has extraordinary vitality; the bark, which is regularly stripped off to be made into ropes, nets for fishing, trapping, and native clothing, speedily grows again. It dies from a very peculiar disease—a softening of its woody structure, and it falls by its own weight a mass of ruins. The native villages are generally built around one of these immense trees; and under its far-spreading branches, which form an agreeable shelter from the sun, is the "Kotla," or place of assemblage, where all the public business of the tribe is transacted.—American Agriculturist.

A WILD OR NATIVE GARDEN.

We wish we could get the children interested in a wild or native garden; a garden composed wholly of such plants and shrubs as they can find about the fields and woods. Once begun, the task of collecting these plants would be a most pleasant one. We ought not to be ignorant of our own flowers, but most persons are. In one corner of our own garden we have planted native shrubs and other plants and among other things are golden-rods and asters growing together in a most friendly way. Now one would suppose that few persons were unacquainted with these flowers. We presume that nearly every one who has spent an autumn in the country, has seen them in an unseeing way, merely being conscious of the existence of some yellow and purple flowers in the fence-corners and on the hills. They have not taken pains to see any thing more. But they have come to our door to ask what those flowers were in the corner of our garden, producing such a magnificent effect of color. When told, they looked half incredulous, half as though they had been trapped into admiring something unworthy their admiration. We have growing with them wild roses, which are to us more lovely than the great flowers on our hybrid-perpetuals, Bitter-sweet, Virginia Creepers, Clematis, lillies, and dozens of other wild plants that cost us nothing but the labor of getting them. Last year a despised mullein took up its habitation there, and it showed everybody that it was not without some graces of its own. What is offered by seedsmen as "wild garden seeds," are not seeds of wild flowers, but a mixture of many garden flowers.

Children, go to work and see what a charming arden you can make out of the plants you can find growing on the farm. You can have a little horticultural society of your own, and it will afford you much pleasure and profit. Try it.—American Agriculturist.

TEMPERANCE.

TEMPERANCE THOUGHTS.

BY J. F. AVERY, EDITOR Buds and Blossoms.

Temperance is a part of true godliness. Temperance work to be truly successful needs to be the outcome of love to Christ and the Gospel, which teaches us to do unto others as we would they should do unto us. If we honestly desire to do good unto all men, we must certainly not only refrain from putting the bottle to our neighbor's lips; but aid in all possible ways to keep temptation from him. That is by the restriction and prohibition of the trade in intoxicating drinks, we must see to it that the weak are not beguiled and destroyed by those, who for love of gain, would pander to their depraved appetite, even to the material damage and hurt of the poor dupe who, having lost the reins of self-control and true manhood, must and will have drink, even at the sacrifice of everything noble, good and true. Yea, to gratify the unhallowed thirst kindled by the soul-destroyer, and fanned and fed by the distiller's liquid fire, what will not the poor victim do to get a drink, to get drunk so as to escape in the forgetfulness of drunkenness, the woes and wretchedness, which are heaped upon himself and his dependants? Who does not pity the drunkard? And yet with pity instinctively rises scorn, when we think of the terrible greed of governments and men, who for the gold it brings can seek to sanctify and protect a trade and traffic so destructive in its tendency and influences, as is the making and vending of intoxicating drinks. The misery and suffering of wives, children and dependants cry out for protection, even if the drinker has no claim. Shall men be allowed to destroy, and to be destroyed by the drink traffic? Should not something be done? Men stamp out the plague and stay its progress by every known means, and at great cost and with no sparing people's feelings.

A dangerous bridge, mine, or factory, claims the attention of a parental government, and is soon made safe, if possible, in its working, or the law's strong arm protects the exposed and unwary. Let us arouse and quit ourselves like men. Let there be an advance made all along the lines against the fort of King Alcohol. He may disguise himself as Ahab did in battle; but God will speed the right, and the arrows from Gospel temperance bows shall find the armor joints. It is not proof against our spiritual weapons whereby we can put down Satan's strongholds. Strong as is the traffic and the ramification of its interests, God's arm and law is stronger. The Lord is on our side. Who can doubt? But the church must not stand idle.

PROHIBITION A POLITICAL FACTOR.

The assertive power of great moral questions, despite the opposition of party leaders, has always proved an irresistible force in American politics. It did so in the instance of the anti-slavery movement. This compelled some of the greatest political minds of the century to yield to a power which they were utterly unable to repress. Thus, as Wm. Lloyd Garrison called it, "the genius of universal emancipation," of its own volition, after it had once taken full possession of the public sentiment of the North, like a mountain torrent, swept from its path every moral, mental, and material object to its progress.

An eastern journal has been figuring out the force, for instance which the prohibition vote exercised during the late presidential election. It will doubtless be a surprise to the ordinary political student to learn that this vote held the balance of power in that important contest in all the decisive Middle States —New York, New Jersey, and Connecticut. In New York this vote was nearly 31,000; in New Jersey, it was 6,153; in Connecticut it was 2,305. In New York the Prohibition vote in three years grew from 25,783, to 30,867; in New Jersey, in five years, from 191 to 6,153, and in Connecticut in the same period from 409 to 2,305.

In New York, in the most important elections in that State since 1882, except that when Cleveland was elected governor by a phenomenal majority, the contest has been decided by the Prohibition vote. In New Jersey, the State was lost to Blaine by a Prohibition vote, which is much larger to-day than it was in 1884, and is growing larger daily. If Blaine had received that vote, which is naturally Republican, he could have carried the State. Without it he was 6,000 behind Cleveland. In Connecticut Blaine could have easily carried the State with the aid of the Prohibition vote. If he had received it, his majority would have been about the same as Garfield's in 1880.

When it is remembered that without the above three States no Republican candidate can be elected to the presidency in 1888, the importance of the Prohibition vote as a political factor will readily be seen. Still, in the face of the reiterated denunciations of this great moral movement on the part of the Chicago Tribune and journals of that ilk, it is hard to see how the Republican party can hope to get it back again.—Chicago Daily News, June 17.

TEMPERANCE IN EUROPE.

A government report by the British Consul-General, in Germany, points out certain serious facts. The adult male German drinks annually, on the average, about seventeen gallons of spiritous liquors. In the kingdom of Prussia, the whole expenditure in 1882 on wine, beer and spirits, amounted to nearly $227,000,000. In Sweden and Norway the consumption of spirits has been declining for some years past; but in Denmark the evil of spirit-drinking has reached a terrible pitch. In Holland, in 1878, there was a drink shop for every ninety inhabitants, including women and children; but a restrictive law, passed in 1881, has reduced the number about a quarter. The worst statistics in regard to the consumption of alcoholic liquors are those of Belgium where, in less than half a century, the drinking of such liquors has far more than doubled for each person. In 1881 there was a public house for every dozen adult males. In France the amount of drunkenness has been reduced by the passing of a salutary law. In Switzerland, between 1870 and 1880, while the increase of population was but 6.5 per cent, the increase in the number of public houses was 22 per cent. In Austria the condition of affairs is similar. And all this drinking has its effect. There is a horrible array of figures giving the statistics of delirium tremens, suicides, lunacy and accidental deaths, as the result of drunkenness. In Denmark 74 per cent of the arrests were from drunkenness, or for crimes committed under the influence of drink. The inspector-general of Belgian prisons reports that four-fifths of the crime and social misery is attributable to intemperance. In Austria the hospitals, lunatic asylums and prisons all testify to the advance of drinking habits. And Continental workmen generally—even those who do not become absolute drunkards—spend a large portion of their earnings in drink. The foregoing statements, be it observed, are not the froth of a temperance harangue, but the cold statistics of a government report. They show that earthquakes and cholera are not the most terrible evils of Europe. They should be studied by those who suggest that spirit-drinking can be extirpated by introducing the free use of beer and light wines. In the very countries where the milder drinks are used, the consumption of ardent spirits is increasing at a terrible rate. The temperance question is a growing question, and it demands attention here as in other lands.—Independent.

HORRIBLE, THOUGH TRUE.

Miss Muloch says: "I have been thinking how horrible it must be to see anybody, one cared for, drunk; the honest eye dull and meaningless; the wise lips jabbering foolishness; the whole face and figure, instead of being what one likes to look at, takes pleasure to see in the same room even—growing ugly, irrational, disgusting—more like a beast than a man. Yet some women have to bear it, have to speak kindly to their husbands, hide their brutishness, and keep them from making worse fools of themselves than they can help. I have seen it done, not merely by workingmen's wives, but lady-wives in drawing-rooms. I think, if I were married, and I saw my husband the least overcome by wine, not "drunk" may be, but just excited, silly, otherwise than his natural self, it would nearly drive me wild. Less on my account than his. See him sink—not for a crime, but a contemptible, cowardly bit of sensualism—from the height where my love had placed him; to have to take care of him—aye, and I might pity him; but I think the full glory and passion of my love would die out then and there forever."

Forty editors from Texas recently on a press excursion proved to be all Prohibitionists, and only three smokers among them. No wonder the Lone Star state is "booming for temperance."

Antigo, Wis., has a live W. C. T. Union of sixty-eight members. Seventeen saloons have been voted out of the town.

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

—Rev. G. Peters, pastor of the First Swedish Lutheran church, at Rockford, preached his farewell sermon Sabbath evening, June 20th. He goes to Lincoln, Neb.

—The mission, conducted by Mr. Seguin, the ex-priest, at 135 West Van Buren street, Chicago, is a very promising work. A Sabbath-school, largely attended by Roman Catholic children, is opened, and all classes of people attend the meetings every evening. Lodge oaths have no recognition, and it is not unusual to hear striking testimonies against the orders from strangers. The mission is a faith work in respect to funds, and needs the prayers and contributions of God's people.

—Nathan and Esther Frame, the Quaker evangelists, have been holding meetings in Chicago, with very happy results, among the Friends. They held twenty-eight meetings and aroused much interest.

—The Conference of Christian Workers, held in the First Methodist church of this city, closed last Wednesday. It was fairly attended, especially by Christians engaged in city mission work, who bore the leading part in the discussions. The larger cities of this country and Great Britain were represented.

—Mrs. M. B. Carse has been for ten years president of the Central Chicago W. C. T. U., and is president also of the Board of Managers of the Chicago Foundlings' Home. She probably raises more money for philanthropic purposes than any other woman in the north west. A woman of property herself, Mrs. Carse has for many years devoted her time to charity, asking nothing for her services. She has recently had the offer from a Chicago capitalist of ground on which to build an Industrial Home for fallen women. A building for the National W. C. T. U., with publishing house, offices, training-school for workers, public hall and reading room, has also been projected by Mrs. Carse, and will doubtless be completed if she lives a few years longer.

—Rev. James Kennedy, D. D., has been elected by the Reformed Presbyterian Synod, sitting at Rochester, N. Y., to fill the chair of theology left vacant in the Allegheny Seminary by the death of Rev. Dr. J. R. W. Sloane.

—According to the Baptist Year Book there are 1,500 students preparing for the ministry in the various schools of the denomination.

—The Boston Congregationalist reports 2,047 additions at the May communions, and the Chicago Advance reports 10,129 additions to the churches since January 1.

—Mr. Moody opens at Northfield, Mass., on July 7, at the buildings lately dedicated there, a school for Bible instruction, to be attended by delegates from all over the Union. Extensive preparations are making for the event.

—A newly formed mission church among the Zulus of South Africa, has this among its regulations: "No member of this church shall be permitted to drink the white man's grog, nor native beer, nor touch it with his lips."

—Dr. Jamison, who took part in the late meeting at Monmouth, Ill., addressed by Gov. St. John, when a missionary in India fifty years ago, made the first temperance lecture in that country. He said Gen. Havelock requested him to tell them what that "Yankee notion, teetotalism was." The General, his staff and soldiers, were his audience, and after the lecture the General spread supper including six different kinds of wines, and said "teetotalism was a fine thing for soldiers, but not for officers."

—The Church Missionary Society have received from Mr. Mackay, missionary in Uganda, full confirmation of the accounts already received and published of the murder of Bishop Hannington and the majority of his fifty porters. One relic of special interest has been secured. The Bishop's pocket diary was purchased by one of the mission boys from the king's gatekeeper—the man who had been despatched with the order for the Bishop's execution.

—Dr. Munhall, the evangelist, who is laboring for the evangelization of Denver, says he regards the Pacific coast as the worst part of the country, and that in that section an exceedingly rare thing to find is a native young man who is a Christian.

—Captain Bray of the mission ship Morning Star has resigned, and becomes General Secretary of the Y. M. C. A. in Oakland, California. The Captain was the first General Secretary of the Honolulu Association, and filled the office very acceptably, during a few months of shore life in 1883. Captain N. W. Turner has been appointed to succeed Captain Bray in charge of the Morning Star.

—The Sunday-school statistics of the Methodist Episcopal church are now in and footed up for 1885, with the following results: Schools, 22,400; officers and teachers, 246,054; scholars, 1,815,032. This is an increase of 314 schools, 8,582 officers and teachers, and 57,596 scholars.

—In the Province of Shantung, China, the birthplace of Confucius, there were no Christians twenty-five years ago. Now there are 5,000 adherents to the different missions, more than half of them in the churches established by the American Presbyterians. There are thirty ordained and thirty-three female missionaries, and 300 places of worship.

—Sam Jones' appointments for the near future are as follows: Indianapolis, Ind., where he now is, to June 20; St. Paul, Minn., June 23 to 27; Eaton Rapids, Mich., June 29 to July 2; Concord, Mass., July 5; Chautauqua, N. Y., July 7 to 11; in Missouri, July 15 to 25; Loveland, Ohio, Aug. 1 to 6; Columbus, Ohio, Aug. 7; Lancaster camp meeting, Aug. 9 to 15; Toledo, Ohio, September 5 to 19; Toronto, Canada, October 3 to 24.

—The Chicago Avenue church Sunday-school (in this city) gave a musical entertainment in the church building on the evening of the 17th inst., which was unique in character and very much enjoyed by the 2,000 people in attendance. Mr. J. M. Hitchcock is the veteran superintendent of this school, which has an enrolled membership of 2,050, with eighty teachers and twenty-one officers. The school was founded in 1857 by Mr. D. L. Moody, and is sustained during the entire year without a vacation. It has the largest adult Bible classes of any Sunday-school in the city.

—The Rescue and Evangelization Mission, a branch of the Salvation Army which has split off from the parent stem, has prohibited the use of military titles by its members, and the wearing of uniforms. The Gospel Army also puts aside the warlike drum and regalia.

—The committee of the church in Madagascar for revising the Bible in their native language, which held its first sitting in December, 1873, is expected soon to complete its work. An effort is being made toward a new translation of the Scriptures for the use of Sunday-schools in Sweden, which are growing rapidly in numbers. The present authorized translation is considered very defective, and is expensive. One result of the Sunday-school teaching has been to awaken a demand for a more reliable translation at a lower price. The interest in Bible study and teaching is greatly increasing throughout the world.

—Rev. J. F. Ellis, who has been on trial as vice-president for the past three years, has been elected permanent president of Pacific University at Forest Grove, Oregon. Mr. Ellis graduated at Wheaton College, in 1869, and at Oberlin Theological Seminary in 1873. He is now 43 years old. He went to Oregon in 1874, first serving as pastor at Forest Grove for about a year and a half, after which he went to Seattle, where he served in the same capacity until 1883, when he was called to the vice-presidency of the institution.

—The Rev. Dr. Rush, Secretary of the Freedmen's Aid Society of the M. E. Church, tells the following story before the Annual Conferences. It may have a wider application than the one given it by him:

"A young negro in the South had been converted and at once wanted to preach. His elders thought he was not fitted for the important work; but he well-nigh staggered them by relating a vision, in which he had plainly seen the letters 'G. P. C.'—which could mean only 'Go preach Christ.' A white-haired negro preacher slowly arose, and told the ambitious young brother that, while he had no doubt seen the letters in a vision, he had failed in the interpretation. They probably meant, 'Go pick cotton,' or 'Go plough corn.' This settled the matter."

—Dr. Samuel K. Lothrop for fifty-four years pastor of the Brattle street church at Boston, expired Saturday.

—In the discussion concerning the Congo Mission at Asbury Park the hope was more than once expressed that our colored brethern might become interested in that mission and furnish laborers for it. In this view the words of the Rev. Dr. Moffat, who could speak, from his experience of many years of African missionary labor, with surpassing authority, are worth reproducing. They are these: "Africans must go to teach and save Africans. It is the Divine plan. There is no hope for the masses of Africa, by any white labor to be sent to that country." This was urged not only on account of the perils from the climate but because that colored men were better able to reach the people. While we find that in building railroads, than which no employment can expose them to more poisonous climatic influences, there are scores of European whites ready to superintend the work, there surely ought to be no lack of white men for mission work, yet if there are those who are better qualified physically for the work every effort should be made to secure such laborers for the field. Our colored brethren, if their sympathies become thoroughly awakened for Africa, will be broadened and ennobled to a greater degree by such influence than by any other agency.

FRENCH PROTESTANT MISSION.

In the name of God and those for whom he sent his beloved Son, I appeal to the sympathy of the Christian Cynosure readers, in order to continue the evangelization work among Irish and French people in Chicago. Our work is strictly unsectarian. Secret Societies, the pest of this world, is also the subject of our cares, as far as battling it is concerned. The Lord has blessed our work. Ezra A. Cook, Esq., so well known among the Christian Cynosure readers, is giving us $10 a month towards paying the rent of the hall. We need $15 more. Who will help among your readers?

P. A. SEGUIN, Pastor.

135 W. Van Buren St., Chicago.

A METHODIST MARTYR.

We think our readers will be interested in the following petition to the presiding elder, signed by the leading members of the Equinunk (Pa.) Methodist church, for the removal of their pastor. It is the pastor, not the church, that has stepped outside the common course. To be sure, Elder Gamble quotes abundance of Scripture to sustain his seven theses, but every point is a rebuke to the current practice or teaching of most popular churches. Not only will Elder Gamble most likely have to depart out of the coasts of Equinunk, but probably not a first class Methodist church in the land will tolerate so eccentric an individual. Nor will he better his prospects by changing his denominational relation to any of the leading sects. Those facts probably confirm Elder Gamble in his belief of the seventh thesis.

To the Rev. F. J. Belcher, Presiding Elder.—Whereas, The Rev. J. Lee Gamble, who was appointed at the last session of the New York conference to be our pastor for the ensuing year has informed us that he holds and preaches the following doctrine, as herewith stated in his own language, viz:—

First—The church building should be used only for religious worship, and never for lectures, fairs, festivals, entertainments, etc.—John 2: 13–17, etc.

Second—That all church money should be raised by direct, cheerful Christian giving, and not by parties, plays, suppers, fairs or entertainments of any kind; according to 1 Cor. 16: 2; 2 Cor. 9: 7, etc.

Third—That in the matter of dress we should all conform to both the spirit and letter of the apostolic precept (1 Tim. 2: 9, 10; 1 Pet. 3: 3–5), and put away the wearing of gold and all costly and superfluous apparel.

Fourth—That Christians should marry only with Christians, and never contrary to the literal interpretation of 1 Cor. 7: 39, and 2 Cor. 6: 14–18.

Fifth—That all Christians should come out and be seperate from all secret, oathbound societies of whatever name or object, according to Matt. 5: 34–36; 2 Cor. 6: 14–18; John 18: 20; Jer. 17: 5; John 3: 20, 21, etc.

Sixth—That the Bible shows that as full provision has been made for bodily sickness as for sin, and that the prayer of faith will still heal the sick.—James 5: 14–16; Mark 16: 17, 18; Matt. 8: 16, 17; Ex. 15: 26; Deut. 28: 22–27, 59–61; Psa. 105: 37, etc.

Seventh—That we are living in the last days; that the world is growing worse, and the professing church more and more corrupt; that the Lord Jesus Christ will soon come in person, in flaming fire, taking vengeance on them that know not God and that obey not the gospel, and to be glorified in his saints and admired in all them that believe, and to set up his own literal kingdom on the earth.—2 Tim. 3: 1–5; Matt. 34: 37–39; Matt. 24: 12; Matt. 7: 22, 23; 2 Tim. 4: 3, 4; 2 Thess. 1: 8–10: Isa. 32: 1; Rev. 5: 10; Rev. 20: 4–6.

And wheeas, in our judgment the preaching of these doctrine would be detrimental to the interests of this charge; therefore,

Resolved, that, while we do not rebel against the action of the New York conference, nor entertain any other than the kindest feelings towards Brother Gamble personally, we do respectfully state that, for the reasons given, his withdrawal from the pastorate of the Equinunk charge would meet our approval.

OBITUARY.

JOHN G. WEST was born January 21, 1812, and died June 9, 1886. Fifty years ago last week the pioneer band of settlers came to Galesburg. Wednesday morning at two o'clock the last survivor in our midst of the adult members of the band went from us to a better country, evenly an heavenly. That company, consisting of Mr. and Mrs. Nehemiah West, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Conger and their children, Mr. Barber Allen and the two young men, John G. West and ram Tyler, came from Cayuga county, New York, where Mr. West's early life was spent. His elder brother, Nehemiah, was one of the leaders in the enterprise which founded Galesburg, and when he and his brother-law, Mr. Conger, decided to go as the advance guard of the colony, John entered into the project with all a young man's enthusiasm and decided to accompany them. From that day to this he has been a prominent factor in the history of Galesburg.

Having seen the rest of the colony well settled in their temporary homes, he thought it time to found a home for himself. With his usual forethought he had arranged for this before leaving New York, and in December, 1836, returned to claim his bride, Amy, who for these fifty years has blessed and brightened his home. They were married during the holidays, and in January commenced their famous wedding journey, the like of which we shall never see again. The entire distance from Java, New York, to Log City was made overland with their own team, sometimes on wheels, sometimes on runners, as good wheeling or good sleighing prevailed.

From that home coming they have had a part in every good word and work connected with Galesburg. Log City records show not only the formation of the Old First Church as laid there, but an anti-slavery and a temperance society to both of which they belonged; later, when Galesburg became a station on the underground railroad, he was occasionally a conductor thereon.

When Log City moved out on the prairie and became Galesburg, John West, who was a farmer, bought his land two and a half miles west of town, where he lived ever after, moving from one side of the road to the other, as his increasing family made a larger house necessary, but returning to the original spot when the marriage of sons and their going to homes of their own made the larger house seem lonesome. His three little daughters were awaiting him in heaven; six sons survive him; Charles, of Lincoln, Nebraska; Lyman, of Goldsbery, Missouri; Ira, of Tina, Missouri; Nehemiah, of Pueblo, Colorado; Homer and Willard, of this place. Widely scattered as his children are, his friends and his influence extend much farther. A gentleman remarked to-day: "I believe there is not a county in Nebraska in which there is not some one who knew him and will feel that in John West's death he has lost a friend." This widespread influence was not gained by public service, but by fifty years of faithfully doing the duty that stood next to him. To do the right, as God gave him to see the right, was the rule of his life, and he lived so near his Saviour that he never lacked guidance.

The church of Christ, especially that branch of it to which he belonged, the Old First Church, was most tenderly loved by him. Not one of its loyal sons and daughters had its interests, spiritual and material, more at heart. He was ever in his place at its services, ever ready to respond to its pastor's call to Christian work, to give time, money, for labor its good. For many, many years he has been one of its trustees. Last January he insisted as he had previously done, that the time had come for a younger man to take his place. His request to be released had always before been refused, but this time he urged it with such almost piteous pertinacity that his resignation was accepted.

All the grand principles of reform to which this old church has given sturdy adherence were cherished in his heart of hearts. He was an Abolitionist when anti-slavery sentiments were apt to cost a man dear; a staunch, ture temperance man, from principle, not from policy; and a pronounced foe to all manner of secret societies. He never flinched or compromised. He possessed an in unusual degree that rarest faculty—ability to give good advice. Probably the judgment of no man in the county was more often appealed to, or more thoroughly trusted than his. He was pre-eminently a level headed man. His mind was broad and comprehensive, and he was one of the best informed men in the community. When disputes concerning facts arose, "ask John West," was a final appeal. A close, an accurate observer with an uncommonly retentive memory, the store of information he gathered during his long life, fitted him to answer such appeals. He possessed the family fondness for books, and was a great reader. When stricken down to die he had just completed Grant's memoirs; his spectacles lying on the book where he had left them. But more than for his clear head, his good judgment, his stores of knowledge, will John West be remembered for his great, loving heart. No child ever came near him that did not love him; no one in want and distress who did not find in him a friend. What he was to his own no words can tell. To-day his six sons mourn for him no more sincerely than his three foster daughters, the children of his brother and sister, left fatherless in childhood, who found in him a father's care and tenderness.

The summons came suddenly. Stricken down with apoplexy he lay unconscious through hours that seemed interminable to the loving watchers, then "passed through the gates into the city." This sudden death was what he had desired. His work was done, and his Saviour called him to his rest.

His work was well done. His was a completed life, possessing the same symmetry that distinguished his character, which showed no weak side.

DARIUS BURTCH of Antwerp, Jefferson county, N. J., departed this life May 23, 1886, aged nearly eighty-six years. He came to this country a young man of twenty-three years, with his axe and a pack on his back from Herkimer county, N. Y., with but three cents left in his pocket. On his arrival he contracted for a piece of land in its primal state, a few miles north of Antwerp. He chopped and cleared and fenced four acres and put it in crops; worked for other settlers enough to pay for his board, and returned to his native county. He returned the next spring, built his log cabin, married Miss Mary E. Streeter, and remained in this county till his death. His first wife died June 17, 1850. She was the mother of ten children, five of whom are still living. September 15th, 1851, he again married Lucina Dodge, an estimable lady some twenty years younger than himself, who still survives him; and as the fruit of this union two children were born unto them, one of whom is still living. Bro. Burtch was a kind husband and affectionate father, and by industry, frugality and economy obtained a competence so that for the last twenty-five years of his life he was able to retire from his farm and live in comparative ease.. Duing the pastorate of Rev. L. A. Wicks, he professed religion and united with the Presbyterian church, March, 1, 1840, since which time he has been an esteemed and honored member, and a reformer in every sense of the term. He regarded the Christian Cynosure as the best reform paper published, because it was so outspoken and fearless on all reforms it advocated. J. W.C.

BUSINESS.

How many more shall we hear from before another week closes?

We wish to add many more names to this list. Send your names and post-office address with the money. We cannot open a book account, as would be necessary if we did not require money in advance. When your name and money is received your order is at once entered in the shipping book and you will receive the book as soon as we can get it out. We hope to issue it by the middle of June, but cannot say positively how soon. It is being compiled by Rev. H. H. Hinman as fast as his other duties will permit.

We want one thousand orders in advance. Send in your names.

You will see by the report of the Committee on the Cynosure at the annual meeting, that the year was closed with a few more subscribers than we began with one year ago. This is encouraging, indeed.

The American Newspaper Directory, issued May, 1886, says: "Circulations have generally decreased during the past year."

The success during the hard times of the year past, has been your success as well as ours. Will you join hands with us for another long pull, and strong pull to place the Cynosure into as many homes as possible? Will you renew promptly, and, so far as possible, look after the subscription list in your neighborhood?

Four hundred and sixty-one Southern ministers are now reading the Cynosure!

Does your minister have the reading of the paper? Can you donate anything to the fund for sending the Cynosure to Southern ministers?

"Masonic Outrages" is not yet completed, and our friends must be patient. It is being put in type and will be issued as soon as practical.

Berea College History.

PP. 87, CLOTH, 40 CENTS.

The establishment of a College for the education of colored children and the white children of the mountaineers in a slave State at a time when the whole country was shaken by the discussion of abolition, was a sublime act of faith in God who "hath made of one blood all nations of men."

This is what REV. JOHN G. FEE did at Berea, Ky., and the friends of reform cannot spend 40 cents better than to send for this HISTORY OF PRACTICAL CHRISTIANITY, of faith tried, and of precious deliverances that read like a chapter from the book of Daniel.

FARM NOTES.

SUMMER CARE OF WORK HORSES.

The grooming—as it is called—of horses is quite as important as the feeding, and in summer time when the teams are worked hard, it is indispensable to their welfare. When a horse is working, the exertion from the skin is profuse, and pours from it the form of perspiration. When this dries on the skin it leaves a quantity of impure matter adhering to it, which is apt to close the pores and prevent the escape of perspiration. This produces disorder, in the form of congestion of the myriads of capillary vessels which form a close network near the surface of the body, and the excretion and secretions being stopped, the skin becomes harsh, dry, contracted and diseased. The impure matter—being unable to escape—gathers in places and forms pimples, blotches, or tumors; and, if it is not removed, there is danger of poisoning the blood, and, with the appearance of farcy and glanders, finally death. All this may be prevented by carefnl attention to the skin, by occasionally washing, regnlar currying and brnshing, and proper care to avoid galling by the rubbing of ilifitting harness. As prevention is the best cure, it is well that the owners of horses shonld exercise all possible precautions to avoid the frequent disorders which result from neglect in the direction pointed out, and thus save mnch annoyance and loss.—American Agriculturist.

CURING CLOVER.

My own method of curing clover, or part clover and timothy, is to cut in the afternoon and evening, and let it lie exposed, as left spread out by the machine, all night. The dew will not hurt it. The next morning, as soon as the dew is off, spread out with a fork all the thick masses, or lodged portions of the field. And then, as soon as the surface of hay is dry, rake it into windrows. Turn these windrows by hand and spread out a little where necessary. Then, in the middle of the afternoon, rake these windrows into large bunches and make the hay into cocks. We do not stop to gather up the hay clean. It is a waste of time and labor. Follow with a steel horse-rake and dump the hay as near the cocks as possible. We keep two rakes going and aim to do as much of the work as possible with the rakes. An intelligent boy on the rake will save half the labor of cocking. We rake all the land between rows of cocks and as much as possible between the cocks themselves. The rakings are put on top of the cocks and at the same time we trim up the cocks and make them compact and snug. All the hay you rake up in this way is saved; all that is left is lost or greatly damaged. Old rakings, after being exposed to rain or dew for two or three days, are worth less than good straw.—Joseph Harris, in American Agriculturist.

DESTROYING WEEDS.

All small, delicate crops which require hand weeding should be cleaned out at once, as soon as they can be seen in the row. A delay of forty-eight hours will often double the work, and a week may entirely ruin the crop. The best time to destroy a weed is before it comes up, and the mere stirring of the surface for an inch, as soon as the land is dry enough to work after a rain will destroy nine-tenths of the weeds that have started. Make it a rule that a weed shall never go to seed on your garden. The average farmer's garden of one-fourth of an acre ripens enough weed seed to supply the entire farm, and it will take more than five years to get such a garden clean; but if clean cultivation is persevered in the time will come when the labor of cultivating the garden will be reduced one-half. It is not difficult to keep a garden clear of weeds if all the crops are planted in rows running the length of the garden: those that mature at the same time should be pnt near together, and as soon as past use removed, and the land thoroughly worked with the horse cultivator and some other crop planted. I keep all the garden in use, if it is only to grow sweet corn for the cows, and this planted as late as Augnst 1st, has tasseled and set ears and produced from each sqnare rod enough good fodder to feed two cows a day.— Vick's Magazine.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. A historical sketch of the institution and a critical analysis of the character of each degree, by Prest. J. Blanchard, of Wheaton College. Monitorial quotations and nearly four hundred notes from standard Masonic authorities confirm the truthfulness of this exposition and show the character of Masonic teaching and doctrine. The accuracy of this exposition legally attested by J. O. Doeshurg, Past Master Unity ☐ No. 191, Holland, Mich., and others. This is the latest, most accurate and complete exposition of Blue Lodge and Chapter Masonry. Over one hundred illustrations—several of them full page—give a pictorial representation of the lodge-room, chapter and principal ceremonies of the degrees, with the dress of candidates, signs, grips, etc. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1 00

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished, with engravings showing the lodge-room, dress of candidates, signs, due guards, grips, etc. This revelation was so accurate that Freemasons murdered the author for writing it. 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Prest. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian This book has opened the eyes of multitudes In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7 50. Paper cover, 25 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. To which is appended "A Revelation of the Mysteries of Oddfellowship (old work,) by a Member of the Craft." The whole containing over five hundred pages, lately revised and republished. In cloth, $1.50 each: per dozen, $14.50. The first part of the above work, Light on Freemasonry, 416 pages, 75 cents each; per dozen $7.50.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern. A book of great interest to officers of the army and navy, the bench and the clergy. TABLE OF CONTENTS: The Antiquity of Secret Societies, The Life of Julian, The Eleusinian Mysteries, The Origin of Masonry, Was Washington a Mason? Fillmore and Webster's Deference to Masonry, A Brief Outline of the Progress of Masonry in the United States, The Tammany Ring, Masonic Benevolence, the Uses of Masonry, An Illustration, The Conclusion 50 cents each; per dozen, $4.75.

Masonic Oaths Null and Void; or, Freemasonry Self-Convicted. This is a book for the times. The design of the author is to refute the arguments of those who claim that the oaths of Freemasonry are binding upon those who take them. His arguments are conclusive, and the forcible manner in which they are put, being drawn from Scriptnre, makes them convincing. The minister or lecturer will find in this work a rich fund of arguments. 207 pp., postpaid.....40 cts.

The Mystic Tie, or Freemasonry a League with the Devil. This is an account of the church trial of Peter Cook and wife, of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a reverend Freemason; and their very able defense presented by Mrs. Lucia C. Cook, in which she clearly shows that Freemasonry is antagonistic to the Christian religion. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Morgan's Exposition, Abduction and Murder, and Oaths of 32 Degrees. Composed of "Freemasonry Exposed," by Capt. Wm. Morgan "History of the Abduction and Murder of Morgan;" "Valance's Confession of the Murder of Capt. Wm Morgan;" Bernard's Reminiscences of Morgan Times," and Oaths and Penalties of 33 Degrees 224 pages.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin Trial. Also the letter of Hon. Richard Rush to the anti-Masonic committee of York County, Pa., May 4th, 1831. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14th, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons, swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

In the Coils; or, the Coming Conflict. By "A Fanatic." A historical sketch, by a United Presbyterian minister, vividly portraying the workings of Secretism in the various relations of everyday life, and showing how individual domestic, social, religious, professional and public life are trammeled and biased by the baneful workings of the lodge. Being presented in the form of a story, this volnme will interest both old and young, and the moral of the story will not have to be searched for. $1.50 each; $15.00 per dozen.

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' Letters on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Thirty most interesting, able and convincing letters on the above general subject, written by this renowned statesman to different public men of the United States during the years 1831 to 1833. With Mr. Adams' address to the people of Massachusetts upon political aspects of lodgery; an Appendix giving obligations of Masonry, and an able Introduction. This is one of the most telling anti-secrecy works extant, aside from the Expositions. Price, cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00. Paper, 35 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

Mah-Hah-Bone; comprises the Hand Book, Master's Carpet and Freemasonry at a Glance. Bound in one volnme. This makes one of the most complete books of information on the workings and symbolism of Freemasonry extant. Well bound in cloth, 589 pp.....$1.00

General Washington Opposed to Secret Societies. This is a republication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8th, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life—undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason. 10 cents each; per dozen, 75 cents.

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the five degrees of Female Free Masonry, by Thomas Lowe; comprising the degree of Jephtha's Daughter, Ruth, Esther, Martha and Electa, and known as the Daughter's Degree, Widow's Degree, Wife's Degree, Sister's Degree and the Benevolent Degree. 20 cents each; per dozen, $1.75.

Stearns' Inquiry into the Nature and Tendency of Freemasonry. With an Appendix treating on the truth of Morgan's Exposition and containing remarks on various points in the character of Masonry, and a Dialogue on the necessity of exposing the lodge. 338 pages: cloth, 60 cents each per dozen. $5.00. Paper covers, 40 cents each; per dozen, $4.00.

Thirteen Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason. By Rev. Robert Armstrong. The author states his reasons clearly and carefully, and any one of the thirteen reasons, if properly considered, will keep a Christian out of the lodge. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate. By Rev. A. L. Post. Proof of the sinfulness of such oaths and the consequent duty of all who have taken them to openly repudiate them. 5 cents each; per dozen, 50 cents.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry, by E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge, No. 639, Chicago, gives the correct or "standard" work and ritual of Masonry; the proper position of each officer in the lodge room, order of opening and closing the lodge, dress of candidate, ceremony of initiation, the proper manner of giving the signs, grips, etc., are fully illustrated and explained. First three degrees. Paper cover, 35 cents.

Reminiscences of Morgan Times. By Elder David Bernard, author of Bernard's Light on Masonry This is a thrilling narrative of the incidents connected with Bernard's Revelation of Freemasonry. 10 cents each, per dozen, $1.00.

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

Masonry a Work of Darkness, adverse to Christianity, and inimical to republican government. By Rev. Lebbens Armstrong (Presbyterian), a seceding Mason of 21 degrees. This is a very telling work and no honest man who reads it will think of joining the lodge. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.25.

Secret Societies. A discussion of their character and claims, by Rev. David McDill, Prest. J. Blanchard and Rev. Edward Beecher. In cloth, 35c. per doz. $3.25. Paper cover. 15c. Per doz. $1.25.

Freemasonry Self-Condemned. By Rev J. W. Bain. A careful and logical statement of reasons why secret orders should not be fellowshiped by the Christian Church, and by the United Presbyterian church in particular. Paper covers: price, 20 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

The Master's Carpet, or Masonry and Baal Worship Identical, explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the lodge, and proves that Modern Masonry is identical with the "Ancient Mysteries" of Paganism. Bound in fine cloth, 420 pp.....75cts.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 Degrees of Freemasonry. To get these thirty-three degrees of Masonic bondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths. 15 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

Bernard's Appendix to Light on Masonry. Showing the character of the institution by its terrible oaths and penalties. Paper covers: 25 cents each; per dozen, $2.00.

IN BRIEF.

The New Hampshire law punishing with a fine of $20 the sale of a cigarette to a boy or girl under 16 years of age has gone into effect.

In ancient times when Peruvians died and were mummified, the men who did the embalming, in order to compensate for the loss of the human eyes and make the face look natural, substituted those of a fish. As the eyes of the fish were spherical, they cut them transversely, and after drying them, placed them in the eyeless sockets, where they may be found today in a state of perfect preservation.

The Lancaster Examiner has discovered two Bibles dating back to the middle of the fifteenth century, but it is surpassed by the Harrisburg Call, which has found in the possession of Mr. Joseph Miller, of Fishervi'le, a copy of Luther's translation of the Scriptures, published in 1522.

General S. had some shirts made at a fashionable hosier's, and the cutter, a few weeks later, met the General with a friend walking in Broadway. The General remembered the face, but could not place him, and the cutter greeted him with: "Good morning, General. How are you to day?" The General stopped, shook hands, and the cutter perceiving that the General's mind needed refreshing, said quietly: "Made your shirts." "Oh, I beg pardon," said the General quickly, and turning to the gentlemen with whom he was walking, he said: "Colonel, allow me to introduce you to my friend, Major Schurz.—New York Ledger.

There is truly nothing new under the sun! It now appears that Pasteur's discovery by which certain germs which produce specific diseases are passed through animal tissue, and are thereby rendered less harmful, so that by inoculation they would act as a prophylactic, was not unknown in the Middle Ages; but in those times the poisons were passed through the body of animals to intensify their virulence. Modern chemists are just beginning to discover the composition of the famous Naples water. This was a colorless liquid, indistinguishable from ordinary water, but a few drops of which were fatal. A woman named Tophania is said to have murdered 600 persons with this Naples water. It is now found to be a preparation of arsenic, which being passed through diseased animal tissue, became as deadly as the poison of a snake. The poisoning so common in Italy and France several generations ago, was done by agents that became deadly after being passed through the bodies of animals or men. In other words, Pasteur's method of research was reversed, for he tames his diseased germs so as to prevent disease, while in the olden times the effort was to prepare poisons worse than anything found in nature.—Demorest's Monthly.

The Afghans call themselves "Bini Is-hé," or children of Israel, but consider term "Yahodee," a Jew, to be one of reproach. They say Nebuchadnezzar, after the overthrow of the temple of Jerusalem, transplanted them to the town of Ghore, near Bameean; and that they were Afghans from their chief, Afghana, who was a son of the uncle of Asof—the vizier of Solomon. They say that they lived as Jews until the Caliph summoned them in the first century of Mohammedanism to assist in the wars with the infidels. After the campaign the Afghans returned to their native country, and were governed by a king of the line of Cyrus till the eleventh century, when they were subdued by Mahood. As is well known, this dynasty was divided at the death of its founder into the divisions east and west of Indus, a state of things which lasted till the prosperity of Timourlane reduced both to a new yoke. I can see no good reason for discrediting the traditions and history of the Afghans, though the dates do not exactly correspond with those of the Old Testament. The Afghans look like Jews; and the younger brother marries the widow of the elder, according to the law of Moses. —Burnes' "Travels into Bokahara."

HORSFORD'S ACID PHOSPHATE,

Advantageous in Dyspesia.

DR. G. V. DORSEY, Piqua, Ohio, says: "I have used it in dyspepsia with very marked benefit. If there is deficiency of acid in the stomach, nothing affords more relief, while the action on the nervous system is decidedly beneficial."

Thurlow Weed's Great Letter

On the abduction and murder of WILLIAM MORGAN in 1826, which has been the most widely published of any Anti-masonic document. The dedication of a noble granite monument to the memory of Morgan, and the able and eloquent addresses of the Convention make this a most valuable pamphlet.

SEE WHY.

It contains—
1. Portrait of Morgan.
2. Portrait of Thurlow Weed.
3. Fine picture of the Monument.
4. The great letter of Thurlow Weed and his affidavit—almost the last public act of his life.
5. Address by J. E. Roy, D.D.
6. The monument oration by Pres. C. A. Blanchard.
7. Addresses on "Christian Politics" by Pres. J. Blanchard, on the Character of Freemasonry by Prof. E. D. Bailey, on the "Freedmen and Secret Societies" by Rev. H. H. Hinman; and very interesting personal and historical reminiscences.

IN THE COILS;

—OR—

The Coming Conflict.

A NEW AND STRANGE STORY BASED ON STARTLING FACTS, VIVIDLY PORTRAYING A MYSTERIOUS AND DANGEROUS POWER AT WORK IN THE GOVERNMENT, THE CHURCH, AND THE HOME.

"All will agree that this is a powerfully written story."—Evangelist, (Chicago, Ills.)

"A book which we trust may have a wide circulation."—National Baptist, (Philadelphia.)

"So intensely interesting did I find it that it was hard to pause until the last sentence was read. This work places the author high among the writers of fiction."—W. W. Barr, D. D. in Christian Instructor, (Philadelphia.)

"Unless we are greatly mistaken, the work will do more to awaken the American church and people to the evils of Freemasonry than any other book recently published."—Evangelical Repository.

"The book will create a sensation in Masonic circles, and evoke criticism of a most relentless character. The courage of the author in attacking such a rock-rooted bulwark as Freemasonry is something to admire, Fanatic though he be."—Nebraska Wat'chman.

"Light is needed on this subject and needed badly, and we welcome this contribution to the literature of anti-secretism, and cordially commend it to the favorable attention of our readers."—United Presbyterian, (Pittsburgh.)

"A charming work, fit to be classed with 'Uncle Tom's Cabin;' it is indeed less a work of fiction. The volume is as valuable as a work of reference as it is agreeable, truthful and useful. Our young folks will not leave the book, if they begin it, till they 'see how it turns out.'"—Cynosure, (Chicago, Ills.)

ALL-NIGHT INHALATION!

"A positive revolution in the treatment of Air-Passage Diseases of the Nose, Throat, and Lungs, and, for the purpose designed, as valuable a discovery as vaccination."

THE PILLOW-INHALER.

A Speedy, Positive and Permanent Cure for Catarrh, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Incipient Consumption.

It is a hair pillow, with reservoirs of evaporating liquid, the fumes or vapor of which is inhaled all night long, whilst sleeping as usual, and without any discomfort. It is used only at night, and is perfectly safe to the most delicate. There is no stomach-dosing, douching or snuffing; but just as a smoky lamp will leave a deposit on a whitened wall so the PILLOW-INHALER, for say eight hours at a time, spreads a powerful healing balm or salve on the inflamed inner coating of the diseased air-surfaces, from the nostrils to the bottom of the lungs, and hence into the blood. Old-fashioned inhalation, through a tube, for a few minutes a day, sometimes cured. Think of eight hours constant action, on the same principle, but intensified a hundred-fold! There are no pipes or tubes. The medicine is breathed in, not swallowed, and goes right to the diseased parts.

CATARRH. BRONCHITIS. CONSUMPTION.

HON. E. L. HEDDEN, Collector of the Port of New York, says: "I take pleasure in stating that the PILLOW-INHALER has been of the greatest relief, and I believe of permanent benefit, to my wife, who has been a great sufferer from Bronchial and Catarrhal Troubles, accompanied with distressing Asthma. I recommend its use to all persons afflicted with such maladies."

E. L. HEDDEN, 38 West 49th St., New York.

MR. H. G. TEELE, 50 Bryan Block, Chicago, Ill., says: "I suffered fifteen years from a severe case of Catarrh; coughed incessantly day and night. I bought a PILLOW-INHALER, and since using it my cough is gone; my lungs are no longer weak and sore, and I am in better health than I have been for years."

During the six years of its existence the PILLOW-INHALER has wrought cures of Catarrh, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption, that have been more like miracles than the usual treatment of disease. It is not expensive, and is within the reach of every one. Send for Explanatory Pamphlet and Testimonials, or call.

LUCILLE VERNON.

Cloth.....75 cents.

THIS is a pleasant surprise in many ways. The author is Rev. W. T. Meloy, of the United Presbyterian Church of Chicago, and the book is published by the Board of Publication of his denomination. It is a love story, not "fascinating," but with so much of genial interest that the reader is in no danger of laying it down unfinished. * * * The moral purpose of the book is to describe and vindicate Christian character, in its more heroic aspects, and it is a success. We congratulate the author and the United Presbyterian Board of Publication on this literary lily of the valley.—The Interior.

"LUCILLE VERNON" is evidently not an ideal sketch, but the fictitious names used represent to a great extent real men and women of flesh and blood. The characters of many of them are by no means attractive, but are perfect counterparts of querulous, obstinate and parsimonious professors who are thorns in the flesh of many a pastor in all the churches. But as in all the churches, there were also good and true men and women at Lansington, who upheld and encouraged the pastor. * * * In its author will be recognized the worthy pastor of the First United Presbyterian Church of Chicago, and a welcome contributor to these columns.—United Presbyterian.

The heroine, who becomes the bride of the pastor of the church at Lansington, is a wonderful exemplification of how a woman who is a true wife and help-meet may throw her life and energies into the great work of saving souls; aiding, by gentle words and sympathy, wise counsel and brave endurance, the husband having charge of a congregation where the Demon of Misrule held full sway. We follow with interest the history of the wife and husband through their hours of despondency and discouragement to the happy ending, where religion, harmony and peace have gained the ascendency and the good man and wife find their reward.—Pittsburgh Daily Telegraph.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

WASHINGTON.

The Senate passed the Fitz John Porter relief bill last Friday, by a vote of 30 to 17. Cleveland will no doubt sign it with alacrity.

The United States Senate, Monday, passed a bill granting Dearborn Park to the city of Chicago "for the use and benefit of public and benevolent institutions." The bill now goes to the House of Representatives.

Judge Stanley Matthews, of the Supreme Court, was united in marriage to Mrs. Mary K. Theaker in New York Wednesday morning. The pair go to Europe for three months.

The Senate Committee on Commerce has nearly completed the river and harbor bill. Items in the House bill have been increased to the aggregate of $3,483,275, and others have been decreased to the aggregate of $615,500; net increase $2,867,775; total appropriation by the Senate bill, $18,049,975.

COUNTRY.

The report that Miss Rose Elizabeth Cleveland is soon to become a resident of Chicago is verified by a friend in New York. Miss Cleveland will assume editorial charge of a magazine.

The threatened reign of terror in East St. Louis upon the suspension of the entire police force of that city has begun. June 15 Henry Steriet, a nephew of Mayor Bowman, who was mysteriously assassinated last December, was severely beaten by two men and afterward robbed. J. D. Miller, a reporter, was assaulted, brutally beaten and left for dead.

Luther M. Frank, age thirteen, son of Judge J. L. H. Frank, of Dayton, O., was killed June 15 by being hit with a baseball. He was engaged in a game, and was at the bat. Just as Herman Schuble, the pitcher, threw the ball, the attention of young Frank was directed to some other point and the ball struck him in the region of the heart, causing almost instant death.

Judge Nott created a sensation in the county court at Albany, N. Y., Tuesday, by announcing that Superintendent McEwen, of the Albany penitentiary, had offered him a bribe of $50 for every long-term prisoner sent to that prison.

Hon. David Davis died at his home in Bloomington, Ill., Saturday morning. Judge Davis was in the 72d year of his age, being born in Maryland, in 1815. He came to Illinois in 1836, and has resided at Bloomington continuously ever since, having, in the meantime, been a member of the Legislature, Circuit Judge, member of Congress, Judge of the United States Supreme Court, and United States Senator. Judge Davis's funeral took place at Bloomington Tuesday afternoon.

The switchmen of the Lake Shore railway in Chicago, struck again last week, because eight non-lodgemen had not been turned off at their dictation. Saturday, a train consisting of two locomotives and two cabooses, which were manned by 100 officers, attempted to run the gaunt let of the strikers, and the train and officers were captured by twenty-five men, who took possession of two engines and gave pursuit. Later in the day another attempt was made by the strikers to capture a train bound for Elkhart, and the strikers were completely routed by Captain Hunt's Hyde Park policemen. Fifty of the strikers were arrested and imprisoned in police stations everywhere. President Newell, of the Lake Shore, has directed a letter to Sheriff Hanchett, in which he roundly censures the latter's attitude, and he also threatens to hold the sheriff's bondsmen responsible for all damage that befalls the company's business and property. Judge Shepard has issued an injunction against seventy of the strikers, enjoining them from interfering with the movement of the company's trains. Monday trains, guarded by a strong force armed with Winchester rifles, made their way out of the city.

One hundred and eighty persons living near Pottsville, N. J., who attended a picnic last week and partook of canned ham, are dangerously ill, and it is feared that many deaths will result.

A whiskey mob at Clinton, Iowa, stormed the jail early Tuesday morning and attempted to secure the persons of two prisoners who have been "informing" on the saloon-keepers. The sheriff and his posse opened fire, and four men in the crowd were shot, but not dangerously hurt. Merchants in the town who oppose the saloons have received threatening letters.

Frank Dolliver, aged twenty-five, killed himself Sunday, June 20, in a Boston church, because his proposal of marriage had been rejected by a young woman.

Heavy rain and hail ruined fields of wheat, corn and oats, in the southern section of Macon county, Illinois, Wednesday night. There were three inches of hail on the ground Thursday morning.

H. H. Swift & Co., importers of sugars in New York and in Pernambuco, Brazil, have suspended, with liabilities which it is thought will reach $1,000,000, and the greater part of which is due to bankers for allowances.

The New England Institute Fair Buildings, at Boston, worth $250,000, were burned last Tuesday. Nine persons perished in the flames, and it is feared that many bodies have not been recovered. Sixteen persons are missing.

A fire followed by an explosion, destroyed the works of the American Forcite Powder Company at Hopatcong, N. J., Monday afternoon, entailing a loss of $100,000. No person was seriously hurt.

The Republicans of the New York Legislature passed a bill banishing the saloon from the State Capitol. The Democratic Governor of the State promptly vetoed it. When St. John gets a little time he will doubtless drop in on the Governor.

At a pic-nic 214 people were poisoned near Leamington, N. J. Six of them will probably die and twenty are in a precarious condition. It is now believed that the ice cream caused the trouble. Several analyses have been made, but nothing positive has been settled. Some attribute it to arsenic, but one physician explains that it is due to a poisonous condition of the milk used in the ice cream.

FOREIGN.

The French Government, Wednesday, issued a decree banishing the princes from the republic. Prince Napoleon and his son Victor left Paris in the afternoon, and the Count of Paris will depart Friday.

At Prague, Bohemia, a ferryboat capsized while crossing the river, throwing fifty persons into the water. Thus far twenty-five bodies have been recovered.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin Trial. Also the letter of Hon. Richard Rush to the anti-Masonic committee of York County, Pa., May 4th, 1831. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14th, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons, swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each; per dozen, $1.00.

The Cynosure has procured the finest portrait of ever made, and our readers may expect it next week with a biography of the wonderful man who was member of the lodge with Morgan, and tried in vain to save his life. Read the whole thrilling story in the "Broken Seal." This will make an attractive mid-summer number, which all will want to read and preserve.

Independence day has gone, and our country has entered its twelfth decade. The blue of our banner has more stars than when we passed the century epoch; and in spite of the dire clouds of perplexity, and misrule and fraud, there are more stars in the blue overhead as well.

"Our hearts, our hopes, our prayers, our tears,
Our faith triumphant o'er our fears,
Are all with thee—are all with thee!"

The Mayor of Chicago issued a characteristic proclamation for Independence day. He seems to have taken out an old copy of his record with the gamblers, saloons and houses of prostitution, and changed a few terms to fit it for the boys whose effervescent patriotism is always worrying the police and firemen on the 4th of July. The boys, he says, will have their fun in spite of threats and legal restrictions. So the considerate mayor tells them they may have their own sweet will in vacant lots and residence streets, except for pistol firing. "Now, boys, let us see how well we can all behave," closes this curiously paternal proclamation. The boys will vote for Harrison just as the gamblers have. He talks to both alike.

The first salary grab of the Massachusetts legislature is accompanied by an appropriation of $20,000 for the entertainment of President Cleveland during a proposed brief visit. If Mr. Clevelaud has not lost the spirit of the fathers of the Democratic party he will make an effort to kindly rebuke such a use of public funds, and give an opportunity for Gen. Butler and other wealthy members of his party to show their appreciation of his public services in Washington by a private subscription for his expenses.

The Interior wants to know what Mr. Moody's meeting at Northfield has to do with home and foreign missions, for they beloug to the sects. If Dr. Gray means the church missionary societies, he is right. They belong to the sects and have been deserving a like severe judgment. But why have not the Northfield people as much right to discuss missions as the little party of disciples at Jerusalem? And if Mr. Moody is to be tried by the result of his work, what oue missionary society, we should be glad to know, has done as much for missions as he during the past ten years? What society has lately raised up men like the Studd brothers; who, one by precept, and the other by illustrious example, have led hundreds to devote themselves to the mission work? The sects may learn of Moody iu this matter, not he of them.

The strike of the switchmen of the Lake Shore road has had no public sympathy, and its suppression by Winchester rifles has general approval. The men put forward a pretense for justification. President Newell, they say, did not keep his word and discharge eight men who would not join their lodge. Mr. Newell says he made no such promise; and if he did he ought to break it, for it would have been a promise to do an injustice. The non-union men have been long in the employ of the company, are faithful, and have families depending upon their labor. The decision of the road is, therefore, in so far, just and honorable; and the current of public opinion proves that sound sense is getting the better of the demagogue spirit that submits without question to the lodge. After the same patteru was the action of the foresworn carpenters last week Monday. It appears that many engaged in this trade are still working ten hours a day in Chicago. The lodge met and concocted a villainous revenge upon the ten-hour, non-union men. They marched in large squads to several buildings where non-unionists were laboring, and assailed them so terribly with stones that the poor fellows, outnumbered, fled for their lives. They were not any more in love with the lodge, however, for this geutle admonition, but next day returned to work after the manner of Nehemiah—a revolver in every nail-keg. The war of the lodge upon labor and society may all too soon develop into a pitched battle. These skirmishes threaten it.

Dr. Richard S. Storrs of Brooklyn, a conservative authority in questions of the kind, has lately begun to warmly advocate the appointment of women upon the school board of his city. His reasons for the recommendation are in brief that the value of the counsel and influence of earnest and educated women in the supervision of public schools has been placed beyond dispute wherever the experiment has been tried. The preponderance of female teachers over male, the proportion in Brooklyn being twenty-nine to one, makes it, he thinks, a matter of common fairness that some share in the general oversight and administration of the schools should be in the hands of women. He considers that the presence of cultivated women in the board would make all that is good in it better, and would add to its wisdom. The Mayor of Brooklyn has been moved by this appeal to promise a careful consideration of the matter in making future appointments.

Had Mayor Harrison of this city acted upou such principles as these, Chicago would have been spared a disgraceful scene at the late closing of the High School. The graduating exercises were held in one of the West Side churches, and the members of the class marked that no place was left for an opening prayer in the programme. They appealed to their principal, Welles, that there should be a decent recognition of God on such an occasion, in vain, and then to the Inspector Collier and Kraus, the president of the Board of Education, but with no better success. This Board is appointed by the mayor and seems to be wholly controlled by infidelity and Masonry. Welles gave as his reason for the refusal that the exercises of graduation were no religious ceremony at all, but "always purely secular," that it was not customary, and that it was opposed to the rules of the school Board. So is eating purely secular, but Mr. Welles is an ungrateful sinner if he does not give thanks for his daily bread; and if he had been with his brother infidel, Volney, iu that storm on Lake Erie, he would probably have gone down on his knees in prayer, although the use of means for the preservation of ship and crew was a "purely secular matter." Welles says it is nobody's business whether he has any religious belief or not. That a man, holding such sentiments, should have been allowed, for twenty years, in the Chicago High School, is an infamy upon the record of the school Board, and a serious reflection upon the moral courage of the Christian citizens of Chicago. No one a right!—Every one has a right; yes, a duty in this matter. Every parent is delinquent to his child, who is heedless whether the companion and instructor of that child for 200 days in the year, is a vile character, a heathen, a Mormon, or an infidel. How many Chicago parents would sleep quietly should Bob. Ingersoll, or John Most, or Josephine Mansfield be appointed a teacher in the public schools. Mr. Welles, in his infidel independeuce of God, thinks himself independent also of men. He should be dropped so quickly that he will never forget his mistake.

The true Indian policy is not in their isolation, that means concentrated aud perpetuated barbarism; but rather in their absorption by and intimate blendiug with the white race as a part of the body politic. Between this policy and extinction there seems to be no middle ground. The history of civilization never gives an instance of the rise of a people from barbarism except by the aid of those possessed of a higher civilization. The Indians, who have made some progress towards Christian development, are no exception. Their progress has resulted solely from missionary effort. The reservation plan, except when connected with vigorous missionary labors, has been more and worse than a failure. The plan of Capt. Pratt, at Carlisle, Penu., to educate Indian youth aud scatter them among the Christian families of that State, has worked well. It has made them self-supporting, self-respecting, aud Christian people. The same plau, on a larger scale, would be incomparably cheaper, wiser, and better than that of feeding and watching them. Each Indian youth in a government school is a hostage for the good behavior of his tribe. Such hostages need no prisons for their confinement, and feel no animosity towards their captors. The true Indian policy, we repeat, is his Christian education by his white brother, with a view of making him a fellow citizen.

One of the most common errors in the discussion of political and financial questions is to mistake effects for causes, aud to suppose that because one thing follows another, it is produced by it. This is the mistake especially of the Greenback and Anti-Monopoly party. Because a low rate of interest is favorable to business activity and the full employment of all available labor, they conclude that the general depression of business, and excess of labor seeking employment results from usurious rates, and that if the rate at which money is loaned were made by law much lower than it now is, there would result a great advancement in business activity. Now the facts are that rates of interest and the amount of money in actual circulation depend not nearly so much on legislative inactments as on causes over which the legislation has no direct control. In times of great commercial activity rates of interest are high, because business men can afford to pay higher rates, and money leuders can get them. On the other hand when business is depressed, from whatever cause, the rates of interest are low, simply because money cannot find profitable investment. This will be found to be universally true, except when loans are sought for an inadequate security, when the rate will always be high, and security of a higher grade will always be required in what are called hard times than when they are prosperous.

WHO ARE THE ANARCHISTS?

BY REV. H. H. HINMAN.

There are now under indictment and being tried before the Chicago courts a number of avowed anarchists. The overt act for which they rendered themselves liable to arrest was that they conspired with others to resist the officers of the law, and that such resistance resulted in the death of seven policemen and the serious injury of many others.

With scarcely any intermission since the affair at the Haymarket Square, as well as for weeks previously, bands of men who either acted under the direction of, or received their inspiration from combinations of people that are sworn to secrecy and obedience, have been in resistance to the lawful authorities and to the extent of their ability have set at defiance the laws that secure to corporations the rights of property and the power to use it for legitimate purposes. So, too, the personal liberty of citizens has been invaded, and by intimidation and violence they have been hindered from the performance of needful labor and the acquirement of an honest living. The seizure and derailing of cars, the pursuit and capture of a train by a mob armed with clubs and stones, and the fact that on some of the roads no cars could be moved for months past without the protection of a large police force which eventually had to be armed with repeating Winchester rifles, shows the mad determination of these conspirators to resist the lawful authorities when their wishes are not respected.

The plea that the Lake Shore railroad violated its agreement in refusing to discharge eight non-union men in its employ is of no avail, for such an agreement was one that the company had no moral right either to make or to keep. If these eight men were faithful and efficient laborers and desired continued employment, no power on earth should have compelled their dismissal, and even if there was a violation of a legitimate contract the remedy was by legal methods instead of mob violence.

The difference between the avowed anarchists and the secret combinations that have inspired and directed these acts of violence is not one of principle. The anarchists wish to set aside all lawful authority, the secret orders to subordinate all law to their dictation. The first may be the more violent, but the latter is the more wide-spread and powerfully destructive to the reign of law and to security of the rights of property and person. In short, they are but parts of the same system. Whenever any class of men set up a government which has for its object the subordination of the civil authorities to its diction it is a conspiracy, and if succesful must result in anarchy. Anarchy in Chicago is the fruit of secret orders when fully developed.

COURAGE, BROTHER!

BY PETER PLOUGHSHARE.

Knowing human nature as only God can know it, the Lord said to Joshua, "Be strong and of a good courage," and "Be thou strong and very courageous," implying that amidst the great battles of life men are very liable to become discouraged, and, dropping their weapons, quit the field of action. In Joshua's case human frailty disclosed itself; but in the lessons given in the Word of God we learn that to become disheartened is simply unfaithfulness, doubting, giving up. Why give up? Why lie down in the dust and say, "We are whipped"?

In our present fight for God and humanity the contest is close indeed. Even the masses for whom we labor are lending aid to the enemy, by opposing us; as the man who is a slave to rum will hold up his hands for the rumseller, his worst foe. Strange, but true; and while we fight for the right, and meet with so much opposition, it is a fact that quite a number of good soldiers waver, become disheartened and surrender.

Brother, never do this! We are enlisted in the cause of right, and for life. Have courage! You know that the liquor organs of our land have, until recently, claimed that prohibition is a failure; but to-day they sing a different tune. They admit that prohibition prohibits. This is enough to encourage our hearts. Let us do our duty—one sowing, another reaping— and trust to the Lord for results, for a rich harvest.

In the field of reform work there are hosts of evil giants, walled cities and mountains. But God has ordered us forward, and promised us the land. Will we take it? is the question.

The "rum, ruin and (w)retchedness oligarchy" has been made to tremble by the labor of the prohibition element, backed by the favor of God, just as he gives grace to work for him. The national reform movement is gaining speed, and the is assured, as we witness how our Captain is using even secretists to break down secretism in nation and society. Have courage; work on, fight on, and trust in the Lord and do good. "Be thou strong and very courageous." God bless you!

PRESCRIPTIONS.

Medical prescriptions, for reasons sufficiently good, are found in the books written in abbreviated Latin. Sometimes a number of articles of similar or different qualities enter into their composition. This gives an appearance of learning and some one has said that the stomach might appropriate only those which are most beneficial. Very few doctors, comparatively, are able to write a correct Latin prescription without borrowing from the books, but the people who swallow the dose do not know this. I cannot call to mind any of the prescriptions of the pioneers of medical science, as Hypocrates, Galen, Esculapius and others. Old Dr. Hunter, a man of celebrity, since their day was wont to say to his students, "We'll prescribe this thing and that; we'll shoot into the tree, and if anything falls well and good."

My object in this article is to notice a few instances of prescribing found in the sacred writings. We are informed that Luke was a physician, but do not know that the Apostle Paul claimed to be a Raphae, that is, a Hebrew physician by profession. It appears, however, he made a prescription for Timothy; first, drink no longer water. If any of the Cynosure readers are seventy years old they will remember when more modern doctors forbid cold water even in hot fevers. Secondly, take a little wine for thy stomach's sake, etc. A modern doctor might have said or written. "Recipe. Vini cochlearum pavorum ter in die." Of course no one would have thought harm in it, especially if it was sweet wine. I frankly confess I do not know how much Timothy was benefited.

When David was stricken in age and got insufficient heat, his friends and servants prescribed the article, Abishag, and the manner of use, as your readers know. Whether those servants were Raphae we are not informed. If they were, they perhaps had not learned of the Thomsonian cayenne and composition powder. I am not able to say whether similar prescriptions had come into vogue. Was it a type of anything spiritual or was it merely Masonic; as Masonry, according to Hiramites, dates back to Solomon at least! The word David signified "loving"; as Sh'lomo, or Solomon, "peaceful." Both were representative men, therefore. The Divine love was represented or signified by David. If love divine becomes cold in the pulpit—and why should it not if the preacher is a Mason—then Rev. Septimus Jones might improve the prescription of David's servants by placing an "eastern star" on one side and a "Beckie" on the other, himself in the middle.

The prescription of the Apostle James is: "Call the elders (not the Raphae), let them pray the prayer of faith over the patient and anoint him with oil in in the name of the Lord. This was what the M.D.'s and L. L. D's would now call divination or a similarity thereto. James, it would appear respected the Raphae of his day as little as some do the doctors of the present. I have heard of an old physician, a pious churchman, who "says grace" over all his doses. He believes in both prayer and means. We hope no dealer in wooden nutmegs will pretend to make and vend the very best kind of oil for this purpose.

QUAKER BOY.

THE KNIGHTS OF LABOR.

With great sympathy for wage-workers, with a strong conviction that they suffer many wrongs, and that important modifications of the relation of capital and labor must be brought about, recognizing fully the right and the advantage of organization, we do not look for permanent good to workingmen from this order, but regard it as founded on unsound principles, and as fruitful of evil results.

It is a secret order, and is therefore based upon a wrong and dangerous principle. A secret order is restrictive and divisive; it is selfish, and more liable to be perverted than an open one. Righteousness does not need secrecy, and truth speaks before the world. A movement for the relief of any class, and the removal of any grievance or evil, has strength for good in the essential justice of its demand and in a supporting public sentiment. For legitimate co-operation and work, a secret order is not necessary. The awakened public sentiment necessary for the removal of an evil can be secured more effectually without secrecy. They who know the freedom of the Gospel should not enter into such a combination.

The order is exclusive and selfish. It is not based upon the broad principle of humanity, but upon the interests of a class. It is even narrower than this; its work is for its own membership, as against all of the same class who refuse to enter its organization. The cause of labor as such, the relief of the poor and oppressed wherever found, are not the immediate objects, but the benefit of the members of the order. No terms are too abusive, no bitterness too intense, and, in some cases, no violence too great, for those who persist in the exercise of their right to work according to their own judgment. The knights of the olden time took sword and lance to do battle for the poor and the helpless, but this is a combination of the strongest for themselves. The poorest paid and the most oppressed are not included. The "Knights" do not draw their sword for the most helpless. There is a multitude whose cry, we doubt not, enters into the ears of the Lord of Sabaoth, but for whom the "Knights" make no direct effort.

The order brings the workingman under the tyranny of an oppressive monopoly. The appeal is made, and with good grounds, for the protection of labor against the combinations of capital, which place enormous power in the hands of a few as against the many. The order places an equally arbitrary and despotic power in the hands of a few. Whether he has a grievance or not—even confessing that he has no grievance, whether he wishes to work or not, whether he has means to clothe his family or not, the member, at the order of those in authority, must cease work and remain idle until he is permitted to go to work again. Such authority may sometimes be wisely used, but it is a despotism, and involves a surrender of personal freedom which must prove injurious to the individual, and to which a freedom-loving people will not long submit.

The working of the order has been attended with violence and crime, and has brought immense harm to the interests of the working men. The general aims of the order as publicly announced are commendable. Thus in his testimony before the Congressional Committee, Mr. Powderly said: "The organization aims above all things to elevate its membership and improve their condition morally and intellectually as well as financially. All our methods are peaceful. We never counsel anything of a violent nature." He has by circular comdemned boycotting and similar measures. But in the face of all such declarations, where the order has held sway, there has been a reign of terror. Industrious men have been intimidated, property has been destroyed and lives have been sacrificed. It has been neccessary to call upon the State for aid, and only by the presence of the military has order been restored. It avails nothing to disavow these acts, and disclaim responsibility for them as the doings of lawless men, until the order separates itself from the criminals, and aids the law-biding in securing their punishment. Public sentiment is with labor in its resistance to the aggressions of capital, but has been hindered in its support by the unreasonable strike sand the attending lawlessness. In fact every real gain made has been by the force of this sentiment and in spite of the violence. Finally, practically the influence of the order is against good morals. In some places there has been a nominal regard for moral character in admitting members, as for example, when recognition was refused to a Saloon Keepers' Assembly, but in fact the order embraces a very large element of restless agitators — "professional laboring men" and of discontented men of bitter spirit. The Sabbath appears to be the day used for meetings of the Assemblies, and the intimidation and boycotting used to accomplish their ends are so radically wrong that they must lower the moral standard of all engaged in them.

A better day is coming for the laboring men, and soon, but it will come not through the "Knights of Labor," but through the Gospel of Him who says, "Come unto me all ye that labor and I will give you rest: take my yoke upon you and learn of me."—Evangelical Respository.

THE PROFIT IN STRIKES.

If, however, strikes are to be resorted to, they should be for worthy objects and upon sound principles. In a strike, there should be no destruction of property, for that is labor injuring itself, and destroying its own means of employment and remuneration. Neither should there be any force interfering with the right of any man to seek and engage in wage-earning employment, for that would be a blow at personal liberty, which no one in a free country can be justified in inflicting, and which will certainly, at some time, produce an equal retaliation.

The unemployed freeman is as dear to the State as the employed; and the same class of intelligent patriots, who flew to arms to extinguish slavery, will ever be ready to fight for the rights of the unemployed, of personal liberty. Neither should there be any secret oaths, for they smack of treason, and are wholly unnecessary.

But the equity principle should be obeyed, as expressed in the maxim, Sic utere tuo ut alienum non lædas—"So use your own, as not to injure another." And here the words "your own" include your hands, tongue, influence, property, everything which you own or control. Therefore the right to strike should never be exercised in a peremptory, harsh manner, so as to inflict unnecessary losses upon others.

There should also be, besides the question of hours, kinds and compensations for work, a general moral principle asserted in justification of a strike.

Wage-earners, like every other class in the State, are beset by difficulties from within as well as without, and must take efficient means to protect their interests against the rashness, cruelty, and blindness of small numbers of their own members. And one of the principal methods of thus protecting themselves will be by public discussions, addresses and publications of the views of benevolent, philosophical men, representatives of employers as well as of wage-earners. Both sides of a question must be considered, in order to its right understanding.

The losses suffered by wage-earners through strikes count into the millions every year. They may be easily computed. To take the case of ten thousand workmen, earning one dollar a day for 313 days in the year, their pay amounts to $3,130,000 in one year; and if their support comes to eighty cents a day, which they have to take out of their own savings, or the contributions of their brethren, it makes $2,504,000, or a total of $5,634,000, which they and their abettors lose by a strike of one year. And, as the loss of wages to individuals and families must often continue far beyond the apparent termination of a strike, that sum really ought to be increased; and if the wages are more than $1 a day, the loss must be correspondingly increased; and the only offset to this loss, is the increase of wages occasionally secured by a strike, which increase is in the aggregate insignificant and ephemeral. The loss which such a strike may throw upon their employers must embrace not only loss of profits, but damages for non-fulfillment of contracts, the deterioration of unused property, the accumulation of interest, expenses for insurance and repairs, the extra expense of getting new contracts when the strike is over, besides an indefinite mass of incidentals. Supposing this sum to aggregate twice the other, we have, with the other, a loss of about $17,000,000 as the result of such a strike! Arson could do no worse.

The greatest sin of which employers have been guilty seems to be their standing between their employes and the Sabbath; and the other ills of which employes complain flow from this. For if the conduct of the employers is not regulated upon moral principles, it will be open to criticism from all points; and if they set their employes the example of breaking the law of God, how can they expect their employes to keep their laws?

I never heard of any large strike against Sunday work. But the over-anxiety of the employe to make immediate pecuniary profit has generally led him to be willing to deny the law of God commanding rest upon that day, and to work on that day, and thus to exhibit his own avarice and covetousness in such a light as to make many employers feel that the employes were not entitled to honorable consideration.

And, on the other hand, the over-anxiety of employes for immediate pecuniary profit has led them to require work upon the Sabbath, and has resulted in exhibiting their own avarice and covetousness in such a light as to cause the employes to despise them as contemptible specimens of humanity. And thus the two-edged sword is cutting right and left, doing mischief to the vital interests of both classes.

If employes would strike for absolute rest from work for the twenty-four hours of the Sabbath, they would be able to carry their point, and secure a moral power in the State which would enable them to carry their every other point which was just and fair.

It would also result in commanding the respect of the employers, and in cooling the fevered minds and demands of both parties, so that they would take a more comprehensive and correct view of life, to their own encouragement and welfare.

As it stands now, employes are doing seven days' work for six days' pay; and employers are getting six days' return for seven days' work.

As a financial proposition, supposing it possible (which it is not) for wage-earners to make a uniform rate of wages seven days in the week, by discontinuing working upon the Sabbath, they might nominally lose about fourteen per cent. of their income, but it is probable that in the long run they would really increase it fifty per cent. The same is true as to employers.

It is generally understood that the railroads of the country find Sabbath work far from remunerative, and would stop it if they could see some way of doing it without virtually destroying their whole system; and it is in the power of their employes to show them that way, by inducing common action on the subject.

A reformation of this kind emanating from the wage-earner, would elevate him to a position of use and honor far in advance of that which he has ever hitherto attained.

Whatever may be the excuse plead by employers who compel their employes to work upon the Sabbath, the real fact remains, that, as a body, they stand between their employes and the house of God, and compel them to "forsake assembling themselves together" for the public worship of Almighty God—an evil which is the greatest that can befall the wage-earner, for it sinks him in ignorance, leads him to be sordid and morbid, and deprives him of the opportunity of rest, refreshment, and spiritual culture; and, in fact, says to him that he has no soul, and is no better than brute beasts which perish.

Against such an evil, the wage-earners of the country ought to strike; and in such a strike they would have the moral sympathy and support of the country, and certain victory.—Letter by Elliott F. Shepard.

"THE OFT-ASKED QUESTION."

Bro. Wm. McDonald, of the Christian Witness, has been supposed to have something personal to do with the secret society question; but in a late paper he give a very judicious answer to an inquirer as to the consistency of secrecy and a holy life—albeit, we should have made it stronger—as follows:

"We can only give our opinion, which is, that no man can mix up with these worldly associations to his soul's profit. Whether belonging to these associations be sinful or not, one thing we have been careful to observe, that those who give themselves to these things are never very much interested in the subject of holiness. We have known a few good men, professors of holiness, and giving evidence of its possession, who have been members of some of these associations, but they were seldom or never in a lodge. If they had been, we should have expected soon to hear from them—

> "'See how we grovel here below,
> Fond of these earthly ties.'

We think it wise, safe, and pre-eminently religious, for Christians, whether professors of holiness or not, to keep away from all such worldly associations."—Christian Harvester.

PRESS COMMENT.

According to the daily papers, Mr. Powderly has issued another secret circular to the Knights, warning them that efforts are being made by enemies of the order to injure it by securing the election of politicians to its General Assembly. He urges them to put none but true Knights on guard. These secret circulars, in some manner, are becoming remarkably open.—Daily News.

The labor riots and socialistic anarchical outbreaks in this, and foreign lands, should lead to a careful study of secretism, in relation to social peace and the stability of government, and should awaken us to the falsity and danger of attempting to control society and order government without reference to the principles and authority of God's word.—Orleans Advocate.

Secrecy throws a strange spell over men. They become abject cowards before it. There are hundreds of men in the land that don't like the secret empire, yet money can scarcely hire them to say so. Men will speak their mind upon all other subjects, but close their lips tightly when facing the lodge. Why is it thus? Why do men fear it?—College Springs Crank.

There is no need of secret organizations in this country for any purpose. The Knights of Labor are of this class, and bodies of sub-Knights, together with many other guilds, societies, etc., devoted to many interests, but there is no reason for any of them. What is done should be done openly, without disguise and without a covert willingness to use dishonest advantages of which secrecy is always a suggestion.—United Presbyterian.

Our country has been compelled to take unusually large doses of lodge medicine during the past few months. The Knights of Labor have endeavored to popularize the two leading Masonic principles of secrecy and selfishness. Numbering about 300,000, and having but little interest in accumulated property, they proposed to control by the magic power of secrecy and the boycott the property of the country and the 17,000,000 of wage-earners outside the lodge. As might be expected, they have miserably failed. The general application of lodge principles under the bungling management of these swift-made Knights has roused the indignation of church and state, pulpit, press and bench.—Christian Witness.

It is "putting your trust in an arm of flesh" which God's Word forbids, to join a secret society in hope of being benefited in the business of life. It is a lack of faith in God's providence and protection. We are to use means to secure protection from the many financial evils of life, but we have no scriptural warrant and not a single Bible command to affiliate for protection with any secret society, order or brotherhood, especially any out of which the Christian's Saviour is excluded by its rites and never named in its prayers and other religious services so-called. Christ's name is wilfully and designedly omitted from every Masonic prayer, and it is contrary to the genius and spirit of that proud, self-righteous and anti-Christian society to offer a single petition to God the Father, in the name of Christ as the only Saviour.—Sandy Lake News.

The organization of the Law and Order League is a natural result of the recent labor riots. The main idea of this new organization is the formation of a body of men pledged to the support of law and order and made responsive to the calls where rioters threaten to overpower the police. The principle object, it is declared, is to prevent labor disturbances and to discountenance strikes and boycotts. The purpose of the league is a good one. The mistake is in making it a secret organization. There is no necessity for those who favor law and order doing anything in secret. Men who belong to the order have little call for disavowing their connection with it, and the machinery of organization and discipline ought to be as open as that of a militia company. Strikes and boycotts have been carried to such an extreme that a reaction was inevitable. The most potent resistance, however, to riots and strikes will be found in the formation or a sturdy public sentiment hostile to all disorder and outlawry.—Inter Ocean.

The Milwaukee boycotters have received a strong dose of sound law from Judge Sloan, of that city. Robert Schilling, the State organizer of the Knights of Labor, is on trial there for conspiracy and for making threats in connection with boycotts. In refusing a motion to quash the indictment, Judge Sloan held that a firm's income from its business was as much property as machinery or buildings, and that to prevent people from patronizing the firm was an injury to its property. He declared both boycotting and attempting to dictate as to who should be employed or discharged, to be offenees under the statutes. "Laborers or capitalists," said he, "may organize for their own protection, but have no right to take the aggressive. In our social and industrial life and in our government, the Socialist, the Anarchist, and the Boycott have no place." This homely truth is forcing its way rapidly into the minds of many people, but we regret that the procession of boycotters towards the penitentiary is not accompanied with an equally long procession of professional "friends of labor," who are the worst culprits and deserving of the harshest punishment.—New York Evening Post.

A government revenue cutter, by order, it is said, of the Treasury Department, carries a company of priests of the Roman church down the Bay to meet the Servia to receive the messengers of the pope who came bearing a cardinal's hat to the Archbishop of Baltimore. No such honor is extended by the government to the distinguished Christian men who come to usas delegates from any of the Reformed churches of Europe. The Christians of this country do not desire it or ask for it. They seek no such recognition. It is reserved for the alien church, ruled at Rome, to seek such political distinction. It is unwise to seekor accept it, for it is offensive to the great majority of the people of the country. It is unwise for the administration to grant it, for everybody will say what everybody believes to be true, namely, that this special recognition of the Papacy is for the sake of holding the votes of Irishmen. Irishmen are unwise in accepting such a special recognition, because it is offensive to the great body of Americans when an alien church and a class of foreign born citizens are selected for special and uncommon attention—Christian Intelligencer.

THE SECRET EMPIRE.

A NEW LODGE.

AN ANTAGONIST FOR THE TRADE UNIONS AND KNIGHTS OF LABOR.

[From the Inter Ocean, July 2.]

A reporter visited the headquarters of the Legion of Honor, and also talked with the Knights of Labor and others, yesterday afternoon, to learn whether there was any foundation in fact for the accounts telegraphed to Chicago during the day that a secret organization, known as the Law and Order League, or National Minute Men, had been discovered to be in existence, and that there was a large lodge in Chicago. The William A. Pinkerton and other detective agencies were also inquired of The Knights of Labor talked with said, that inasmuch as the fact of the organization had become public there was no use now in denying it, but that of any of the inside workings they could not tell. Members of the Legion of Honor said that the secret work of organizing the League began first at East St. Louis, Ill., and was then taken up in Sedalia, Mo., at St. Louis, Hannibal, De Soto, Carondelet, Clarksville, and Crystal City, and at Belleville, Ill.; Chicago; Jackson, Mich; Evansville, Ind; Milwaukee, St. Paul, Minneapolis, Rochester, N Y., and Baltimore. It was also stated that the order is now extending to Kansas, Iowa and other States. The great object of the League is announced to be "to prevent labor disturbances, and discountenance strikes and boycotting." Particular condemnation is passed by the League on boycotting, and committees are appointed to investigate all boycotts, and when the employer is found to have been unjust to let them alone, but where the employer has given no cause for such returns measures then go to his assistance. The Rev. Mr. Edmonston, of Sedalia, has been employed to agitate and organize all over the country, and has already organized branches in various railroad, manufacturing, and mining towns in the West and Southwest, the design being "to establish an organization from one end of the country to the other in support of law and order, which can be quickly massed if necessary, at any one point." For instance, in case of trouble in St. Louis, with which the League there could not cope, the preparations now being made are for the purpose of enabling the local officials there to call on Chicago and other places for reinforcements, the members being bound to respond to such call at a moment's notice. As a means of getting the force out on a few moment's notice, the address of all members, business and residence, are taken.

Superintendent Robertson, of the William Pinkerton Detective Agency, in answer to questions by the reporter, said: "It is true that there has been and is, agitation for such an order. It is called the Law and Order party. After the failure of Powderly to make his point with Gould in the strikes on the Gould Southwest system, there were a great many members of the Knights of Labor who were dissatisfied, and they withdrew from the Knights. These men, with members of the Legion of Honor, various laboring men who had not before belonged to any society, numerous railroad engineers and others now form the Law and Order party. I don't know whether politics enter into the organization or not, except in so far as labor is directly concerned. It originated at Sedalia, Mo., and the Rev. Edmonston is very anxious to extend it, but I don't believe they have succeeded in gaining a very strong foothold in Chicago."

THE CONSERVATOR'S LEAGUE.

A new secret society with the above title has been organized in this city by a few persons who believe the time has come to take action to prevent the paralysis of business by labor strikes. Chicago Council, No. 1, Conservator's League of America, was organized at the Sherman house last Wednesday, with the following named ten gentlemen as incorporators: Mark Bangs, attorney, formerly U. S. attorney and a Freemason; Liston H. Montgomery, physician; William E. Frost, manufacturer; W. H. Van Ornum, attorney; John Barton Payne, attorney; C. S. Jones, telegrapher; William C. Warner, manfacturer; R. W. Cox, manufacturer; Harrison J. Baker, merchant, and C. B. Hamlin, electrician. The league has issued the following announcement:

The legitimate business of our country is the source of our individual and national prosperity. No person or class is beyond the reach and grasp of its benefits. To inaugurate and carry on this business, men of brain and nerve are absolutely indispensable—men who make and accumulate capital. The very existence of this business involves the necessity of employer and employed. One is as essential as the other. The relation is, and must be, reciprocal. Whatever injures the one injures the other. It is, therefore, equally for the benefit of all that our business interests be jealously and vigilantly guarded against injury.

The recent so called labor troubles, that have been so disastrous, and which threaten still further paralysis to our business, we believe have arisen from a vital misapprehension of the true relation sustained by all classes to the business interests of the country, and have greatly aggravated, rather than relieved, the evils complained of.

To counteract these injurious results, and to protect these all-important business interests, and thus promote the highest good of the country, the "Conservators' League of America" has been organized under a charter of incorporation from the State of Illinois, the purpose of which is to unite in one organization all men who believe in the supremacy of the law, and are willing to join in putting in motion a great moral force to uphold the law and conserve alike the rights of the employer and the employed; to protect business from disorders and from all unlawful interference, and to promote a better understanding of the true relation of the employer and the employe, maintaining the rights of each and adjusting their differences.

To make this league effective it is indispensable that it shall embrace in its membership, so far as possible, all men who sincerely believe in the supremacy of the law and hope for the continued prosperity of business; and to this end we invite your cordial co operation. We ask persons favorable to our aims and purposes to take steps for the formation of councils and communicate with W. H. Van Ornum, secretary, No. 150 Washington street, Chicago, who will furnish any information desired, and suitable blanks.

} Advisory Board.

It is proposed to form branch councils all over the country and to create a supreme body that will govern the subordinate organizations. At the meeting Wednesday only about a dozen members were present Judge Mark Bangs called the gathering to order and Mr. William E. Frost was placed in the chair. A draft of a constitution having been made, the same was read, and with slight amendments, adopted. It provides that the council shall consist of not less than 10 persons; shall meet once a month, in regular session, and special meetings may be called whenever deemed necessary. Members shall be men of good moral character, 20 years of age or older, who do not belong to any trades union or other organization, the principles of which are antagonistic to those of the league. The fees and dues demanded are simply for the expenses of the league. The constitution was signed by the gentlemen named above. Captain Harrison J. Baker was elected Chief Conservator; Wm E. Frost, Treasurer, and Dr. Liston H. Montgomery, Secretary. The council will meet again Thursday night July 8th, at the Sherman House. The order is a secret one, and will disclose nothing further than its announcement makes public.

THE RATIO OF LODGE TO LABOR.

The New York Tribune presents the following table, showing the number of union workers in each of several branches of industry at the present time, compared with the number stated by the census of 1880 to have been so engaged six years ago:

	Census 1880.	Members reported
Miners, two unions	234,000	130,000
Iron and steel machinery, five unions	215,000	74,500
Printers and stereotypers, three unions	72,700	29,000
Carpenters and joiners, two unions	373,000	26,500
Cigarmakers	56,000	21,000
Bakers	41,300	16,000
Masons and bricklayers	102,000	16,000
Cabinetmakers	50,000	10,000
Tailors	132,700	10,000
Telegraph employes	22,000	10,000
Boot and shoemakers, two unions	194 000	8,000
Pianomakers	5,400	8,000
Glassworkers, three unions	18 000	7,500
Stonecutters	32,800	6,000
Nailmakers (part with iron and steel workers)	5,800	5,000
Hatmakers, two unions	16,800	2,000
Cotton-operatives	170,000	2,000
Total	1,741,500	381,500

Applying for the intervening six years the population rate of increase we should have a little over two million workers at the present time in all of these branches. Hence the trades unions claim 187 out of every 1,000 of workers employed, or very nearly three in sixteen. It may be interesting to compare these figures with Bradstreet's estimates that 198,450 persons struck for a less number of hours to the day's work, and that 137,050 were successful. That is, 6¾ per cent, or close upon one in sixteen, of all the workers are now employed on shorter time than before the strike. If the average gain were three hours out of the sixty, or 1 in 20, the productiveness of labor has been diminished one part in 320 as a result of the struggle. It is fair to presume that before the close of the summer this will have been reduced to not more than one part in 500, as there has already been a falling off to the exteut of one-third. The original number of successful strikers was estimated to be about 200,000, while only 137,000 are quoted above as having retained up to date the advantage which the labor movemeut forced the employers to concede to the workers.

ODD-FELLOWSHIP CLAIMED BY INFIDELS.

An unbeliever writing to the atheist newswaper, the Investigator, earnestly vindicates Odd-Fdllowship from the charge of being, in any sense, a Christian institution. How Christian men can incorporate with an order of which such a claim can be truthfully made, is a constant problem to many minds. The writer insists that, in this order, "Christianity stauds on the same plane with Judaism, Mohammedanism, Buddhism, Hindooism, or any other 'ism' you can name. No belief is required in a candidate, save a belief in a Supreme Ruler of the universe. He is never questioned as to immortality, salvation, that triuity, the Bible, the Koran, or any other 'word of God.' He may be an infidel, but not an atheist, and its doors being closed to atheism is its nearest approach to Christianity. In the funeral service not a word of the resurrection, of salvation, of Christ Jesus, or Jesus Christ, can be found. At the opening of the sessions of the grand lodge of Massachusetts, 'the grand chaplain shall address the Supreme Ruler of the universe in prayer.' If the grand chaplain should happen to be a Christian, and especially if a Christian minister, he will probably ask something 'for Christ's sake,' but no fundamental law of the order ever requires it. Prayers are from an individual view-point, and a Mussulman would as consistently pray to the prophet as the Christian would to Christ, nor would he hurt anybody thereby."—Christian Instructor.

SCHOOLS AND COLLEGES.

The graduating classes of Yale and Harvard Universities numbered respectively 326 and 223.

Professor Timothy Dwight was last week inaugurated as president of Yale college, to succeed Dr. Porter.

Rev. F. L. Hayes, of the First Free Baptist church, Boston, has been unanimously elected to be President of Hillsdale College, Michigan.

Pres. E. B. Fairchild has resigned his position so long and successfully held with Berea College, Kentucky. He will remain until his successor is appointed.

The income of Yale during the last college year was $187,540, with expenses aggregating $167,235. The total bequests to all the departments exceed $1,600,000.

Union College, Wednesday, conferred the degree of A. M. on Daniel S. Lamont, the President's private secretary; and of LL. D. on John I. Bennett, of Chicago. Mr. Bennett is a prominent lawyer of this city, and an Anti-mason.

The Board of Regents of the Wisconsin State University Wednesday evening elected Professor Thomas C. Chamberlain, of Beloit, president of the institution, in place of John Bascom, resigned. Prof. Bascom lately wrote condemning all secret societies.

The Hon. Levi Parsons Morton, our late Minister to France, offers, if an equal amount is raised, to give $10,000 toward the endowment of a professorship of modern languages in Middlebury College, in memory of his father and his uncle, the lamented missionary to Palestine, whose name he bears.

Gates College at Neligh, Nebraska, has just entered its first Freshman class from the preparatory school. The trustees have decided to build a Ladies Hall to meet the present, pressing emergencies of the institution. The fourth year of this young but promising frontier institution closed June 18th.

The Indians on the Yankton reservation, in Dakota, celebrated Arbor Day by planting 1,000 trees on the campus of the Government Industrial School, and the boys at St. Paul's Mission School planted a fruit orchard.

In Equador, with a Roman Catholic church for every 150 inhabitants, with ten per cent of the popu lation priests, monks, or nuns, with 272 days in the year feast or fete days, with a quarter of the wealth of the state in the hands of the church, and with the priests controlling all branches of the government, seventy-five per cent of the people can neither read nor write!

The Board of Trustees of Muskingum College, at their meeting last week, elected Professor Ed. F. Reid, of Monmouth, to the presidency of Muskingum. They also gave the degree of LL. D. to Dr. James Harper, of Xenia, and D. D. to Rev. F. M. Spencer, the retiring president.

The Reformed Presbyterian Synod, at its late meeting in Rochester, N. Y., raised at a special meeting $11,000 for Geneva College, at Beaver Falls, Pa., completing an endowment fund of $100,000. Rev. J. C. McFeeters, of Parnassus, was recently chosen president of the board of trustees, in the place of Prof. J. R. W. Sloane, deceased. The catalogue shows one hundred and forty students in attendance the past year.

The affairs of Augustana College at Rock Island, Ill., were considered in the Augustana Synod meeting at Minneapolis. The building committee reported that the receipts had been $36,035 for the past year, including a gift of $25,000 from the Hon. P. L. Cable. The conferences contributed as follows: Illinois, $2,867; Minnesota, $1,459, Iowa, $300; Kansas, $47. The expenditures were $34,718, $31,986 having been put into the new building.

The total attendance, in all departments, at Wheaton College, during the past year, has been 214. While this number is somewhat less than last year, the number of students in the college proper is increased. The endowment fund was increased during the year, and other donations came in enabling the trustees to close the year with no debts remaining on the institution after paying in full all demands for salaries and other expenses. The institution maintains its high standard of reform, and its graduates are a living evidence of the thorough character of their instruction.

Geneva College, over which Dr. H. H. George presides, assisted by an able faculty, has closed a prosperous year. The endowment fund is raised to $100,000, a proof that the Reformed Presbyterian churches have confidence in the institution and aim to endow it with the best facilities for education. Among the former presidents of the college are named the late beloved Prof. Sloane; Rev. J. C. K. Milligan, editor of Our Banner, New York; and Rev. N. R. Johnston of Oakland, Cal. In all departments last year there were 154 students, 69 being in the classes of the college course.

This is the season of college commencements, and secular papers are commenting upon the fact that in those educational institutions, open to both sexes, the honors of the graduating classes have been so largely taken by the girls. Several of them are shrewdly searching for the cause of this in the tobacco using, liquor-drinking habits of college boys. The Cleveland Leader and Herald says: "As co-education becomes more general, there will surely be more studying and less dissipation on the part of college boys, and if the change does damage the liquor and tobacco sellers in the neighborhood of educational institutions, it will greatly benefit the young men. Some of them will be ashamed to let the physically weaker girls eclipse them, and will consequently be spurred on to greater exertions; while another and larger element will work harder simply because their parents and teachers will not tolerate failure in them where girls succeed."

FREE LABOR VS. UNIONS.—The strike of railroad workers at Chicago has been renewed under circumstances which entitle it to especial attention. In many respects this contest resembles the ill-timed and ill-fated struggle upon which the workers of the Third Avenue Street Railway entered weeks ago under most misguiding leadership. Their demand was for the discharge of a small number of free workers who were not willing to join an organization. The only demand of the striking switch-tenders of the Lake Shore Railway Company is for the discharge of six switch-tenders, who decline to belong to the union. These men have been for many years faithful servants of the company. It is by no one alleged that they are dishonest, or incompetent, or in any way unworthy. Their sole offence is that they prefer to be free, and do not wish to surrender any part of their freedom by joining a trades union. The demand for their discharge is, therefore, a declaration of war against all free laborers. It is an attempt by an insignificant minority of workers, who have pleased to organize themselves in this country, to proscribe and ostracize the great majority of workers who have not chosen to organize themselves.—New York Tribune, June 25.

CORRESPONDENCE.

POLITICS IN WISCONSIN.

BARABOO, Wis., June 6.

The position in Wisconsin is hopeless for political organization, and an election would belittle us, and magnify our weakness; for there are men who wish us well, who would not fail to vote the Prohibition ticket just at this juncture, for that movement is hoping for success, and is a movement worthy of it; and it has the public attention to such an extent that our little distraction would only be amusing in this State.

There might be a few dozens of votes cast in this State, but it would not be possible to do much more than that, in the face of the interest which is so deeply felt in prohibition. The women are largely interested in that direction, and would not willingly be diverted into any other. I was never very sanguine of the political movement, and am less so now.

Let me tell you how it looks to me. I fully believe that secretism is one of the active elements which will lead in the great apostasy foretold of the latter days, and, while it must needs be that offences come, yet woe to him by whom they come. Secretism is one of the unclean spirits, like frogs, which go out to deceive the nations. Secretism is really broken loose from Masonry. The old harlot is not able to control her own children. The Knights of Labor have run away with her, and with the whole country. Secretism is coming to the front everywhere.

Our principles are absolutely sound, and for our own soul's sakes we must stand by them, yet need not for a moment hope for worldly success. We must wait for our reward until Christ shall come and set up his kingdom which shall rule over the whole earth.

Our work is principally with Christians, but yet we do not make progress with them, much less with the world. The G. A. R. chose Sunday for Decoration Day in Baraboo, and most of the pastors went right in and took part in the exercises, praying lustily for God to be on hand and help them through with their noise and fuss; and the god they serve was on hand for the occasion. What is the use of talking to them about the evils of secretism? They really expect that God will bless the breaking of his own commandments, at the dictation of secret societies.

A WONDERFUL LETTER.

AN EX-ENGINEER DRIVING A TRAIN UP THE STRAIGHT AND NARROW WAY.

SHELDON, Vernon Co., Mo.

I saw an article in Cynosure of May 20th, entitled "Freemasonry and Holiness." I am sorry to hear that such men as William McDonald are Freemasons. Such holiness is not the Bible kind. Masons who get holiness in this part of Missouri drop the lodge at once. Bro. R. H. G. Keeran, the president of the Vernon Co. Holiness Association, is a seceded Mason. He was a Methodist preacher, but the church annoyed him until he withdrew from the church and conference. His presiding elder, Charles Briggs, is chaplain of the Grand Lodge of Missouri, so you see what he had to go through.

I have been a locomotive engineer for some time; got converted and sanctified; have gone to preaching the Gospel. I belonged to B. L. E. and B. L. F., or Brotherhood of Engineers and Firemen, but have come out of them. They meet on Sunday usually. My wife and myself have charge of the Vernon County Holiness tent. We both preach. She is the severest woman against Masonry I ever saw. This county is full of whisky dens and Masons. They seem to think they have the only title to the country, but we intend, by the grace of God, to give them some fatal stabs. We are preaching holiness to the people, and are going to pull down the walls of sin in and out of the professed churches, for they certainly have become the "hold of every unclean bird."

We are out for God on the independent line. Our salary is stripes and abuse. We are vilified and lied upon by the immaculate brotherhoods of Masons, Odd-fellows, and in fact the whole concern. Of all things, I detest the jack-Mason. I tell you, brother, that the Methodist church is in the arms of Masonry, which means the devil. I would just as soon take the Lord's Supper from the hands of Satan as from a Masonic preacher.

If you have any of the Lord's money in tracts—I mean Anti-masonic tracts—send them to me. I don't care how old they are; they will be new in this country. I would like to put some money in such literature. I will try and get some money for your paper. Send me some samples, as I will preach on Sunday next on Masonic Salvation and Bible Salvation.

SWING'S THOUGHTS OF GOD.

The allusion to Dr. Swing and warnings against popular errors in the Baccalaureate sermon, seems to be more than justified by the sermon of Dr. S., as reported on 28th June, in Inter Ocean. The topic was "Thoughts on God." A Christian would naturally expect to find the special feature of the Divine Being to be held up as the "God in Christ reconciling the world to himself, not imputing to men their trespasses," 1 Cor., 5, 19. But bright-robed ambassador Swing has not this message. He only refers to the "day made exceptional by the presence of such a tremendous inspiration as that found in the Nazarene." And the professor admits, "He must have made heaven seem near and the Father close by his children, but away from such an abnormal island in history, the present idea of God will sustain as deep a religious life as any lived in the ages gone before. Modern faith reposes upon a God greater than any former conception of the Creator."

How modern faith can repose upon a God "greater than any former conception of the Creator," (architect, perhaps), by making "exceptional" the Nazarene and placing him on an island as the great "Exceptional" Napoleon was by his foes, is a problem which no Christian can solve. Can Ingersoll do so? Is it sand, or the rock, on which Swing is building?

A SUBSCRIBER.

CONVENTION AND CONFERENCE.

WILLIMANTIC, Conn., June 30th, 1886.

The proposition of a national meeting in Tennessee the coming winter I think is a good one. Let us pray and labor that it may be a successful meeting, attracting the attention of all classes throughout the entire country. To this end there should be an agent in every State, especially of the South. But where are the men to take such a position and even if there were means in hand to meet the expense.

I notice the Congress of Christians is to be convened in the coming autumn at Chicago. It seems to me that special endeavors should be put forth to make it a large and representative body of the sound, intellectual, Christian men of the country. We should not fail to secure the attendance of Joseph Cook, even if necessary to vary the time of the meeting a little. To this end would it not be well to interview him and a few other prominent men in the East in regard to the time of holding this meeting; at the same time get them to commit themselves to the cause with a promise, D. V., of being present.

A successful National Congress of Christians may yield fruit in the way of persons who will give themselves to the special work of anti-secrecy. It seems desirable that the attendance of as many college presidents as possible should be secured. I was hoping the Congress would light as far East as Cleveland, but as Chicago is settled upon I hope no stone will be left unturned to make it a success, a grand success.

New England ought to furnish and sustain a first-class man in the field. In fact Connecticut ought to furnish a man and sustain him well, but she is settled on her lees; or perhaps I should say largely into the lodge. I notice that secret society men make much effort to throw all the blame of Western riots on the socialists or anarchists, thus leading the people to forget or not to see that the tendency of all secret societies is to educate the people down to socialism or anarchy. This fact makes it necessary that the true light should be kept shining. O that the whole Christian church might receive such a baptism from on high as to truly reflect the light of God on the iniquities of this age!

Yours for the right, J. A. CONANT.

ANOTHER WORD OF CHEER.

DEAR CYNOSURE:— I have read, with much interest and satisfaction, the action of the N. C. A. meeting relating to the calling of, and arranging for the Congress of Christians, to be held in your city next autumn. I need not say that I am in hearty sympathy with the movement, for I have been praying for it ever since its conception; I wish now to express my gratitude to the Great Head of the church for your action touching it. The mustering of all the forces of God's army under the banner of "Holiness unto the Lord," by declaring against Baal worship will mark an epoch of Christian unity and spiritual power that will shake the powers of darkness from the throne of misrule in church and state. And it will give protection to thousands who know not where to flee for shelter from lodge terrorism.

I promise to do what I can to make it a success. I am heavily loaded with responsibilities in our denominational struggles against secretism. But I will pray for the Congress of Christians. My engagements in attending committees to save the United Brethren church from drifting under the lodge power forbade my attending your meeting. But I am joyful over your action. It comes at the most opporture moment to help us in our church struggle, and to lift the churches of America to a higher and holier life. HALLECK FLOYD.

IS IT CHARITY OR CREDIT?

Considerable discussion has been raised in regard to the charity of secret societies. Some light may be thrown upon the subject by the following article which I subjoin from the Otsego Republican of July 14th, 1885, published at Cooperstown, N. Y., rendering it evident that their boasted charity is but a limited credit which must be refunded by the parent lodge of the recipient and repaid by him under penalty of suspension or expulsion as for non-payment of dues. It also attests the truthfulness of expositions as they are apparently being employed in victimizing the lodges:

THE WAY OF THE TRANSGRESSOR IS HARD.—Last February a man claiming to be an Odd-fellow and belonging to Otsego Lodge of this village, presented a card to a lodge in Yonkers, with the statement that he was in want: five dollars were given him, and failing to pay, demand was made on Otsego Lodge. He gave his name as Wm. C. Johnson. Otsego Lodge responded that they bore no such man on the roll of membership, and the card was a forgery and the bearer of it an imposter and rascal. Shortly after, a lodge was worked in Brooklyn for an amount of money, by probably the same party, but bearing the name of W. H. Burns. Subsequent to that a man presented a card to a lodge in Jersey City, purporting to be from Otsego Lodge, demanding aid; he there passed under the name of Howard. July 3d, Johnson appeared in Yonkers, under the name of Howard, seeking aid from the order. A telegram was sent the officers of Otsego Lodge, asking for information; the order there was promptly informed that the pretended member was undoubtedly a fraud and should be arrested. Acting under this advice he was taken into custody, tried, found guilty, and sentenced to a fine of $30 and thirty days in jail. Justice overtook him, but his punishment was too light.

As the writer is a State Senator, it might be presumed that he is a competent judge of the enormity of the crime, but I respectfully submit that it is against public policy to protect a fraud against a fraud, and that, as a Grand Army man and an Odd-fellow, he is not a disinterested party.

PITH AND POINT.

President G. Stanley Pope, of Tougaloo University, Mississippi, in writing his thanks for the Cynosure, which he has read with interest for several years, adds:

"Nearly all our students become anti-secret society men and women if they remain here any length of time."

FROM THE MICHIGAN WATCHTOWER.

Please say to all weak ministers that the "Old Handmaid" gets no rest on this charge, and that God spreads a "table before me in the presence of my enemies." Congregations increase, and there will soon be a rupture in two adjoining churches on the secrecy question. We shall probably have the State meeting on this charge this fall, and expect a large attendance.—H. A. DAY, Williamston, Mich.

AN INVITATION TO THE N. C. A.

It has been my lot in evangelistic work to follow Rev. H. Woodsmall, and, though like Paul, weak in body and in voice, he is mighty in spirit, and his influence among the colored people here in Arkansas is unbounded. I think it would be a good plan to have a meeting by one of your agents during the Baptist State Convention in August, in Pine Bluff. We have been blessed with a revival taking in saloon men, and properly followed will be the death-blow to evil association. Rev. Geo. Robinson, pastor of Baptist church, is a good, honest, sincere man, and has withdrawn from the clan and needs more light, and will use it for the good of others. Think of us.—LEWIS JOHNSTON, Pine Bluff, Ark.

A HOPEFUL CONVERT.

In reading your encouraging work at the N. C. A. annual meeting, I am compelled to believe that we are gaining ground. I say we, for I am with you in this mighty reform work, which is almost universally needed. May the Cynosure ever keep waving the reform flag; it is doing good for the Master's kingdom. I am one convert the Cynosure can rightly claim. I belonged to the Masonic fraternity five years, and thought it was an honor to be called a Master Mason. But when the truth, the light, and God's wisdom began to be revealed by the Cynosure, I saw my condition and knew that I was worshiping Baal; and I had the courage to come out from among them, and am now separated from them. Thanks be to God that I am free from that heathenish, devilish and lying worship. May God speed the workers of this reform.—ALEXANDER OLIVER, JR., Morgan City, La.

A GOOD COUNTRY.

I wish to say to all the subscribers who are farmers in Illinois and adjoining States, and who are able to make small investments (or large ones) in farm land, that this part of Kansas is the most inviting that I have seen. I am not a land agent, but I solicit correspondence with Christian farmers who think of coming West.—P. H. BROWN, Macksville, Stafford Co., Kansas.

HE CANNOT SERVE TWO MASTERS.

Rev. I. O. Mallory of this place (M. E.), said in one of his sermons that it is just as impossible to get to heaven with one foot on the road to see your uncle on the Sabbath day and the other foot on the road to heaven, as it is to ride to Chicago on two railroads at one time. I ask is it not as impossible to get to heaven with one foot in the lodge and the other in the church? Can the Rev. Mr. M. be so blind as to stumble there? I frankly say I am opposed to either, and any man professing to be called of God to preach his Gospel surely ought to be. "One thing thou lackest," says Christ, "one thing thou lackest."—ANDREW LAGERQUIST, Braceville, Ill.

BIBLE LESSON.

STUDIES IN THE WRITINGS OF JOHN.

LESSON III, July 18, 1886.—The Death of Lazarus.—John 11: 1-16.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Our friend Lazarus sleepeth; but I go, that I may awake him out of sleep.—John 11: 11.

[Open the Bible and read the lesson.]

COMMENTS ON THE LESSON BY E. E. FLAGG.

1. The delayed answer. vs. 1–6. Among the sweetest glimpses of home life given us in the Bible, is this inside view of the home of Lazarus and his two sisters. There is nothing more touching in the whole range of the sacred narrative, than the simple trust with which they in their trouble turn at once to Jesus: "Behold he whom thou lovest is sick." They did not deem a formal request that he would exert his healing power, even necessary. Surely when he had wrought so many miracles for utter strangers, now that dear, personal friends, of whose hospitality he had so often partaken, who had given him such untiring proof of their love and reverence, were in such sore straits, he would not delay to come. But Christ did delay, two whole days! One of the questions most frequently asked in regard to cures by prayer, —asked alike by the skeptical and the believing—is this: "Why does not God answer by restoring the sick in all cases where such petition is made?" But there is another question more to the point: How do we know that it would be best to grant the prayer? Is it not possible that in many instances our loved ones are taken away from the evil to come, and that if we knew all from which they are saved we should rejoice in their departure? Christ here gives the reason why sickness and death was allowed to invade one Christian home, and it must be for the same reason that they are permitted to darken other homes. It was for the glory of God, that the Son of God might be glorified thereby. God's glory is one and the same thing with the good of his children. There can be no separation of interests. Because he liveth we shall live also. Because we suffer with him we shall also reign with him. Every sickness, every sorrow, every pain of the believer manifests his glory. It is with that glory that we ourselves are to be glorified in the Resurrection morning. When the supreme purpose of our being is to honor God, there is a deep meaning in his promise, "He that honoreth me I will honor." That it should be so is simply cause and effect. The divine life lives in us, and what exalts the divine exalts the human with it.

2. The shortness of life the great incentive to diligence. vs. 7–16. The disciples, thinking from Christ's seeming indifference, that Lazarus is on the way to recovery, try to dissuade him from going to Judea, where his life had been so lately threatened. Christ reminds them that the brief day of that life was soon to end in the darkness of Calvary. He must work while the light lasted. This should be the Christian's feelings. Shall we spare ourselves in the Master's service who for our sakes never spared himself? Thomas, though called the doubter, rises here to a pitch of martyr like devotion, beautiful to see; if Christ must go, he will share peril, danger, even death, with his beloved Lord. We talk of the martyr-spirit. It is nothing less nor more than the spirit of consecration. If we are willing to live for Christ, willing to spend and be spent in his service, we shall, if need arise, be willing to die for him.

LIGHT FROM THE WORD.

Where is death spoken of as a sleep? Deut. 31: 16; Dan. 12: 2; Matt. 9: 24; Acts 7: 60; 1 Cor. 15: 18, 51. Is it probable that Christ wrought some miracles on others, while he delayed to go to Lazarus? ch. 10: 40, 41.

From the U. P. Bible Teacher.

"It was that Mary which anointed the Lord with ointment," etc., (v. 2). How had Mary made herself famous? By doing "what she could." You recall the incident. Jesus sat at the feast in Simon's house in Bethany. It was just before the crucifixion—only a few days. Jesus was then on his way to Calvary. While he reclined at table Mary came behind him, and breaking a box of precious and costly ointment, poured it over the body of her dear Lord. It was the only costly thing Jesus had ever received from mortal hands. He got other things from men and women. Some gave him their sorrows, and some their diseases, and some their tears. But this dear sister, with a heart running over with love and gratitude, broke the little box that held a fortune and poured its contents on her Master. They who make sacrifices for Christ are not forgotten—be sure of that.

"Now Jesus loved Martha and her sister and Lazarus" (v. 5). Happy family. I had rather belong to a family of which that could be said, than to a family of royalty. May we not have the same precious and peculiar distinction? Has not Jesus got the same affection? Does he not seek out among those of his acquaintance on earth still some congenial homes into which he delights to come? I think the evidence of such attachment to Jesus as this family had, will be manifested, especially in this selfish age, in the delight of his people in entertaining his saints. I don't believe there are many such homes as that, or General Assemblies and Synods, etc., would not be trying the experiment of stopping at hotels and paying their way. Jesus loved the hospitable, and those who truly love Jesus will love to be what he loved. At this selfish, artificial age, heaven deliver us from its blighting, chilling influence.

"Jesus answered, Are there not twelve hours in the day? If any man walk in the day ... But if any man walk in the night," etc., (vs. 9, 10). There is no other way for it but this. Jesus waited for the direction of his Father. What if the Jews had sought to kill him? What, indeed, if they should succeed in their murderous design, as they inevitably would and did? Still the only safe path was the path of duty, though it led to death. That is right. Let us submit completely to the will of God. Let us be directed by him alone, then we are always perfectly safe. It takes faith to accept of such doctrine, but faith will do it. And then this is not only the only safe, but the only happy, way for the Christian. Oh! to feel assured that you are doing what God has directed you to do. Calmness, courage, joy, all spring naturally from such a faith.

"Then said his disciples, Lord, if he sleep he shall do well" (v. 12) "Blessings on the man who invented sleep." "God gives to his beloved sleep." "If he sleep he shall do well." That is one of the lessons that experience has taught. When the patient, who has been tossing for days or weeks on a sleepless pillow, drops off into a sound, peaceful slumber, then we know the turn has come for the better. But the disciples misunderstood the Lord, and what a precious truth Jesus emphasized by that misunderstanding. Nobody can read this incident now without thinking of death as a less dreaded and dreadful foe—sleep.

Remember, sorrowing heart, your loved one is not death—but sleeping; and if he sleep in Jesus, he shall do well—exceedingly well.

"And I am glad for your sakes that I was not there, to the intent ye may believe" (v. 15). Does Jesus mean, "If I had been there, the heart-aches, the tears, the distress of those sisters, would have so moved my compassion that the sick would have been restored before death came to that home?" It looks that way. What a tender, compassionate friend, Jesus! But Jesus had remained away for a purpose. The suffering in that Bethany home was permitted for good and sufficient reasons. The outcome would be a glorious exhibition, both of love and power, for had not Lazarus died, it might never have been written—"Jesus wept." Oh, sisters, Martha and Mary, you suffered, but what a boon your suffering secured for countless millions. That shortest verse in the Bible has dried more tears, soothed more sorrows, comforted more aching hearts, than all the worlds of comfort that men have ever spoken. Jesus, we thank thee, that thou didst restrain thy miracle-working power and let thine own heart bleed for these four days, as it no doubt did, in compassion for thy dear friends, "for our sakes," that we might not only believe, but also might have this precious sentence, "Jesus wept." And, dear friends, shall we not learn to suffer more patiently, knowing that when the Lord does not respond to our first appeal there is good reason for his delay. His delay, though it cost these sisters untold agony, was "for our sakes"—shall we not humbly submit and patiently, aye, gladly suffer, if thereby others are blessed?

"Let us also go that we may die with him" (v. 16). He didn't understand it; Jesus had to die alone. His death was to be as the death of all. They were to live for him; once in a while the Lord calls some one to die for him, but generally our part in the Lord's work is to be accomplished by living for the Lord, which is more difficult than dying for him. We must not chide Thomas, however, as some have done—Thomas was a kind of literalist: what he saw, he saw; and what he didn't see, why he didn't see, that was all. His want of belief in the resurrected Christ is an example; but he saw danger ahead down in Judea, and he had the courage to face it. True enough, Jesus gathered all the wrath on his own head, so that the fury of their enemies expended itself on the cross, but Thomas could not know that. Thomas was a true and courageous friend. Let us have more copying his example and of less criticising of his spirit.

OBITUARY.

JAMES KENNEDY was one who, from the hour of his conversion to God, arrayed himself on the side of truth and righteousness, and maintained them at every hazard. He was born in Dumfries, Scotland, March 12th, 1805. Born of the Spirit when a young man, he claimed to be saved from the commission of sin, as taught by the Scriptures, in which he had been carefully instructed. This brought him into sharp collision with the authority of the church in which he had been brought up and to which he belonged. He was told that all committed sin. "But," he insisted, "I do not. I am striving with all my might to do the will of God. Does not St. John say, 'Whosoever is born of God doth not commit sin?" I am born of God and do not knowingly sin against him."

The persecutions against him were bitter and unceasing, but he held on with patience and unswerving fidelity to God.

In 1822 he removed to Canada, where, six years later he was united in marriage to Miss Helen McDougal, with whom he lived in the enjoyment of great domestic happiness until his death.

In 1842 they came to the United States and settled in Illinois, where he took his stand for God and humanity and arrayed himself against American slavery, which was then sustained by all the leading churches of the land.

In 1852 they removed with teams across the plains to California. The train was a large one and he was unanimously chosen leader. Every Saturday he went into camp, and never allowed a wagon to move till Monday morning. He held religious services every Sabbath. After a few weeks, some of the company got in haste to get through, and drove ahead on the Sabbath, striking out for themselves. Others followed their example, so that he was left alone with his own family and teams. But he persevered in his course, and got through in safety, with his cattle in good order, having lost none, and without having been once molested by the Indians. After about ten days, the first of those who had left him arrived, and others came straggling in for two weeks more. They had lost a number of their cattle and those that lived were poor.

Every one of these companies had suffered from the depredations of the Indians. God made the Sabbath for man; and he made man's beasts of burden for the Sabbath.

After he reached California, Mr. Kennedy engaged in the "packing business." In those days there were no railroads and no wagon roads to the mining camps in the mountains. Their roads were narrow trails, often up the steep sides of mountains, and through and across deep ravines; and only men, or small, sure-footed mules could pass over these mountain trails in safety. Supplies were carried to the miners by trains of mules having on them pack-saddles, on which were loaded, meat, flour, vegetables, canned goods, clothes, and every thing wanted in a mining camp. From a dozen to twenty mules constituted a train.

When Mr. Kennedy loaded up his first train at Sacramento, the merchant of whom he bought, a brother Scotchman, said, "You must load one mule with whisky."

"Not a mule of mine will ever pack any whisky," was the prompt and decided answer.

"You will fail then in business; for it is no use for you to attempt to trade with the miners unless you keep whisky."

"Then fail it is, for they will never get any whisky by means of me."

The mule that the merchant intended should carry whisky was loaded with onions. This proved a most profitable venture, for the scurvey had broken out in camp, and onions were in great demand. At the close of the season it was found that he had done better than any of the traders who carried whisky.

The feeling on the subject of slavery ran high in those days. Everywhere men met on the American continent the subject was agitated. Mr. Kennedy often had to defend, in the mining camps, the cause of human freedom. On one occasion the landlord, though he had formerly been a college professor at the North, defended slavery with marked ability. Mr. Kennedy answered his arguments so well that the listeners insisted upon a public discussion. Arrangements were speedily made, and the question of slavery was debated with warmth and skill until two o'clock in the morning. The vote of the audience was very largely in favor of freedom; and they were all unconsciously being prepared to take the right side in the great struggle which was to determine the fate of slavery in this Republic.

When the war broke out, Mr. Kennedy was toll-keeper on a turnpike owned mostly by Southerners. He sometimes had in his hands from two to three thousand dollars. Yet during all this time he never kept a revolver, or arms of any kind; and no attempt was ever made to rob him, though the mill and the store near by were robbed.

News that the conflict had actually begun reached them when one of the directors, a hot-headed Southerner, was with him.

"I would like," said this director, "to cut the heart out of the first black Republican I meet."

"You had better," said Mr. Kennedy, "begin on me. You will not find a better one."

The Southerner, ashamed of himself, changed the subject at once.

Some of his friends urged Mr. Kennedy to be more careful of what he said, as he might lose his position, the directors being generally Southerners. He replied that if he did, it would make no difference; he should stand by the right, come what would.

But he was confident they would not discharge him, for they wanted an honest man in his position, and they knew it was difficult to get one. He kept his place till the war closed, and he voluntarily resigned.

In 1879 we held some meetings in San Jose, California, and his was our pleasant home. We had known him by his writings, and by correspondence for years. We had learned that great courage and great tenderness often go together, and we saw this wonderfully exemplified in his case. This robust man, whose courage in defence of the right never faltered, was as gentle and of as delicate sensibilities as a woman. There was something sublime in the tender affection that he and his companion, still beautiful with the frost of age upon her head, who had walked together hand in hand for over half a century, manifested for each other. They anticipated the wants, each of the other, and watched over each other with the greatest solicitude.

One felt the presence of the Lord there, for they walked with God, and to worship and serve him was their delight.

He was a Christian reformer. He gave no countenance or support to the popular churches that vie with each other in compromising with the world. He came out from them and was separate, and stood forth peculiar in his devotion to the principles of the Gospel of Christ. He was a zealous laborer for prohibition, and the anti secret-society reform. When he believed a cause was right he was never deterred from openly espousing and defending it because it was unpopular. With the old patriarch he could say, "I was eyes to the blind, and feet was I to the lame. I was a father to the poor; and the cause which I knew not I searched out. And I brake the jaws of the wicked, and plucked the spoil out of his teeth."—Job 29: 15–17.

He was called from his home at San Jose, to his home in heaven, March 29th, 1886, in the eighty-second year of his age.

For one whose life had been spent largely upon the frontier he was a man of remarkable literary tastes. He was specially fond of reading the Scotch poets, especially Hogg, the Ettrick Shepherd. But the Bible was his great delight. No other book had for him the interest that did the Holy Scriptures, in which he was thoroughly versed. Family worship was a season of interest and profit.

"During the last two months of his life," says the Free Methodist, "he was compelled to remain at home, but not until disease had caused his hands to fall helpless at his side did he cease to write and send temperance and anti-secrecy papers far and near. Being too feeble to write more, or even sit up in his chair, he retired to his bed and spent the remaining hours of his life in prayer and praise to God. He had the full use of his reasoning faculties till he breathed his last."

J. BLANCHARD. HENRY L. KELLOGG.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, JULY 8, 1886.

An eminent and very popular Prohibitionist for whom John B. Gough has often voted, informs us that John B. Finch said, in his presence, and that of Gov. St. John, "If the secrecy of Temperance Lodges prevents any considerable number of respectable voters from joining the Prohibitionists, I am for giving the secrecy up."

GIVING UP AMERICAN CITIZENSHIP.—The Sovereign Grand Lodge, I. O. O. F., at Baltimore, last September, ordered that every applicant for membership in the local lodge should sign and send in with his money the following: "I will seek my remedy for all rights, on account of said membership or connection therewith, in the tribunals of the order, without resorting for their enforcement, in any event, or for any purpose, to the civil courts." These "rights" may respect both person and property. The distance is short from this to complete renunciation of allegiance to the United States. So far as Odd-fellowship extends, this obligation makes every Odd-fellow an alien. The same Sovereign Grand Lodge, at the same meeting, resolved, "That any Odd-fellow who shall, after January 1, 1886, retain his membership in the Patriarchal Circle (which is another body of Odd-fellows), shall be expelled from the subordinate lodge." Let those United Brethren mark this, who have cried out against summary expulsion for the double connection with church and with lodge.

MOCK MASONIC BAPTISM:—The Conservator takes the following facts from the Philadelphia Press:

Sixty commanderies were represented at Scranton, Pa. Nearly 1200 Knights were in line, in the annual parade. The reception was held at Lackawanna Rink, which was beautifully decorated. "After the general reception, there was dancing for an hour or more." Then follows:—"A happy Masonic incident occured here last evening. The grand officers called at the residence of Grand Commander Joseph Alexander and administered the rite of baptism to his infant son. Deputy Grand Commander George S. Graham named the child, and baptismal ceremony was performed by the Grand Prelate of the order, Rev. Henry W. Platt."

The "frogs" of the Apocalypse evidently mean religious teachers equally at home in two elements: church and world. Such is "Rev. Henry W. Platt," administering mock baptism in a Masonic ball.

"As soon as he came nigh to the camp, he saw the calf and the dancing, and Moses' anger waxed hot." —Ex. 32: 19, also 1 Sam. 30: 16.

"FIGHTING THE DEVIL WITH FIRE."

This old proverb points out the folly of attacking an evil in its own element; men being supposed to be less expert in the use of fire than Satan. But such folly is outdone by men in Missouri and Illinois, who have started a "Law and Order League," and "Conservator's League," to protect property and persons by secrecy, oaths, passwords and grips. A Rev. Mr. Edmonston of Sedalia, Missouri, is the Aaron to the first of these calves, and N. S. Bouton, and several other business men in Chicago, some of whom are Masons and some have heretofore failed in business are responsible for the other. An account of these exploits will be found in another column.

The blank absurdity of resisting or warding off attacks on property and life by secret organizations is but too obvious:

1. It sanctions the secret society principle, which is, to substitute itself for civil government, that is treason.

2. It justifies the concealment practiced by the whole brood, from the Knights of Labor to the Masons.

3. It makes our government and laws contemptible, as splints prove a weak back.

4. As these "minute men" must be armed to do any good it will fill the land with armed guerilla bands. Drilling and parade must follow, and men taught to drill with swords will soon learn to stab with them. How long will it be, under such tuition, till nations "shall not learn war any more?"

A court house is a miniature government. Suppose a clan, formed in a court room, made up of part of the bench, bar, box, and crowd, to brace up justice, enforce law and defend right. Sensible men are getting weary of the bank-mill round of secrecy; the strikers are returning to reason and work; and these secret law and order leagues, led and started by a fifth-rate "Rev." who wishes to organize the American people from St. Louis to Duluth and Bangor, to suppress some local disturbances which are already suppressed, is like "The Grand Army of the Republic" enlisted after the fighting is all done; so thin a pretense that the cloven hoof can be seen through it. We hope the Rev. Mr. Edmonston of Sedalia, Mo. and his new secret society will be frowned on by every decent man and woman where he comes on his secret mission, and soon find other and honester means of bread.

ABOLISH TRIAL BY JURY.

The Chicago Tribune, with its correspondents, has opened an earnest discussion of the whole jury system, whose abolition would include a change in the Constitution of the United States, and of every State, and every bill of rights. The Tribune thinks it cannot be done; and is doubtless correct. First, the patriarch or king was the state. This outgrown, the king called in the priest, and society was "King, Priest & Co." In 1215 King John's barons forced their way into the ring, and then it was "King, Priest & Baron." No "freeman could be condemned but by a jury of his peers,'" (pares, equals). But the soil of Europe was then worked by villeins (slaves). These had no jury trial. They were bought and sold, with or without the land. Irish landlordism is a lingering remnant of that system. But with us civil power has sunk to the bottom by the abolition of our slavery. What used to be called "mob" and "rabble," is now "ring;" and the jury, in our cities, is now the prime minister of the mob. C. L. Blanchard, who was made their attorney by the Chicago W. C. T. U., after trying a case or two, saw and said to the ladies that a Chicago jury could not be empanneled who would enforce liquor laws against State, city and United States license. He saw that the jury which was to protect the people against depraved royalty could not and would not protect right against his majesty the People.

So in these labor riots, juries will not punish Spies, Parsons & Co. Nor will the militia fight the laboring masses, to which they belong. Kossuth said, "Now bayonets think."

There is but one way for us out of this political crater, and that is, to draw out the fires of the volcano from under it; that is to say, take away the causes which corrupt juries; and these causes are

SECRET SOCIETIES.

The professional jury-men, hangers-about-courts, bummers, and incapables, all, or almost all, have more secret oaths in them than a mangy dog in July has fleas. One of these creatures, taking a juryman's oath to try a case according to law and evidence, is like a prostitute pledging her chastity and honor. The secret oath dies last. Such men never can or will be brought to find a true verdict while there is a local public sentiment to shelter and reward them for perjury.

The only remedy for this state of things is in the principles of the American platform, recognizing God, the Sabbath, and the Bible; and repealing lodge charters and prohibiting lodge oaths. Every Federal election must become a year of revivals, not got up by gim-cracks, jokes and tobacco smoke; but by truth, by American principles; by Christ, who was the truth, and who spake nothing in secret.

And we must begin with the church. Bishop McLaven, of the Protestant Episcopal church, we are told is a Freemason; has sworn to have his throat cut if he disobeys the sign of a brother Mason, though that sign be sent from the criminal's box. Rev. Dr. Abbott E. Kittridge, before leaving Chicago, filled up his auditorium by joining the Royal Arcanum, which words mean "The kingly secret." T. T. Gurney, while deacon of the First Congregational church, Chicago, before the advent of Dr. Goodwin, received a high Masonic degree, in a room called, in Masonic language, "The Third Heavens!" And Bishop Fallows, of the Reformed Episcopal church, went from forming a "Lodge of Intelligence," where he and Mr. Rounseville had proved to their listeners that "The mission of Masonry was to perfect and complete Christianity," to Mr. Moody's platform in his vast congregation in Farwell Hall, and pronounced the benediction on the great crowd, numbers of whom had seen and heard him in the oath-bound lodges of Chicago.

Now, "The times of this ignorance God has winked at, but now commands all men everywhere to repent." The National Christian Association has given notice of two national conferences of Christians, to meet, one in Chicago next autumn, and another in Nashville or Memphis, Tennessee, to consider the nature of the Secret Lodge System, and what the word of God requires of Christians concerning it.

If these two meetings are blest of God, by next June the Prohibitionists and Americans will be one party; and in these two parties there are more than the proportion of the ten righteous men, whose prayers would have saved Sodom.

Washington, who was present and knew what founded our free government, said that "destroying the sanctity of the oath" would destroy it. This is what has happened in Chicago. It is no use to abolish the jury system. Burning down that barn will not destroy the Masonic rats who have other secret holes to flee to. An appeal to God and the American people is all that is left us. This saved and restrored the Hebrew commonwealth not once nor twice. "GOD SAVE THE COMMONWEALTH OF THE UNITED STATES!"

A WAR SERMON OUT OF PLACE.

Ministers of the Prince of Peace ought not to forget and much less ought they to counteract their great mission, even on the Fourth of July. We are not a little surprised to see in the July 4th sermon of Rev. Alex. Patterson, of the Eighth Presbyterian church of this city, a statement that one of the great dangers of this nation is that of invasion by foreign foes; that the weakest nation in the world could capture New York or San Francisco, and hold them for a ransom; and that our army ought at once to be increased to one hundred thousand.

Had this come from a ward politician, we should not have been surprised; for the presumption would be that he knew better. It would not be strange that he should make a speech for buncombe. But a minister of the Gospel ought to know that there has been no invasion of this country for more than seventy years, nor would there have been then had we not first declared war. Meanwhile the resources of the nation have increased many fold, and the occasions for war and invasion have greatly diminished. It is not probable that the weakest nation could capture San Francisco or New York; but even if it were so, a minister of the Gospel ought to know that our greatest security is a just and peaceful spirit. While all European nations are groaning under the burden of war taxes, and seeking some means whereby they may reduce their great armaments, it illy becomes us to needlessly increase ours.

The recent debate in the U. S. Senate on the Army Bill showed that even the slight increase of from 25,000 to 30,000 was wholly uncalled for. We are sorry to see a minister seeking to appeal to the military spirit, which is but another way to arouse the demon of war.

—Rev. John G. Fee is now in Ohio raising $500 to complete the building at Camp Nelson, Kentucky, for which he made an appeal some time ago. He is worn with labor, but will never "rust out.".

—Pres. C. A. Blanchard's address at Lake Bluff Temperance Convocation, last Sabbath, was an able discussion of the topic, "The Responsibility of Christians for the Drink Traffic." An abstract of the sermon was published in the Chicago Monday papers.

—Rev. E. Mathews, of Michigan, passed through Chicago a few days since on his way to camp-meeting in Indiana, where he preached with great power and success. He is anxious to take again the field against the lodge foe, and is ready for a proposal from the N. C. A., or any of the State auxiliaries.

—Le Jour du Repos, a bi-monthly journal published in Vevay, Switzerland, is reprinting from the Free Methodist an article on life insurance, by C. E. Harroun, Jr., of Walker, Iowa. It has also published letters from Rev. P. A. Seguin, of the French Protestant mission of this city.

—The Birmingham, Iowa, Free Press makes a score against the Grand Army lodge of that place, which professed to have borne all the funeral expenses of a deceased member, beside supplying himself and family with the necessities of life, nurses, etc. This is what the order agrees to do, as we understand its professions. But in this case the county records show $50 paid for the burial of this pauper G. A. R. member.

—Arrangements are progressing for the National Reform Convention at Ocean Grove, N. J., on July 21st. Rev. T. P. Stevenson, corresponding secretary of the association, announces that Rev. D. McAllister, LL. D., and Major George A. Hilton have promised to deliver addresses, and that invitations have been extended to the Rev. David Gregg, Mrs. Mary A. Woodbridge and Dr. Talmage. Good singing will add to the attractiveness of the sessions, a selected choir of from fifty to one hundred voices, from Philadelphia and New York, being among the certainties.

—Mrs. Mary B. Willard, under whose skilful editorial control the Union Signal came to be one of the best of temperance papers, went last fall to Europe for a year, Miss Mary Allen West taking her place. The change has lately been made permanent. Mrs. Willard went to Berlin to superintend the education of her own daughters, and recently determined to make that city her home. She has now opened what she calls an "American Home School" for American young ladies sojourning abroad, which has opened under very encouraging auspices.

—The general committee of the United Brethren churches that maintain their principles against the lodge, meets at Fairmount, Indiana, on the 20th of the present month. Rev. Wm. Dillon, of the Conservator, sends a warm invitation to Secretary Stoddard to attend. Bro. Dillon writes of the liberal party: "The chasm is growing wider and wider between us, and may become an impassable gulf. We are bound to maintain our law against the unholy orders." No pious man, who loves the church of God, can mark the course of the liberal party in this denomination, but with grief and alarm. In selling out the truth for a few city churches, a little worldly popularity and money, they are falling into Peter's sin of denying Christ.

—President C. A. Blanchard has taken to his home as a life companion and a helper Miss A J. Carothers, late lady principal of Wheaton College, a young lady whose excellencies of character, sound wisdom and earnest piety will long be remembered in the institution. They were married last Wednesday at the home of the bride. The Iowa State Register of Des Moines of the 29th ult. notices the event in eloquent terms: "In Seelye township, at the home of Henry Carothers, Esq., during the coming week will occur a notable social event which will be interesting to the readers of the Register in several States. Mr. Carothers is an old and highly esteemed citizen and a prosperous farmer, surrounded by many evidences of his Scotch-Irish character and thrift. His home is graced by three daughters, gentle and refined by nature. One is an accomplished physician connected in a hospital for women in Chicago. Another has for several years been principal of the ladies department of Wheaton College in Illinois, while the third presides over her father's household, constant in fidelity to her domestic ministry. On Wednesday next, at this home, so rarely blessed in noble women, the eloquent young president of Wheaton College will claim as his bride Miss Jennie Carothers, his late lady principal; The people of Guthrie county will offer many God-speeds for President Blanchard and his lovely bride."

BY-NOTES OF TRAVEL.

In the exigencies of travel there must of necessity be some omissions and some items but slightly noted. Some topics of interest will be considered in this paper, reserving the Chinese and Mormons for future numbers.

Eastern people ask often the climate of the trans-Missouri regions, with apparent indifference to the fact that Omaha is yet to the east of the continental center, and that the single State of California embraces the latitude of Chicago and Boston on the north, and of Natchez and Savannah on the south. Within such limits there must be some variety. But through all this western half of our country, the atmosphere has the uniform quality of dryness except very near the Pacific coast. Even along the sun-baked plains of southern California, and across the dreary alkali deserts of Nevada and Utah, this peculiarity of the atmosphere renders it wonderfully tonic. You may bake and dry up in the heat, but you do not swelter; and rarely if ever, is there a case of sun-stroke. In the elevated mountain regions there is an electric vivacity and buoyancy in the air which amends for its rarity. If you weary in a mountain climb, a minute's rest reinvigorates and refreshes. But of the multitudes who go for their health to Colorado or the coast, the cemeteries tell a sorrowful story. A large proportion of the deaths about Los Angeles—the real estate men say two-thirds—are of those who come too late to be benefited. Some continue to fail, while others gain; others find safety only on the coast, and others are better suited among the valleys north of San Francisco.

The rainless season begins in May and continuing till September, every traveled way soon turns into a dust wallow, from which every breeze sweeps clouds of irritating alkali. The prevailing winds of southern California and the San Joaquin valley are from the southwest. The discomforts of the dwellers on the east side of the streets can therefore be imagined. The dark green of the orange groves, too, becomes of a dirty hue, as if dragged through a mud hole. In Salt Lake the deep dust of the streets if often swept in clouds, cutting, stinging, smothering the unprotected stranger. But changes are going on all over this region. The rain belt marches west through Kansas and Nebraska twenty—some say fifty—miles each year. Where, a dozen years ago, rains were comparatively unknown, now the fall is ample, and the country is rapidly taking on the attractive features of longer settled regions. Relying upon this steady advance of the rain belt, the lands are being rapidly settled toward the Rocky Mountains, and another generation will see prosperous communities all across this vast plain, which our fathers believed to be almost uninhabitable. Even in northern California, important elimatic changes are going on. Where once the snows were eighteen feet deep, they are now five, and the rain fall is much increased. In the Utah valleys, the farmers have learned to watch narrowly the snow fields hung against their skies, and prepare for their too quickly melting. For everything depends on the irrigating streams fed by these mountain snows, and it is astonishing how these apparently desert lands will bring forth when watered. In the Utah valleys 125 bushels is the yield per acre of oats, and other cereals in proportion. The regulation of the water supply to time, place and quantity, not only, it is claimed, insures a better crop, but the farmer can thus till a half more land than in the Eastern States. The first expense of irrigation is a serious consideration; but when undertaken by large corporations the profit is sure and is not long delayed. In some parts of the San Joaquin valley these immense ditches, twenty and thirty miles long, begin to tap the clear mountain rivers as they plunge through the foot hills and soon leave their beds dry, scattering their waters over hundreds of farms. Tracts containing hundreds of thousands of acres are now being redeemed from the desert in northern Colorado, by this process.

The mining business is not so sure, and must fall back before the advance of agriculture. The mountains of Colorado, Utah and Nevada are full of silver and gold, and thousands are spending their lives in the vain search for a "rich lead". It is as uncertain as a lottery. Where one succeeds hundreds lose all; and even a paying mine empties its treasures into the treasuries of the railway and the smelting furnace, rather than into the owner's pocket.

But while the mountains can be melted into silver, or washed into gold, and while the orange bears at once its blossoms and its fruit, the railroads and real estate speculators will fill the earth with their exaggerations. Few well men will care to settle in southern California who visit that land after the middle of May; and even old residents, who cannot cease praising their climate, are glad enough to get away to the ocean for one or two months during the summer heat. There are few busier places in the country than Los Angeles, during winter and spring. In May there seemed to be more building than in San Francisco, but I was assured that in a few weeks the voice of the real estate agent would cease to be heard in the streets, and the whole population, whoever could get away, would move to Santa Monica or Long Beach.

THE OMNIPOTENCE OF THE LODGE

in California has not been over-stated; but it is probable that the southern part of the State may be excepted. Thousands have settled in the orange-bearing region from the East within so short a period, many of whom are neither in the lodge or in favor of it. The Catholic church is strong also about Los Angeles, as indeed at Monterey and San Francisco. "Rum, Romanism and the lodge rule the State," said one of the pastors of the latter city, whose wide observation and former connection with the lodge gave him a rare opportunity for correct judgment. The Odd-fellow building in San Francisco is one of the finest in the city, and George B. Katzenstein prides himself on being at the head of the most powerful secret society in the State. The new City Hall, unfinished now for years, presents a shabby contrast to the elegant structure of this order which is near. The Masonic Temple on Montgomery street, in the business center, is a busy hive, open, I was told, every day of the year and alight every evening.

There is not wanting evidence that the anti-coolie leagues are backed by the Freemasons, and that the whole machinery for ejecting the Chinese, O'Donnell and Ravlin thrown in, is run by the lodge. Ravlin, at least, is a high Mason.

There is a standard, too, raised against the lodge in San Francisco. Mr. N. Keyser, who has occasionally written for the Cynosure, holds a street meeting every Sabbath afternoon, on Pine street near Montgomery. He has a free forum, and any honest-looking working-man who wants to speak can do so. The crowd has sometimes been unruly, but I heard the lodge as roundly denounced from that box on Pine street as ever it was in Farwell Hall. There are the United Presbyterian churches also, Dr. Gibson's on Mason and Mr. Stewart's on Guerero street, and the Swedish Lutheran pastor Tilleen, who amid great opposition and trial keeps his helm steady and true. Across the bay Superintendent Hart of the Free Methodist church makes his headquarters at Alameda. The conservative opposition of such a strong, religious body as the Congregational pastor's meeting in the Palace Hotel must have a wide and growing effect in retarding the progress of the lodge.

THE TEMPERANCE REFORM

has had a peculiar history in California. Of the drinking habits of the miners there is no need to speak, but that the saloons should be as numerous as the stores in the agricultural regions is remarkable. It is, however, not from the proprietors that these places have their support. The hired help of the California ranches are a peculiar class. They are young men, often from happy homes "in the States," but out in the world all afloat in respect to society or religion. Work lasts but a few months, and the rest of the year they must gravitate to the cities or tramp. At every convenient point the devil has opened a place to catch their souls, and the saloon gets all their money. The wine-drinking habit is a growing one in the State, and is beginning a social rot which must be checked. Before the coming of the W. C. T. U. and the Prohibition party the Good templars embodied about all the opposition to the great liquor curse. The evidences of their power are seen in the papers once printed by them, and in the halls and valuable property they yet control in various parts of the State. But their day has passed. The temperance cause has gone far beyond them, and the order has only to die a natural death and be decently laid away and forgotten.

Katzenstein, the present head of the order, has run it for years. In his hands it has not been a temperance society but a "lodge." He was the predecessor of Finch as the head of the order and is now grand, or supreme, or whatever-it-is secretary. He is is also at the head of the Oddfellows and Knights of Pythias. Everything with him runs to the lodge and he makes the lodge serve him well. It made him presiding officer of an important agricultural convention, not long since, in which he could display his Chinese hostility so as to split the meeting, It made him, too, chairman of the State Prohibition convention, unworthy as he was of the place. He has used the Good Templars to support his picked agents who canvassed the State; not for temperance but the lodge, and seems to have carried on a profitable business.

The Good Templars in some quarters who were temperance men in truth, rebelled after patiently endeavoring to secure some action against intemperance. The story of their struggle is too long for this writing, but it is on record. Lodges finally began to secede, attempts were made to seize their property to be squandered on Katzenstein's agents, the courts were appealed to, and the end is not yet, but not far off. The temperance people of the State are tired of paying Katzenstein $3.000 a year for a sinecure with hundreds more for incidentals. His course has had the effect to open their eyes to the abuses possible to the secrecy business, and the best temperance men of the State are now in favor of open work and the Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

MARRIED.—Pres. Charles A. Blanchard and Miss A. Jennie Carothers were married at Wichita, Iowa, Wednesday, June 30th, by Rev. Myron W. Wilcox. At home, Wheaton, Ill., after July 20th. No cards.

THE BACCALAUREATE SERMON in last week's Cynosure is the religious, as the Washington speech was the political, basis of the anti-secret reform. Several hundred, in pamphlet, can be had at four cents, (two postage stamps) each, or five for ten cents in stamps. Please order soon, for Colleges, Seminaries, and High Schools.

—The Mission Worker says that the meeting for prayer for the sick at 15 Washington street, this city, is increasing in size. This is certainly a remarkable meeting. There is no organization connected with it. It would be a difficult matter for a person to find out who has charge of it, and yet there is no friction. Perfect harmony reigns among those who attend it, and best of all the presence of Jehovah Rophi is wonderfully manifested. Requests for prayer from the sick in all parts of the land are read. Many testimonies are given at each meeting from those who have been healed.

THE HOME.

"GOD BLESS OUR HOME."

We come from the fog-laden streets of the city.
From wide windy spaces where the cold has no pity,
From close-darkened room, or from bleak hill and moor,
To thankfully enter the welcoming door,—
And God bless our home!

We come from the fights and the races of life,
From the fierce din of voices, the conflict and strife,
From the tempests of words that are thundering loud,
From the riot, unquiet, and stress of the crowd,
And God bless our home!

O snug little nest, in a shelter so cherry,
O place of sweet rest for the troubled and weary,
Each day has its Sabbath of prayer and of psalm
Where the church in the house is kept sacred and calm,
So God bless our home!

No spot is so dear to the heart, nor is any Ignored by so few, or beloved by so many:
Where dear eyes smile on us and kind voices speak,
There find we the pledge of the heaven that we seek,
And God bless our home!

Yes, God give the home his abundant good blessing,
God shelter its roof from all evil distressing,
And grant to its inmates the spirit of love
Which rules in the house of our Father above,
And so bless our home.

God make us unselfish, devoted and dutiful,
Meek, merry, and kindly, wise, tender, and beautiful,
And not only hear when we offer our prayer,
But himself love our home, and abide with us there.
And so God bless our home.

SAVE THE BOYS.

There is one parental duty which is commonly over-looked, or neglected, or avoided, or left in a general way to an over-ruling and watchful Providence, without considering that Providence requires us to do it, and that He will bless the doing of it. I mean the duty of teaching boys to be pure. It is confessedly the most difficult, the most delicate, at present the most neglected, and yet one of the most important, perhaps, all things considered, the most important duty, next to teaching the love of God, that devolves upon parents. England has been ringing with the cry, "Save our girls!" Save them from whom? From bad men. But bad men were once boys; and if we would only trouble ourselves to enquire into the temptations some boys face day by day, if we would imagine to ourselves, if that be possible, the kind of immoral influence that surrounds them at school, and in business, like a deadly all-pervading and all-penetrating atmosphere, we should as loudly and as urgently raise the cry, "Save our boys!" But who is to save them if fathers and mothers don't do it, and do it by training them?

It is astonishing to think that, whereas no father worthy of the name would send his child on a dark night along a road full of dangers, and would carefully warn him of them if he sent him that way in the daytime, he will yet send him forth along the dangerous road of life without one word of warning concerning the deep and dangerous pit of impurity, where he knows that a host lie bruised and slain. A word would, I believe, have saved thousands who now bitterly grieve over their sins.

But the question is asked: "What would you say? How much would you say? When would you say it?" I reply that if parents would study this as they do other matters touching their children's welfare, they will be sure to find the right word and the right time to say it. They can also ask for wisdom from above. As for subjects, there are the nature and uses of the body generally; there is the teaching of Scripture concerning the body as the temple of the Holy Ghost; and there are wisely-written tracts and books, one of which might be made a text. But, above all, I believe that the value of a parent's work depends not so much upon the particular word spoken as upon the frank, holy, and trustful understanding which, by the speaking of it, is established between the father or mother and the child upon this subject. Right knowledge in right proportion, imparted by the right person for a right object, is the best way to meet and satisfy a natural and right curiosity, to check an unholy curiosity, and to bar out all that abominable information which neither children nor adults should possess. Somehow, our girls and women have been taught that they are expected to lead pure lives, and in the main they have done so. Surely the same holy obligation can be laid upon our boys, and if it is, I am confident that they, too, will honor it. The purity of many pure men proves that.

A child should not be shut up to fight the demon of impurity alone and unaided by the felt sympathy of God or man; almost better throw him to the lions. No; he should have the inspiring assurance that all goodness places its resources at his command. And let him know and be sure that he has in his own heart, in the presence of the Holy Spirit, a Guide who will never fail to teach and lead him aright. He should be taught to regard that Guide as an ever-present Friend, whose counsels, if they are followed, will keep "his eyes from tears, his feet from falling, and his soul from death."

God sets a still small voice,
Deep every soul within;
It guideth to the right,
And warneth us of sin.

If we that voice obey,
Clearer its tones will be,
Till all God's will for us
Clear as noonday we see.

To put my thoughts into a few plain suggestions:

1. Let parents teach their boys, when very little boys, to be modest. A word, a look, a touch, may be enough to lay the foundations of a pure character. The notice of conscience is thus called to a great department of life and duty; the will is strengthened to be firm upon a vital point.

2. Boys should be taught to be modest with other children, and not to allow other children to be rude to them. They should be persuaded to tell their parents of anything which may have appeared to them a violation of proper behavior. There may have been nothing in it, and so a boy may be kept from becoming morbid—a most important thing; there may have been a serious danger, and he will be saved in time.

3. Boys should be taught, at least by the time they are sent to a boarding-school, something of the nature of the body, of the temptations they will have to face, and of the fearful consequences to body and soul of yielding to sin. Parents will now find that they have to contend against serious and powerful competitors for the confidence of their own children.

4. One would suppose that there could be no difficulty in aiding boys and girls by cautioning them not to receive pictures or papers from men and women who hover near schools of all kinds to disseminate impure literature, or if they should get hold of anything of the kind, to show it at once, and without fear, to their parents.

All may be summed up thus: a boy kept under his father's roof until he is at least fifteen or sixteen; taught sufficient to make self-control a binding duty upon his conscience, but nothing to stimulate curiosity; fed with plain food (not over-fed); kept busy in his mind with good things; taught to care for others, and not to live for himself; and sent to bed every night thoroughly tired, will have a good chance of "escaping the corruption that is in the world through lust."

True, he may not escape. Some who seem to have every advantage go astray; and some who have no help, save the inner teaching of God's Spirit, stand immovable. We cannot guarantee character; yet we believe in the principle that "whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap." "Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it."—Rev. J. P. Gledstone.

NO USE.

There is no use putting up the motto, "God bless our home," if the father is a rough old bear, and the spirit of discourtesy and rudeness is taught by the parents to the children, and by the older to the younger. There is no use in putting up the motto, "The Lord will provide," while the father is shiftless, the mother is shiftless, the boys refuse to work, and the girls busy themselves over gewgaw and finery. There is no use to put up the motto, "The greatest of these is charity," while the tongue of the backbiter wags in that family and silly gossip is dispensed at the tea-table. There is no use in placing up conspicuously the motto, "The liberal man deviseth liberal things," while the money chinks in the pockets of "the head of the household," groaning to get out to see the light of day, and there are dollars and dimes for wines and tobacco and other luxuries, but positively not one cent for the church. In how many homes are these mottoes standing—let us say hanging—sarcasm which serve only to point a jest and adorn a satire! The beauty of quiet lives, of trustful, hopeful, free-handed, free-hearted, charitable lives, is one of surpassing loveliness, and those lives shed their own incomparable fragrance, and the world knows where to find them. And they shall remain fresh and fadeless when the colors of pigment and the worsted and floss have faded, and the frames have rotted away in their joints.—Prairie Farmer.

BEGIN EARLY.

"Education commences at the mother's knee, and every word spoken within the hearsay of little children tends toward the formation of character." Endeavor always to talk your best before your children. They hunger perpetually for new ideas. They will learn with pleasure from the lips of parents what they deem it drudgery to study in books; and, even if they have the misfortune to be deprived of many educational advantages, they will grow up intelligent if they enjoy, in childhood, the privilege of listening daily to the conversation of intelligent people. We sometimes see parents who are the life of every company which they enter, dull, silent, and uninteresting at home among their children. If they have not mental activity and mental stores sufficient for both, let them first use what they have for their own households. A silent home is a dull place for young people—a place from which they will escape if they can. How much useful information, on the other hand, is often given in a pleasant family conversation, and what unconscious but excellent mental training in lively social argument? Cultivate to the utmost the graces of conversation.

SALVATION OF CHILDREN.

I hate to hear people say, "They have received a pack of children into the church." "A pack of children!" Yes, and if Jesus carries them in his bosom, surely you are not imitating Christ, nor exhibiting much of his spirit when you look down upon them or despise them. To me one soul is as good as another. I rejoice as much in the addition of the poorest mechanic to this church as if he were a peer of the realm; I am as grateful to God when I hear of repentance in the young as in the aged; for souls, after all, are not affected in value by rank or age. They are all priceless, and not to be weighed in the scale with worlds. I pray you therefore rejoice if the Spirit of God dwells in the lowly or in the great, in the young or in the old. He is the self-same Spirit; he makes each renewed person equally his temple, and each saved one is equally a jewel of Christ, dear to the heart of the Eternal Father, beloved by him who redeemed all his people alike with his most precious blood.—Spurgeon.

LIVES OF CELEBRATED MEN.

PESTALOZZI, THE FATHER OF COMMON SCHOOLS.

Pestalozzi was the apostle of childhood. He was born at Zurich in 1746. His father was an oculist, who practiced in the city.

Young Pestalozzi received a fair education, though he was not at all a bright boy. Indeed, in orthography and writing he proved a confirmed dunce.

As he grew up to manhood, he entered the ministry. He entered the pulpit of a country congregation, but pursued by his native awkwardness, he stuck fast in the sermon. Striving to relieve his confusion, he burst out into a laugh.

This would never do!

He then thought of law. But he was as unfit to practice law as to preach the Gospel. At last it was determined to send him to an institution of practical agriculture.

He was a dreamer again; he could learn little. He did not become a practical farmer. Oddly enough, he became a teacher!

He opened a school at Neuhof, in Berne, for poor children. Although he failed in being a preacher or a farmer, he established quite a new epoch in teaching. Yet he had not been taught to teach. He had everything to learn, but nothing to unlearn.

He had to make his own system. But he was fortified and strengthened by abundant love for children.

Education with him was coming in mental contact with them. For education, in fact, is the descent of the higher mind into the lower mind, and implies mental sympathy and contact.

The plan which he had formed for the education of those poor children embraced agriculture, manufacture, and commerce. It was an industrial school where hand labor and head labor were combined.

"I lived," he says, "for years together in a circle of more than fifty pauper children; in poverty did I share my bread with them, and lived like a pauper myself, to try if I could teach paupers to live as men."

But his work was not appreciated.

"For several years I sat amongst my pupils like the owl among the birds. I was cast away by men, and their sneers followed after me. 'Wretch that thou art,' they exclaimed; 'thou art less able than the meanest laborer to help thyself, and yet thou fanciest thyself able to help the people!'"

In teaching the children, Pestalozzi had no books. Now that we are crammed with books, this will be thought marvellous. There was plenty of sympathy, but no books!

All this Pestalozzi learned by experience. He had a long, up-hill fight. He himself was very poor, and his pupils were paupers. But the lower their condition, the greater was their need of education. He and they must work for their living.

Happy thought! The blessing of work, and the blessing of education,—these went hand in hand.

In fine weather the teacher was out in the fields with the pupils, working upon the soil, and in wet weather and in winter he taught them from his own mouth the lessons of life. He also taught weaving and spinning and other useful arts.

After five years' experience, the first school failed and was shut up. Pestalozzi was too poor to carry it on any longer.

The press was open to him, and he made use of it. He published his "Leonard and Gertrude," and the book was received with universal admiration.

He next published his "Inquiries into the Course of Nature in the Development of Maukind." His preparation of this volume occupied him for about three years. Heretofore Pestalozzi had been baffled, but not beaten, in his efforts to be a schoolmaster. Auother opportunity was about to be presented to him.

The tempest of revolution was sweeping over Europe. The French Republican army had burst into Switzerland, and set up the Helvetian Republic. The Canton of Unterwalden stood out against the democratic enthusiasm. The French seized their capital, Stanz, aud burned it to the ground.

"Be my brother, or I will kill you!" was the motto of the friends of the people. Great misery ensued throughout the canton. Men, women, and children wandered about unclad and unfed. Pestalozzi was sent to help them.

"I united in myself," he said, "the offices of superintendent, paymaster, steward, and sometimes chambermaid, in a half-ruined house. I was surrounded with ignorance, disease and every kind of trouble.

"The number of children rose to eighty, all of different ages. Some were full of pretension; others were inured to open beggary; and all, with a few exceptions, were entirely ignorant. To educate, to develop those children, what a task! And yet I ventured upon it."

Pestalozzi began to educate these children. How did he succeed? Remember, it is the schoolmaster that makes the school, and educational systems are good just as they are administered.

He had no books, but he taught the children to imitate words. From words he proceeded to sentences, and then he taught the children the meaning of them; for words and sentences were but the signs of things.

He thus put ideas into their young minds, and gradually gave them an accurate acquaintance with the essential and distinctive qualities of objects—considered first individually, then in construction as a whole, and then again as a part or parts of the great system of the universe.

Thus began the Pestalozzian system of education, as now practiced in our infant schools.

"From moruing till evening," he says, "I was in the midst of the children. All that concerned their mind and body proceeded from me. All help, all succor, all instruction came forth immediately from my hands and heart.

"My hand lay in their hand, my eye rested on their eye. When they wept I wept, and their laughter called forth mine. They were out of the world; they were out of Stanz; they were with me, and I was with them.

"Their bread was my bread, their drink was my drink. I had nothing but them—no household, no pay, no servant around me—I had only them. If they were well, I was among them; if they were ill, I was at their side.

"I slept amongst them. I was the last that went to bed at night, and the first that rose in the morning. Even when in bed, I prayed and talked with them until they fell asleep."

Pestalozzi now made great progress in his work as an educator. The poor children lived under his care as brothers and sisters. He had reached their hearts, and they had rewarded him with their love. His moral and religious influence upon them was very great; though he did not talk to them much about religion, but only showed them the religious life that he himself led.

The number of his pupils increased so much that he could not teach them all himself. He had no means of hiring other teachers.

But he was never without expedients. He employed the best and most orderly scholars to teach the others. This method succeeded admirably, for ready learners are often the best teachers.

And thus began the Monitorial System, afterwards better known as the Bell and Lancaster System, though long before either Bell or Lancaster had become known as popular educators.

When the war came to an end Pestalozzi's school was broken up, amidst tears on all sides. He provided the pupils with provisions for their journey, and dismissed them with words of kindness. He himself was greatly distressed at the parting.

"When, after toiling and restless nights," he says, "a shipwrecked sailor gains sight of land, and begius to breathe hope of life, but suddenly, by an adverse blast, is driven back on the boundless deep, and once more strains all his limbs until they are numb and powerless, so was I!"

Nevertheless, he continued to teach. He entered an elementary school as an assistant. Here he introduced and taught his "Lessons on Objects".

He did not remain long in obscurity. Associating himself with Krusi, he opened a school in a large castle at Burgdorf, which he was allowed to occupy. There he drew around him a large number of children, and finally established his educational system and appliances.

In his "How Gertrude Teaches Her Little Ones," he endeavored to attract the mothers to his side; for he rightly held that the truest education not only begins at home, but ends there.

It centers round the mother; she is the crystal of domestic life. She educates the heart, though she may leave to others the education of the intellect. But Pestalozzi endeavored to combine the two in one.

His school took the place of the home; and when the home was poor, miserable and full of petty cares, the school was the only place where the children could learn the lessons of life, morality and duty.

Pestalozzi had now drawn the eyes of all upon him—of all, that is, who took an interest in the culture and education of the rising generation.

His name was now European; and scholars and teachers came to him from all parts. Kings and emperors visited the great educator. Fichte declared that he saw in his labors the commencement of a new era in human culture.

His life was utterly self-sacrificing. All that he did was done for the good of others.

A tomb was erected over his remains, which contains the following inscription:

"Here rests Pestalozzi, born in Zurich, the 12th of January, 1746; died at Burgg, the 17th of February, 1827: the deliverer of the poor at Neuhof; at Stanz the orphan's father; at Burgsdorf and Munchenbuchsee the founder of new schools for the people; at Yverdon the instructor of manhood: as a man, a Christian and a citizen, he was all for others, for himself nothing! Peace to his ashes!"—Samuel Smiles, L. L. D., in Youth's Companion.

TEMPERANCE.

INTEMPERANCE IN RELATION TO THE LABOR QUESTION.

The organization of labor has hitherto beeu in the hands of unfit men, with too few exceptions. The leaders have been selfish, narrow-minded, or ignorant. The true way to utilize the strength of united labor is to develop the individual power of the members. By no other means have great nations ever been formed. An association, the effective strength of which depends upon the surrender of the rights and liberties of its members, may be a dangerous instrument for the use of adventurers and demagogues, but it cannot advance the interests of the men themselves. The most urgent want of labor to-day is self-control. In this free country uo man endowed with average abilities need remain all his life poor. If he has thrift, self-restraint, perseverance, he will pass from the ranks of labor to the ranks of capital. It is the saving man who becomes the capitalist,—the man who has force to deny himself indulgences. What a lesson lies in the drink bill of the American workingmen, for instance! At a moderate estimate, it amounts to betweeu four and five hundred million dollars a year. Whilc labor is throwing away that enormous sum annually, with what show of consisteucy cau it lament its condition? One year's remission of that destructive self-indulgence would solve every labor problem extant; would provide a fund for the establishment of co-operative works, for the sustenance of the sick and aged, for the maintenance and education of orphans, for libraries and scientific schools, for all manner of helps.

At present the workingmen can hardly make both ends meet. Is it not because he insists on creating capitalists out of the saloon keepers, and, not content with that, on submitting all his rights of citizenship to the same objects of worship? The saloon in politics is the most hideous abuse of the day, but where would it be if the workingmen withdrew their support from it? It keeps them poor. It keeps our politics corrupt. It supplies a constant stream of base adventurers, who disgrace the American name at home and abroad. It makes the terms, "public office" and "public plunder" synonomous. It stifles progress, fosters pauperism, brutalizes husbands and fathers, breaks women's hearts, puts rags on the workingman's back, disease in his body and shame and despair in his heart. Yet when labor is most disturbed, when the demand for advanced wages is loudest, when strikes are most frequent, when hunger and misery are most rife in the homes of the poor, the saloon flourishes still. There may be no bread at home but there is always beer and whisky at the bar, and the men who consider themselves the victims of circumstances or the "thralls" of capital squander their earnings, spend their savings, in these dens. Can there be a serious labor question while this state of things continues? Can workingmen talk gravely of their wrongs while it is plain to all the world that if they only saved the capital they earn they would be comfortable?

The aspect of the case has not been sufficieutly examined, and for reasons which will probably occur readily to the reader. But it is really the key to the situation. When we see on the one side a yearly waste of between four and five hundred millions of dollars,and on the other side a body of men,the squanderers of this vast fund,complaining that they have not sufficient opportunities, we can not long be at a loss to comprehend the true nature of the existing dissatisfaction. It is clear that labor has been incited to seek from without the relief which ought to be sought from within. The socialist theory of a paternal state system which provides every body with work and wages is a mischievous fallacy. It simply encourages indolence and dependence. The first duty of labor is to demonstrate its capacity for self-government. At this moment its drink bill is an impeachment of that capacity. No man who spends half his earnings at a saloon can get ou in the world, or has the least right to expect to get on. Nor can any body of men follow the same course with better results. Prosperity is the reward of persevering, temperate, ungrudging work. In these days there is, however, a great wind of new doctrine. We are asked to believe that it is possible to succeed in very different ways: that the less a man works for example, the more he ought to receive; that national prosperity can be advanced by diminishing production; and many other equally hard sayings. But it may be confidently affirmed that these new theories are destined to be short-lived, and that the world will have to be managed eventually upon pretty much the old lines.—George Frederick Parsons in Atlantic.

The number of insane people in Prussia is in almost exact proportion to the number of public houses and retail drinking shops.

The saloon-keepers of Nebraska City have signed an agreement not to sell liquor to any man who is known to have taken the temperance pledge.

Tobacco blindness is becoming a common affliction. At present there are several persons under treatment for it at one London hospital. Sometimes the victim loses his sight altogether.

Twelve o'clock midnight, to-morrow, the big clock in the Court House tower at Atlanta Ga., will toll the knell of the remaining saloons, sixty-nine in all, in "the Chicago of the South.—Chicago Journal, June 29.

It is said that the cost of the land in Irelaud is £11,000,000, but the drink of the Irish people is £13,000,000. How easily the Irish problem could be solved if they would stop drinking for one year and purchase their beloved land!

New York City has one saloon for every twenty-three voters, and Philadelphia has one saloon for every tweuty-niue voters. One ward has one saloon for every eight voters.

A brewer from Iowa receutly weut to a Wisconsin town to continue the business, but was careful to put into his lease of a building, "This shall be null an dvoid whenever Prohibition prevails in this State!"

The Fisk Jubilee Singers have been engaged by the Prohibitionists of New Jersey, to enliven the coming campaign iu that State. This band of singers are from Fisk University, which was founded by General Clinton B. Fisk, the Prohibition candidate for Governor, and will doubtless be glad to sing into the gubernatorial chair their benefactor.

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

—Mr. Spurgeon's tabernacle, London, has now a membership of 5,214.

—The Friends (Quakers) in England are decreasing in numbers quite rapidly.

—The prayer meeting of the Third Presbyterian church, Chicago, is said to be the largest in the United States.

—Dr. Newman Hall has nineteen Sunday-schools in connection with his church in London, in which there are 5 000 pupils.

—Rev. D. J. L. Withrow, of Boston, was unanimously elected pastor of the Third Presbyterian church, Chicago, last week.

—The statistics of the Japan Evangelical Alliance show that the total membership of the missions is 11,978, and that no fewer than 3,115 baptized adult converts were received in 1885. Of the churches, 57 are wholly self-supporting, and 101 partially self-supporting. The native contributions for all purposes amounted the past year to about $20,000.

—A constitutional convention was held by the North Ohio United Brethren conference at Metz, Ind., June 9th. The meeting was well attended and ten delegates were chosen to a general convention, among whom are J. K. Allwood and W. O. Pinius.

—There are now some fourteen Baptist churches in Mexican territory and an effort is being made to secure a site for a suitable church in the capital city. Mexico is yet wrapped up in a darkness more dense than that of the middle ages, and Protestant privileges are not easily obtained.

—The Waldensian church of Italy has effected a settlement in South America, where it occupies two parishes or colonies on the shores of the La Plata and Uruguay. True to its missionary character it is making vigorous efforts to evangelize the immense population of Italian immigrants who to the number of 100,000 annually leave their native country for the La Plata.

—Colonel David B. Sickels, formerly the representative of the United States in Siam, has received from Bangkok a letter which says: "His Majesty is so well pleased with the results of the system of public education for males, which was established a few years ago at your suggestion, that he has decided to establish a school in this city for the instruction of the native women, and it is probable that a prominent missionary lady will be placed at the head of the institutions.

—The entire receipts of all the Presbyterian boards for 1884-5 were $1,729,628 01. The entire receipts for the year just closed have been $1,931,811.07—an increase of $202,173 06 over last year. At the close of 1884-5 the debts of all the Boards amounted to $215,152 41; now they are $134,074.53. The balances on hand then were $17,338.71; now they are $39,515.52, of which, however, the Board of Church Erection has $45,946.73. The debts of all the Boards this year are less by $79,077.88 than they were last year.

—Notwithstanding the many losses sustained by the Congo Mission its ranks are constantly being reinforced by noble-spirited young men who have chosen for their motto, "Africa for Christ." The committee trust that the special precautions being taken will prevent any recurrence of such casualities in the future. Henceforth, there is to be one, if not two, qualified medical men, imbued with the true missionary spirit upon the Congo staff; two special health manuals have been prepared by competent authorities for the use of the missionaries, and the necessity for great carefulness is enjoined.

—In the closing sessions of the African Methodist Episcopal Conference in New York city resolutions were adopted recommending parents to supervise more carefully their children's choice in marriage, asserting the right of the negro to fill such positions as those of policemen, and censuring the New York police officials for excluding colored men from the force. Resolutions were also adopted congratulating the Brazilian Emancipation Society on the success of its work in Brazil—a congratulation, by the way, that will be more in place when the cruelties which, as we understand from Brazilian papers, are still practised on the slaves shall have been done away with—and condemning State divorce laws which recognize any other cause of divorce than that admitted by the Bible.

—Dr. Joseph K. Greene, of Constantinople, in an article reviewing the progress of missions in Turkey, says the time has come for more earnest effort in behalf of Mohammedans. Among the reasons given for this opinion are the following: "First, Turkish converts, in demanding for themselves full religious liberty and protection, now stand squarely upon the law of the land. Second, Turks are no longer deterred from examining the claims of the Gospel by the scandal of Oriental Christianity. Third, By the wide dissemination of the Scriptures in the Turkish language the Turkish mind is, to a large extent, being brought in contact with divine truth."

—Chicago is a bad city, Boston is a worse one. Rev. H. L. Hastings, D. D., the editor of the Christian, and well known as an author and for his labors in connection with Young Men's Christian Associations, will cheerfully testify to this fact. He was recently arrested for preaching on Boston Common on the Sabbath without a license, and placed in the prisoners' dock with more than a score of "drunks" and "disorderlies." He was fined $20; his companions were fined $1 each. He applied for a license to preach on the Sabbath which was refused. The next Sabbath he was arrested for reading, on the the Common, three chapters of the Bible, for which offense he was finally fined $40, and was committed until the fine was paid. He states these facts from his cell in Charles Street jail. And now, brethren, pass along the hat. Let the subscription for evangelizing Boston be a liberal one.—Interior.

—The question of non-attendance at church on Sunday by such large numbers is claiming attention in England. A meeting of laymen was held recently at Bradford, the gentlemen comprising it belonging to one or the other of the evangelical bodies. It was agreed that undenominational churches would not meet the difficulty. It was thought that each church should join in some general plan and favor such a course as would meet the requirements of the day. The following reccommendations were agreed upon: Earnest and simple preaching of the Gospel; hearty singing, in which all can join; free seats; constant efforts on the part of Christians in the way of tendering invitation to others to come and worship with them or to go where taste directed; deeper interest in the spiritual welfare of the young, and the necessity for prayer for the outpouring of the Holy Spirit. The question is one of scarcely less importance in this country than in England.

—The Canton correspondent of The Hong Kong Mail, under date of May 18, describes an attack on Rev. A. A. Fulton, an American missionary and family, in Kwai Ping. The riot, it seems, was caused by students who were in the city for examination. They made such hostile demonstrations in front of the hospital that Mr. Fulton became much alarmed, and leaving his wife, his sister and his little daughter in the house he went to the Yaman to get soldiers. On the way he was followed by a howling, hooting mob, and pelted with stones, several of which inflicted severe wounds. There were three patients in the hospital. These the rioters carried out, and set fire to the hospital, upon which over $800 had recently been spent. They then began to pile up straw and other combustible material about and around the door of the house. Seeing this, Mrs. and Miss Fulton ran out with the child and got to the side of the river. They attempted to get into a boat, but the rioters threatened the boat with destruction if the owners allowed the distressed ladies to get into it. They were obliged, therefore, to sit on the bank of the river for more than an hour till help came, with the infuriated mob yelling their threats like so many demons. All their furniture, clothes, etc., were lost—either stolen or burned in the house or hospital. The landlord who had let to them the house had his house looted and burned and all his cattle stolen.

—The Church Missionary Intelligencer for May gives a brief summary of letters received from Mr. Mackay, of Uganda, dated December 20, promising the greater part of the letters next month. It is a story of severe trial and anxiety. King Mwanga was made very angry by the fact that the missionaries seemed to know all about the killing of Bishop Hannington, though he had forbidden all his people to report the occurrence to the missionaries. Mr. Mackay and Mr. Ashe were cross-questioned as to who it was who gave them information, but as they declined to tell him, the king was furious, and they had little expectation of leaving his presence alive. The Christians, it seemed, were too numerous for the king's policy of silence to avail anything. Every event was quickly reported to the missionaries. Another of the converts had been burned to death because he had ventured to remonstrate with the king for the killing of Bishop Hannington, yet several more had been baptized at their own earnest request. Mr. Mackay writes: "The devotion and courage of the young Christians are wonderful." A pocket diary of Bishop Hannington had been recovered, and is in the possession of the mission. It seems that he sent a message to the king as they were about to kill him, that he had purchased the road to Uganda with his life, and that he died for its people.

—A Wesleyan missionary on the West Coast of Africa who recently paid a visit to Akasa, on the Niger, says the country through which the Upper Niger runs is densely populated and almost entirely Mohammedan, many of them recent converts, and, therefore, at present great fanatics. "Roman Catholics," he says, "are pouring in men and money in a most lavish manner, and the system of buying hearers seems to be very fully developed. A captain of a Niger steamer told me that for two years, at a place called Abgberi, his steamer had each trip been boarded by natives, on whose lips the one inquiry was: 'Is God palaver man aboard, or when is he coming? If he come to teach us so that we sabe (know) white man's book, then we build him house and school, and give him chop—plenty.' Such has been their cry for long, and now I have just heard that a Catholic has heard the same cry, and only waits for a man to put him there at once."

THE AUGUSTANA SYNOD.

The meeting of the Augustana Synod of the Swedish Lutheran church at Minneapolis, was a large and important gathering, which was continued for more than a week. Rev. John Telleen, of San Francisco, preached on the 24th, having, the previous day, presented the claims of home mission work. Rev. L. G. Abrahamson, of Chicago, secretary of the mission committee, read the general report. The Synod carries on home missionary work in territory lying ontside of the conferences.

The Rev. E. Norelius, superintendent of missions on the Pacific coast, gave a survey of the work. The tangible resnlt of seven years' work are, fifteen congregations organized, nine churches built, and two parsonages. Notwithstanding unbelief, intemperance, and sectarianism among certain Swedes, the work is prospering. Work should be undertaken in Maine, Florida, and Southern Idaho. There are several Finnish missionary pastors. The Rev. Hoikas, formerly laboring at Astoria, Oregon, and now among the Finns at Republic, Mich., and the Rev. Nikander. The Ashtabula, Ohio, church, is served by a student at Sweden. Work among the sailors at the ports is performed by the Rev. C. F. Johansen, of Boston, the Rev. Martin England, of Philadelphia, and Mr. J. A. Levin, of San Francisco. The Rev. J. A. Krantz, of the Utah mission, reported that the late lawlessness of the Mormon leaders and their arrest works good for the mission cause. He is aided by Mrs. Hilda Carlson, late missionary to India. She is able to reach the Swedish Mormon women in their homes. There are 300 children in the Snnday-school, twenty in the day-school, and fifty-five communicants. A two-story brick church, with pastor's house, has been erected at a cost of $7,500. Emigrant missionary A. B. Lillya, of Castle Garden, has labored among 34,000 Scandinavians who have arrived during twelve months.

Much interest was manifested, by the conference, in the work of education.

The Educational Committee reports that 58 of the 204 students of Angustana College, Rock Island, have received free board, and fifteen others partial aid—36 per cent of the whole number as against 41 per cent last year. No student in the preparatory department is aided; hereafter all students are to pay the same rates for board and tuition, and beneficiaries are to receive aid in the shape of a check of $25 to $70, to be used for board and tuition only.

The educational question was opened with a motion to appoint a committee to report next year on a board of education to manage the whole educational work of the Synod. Rev. Charles A. Swenson, President of the Board of Directors, of Bethany College, Lindsborg, Kansas, spoke on "Unity in the Work of Education." He spoke of three views entertained in the Synod. The original view, that we should educate ministers and school teachers only; the centralizing view, to have one college and suitable preparatory schools; and the latest view, to have one theological seminary or even university with as many colleges as the conferences can sustain.

President Carlsen, of Andover, Ill., spoke of the value of parental instruction, which is sadly neglected in this land. Professor Olsen thought higher education must be only for the few unless possessed of suitable gifts. The Rev. Mr. Wickstrand emphasized the spiritual element in school work. The whole debate showed that the Synod is unwilling to hand over young people to the State for education, but intends te carry out a comprehensive system of education at any cost.

LODGE NOTES.

—It is reported at Pittsburg that the iron molders' unions, embracing 100,000 men, are to join the Knights of Labor.

—At Chicago Charles N. Bodendirk, an anarchist, who last March went to Justice White's house "and demanded $25 as part of what he was entitled to if a distribution a la Commune was made," has been found guilty by a jury and sentenced to one year in the penitentiary.

—At Milwaukee the jury in the case of the anarchists Protzmann and Lampel returned a verdict of guilty as to the former and not guilty as to the latter. The anarchist rioter Dampf was also convicted. Schilling's case will have another trial as the jury did not agree.

—The London Freemason is very angry at the Grand Lodge of Quebec for declaring non-intercourse with the three English lodges still in Quebec territory, and indulges in a tirade against the offender. The action of the Grand Lodge of Illinois, in supporting Quebec, has doubtless something to do with this storm.—Victorian Freemason.

—The Odd-fellows allow drinking among their members. The death rate in their society numbered one in sixty-five during five years.

—A dispatch from Decatur, Ind., says there is great excitement occasioned by the blowing up of a hardware store. Terver, the proprietor, insists that he had no explosives in his wareroom. He has received an anonymous postal card from Brooklyn, N. Y., hinting that the Knights of Labor were responsible for the explosion. Terver sells the Empire reaper, made by John F. Seiberling, at Akron, O., and he has had difficulty with several of the machines, found to be spiked. In March the Knights of Labor issued a boycott against Sciberling, and Terver believes himself to be the victim of a plot. The receipt of the postal card has completely prostrated him. He states that he has evidence which will doubtless cause the arrest of the guilty parties in a few days.

The Prince of Wales, at the Freemason's Tavern, London, will be installed as Grand Master of Mark Masons to-day.

—The Grand Army of the Republic Publishing and Advertising Company, of Chicago, with a capital of $10,000, was incorporated Monday by Henry F. Gerry and others.

—Democratic disaffection in Arkansas and other Southern States is leading to a revival of the grange, which may again become an active political force.

—Mr. Edwards, whom the Maine Democrats nominated as the "soldier candidate" for Governor, has never been a Grand Army man, and is said to have often taken pains to denounce the organization.

—There are, perhaps, less than 900,000 workingmen in labor unions and Knights of Labor organizations. What right have these 900,000 to denounce 15,000,000 workingmen not in such organizations?

—During the conspiracy trial at St. Louis of Judge Advocate McGarry, of the Knights of Labor, and others, McGarry and Prosecuting Attorney McDonald engaged in an altercation and resorted to blows. McGarry was fined $25.

—New York sweeps the boycotting bully into jail with an iron hand. The latest conviction is that of a driver who assaulted a non-union car driver. He was given six months. With confidence the honest workman begins to look up and say to his idle and obstreperous brother, "Work or leave me alone."—Inter Ocean.

—The Knights of Labor in Maine propose to address open letters to the candidates for the office of Governor, and to all candidates for the legislature, demanding a decided "yes" or "no," without "glittering generalizations." Among other things in the interests of labor they will demand that the candidates pledge themselves to vote for a ten-hour law, an employers' liability bill, repeal of the law of imprisonment for debt, and the abolition of the trustees' process.

Readers ordering goods advertising in the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE will do well to mention the paper when ordering as we have reason to believe that our advertisers treat the readers well.

How many more shall we hear from before another week closes?

We wish to add many more names to this list. Send your names and post-office address with the money. We cannot open a book account, as would be necessary if we did not require money in advance. When your name and money is received your order is at once entered in the shipping book and you will receive the book as soon as we can get it out. We hope to issue it by the middle of June, but cannot say positively how soon. It is being compiled by Rev. H. H. Hinman as fast as his other duties will permit.

We want one thousand orders in advance. Send in your names.

A Wonderful Woman,
A Wonderful Life,
AND
A Wonderful Book.

Laura S. Haviland is a quiet, gentle, unassuming Quaker woman, 76 years of age, yet vigorous, who has had a remarkable career of usefulness, and has now given to the world a remarkable history of her "Life Work" as a teacher, at an early day, of the colored refugees in Canada and in Michigan, and in other States, as a traveler down South in the guise of a "berry picker," helping out into freedom many slaves; as a nurse and preacher to the sufferers in hospitals during the war; and with Gov. St. John and Elizabeth Comstock, relieving the destitute and suffering refugees in Kansas.

FARM NOTES.

SUMMER PRUNING VINES.

Nothing is more common than to allow grapevines to grow without attention, letting the new growth of wood and leaves run together and over each other and to fall down over the fruit. When this has gone on until July or August, there arises in the mind of the would-be cultivator, a thought that something should be done; he starts in with a large knife—if he fails to have a sickle or grass-hook, in which case that is used—and an indiscriminate shearing is made, cutting away two-thirds of all the new growth, and often leaving the fruit exposed without a single leaf beyond it on the stem. This is done with the absurd idea that it is necessary to expose the fruit to the sun to ripen it. All growth depends upon the leaf of a plant, not only that of the stem, but the flowers and the fruit; the ripening process is wholly dependent upon the leaves; denude a plant of leaves permanently and that is the end of all life in it. Every process of the plant, from the first movement in the spring throughout its entire growth, including the blooming, the setting of the fruit, its gradual increase to full maturity, and ripening, all depend upon the leaves. When this is understood it will be perceived what a pernicious practice is that of removing a large portion of the foliage of grapevines. And yet this practice has been widely adopted, and it is not improbable that some who may read these lines will have already this summer so treated their vines, or are intending to do so.

What, then, is summer pruning, which is so often mentioned? It consists of several operations. The first is merely rubbing off the swelling buds in the spring, when they are judged to be in excess. Some skillful vine growers never go beyond this, being able to regulate the entire growth of the season by timely attention before the leaves appear. If, however, disbudding, as the above described operation is called, has been neglected, and growth has commenced, the young shoots but a few inches in length can be removed to the extent thought best, leaving only as many canes to grow and bear as the vine is thought able to sustain. Thousands of acres of vineyards, in fact the great body of them in this country, have no other summer pruning than this. The new canes as they grow are tied up, or are allowed to droop over, according to the general method of pruning and training adopted, and the whole of it is preserved, never removing a leaf. But summer pruning is carried further by some, and consists in stopping the growth of the young canes by pinching with thumb and finger the tender growing point, thus stopping its extension. The general rule observed in pinching is to stop the growth at the third leaf beyond the last bunch of fruit. After this has been done the uppermost bud, the one in the axil of the last leaf, will rapidly swell and start, sending out a new shoot; after this has made two or three leaves pinching is again resorted to, and this is usually sufficient to keep the growth within the limits of the trellis. The object is to leave sufficient foliage for the perfect action of the vine, and yet to hold it so in check that while the trellis is covered it does not much overlap, the whole being fully exposed to the sun. This method of pinching is pursued usually on vines that are spur-pruned, and which, consequently, have a great number of growing shoots. Careful training is required to enable one to emyloy it judiciously and with beneficial results. We shall be pleased to hear from those of our readers who are interested in grape growing, giving account of their modes of pruning and training.—Vick's Magazine.

WORK FOR JULY.

It is a good time to bud roses, and this is an art that every one who loves gardening should acquire. Although, as a rule, roses on their own roots are preferable, since they do not throw up suckers from the stock to take away the life from the budded part, yet the occasion frequently arises to secure a new variety or increase a desirable one by budding.

Celery transplanting will be carried on up to the middle of the month at the North, and later at the South.

White turnips can be sowed all through the month, though in the colder regions it should not be too long delayed.

Sow lettuce for fall use; the Cos varieties are best at this season.

All intending to set new strawberry beds with plants from their own grounds should sink small pots containing good soil into the ground and root the runners into these pots. By the middle or last of August they will be ready to take up and transplant: such plants will make a fine growth before winter and be ready to start strong in the spring.

Stop the raspberry canes by pinching when they are from two and a half to three feet high, making them branch more freely.

Continue to tie the new growth of the grapevines, and remove the fruit which appears in excess of the strength of the vines.—Vick's Magazine.

HORSFORD'S ACID PHOSPHATE,

One of the Best Tonics.

Dr. A. ATKINSON, Prof. Materia Medica and Dermatology, in College of Physicians and Surgeons, Baltimore, Md., says: "It makes a pleasant drink, and is one of our best tonics in the shape of the phosphates in soluble form."

ALL-NIGHT INHALATION!

"A positive revolution in the treatment of Air-Passage Diseases of the Nose, Throat, and Lungs, and, for the purpose designed, as valuable a discovery as vaccination."

THE PILLOW-INHALER.

A Speedy, Positive and Permanent Cure for Catarrh, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Incipient Consumption.

It is a hair pillow, with reservoirs of evaporating liquid, the fumes or vapor of which is inhaled all night long, whilst sleeping as usual, and without any discomfort. It is used only at night, and is perfectly safe to the most delicate. There is no stomach-dosing, douching or snuffing; but just as a smoky lamp will leave a deposit on a whitened wall so the PILLOW-INHALER, for say eight hours at a time, spreads a powerful healing balm or salve on the inflamed inner coating of the diseased air-surfaces, from the nostrils to the bottom of the lungs, and hence into the blood. Old-fashioned inhalation, through a tube, for a few minutes a day, sometimes cured. Think of eight hours constant action, on the same principle, but intensified a hundred-fold! There are no pipes or tubes. The medicine is breathed in, not swallowed, and goes right to the diseased parts.

CATARRH. BRONCHITIS. CONSUMPTION.

HON. E. L. HEDDEN, Collector of the Port of New York, says: "I take pleasure in stating that the PILLOW-INHALER has been of the greatest relief, and I believe of permanent benefit, to my wife, who has been a great sufferer from Bronchial and Catarrhal Troubles, accompanied with distressing Asthma. I recommend its use to all persons afflicted with such maladies."

E. L. HEDDEN, 38 West 49th St., New York.

MR. H. G. TEELE, 50 Bryan Block, Chicago, Ill., says: "I suffered fifteen years from a severe case of Catarrh; coughed incessantly day and night. I bought a PILLOW-INHALER, and since using it my cough is gone; my lungs are no longer weak and sore, and I am in better health than I have been for years."

During the six years of its existence the PILLOW-INHALER has wrought cures of Catarrh, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption, that have been more like miracles than the usual treatment of disease. It is not expensive, and is within the reach of every one. Send for Explanatory Pamphlet and Testimonials, or call.

BETWEEN TWO OPINIONS.

BY E. E. FLAGG.

Author of "Holden with Cords," "A Sunny Life," "Little People," etc.

The Best Story of the Reform!

Price, only $1.00.

Published by THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

This latest and best of Miss Flagg's works is now ready in handsome print, neatly bound. The story begins in a quiet New England home, and paints its homely joys with a delicacy and truthfulness worthy the hand of Harriet Beecher Stowe. The scene then changes to a thriving, growing, palpitating young Western city, and with great power and startling accuracy the writer leads us behind the scenes that we may see the machinery that works the liquor traffic and labor troubles. The story of the strike, the mob, the attempted assassination, the saloon-keeper's wiles, the curse of his trade, the power of the Christian faith to change him to a messenger of mercy, the criminal and the hidden power that shields him from justice, the land robbers tricks, the dark and secret conspiracies of the lodge—these and all the incidents of the book are portrayed with rare tact and great power of description. It is emphatically a book for the hour. And what is better and yet more striking, the incidents are facts, and every one a powerful and convincing argument against the lodge and the saloon.

Every temperance man and woman should read this book. No temperance story like it was ever planned, much less ably executed. A wonderful light is thrown upon the difficulties in the way of prohibition. Learn how they may be avoided.

Every one who loves to read a good story, chaste and elegant in expression, p in thought, true in incident, deeply interesting in its narrative, should read this bc

READ THESE NOTICES FROM THE PRESS:

The Free Methodist, Chicago.

"Between Two Opinions" is a story, its incidents vouched for as facts, which presents a powerful argument on these questions and must attract thousands of readers among our thinking and observant people. The plot of the story is neither startling nor novel, hut it develops a wonderful strength in following the experiences of people in the common, everyday walks of life.

Free Press, Birmingham, Iowa.

It differs from the popular story, "The Bread-winners" of a year ago. It greatly differs from that book in that it is written from the Christian standpoint, and its heautiful and touching descriptions of home life and home duties and heroic self-denyings will waken a responsive echo in every heart, that has not by dissipation lost the taste for the pure joys of home.

The Religious Telescope, Dayton.

The author, Miss Flagg, is a hrilliant writer. The stirring questions in American politics are undouhtedly prohihition and the lahor movement as champioucd hy the secret unions of working men, which direct the strikes that with more and more frequency occur in our eities. "Between Two Opinions" is a story, its incidents vouched for as facts, which presents a powerful argument on these questions, and must attract thousands of readers among our thinking people.

The Christian Conservator, Dayton.

This is a charming hook, written in an attractive manner. It is so full of sunshine and so radiant with light that one is enlightened, warmed, and, before they are conscious of it, set against the lodge. The style gleams, glows and sparkles. It is dignified and simple. It is the right hook to place in the hands of your wife or daughter to superinduce co-operation with you in anti-secrecy work. Every minister's wife should read it, and then, if her husband is not an Anti-mason, he should take his turn next and become one.

The American, Washington.

We are reading, in spare moments, Miss Flagg's new book, "Between Two Opinions," and the estimate we have thus far put upon it is that it is masterly both in style and argument. One is insensibly made to feel that he is reading facts and not fiction; that the hook is not a play upon the imagination but an unraveling of mysterious circumstances which have an important hearing upon current events.

Law and Order, Boston.

The hook takes high ground for prohibition of the liquor curse, for woman's ballot for home protection, and for a hetter and more honest hrotherhood than is forced hy their obligations upon the members of secret orders. It is, therefore, a valuable book for several large classes of American readers.

Christian Instructor, Philadelphia.

There are important questions pressing upon American politics to-day; two of them are prohihition and the labor question as connected with the secret unions of workingmen. This work is an expose of the twin evils, secret societies and the saloons. The truths are given in the form of a story; not startling, but thrilling experiences of home life that are vouched for as facts. The evidences presented of the impossihility of reaching the saloon keeper so long as he and the officers of the law are sworn brothers in the den of some secret society, are conclusive enough to awaken the most careless and obtuse member of society. It is a valuable hook for the masses to read.

Evangelist, Berea, Kentucky.

The object of the volume is to illustrate the practical workings of Secret Societies, and especially to show how the Lodge upholds the saloon, and this very important design is wrought out with much skill, elearness and power. By reading it temperance people may learn much about the difficulties in the way of prohibition.

The Standard, Chicago.

It is written in the interests of reform, more especially temperance and Anti-masonry. The title of the story suggests the special aim of it, which is to protest against all "halting hetween two opinions;" in other words, is a plea for radicalism. The story is vigorously written, and will interest even readers who do not altogether believe in its doctrine.

The Pacific, San Francisco.

It is a story intended to do service against the saloons, and in favor of Womans' Christian Temperance work, and especially against the secret orders—Freemasons, Odd-fellows, the Knights of Lahor, etc. No reflecting man can douht that any combination of picked classes and individuals is liahle to great abusc. It is ohvious, also, that secret orders are specially capable of being used in a selfish and unprincipled way.

THE BROKEN SEAL;

Or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene.

One of the most interesting books ever published. In cloth, 75 cents; per dozen, $7.50. Paper covers, 40 cents; per dozen, $3.50.

This deeply interesting narative shows what Masonry has done and is capable of doing in the Courts, and how bad men control the good men in the lodge and protect their own members when guilty of great crimes. For sale at 221 W. MADISON ST., CHICAGO, by THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

The Facts Stated.

HON. THURLOW WEED ON THE MORGAN ABDUCTION.

This is a sixteen page pamphlet comprising a letter written by Mr. Weed, and read at the unveiling of the monument erected to the memory of Capt. William Morgan. The frontispiece is an engraving of the monument. It is a history of the unlawful seizure and confinement of Morgan in the Canandaigua jail, his subsequent conveyance by Freemasons to Fort Niagara, and drowning in Lake Ontario. He not only subscribes his NAME to the letter, but ATTACHES HIS AFFIDAVIT to it.

In closing his letter he writes: I now look back through an interval of fifty-six years with a conscious sense of having been governed through the "Anti-Masonic excitement" by a sincere desire, first, to vindicate the violated laws of my country, and next, to arrest the great power and dangerous influences of "secret societies."

The pamphlet is well worth perusing, and is doubtless the last historical article which this great journalist and politician wrote. [Chicago, National Christian Association.] Single copy, 5 cents.

The Coming Conflict.

A NEW AND STRANGE STORY BASED ON STARTLING FACTS, VIVIDLY PORTRAYING A MYSTERIOUS AND DANGEROUS POWER AT WORK IN THE GOVERNMENT, THE CHURCH, AND THE HOME.

"All will agree that this is a powerfully written story."—Evangelist, (Chicago, Ills.)

"A book which we trust may have a wide circulation."—National Baptist, (Philadelphia.)

"So intensely interesting did I find it that it was hard to pause until the last sentence was read. This work places the author high among the writers of fiction."—W. W. Barr, D. D. in Christian Instructor, (Philadelphia.)

"Unless we are greatly mistaken, the work will do more to awaken the American church and people to the evils of Freemasonry than any other book recently published."—Evangelical Repository.

"The book will create a sensation in Masonic circles, and evoke criticism of a most relentless character. The courage of the author in attacking such a rock-rooted bulwark as Freemasonry is something to admire, Fanatic though he be."—Nebraska Watchman.

"Light is needed on this subject and needed badly, and we welcome this contribution to the literature of anti-secretism, and cordially commend it to the favorable attention of our readers."—United Presbyterian, (Pittsburgh.)

"A charming work, fit to be classed with 'Uncle Tom's Cabin;' it is indeed less a work of fiction. The volume is as valuable as a work of reference as it is agreeable, truthful and useful. Our young folks will not leave the book, if they begin it, till they 'see how it turns out.'"—Cynosure, (Chicago, Ills.)

LUCILLE VERNON.

Cloth.....75 cents.

THIS is a pleasant surprise in many ways. The author is Rev. W. T. Meloy, of the United Presbyterian Church of Chicago, and the book is published by the Board of Publication of his denomination. It is a love story, not "fascinating," but with so much of genial interest that the reader is in no danger of laying it down unfinished. * * * The moral purpose of the book is to describe and vindicate Christian character, in its more heroic aspects, and it is a success. We congratulate the author and the United Presbyterian Board of Publication on this literary lily of the valley.—The Interior.

"LUCILLE VERNON" is evidently not an ideal sketch, but the fictitious names used represent to a great extent real men and women of flesh and blood. The characters of many of them are by no means attractive, but are perfect counterparts of querulous, obstinate and parsimonious professors who are thorns in the flesh of many a pastor in all the churches. But as in all the churches, there were also good and true men and women at Lansington, who upheld and encouraged the pastor. * * * In its author will be recognized the worthy pastor of the First United Presbyterian Church of Chicago, and a welcome contributor to these columns.—United Presbyterian.

The heroine, who becomes the bride of the pastor of the church at Lansington, is a wonderful exemplification of how a woman who is a true wife and help-meet may throw her life and energies into the great work of saving souls; aiding, by gentle words and sympathy, wise counsel and brave endurance, the husband having charge of a congregation where the Demon of Misrule held full sway. We follow with interest the history of the wife and husband through their hours of despondency and discouragement to the happy ending, where religion, harmony and peace have gained the ascendency and the good man and wife find their reward.—Pittsburgh Daily Telegraph.

BATAVIA CONVENTION PAMPHLET.

A Staggering Blow!

Such was to Freemasonry the great NATIONAL CONVENTION held in BATAVIA, N. Y., September 1882. It gave the world

Thurlow Weed's Great Letter

On the abduction and murder of WILLIAM MORGAN in 1826, which has been the most widely published of any Anti-masonic document. The dedication of a noble granite monument to the memory of Morgan, and the able and eloquent addresses of the Convention make this a most valuable pamphlet.

SEE WHY.

It contains—
1. Portrait of Morgan.
2. Portrait of Thurlow Weed.
3. Fine picture of the Monument.
4. The great letter of Thurlow Weed and his affidavit—almost the last public act of his life.
5. Address by J. E. Roy, D.D.
6. The monument oration by Pres. C. A. Blanchard.
7. Addresses on "Christian Politics" by Pres. J. Blanchard, on the Character of Freemasonry by Prof. E. D. Bailey, on the "Freedmen and Secret Societies" by Rev. H. H. Hinman; and very interesting personal and historical reminiscences.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

WASHINGTON.

The President has ended the long contest over Fitz John Porter by signing the bill restoring that officer to the army. Now he will nominate him as colonel in the army and put him on the retired list. The bill prohibits Porter from receiving any back pay.

The President has approved the act to reduce the fee on domestic money orders for sums not exceeding $5; the act making allowances for clerk hire to postmasters of the first and second class post offices; the military appropriation bill; the post office appropriation bill; the agricultural appropriation bill; the army appropriation bill; and numerous other acts of less general interest.

Senator Miller, Thursday, favorably reported the oleomargarine bill to the Senate. It was ordered placed on the calendar.

It costs $1-000 a year to light the White House. The Standard Oil Company must have the contract.

The Hon. William E Smith, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, tendered his resignation to the President Tuesday, to take effect July 1. The Hon. Hugh S. Thompson, Governor of South Carolina, has been selected by the President as his successor.

COUNTRY.

The Massachusetts Legislature passed a bill, which has been signed by the Governor, appropriating $20,000 for entertaining President Cleveland, should he visit the State during the summer.

Peter Zingerle, a maniac Frenchman, was arrested at Washington charged with intent to kill the French Minister, M. Roustan. Zingerle left Pittsburg, Tuesday, for the purpose of removing the Minister.

For the first six months of this year the business failures numbered 5,136, with $5,0.4,4-4,000 liabilities, against 6,004 failures for the corresponding period of 1885, and liabilities aggregating $74,722,-000.

Six small structures at St. Louis, occupied as bakeries, groceries, etc., were burned Thursday morning. Many persons narrowly escaped with their lives.

A Cincinnati paper says Murat Halstead is to take charge of the New York Tribune and switch it from Blaine to Sherman for the Presidency, and that Whitelaw Reid is to use his spare time in perfecting plans to capture a United States Senatorship.

Severe storms and floods have caused distress in Rapids, Grant, and Catahoula parishes, in Louisiana, and Governor McEnery requests the people of the State to send contributions to aid the sufferers.

Burglars invaded the house of Professor C. W. Merriman, principal of the public schools at Beloit, Wis., Monday morning. During a struggle with the robbers the Professor was shot in the neck and dangerously wounded.

John Mosier, a wealthy farmer of Sangamon County, Illinois, who killed a boy for trespassing died in Joliet penitentiary Monday.

Three of the anarchists, Frank Hirth, Carl Simon and Anton Palm, were on trial in Milwaukee for conspiracy to kill and murder. A stack of rifles, a lot of ammunition, and a large quantity of literature were introduced as evidence, and witnesses testified to hearing Hirth and Palm urge a crowd of 1,500 people to go to the court house and blow it up.

The cases of sixteen boycotters, charged with damaging the business of Widow Landgraff, the Bohemian baker, was called for trial in New York July 1.

Michael Stoh and A. Rosenberg, two of the boycotters of a concert hall proprietor, pleaded guilty Friday to a charge of extortion, and were remanded for sentence. Dan Neuhauser was tried and found guilty.

In Milwaukee Sunday night, after having been out twenty-three hours, the jury in the trial of the anarchist leaders, Frank Hirth, Carl Simon, and Anton Palm, found them guilty of conspiring to burn the court house and destroying the records and of inciting mobs to riot. For twenty hours the ballot stood ten for conviction and two for acquittal. One of the jurors, who is alleged to be a socialist, voted for conviction after the first few ballots.

The Switchmen's Beneficial Aid Society of Chicago has decided to remain neutral in the Lake Shore strike matter. The meeting expressed sympathy with the strikers, but thought the Lake Shore men could be best helped by allowing strikes on no other roads.

The Lake Shore strike seemed to be well broken last week. The armed guard was continued all the week, and there were few interruptions in the business attempted by the railway. The sympathy of the stock yard employes being given for the strikers by way of stones and insults toward the railway men, the packing house proprietors interfered for peace.

The legislature of Massachusetts was prorogued last evening. Gov. Robinson signed a bill giving each member $100 extra salary. This is the first salary grab bill which ever became law in Massachusetts.

Gov. McEnery of Louisiana has issued a proclamation asking contributions of provisions for the people of Rapids, Grant and Catahoula parishes, who have suffered great lose by recent storms and inundations.

On the cattle ranges of Lonake and Prairie counties, Arkansas, a deadly disease has developed among the cattle carrying them off by scores.

Detailed reports from the spring wheat States, together with the actual results from the winter wheat harvesting, indicate that the official estimates as to the probable crop yield will not be realized. Intense heat and heavy, hot winds have done considerable damage in Dakota the past few days, and rain is anxiously looked for.

FOREIGN.

Advices from Belgrade, the capital of Servia, say that the Servian peasantry generally are rioting. They refuse to pay the taxes levied since the unsuccessful war against Bulgaria, and ill-treat the tax-collectors. Their hostility to King Milan's government is continually fomented by the opposition party.

At a religious anniversary at Marseilles 2,000 loyalists made a demonstration in favor of the Count of Paris. They carried tricolor flags and copies of the Count's manifesto.

The Panama Canal committee examined three of the ministers and M. Rousseau. They all urged the government to sanction the proposed Panama Canal loan.

Eight persons were killed and twenty wounded yesterday, by the derailment of the mail train from Belfast to Dublin at Knockbridge. The driver and guard were arrested, although the accident is attributed to a spreading of the rails and not their carelessness.

Mr. Gladstone has been conducting his campaign in person, and is very much exhausted. In Ireland seventy-seven Parnellite candidates will meet with no opposition, and seven seats will be contested. In London nine Tory seats will not be contested. In Scotland, Unionists and Conservatives will contest sixty out of seventy-two seats. Mr. Gladstone has written as follows to Mr. John Bright: "I regret to read your letter to Mr. Peter Rylands. Without losing a moment I beg of you either to publicly except me from your assertion, that one year ago all Liberals held Mr. Ryland's opinion, or to give proof of what you say. Never since the Home Rule struggle was started, fifteen years ago, have I once condemned it in principle or held in any way the opinions of Mr. Rylands, which, to speak frankly, I think absurd." John Bright's opposition to Home Rule is the severest blow yet to the hopes of the Premier. The elections began last week, and so far are unfavorable to Mr. Gladstone's party.

The tactics of the lawyers in the trial of the Chicago anarchists indicates a long, wearying trial, which shall disgust the public, wear out the lives of the jury, and secure acquittal for these abettors of a massacre. Weeks have been spent already and only eight jurymen have been accepted. Well does Shakespere put "the law's delay" along with > "The oppressors wrong, the proud man's contumely,

> The insolence of office, and the spurns
> That patient merit of the unworthy takes."

The pastor of Trinity Methodist Episcopal church, Rev. John Alabaster, had a 4th of July celebration all his own. There is yet hope for Chicago churches, if they do not cultivate the audacity of this pastor, which it can hardly be supposed he mistook for patriotism. His pulpit was decorated with flags and banners and a stack of muskets, while on either hand there marched into the gallery a revived Know Nothing lodge called the "Patriotic Sons of America," flaunting numerous flags and pennons. The Declaration of Independence was read, and the "Star Spangled Banner" sung, and thus the worship of the "Goddess of Liberty" proceeded.

Mr. Randall's plan of revising the tariff seems to be to cheapen whisky and tobacco and keep up the price of iron, woolens and sugars. Well, there is no accounting for tastes. Possibly Mr. Randall prefers the former articles to the latter, or perhaps he knows that his constituents wish to cheapen the goods which they most consume. About the only foreign import that he would put on the free list is lumber, which pays but a small per cent in revenue. We see no way of adjusting a protective tariff so that all interests shall be equally protected and so conclude that the principle of protection is impracticable and unjust. But when it comes to a discrimination between woolen blankets and whisky, or sugars and cigars, we have a decided preference; and so have, we think, all fair-minded people.

Charles M. Morton is an ex-Union soldier who left an arm in the South. He was converted in Moody's meetings in this city, from a condition of debauchery, and has been engaged in mission work much of the time since. He is represented as an Odd-fellow and tobacco-user, by those who should know, and is a religious weakling, if the papers truly report his performances last Sabbath. Monday, July 12th, was Orangemen's day, the anniversary of the battle of the Boyne. The Saturday before the Orangemen of Glasgow, to the number of eight thousand, paraded in triumph over the defeat of Gladstone, and resolved that, if necessary, they would "establish an armed union of Orangemen throughout the empire, and resist to the death the separation of England and Ireland. As no one proposes such a separation it is doubtfull whether these blusterers intended to threaten rebellion or only kick a man of straw. At least their enthusiasm inspired Mr. Morton. He got the Orangemen into his Railroad Chapel, in full regalia, read a eulogy upon the order, its declaration of principles and qualifications for membership, and wound up his strange service with a panegyric on the traitor Jeff. Davis! The man and speech and audience were evidently fit for each other.

SAMUEL D. GREENE.

The double-headed arrangement by which members of the labor unions are received into the Knights of Labor lodges has its conveniences. The Central Labor Union, of this city, is made up of a number of secret trade societies in co-operation. Probably many of the members are also Knights of Labor. Now the Union is raising money for the anarchist murderers now on trial, and has raised hundreds of dollars for the purpose, but the Knights of Labor, since anarchism has come to be unpopular in the persons of Spies, Fielden, Parsons, and their gang, have begun to repudiate the members who accept such extreme doctrines. Parsons has been expelled, though in jail and unable to appear in the lodge in his own defense. He writes a strong letter, however, and shows that he was a good Knight until a popular outcry arose at his horrible principles when put into practice. The lodge to which he belonged has ordered all anarchists expelled.

The election in Great Britain has gone against Gladstone and Irish Home Rule. Up to midnight Saturday the returns show that the Conservatists have elected 289 candidates, Unionists 63, the Gladstonians 149, and the Parnellites 72. There were yet about 100 seats to be filled, but of these the Liberal party could not hope to secure enough to overcome the opposition. The popular vote at the same time stood Gladstonian, 1,118,973; opposition, 1,209,874. Already Lord Salisbury is forecasting for his cabinet and securing the alliance of former Liberals for the formation of a coalition cabinet; but if Gladstone resigns and the Conservatives take office the arrangement is uniikely to be at all lasting; and it is not certain that Mr. Gladstone may not yet secure the considerable number of disaffected Liberals and carry his plans through to victory. However, it is probable that he must wait. His defeat is attributed to the failure of the country voters to see clearly the need of buying out the Irish landlords, and the success of the Tory orators in creating a belief that other ways might be discovered of settling the Irish question than by coercion or a Dublin parliament. The latter is sure to come in time.

An exchange reports that twenty thousand exiled Polish Jews are on their way to this country, and asks: "Where will they go? Will they settle in a body? What will they do, and what will their influence be upon any of our communities? They were not good enough for Bismark—will they be good enough for us? As a rule, such immigrants, in so large bodies, are anything but agreeable visitors." It is evident that these people, ignorant, superstitious, and turbulent as they may be, must live somewhere, and so long as America is an "asylum for the oppressed of all nations," where else would they be disposed to go? Let our missionary societies, our wealthy churches, meet these people as they land, and in a few weeks they can be started in the way of good citizenship. Cornelius Vanderbilt, of New York, has resolved to take care of all the pauper emigrants who have heretofore been shipped back to Europe. Why should not some man of wealth invest his thousands—hundreds of thousands, if need be, in these Poles?

THE FOURTH AT LAKE BLUFF.

BY PRES. CHAS. A. BLANCHARD.

The National holiday had, at Lake Bluff this year as, perhaps, at other points, a threefold celebration. On Saturday, the 3rd, Col. Sobieski gave his lecture on "Ten Years in the American Army." This gentleman is, by nativity, a Pole, but left that country at five years of age, being banished with the rest of his family. He knew personally Beauregard, Albert Sidney Johnston, McClellan, Hancock, and many others whose names are now known the world over. His lecture was replete with most interesting incidents, one of the most thrilling being an account of the charge of the Irish Brigade, led by its gallant commander, Thomas Francis Meagher, at the battle of Fredricksburg. Six times wounded, each time rising and urging his men on until they gained the stone wall on the crest of the hill, when four ranks deep, the enemy rose and poured a volley into the faces of the remnant before which they turned and fled. On the morrow, out of three thousand seven hundred men, who started on that charge, only six hundred were able to answer to their names.

On Sabbath morning, a sermon was preached on "The Responsibility of Christians for the Traffic in Ardent Spirits," by the writer. The doctrine of the sermon was that Christians are under obligation to use all their powers, personal, social, religious, and civil, for the overthrow of the drink trade. It was admitted that on the first three points, the church was, at least, in a measure, doing her duty, but maintained that so long as the American church votes for parties like the Republican and Democratic, the American grog shop must flourish.

In the afternoon of the Sabbath there was a platform meeting at which Miss Willard presided, addresses being made by herself, Miss West, of the Signal, and Mrs. Lathrop, of Michigan. These addresses were all of a high grade, though informal, and were listened to with earnest attention by those present.

On Monday, "Fore-mothers day" was celebrated. The custom of observing such a day originated in the thought that the toils and sacrifices of the revolutionary wives and mothers deserved recognition in the public celebrations of Independence day. The principal paper was by Mrs. E. B. Harbert, and was a pleasant and efficient performance of the task indicated. It will, no doubt, be printed. Remarks were also made by Mrs. Willard, now a mother in Israel, eighty-two years of age, and Mrs. Buell, who soon begins her work in the West as National Secretary of the W. C. T. U. The presiding officer was Miss Mary Allen West, whose remarks were very interesting.

Some readers of the Cynosure have feared that the Signal was growing more friendly to secret societies than it used to be, and the writer conferred with both Miss Willard and Miss West on the subject. They agreed in saying that the Union Signal was not to become the apologist for secret societies. They said that personally they were opposed to secret societies, and while they did not intend to conduct a movement against them in the Signal, they did not intend to favor them. Referring to her letter to the Knights of Labor, Miss Willard said that she did not mean to befriend their secrecy, but to commend their utterances in favor of sobriety as she would those of any other organization.

This will, I feel sure, be good news to those Christian freinds who have had the fear mentioned above. When the W. C. T. U. was small these lodges despised it: now that it is sending out roots and branches on every side they desire to use it, just as they seek to use patriotism, temperance, love of home, and all other virtues to help on their despotic, Christless, religious organizations. The Union Signal is not friendly to secretism, but it will seem to be if the lodges can possibly bring it about, and hence the need of double guard on this point.

Lake Bluff is a most beautiful resort. Its hotel is well appointed, and its trees are filled with singing birds. Close at hand the lake washes the foot of the bluffs, and cottages are filled with pleasant, kindly, Christian people. The Sabbath was Sabbath-like, and it can be commended to wearied ones seeking a few days or weeks of rest as a healthful and Christian resort. It is to be hoped the Sunday train may be discontinued. This can no doubt be easily accomplished if the good people ask it.

I almost forgot to mention the brief address of Rev. Dr. Gifford of the Warren Avenue Baptist church, Boston. He was wearied from his journey, had no expectation of speaking, and hence confined himself to brief remarks. These, however, were like the gleaming of a polished cimeter, and revealed the master workman. He is to make an address next Saturday on The Saloon. This will be the second day of the convocation which begins on the ninth and continues ten days. All who can spend a little time there will, I think, find opportunity to do and get good.

FAITH MISSIONS.

Editor Christian Cynosure,

DEAR BROTHER:—Many of your readers have learned something of the work of the faith missionaries, who have from time to time gone out from this place to British India and European Turkey to do work for the Great Master in those needy fields. We are now approaching our twelfth anniversary, and truly we can say that "hitherto hath the Lord helped us."

During these twelve years mission work has been begun at three different points in the centre of the great Indian peninsula. Some souls have been gathered out from heathenism, and signal-posts established at these three different places from whence the Gospel has sounded out over large tracts of country. In European Turkey a mission school has been built up where young women are given a thorough Christian education, and most of those who have come under its influence have yielded their hearts to the call of Divine mercy, and have gone forth to tell their country people that

"Old, old story
Of Jesus and his love."

One of these young ladies has become so filled with the spirit of the Master and the love of souls, that she has gone out to "The Regions beyond", and has bought property and established a school similar to the original mission school; and she, being the only Protestant in the place, not only teaches the children but preaches the Gospel to the people every Sabbath day and multitudes flock to hear her.

For eleven years I acted as receiving and forwarding agent for these missions; but when the work became too great for me to carry on successfully alone, I invited some of my brethren to become associated with me, and so we organized, and became incorporated under the name of

THE AMERICAN FAITH MISSION.

It is not the object of this society to in any way interfere with the faith principle or to do anything to render the faith of the missionaries weak and effeminate, therefore it will not call and send out missionaries or pledge them any support after they are in the field. But if any man or woman gives satisfactory evidence that they are divinely called to any specific Christian work in any part of the world's great moral harvest field, if they desire it the society will assist them by giving them such counsel as its superior advantages will enable it to give, and by aiding them on their journey to their appointed field; by receiving and forwarding to them free of cost, except exchange, such funds as the Lord, in answer to their prayers, shall move his people to send in for them; and by purchasing and holding such property as shall be essential for their work.

Recognizing the call and leadership of the Divine Spirit, the society will not exercise any control over the missionaries in their respective fields, but will leave them to be Divinely led, as they have been Divinely called. Neither will the Society withdraw its sympathy and aid from any missionary without their consent, without giving them the privilege of a hearing before a board of Christian men organized as per our constitution.

The principal object of this society is to encourage industrial missions, somewhat after Bishop Taylor's plan in Africa. The society is not denominational, but will assist any Christian worker if they desire it who "gives evidence of being divinely called.

At present we have no home-paid agents, so that all funds committed to our trust will be judiciously expended for the benefit of the mission. There is, however, a provision in our constitution, that if at any time it becomes necessary for any officer to give all his time to the work, he may receive the same as the missionaries do, that is, such donations as the Lord, in answer to prayer, shall move his people to send for his benefit; and likewise his proportion of the unassigned funds at the quarterly disbursements.

At present we have under appointment three ministers, one of them a practical mechanic, and three ladies, one of them a physician, all of whom, having accepted our principles of labor and support, expect to sail for India the coming autumn. They go to assist the Rev. M. R. Fuller to organize industrial missions in the sub-province of Berar. Bro. Fuller has encouragement that he will receive aid from the Indian government, in land and money, to assist in carrying on the great work. Of course this will be a limited amount, not sufficient for the work in all its details. Your brother in Christ,

O. M. BROWN.

THE GOSPEL OF SEPARATION.

BY F. J. DAVIDSON.

One grand cause of so much wickedness in our city and country is the failure of the so-called Christians in exercising a Christian duty, and separating themselves from the world. Masons, Odd-fellows, Tabernaclists and other secret organizations have at last made their appearance at the head of our churches. You say that Christ our Redeemer was an Odd-fellow and a Royal Mason; but I have searched the Scriptures from Genesis to Revelations and am now prepared to say that Jesus Christ never organized or joined a Masonic order during his thirty-six years and six months in the world. But his custom was to reprove sin and condemn it, and keep himself spotless from worldliness. Masonicism and Odd-fellowshipism and Tabernacleism and other secret societies are in friendship with the world; and worldliness is friendship to crimes and horrors; and Christ had no fellowship with such evil works. Let us see what Jesus said: "Come out from among the wicked and have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them." Now, can you reprove a man for doing evil when you do the very same thing yourself, and be blameless? God forbid, for the Scriptures saith, "Thou art inexcusable, O thou that judgest another and doest the same thyself;" and Christ says: "If ye were of the world the world would love his own, but I have chosen you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you." John 15:19. "If the world hate you you know that it hated me before it hated you." John 15:18. Now, the world is in friendship with secret societies; yea, and five per cent. or probably more of the secret orders are conducted under the supreme rule of sinners, and the so-called Christians are pledged to sustain his Masonic brother.

Again, your Masonic and other secret societies will turn out and parade the streets and give balls and picnics and such things, which are damnable before God; and you so-called Christians will forsake your church to attend and participate therein. Oh, Israel, will you prolong your ways of evil and provoke the Lord with your abominations. When I was a sinner I participated in balls, picnics, festivals, panoramas, museums and other places of amusement of the world, but when God for Christ's sake pardoned my sins, he converted me to his love and truth, and taught me his way was narrow and straight, and in him are no hypocritical flatteries. He converted me to forsake evil and do good. I was once a lover and advocate of Pythianism, but just as soon as I found it an obstacle to Jesus and a friend to the world, I prayed God to pardon all mine iniquities. That caused me to forsake Masonicism, because it pleased Jesus for me to forsake it. Some so-called Christians say King Solomon first established Masonicism, but the Holy Bible don't say so; but Solomon says in the 7:2 of Ecclesiastics, "It is better to go to the house of mourning than to go to the house of feasting, for that is the end of all men, and the living will lay it to his heart" And again he says, in the 4th chapter, 2d and 3d verses, "Wherefore I praised the dead which are already dead more than the living which are yet alive; yea, better is he than both they which hath not yet been." Who hath not seen the evil work that is done under the sun. And Solomon also, after reviewing his own work, declares it vanity; and all ye lukewarm Christians holding Masonry as an ordinance from God, search the Scriptures and pray for wisdom.

[NOTE.—The author of the above is a young colored man, assistant deacon of St. Mark's Baptist church (colored), New Orleans, La., who is a fruit vender, yet finds time and means to distribute many tracts, some of his own preparation, as is the one from which the above is taken. A gentleman living in Chicago is acquainted with Bro. Davidson, and gives him an excellent character for piety.—ED.]

THE LABOR REPORTS OF NEW YORK.

The report of the Labor Committee of the State of New York for 1885 contains much interesting information, and is practically a report on such secret societies as make protection of labor their professed object. Among other matters, the Knights of Labor are stated to number 2,500,000 [These figures are an exaggeration, unpardonable in such an official document.—ED. Cynosure.] at the present time, and to have been instituted by Philadelphia weavers in 1869. In 1882 they claimed 1,890 lodges. They are classed among societies designed to unite employers and laborers in the same manner as Odd-fellowship is said to be used in England by employers to initiate and control employes.

Mr. Herman Gutstadt testifies in the same report that attempts were made to ruin labor unions by instituting rival societies, getting up strikes, and thus dividing and drawing off members. There are thus by their own confession, parasites on secret societies in the same manner as secret societies are parasites on society, to weaken, control and destroy them. Five thousand female Knights of Labor, mainly between the ages of 18 and 21, were recently in procession and assembly in Troy, N. Y., and it was stated by reporters that they were under the absolute control of Messrs. Cattanauch and Hickey, leaders of the male Knights of that city. The Knights are, therefore, in this respect, faithful copies of Free-masonry and Orangemen, both of whom have their Heroines of Jericho (McCoy Cyclopedia), and in future riots will, perhaps, be as efficiently supported by female members as the latter organization was by the girls of Belfast in recent commotions. *

THE PERILS OF OUR NATION.

[From a sermon, July 4, 1886, by Rev. S. J. McPherson, Second Presbyterian Church, Chicago.]

God never commits great problems to a decaying people, but "America holds the future," and to us are addressed the words, "Hold fast to that which is good."

The perils of our nation are numerous. First, there are many who imagine that we are a race of criminals, godless and degenerating, because they read the newspapers and hear the voices from the empty rooms of the agnostic and anarchist. A greater danger arises from the other extreme of man, he who confines himself to his own work of money-getting, dodging jury duty, not voting except at Presidential election, and leaves the morality of the community to the policeman and minister. Thank God there are other men. Things only become better as we help them. It were better to be ruled by the Emperor Nero than by the almighty dollar, for Nero could not reach my soul. The tyranny of wealth finds its worst illustration not in public bribery or in the control of selfish corporations, but in our voluntary servitude of heart. Oh, how eternally poor is the man who is rich only in marketable product.

One of the greatest perils, I profoundly believe, is Romanism, though there are many really devout Christians in the church. Our National Constitution guarantees liberty of conscience, but the Pope of Rome says, in one of his evangelical letters:

"The absurd and erroneous doctrines or ravings in defense of liberty of conscience are a most pestilential error—a pest, of all others, most to be dreaded in a state."

And he anathematizes all who assert liberty of conscience and of worship. An American Archbishop says that heresy and unbelief are crimes. A Catholic journal of this country says:

"No good government can exist without religion, and there can be no religion without an Inquisition."

An English Catholic paper says:

"Shall I foster that damnable doctrine, that Socialism and Calvinism and Angicaism, and Judacism are not every one of them mortal sins like murder and adultery?"

Every Cardinal, Archbishop, and Bishop of the Roman Church takes an oath in which these words occur:

"Heretics, schismatics, and rebels to our said Lord (the Pope) or his aforesaid saccessors, I will try my utmost to persecute and oppose."

Is there no menace in such doctrines to American institutions?

Mormonism is the most loathsome of our perils, and its treason is only tolerated by our lazy indifference. If not suppressed, it will entail war on us or our children. A growing peril—indeed, many perils—must be observed in the mixed hosts of immigrants that continue to land upon our shores. How shall we provide for them, with our public lands almost exhausted? How shall we assimilate them when they bring the prejudices and vices of all races? How shall we control them when they are multiplying so rapidly and bringing such mistaken views and hopes of American life with them?

Socialism is also beginning to loom large as a possible element of danger. Various forms of secret organization are increasing, that can not be considered a healthy symptom, a sign of necessary confidence between different classes. I am not sure that the brave police did not die as martyrs to awaken the people to this matter.

The religion of the country is decreasing in comparison with the population. Intemperance is making so horrible an increase that good men are becoming angry and sometimes unreasonable. The Sabbath is practically disappearing in many a city. With European customs we are in danger of losing our Puritan virtues. We must needs stop short and study the situation; selfishness is making us so nearsighted that we allow the wrong to triumph by our default.

It is the religious duty of every Christian man and woman to take an interest in public affairs; we are the monarchs as citizens, and we cannot exercise authority by proxy. Our officers are our servants. Let use all our influence to nominate and elect the right kind of public officers, and then scrutinize their conduct.

It is a duty to promote universal education. Grant it to all. Carlisle and Hampton are demonstrating that an educated Indian is better than a dead Indian. Let school teachers deal with the Chinamen in place of the hoodlum. Let manual training be used. We have too many dead letter laws. Hardly any other nation has so low a conception of law as we. It is our own making, and so we fancy that we may set it aside at will. I wish that courts of justice always excited our awe, and never our amusement or scorn. I wish that there were less favoritism there, less submission to the power of money, more strictly inexorable sanction for great offenders as well as for small. If public morality is degenerating, it is because we privately consent to let it degenerate. A commissioner of bankruptcy once told me of a well-known citizen of the United States who borrowed everything that he could lay his hands on a week before he went into bankruptcy. He has never paid a cent on a dollar. Yet, to-day, he is living in luxury, received into exclusive society—exclusive, indeed, when it will not shut out a thief. John Morrisey was made rich by wealthy gamblers in New York and Saratoga, and the American voters sent him to Congress.

We want supremely to accept the right definition of manhood. That definition is embodied in Jesus Christ. If he is not our model and a Saviour, America can never get what she needs. Let politicians remember this. Since other systems have demonstrated their uselessness in a dozen civilizations, the church of Jesus Christ is the true school of manhood. It will do more than any other agency to create good citizens. Without it, all other agencies can never make a complete citizen. The lesson for every individual is that the best use to which he can put July 4th is to accept Jesus Christ. Citizenship in his kingdom is the only absolute assurance of true manhood and worthy citizenship in the United States.

The fact that any Christian man, and especially any minister of the Gospel of Christ, can have fellowship with or join in the delusive and deceptive worship of the secret lodges of secret societies in this country, conclusively shows that such men have never fully realized the nature and tendency of such associations to draw men's hearts away from the Gospel which they profess to love and live. We believe secretism is one of the great anti-christs, if not the one spoken of in prophecy, described in the Revelation as that which should arise in the last days to turn away men from Christ and to oppose and persecute the New Testament church. Christian brother, let us ask, do you not feel there is something terribly wrong in your fellowshiping a Christless secret order with men who will not accept or serve your Saviour? Oh! think and act consistently with your Christian profession.—Sandy Lake News.

THE LABOR QUESTION AND THE LODGE.

[From the Century for July, by Edward L. Day.]

They [the trade unions] were the product of a veritable revolution, and their power has been used as revolutionary forces usually are, blindly, and often fatally to friend and foe alike. The successful working of such a scheme as has been outlined implies the possession of a degree of intellectual and moral equipoise, education, and judical conservatism, such as only could be the product of centuries of training. What wonder then that these organizations, composed mainly of those who lack these necessary qualifications, burning under a sense of wrong and outrage, in form a fierce democracy in which numbers alone control, and so subject to the guidance of those least qualified to rule, should, as they feel their power, be fierce, cruel, arbitrary, dictatorial—in a word, tyrannical!

The tendency of all unions is to place men on one dead level, and that not the level of the highest, but the level of mediocrity. They dislike the exertion of special or superior ability by any of their members, deeming it an injustice to the rest that one should gain higher pay or win a loftier position. For this reason they decry piece-work, and where it is imperative set a limit upon each individual's production beyond which he must not go. Some of their restrictions are so strange and arbitrary as to seem ridiculous, yet they are enforced with a severity that is appalling. For instance, in the London building trades, if a hod-carrier carries more than nine bricks at a time he is subject to fines and penalties. If he ascends a ladder at too great a speed, fines and penalties. If in going from the shop to work abroad, men walk faster than three miles an hour, fines and penalties. In nearly all trades, if any work is done beyond the limit set by the union, the pay for it goes to the union, and not to the workman doing it. In this way, individual excellence is discouraged, and every man is coerced to his damage. This coercion is called "rattening," and is employed to enforce payment of dues and obedience to rules. Contumacy is visited by punishments in fines, in threats of vengeance, in personal outrage, and sometimes by the murder of the offender.

The Parliamentary Commission of 1867 reported that out of about sixty trades-unions in Sheffield, England, all were charged and thirteen proved to have promoted or encouraged outrages of various degrees of criminality, from theft and intimidation up to personal violence and murder.

All this for members of the union.

Those outside of the union have no rights to be respected. They are "black sheep" and "scabs." Union men will not work with them, nor permit them to be employed in the same shops with themselves; and any man who ventures to work on terms which the union condemns takes his life in his hand. So far as individual workmen are concerned, they have exchanged the right of private contract, with all its disabilities, for the despotism of the union, which acts as an effectual bar to the industrial progress of themselves and their class. It is difficult to see how men can preserve their self-respect who tie themselves, body and soul, to these organizations.

In endeavoring to control in matters that are outside of their proper functions, they also work only evil. By this is meant the arbitrary enforcement of obnoxious restrictions upon the hours and modes of working; opposition to the substitution of improved methods and machinery; the prohibition of apprentices from learning trades; the refusal to conform to the necessary changes demanded by changing tastes and markets; and the attempt to limit the action of non-union workingmen, who never have consented to submit to their control.

There is another and serious class of objections. There can be no doubt that unions foster an unfortunate spirit of antagonism. Being constantly and and consciously on the defensive, they come at last to suspect evil in every movement and to put a sinister interpretation on every action of employers. The special interests of the trade affected are often alone cared for, and narrow, selfish, and unjust regulations are enacted for its supposed benefit; and that it may remain a close monopolistic corporation, objectionable terms of service and other coercive measures are enforced, unjustly affecting the working classes generally and subordinating the general well-being to the desired prosperity of a small and selfish number. Strikes have been ordered, at times when the position of the market rendered success impossible, resulting in severe and prolonged suffering, while in some highly skilled and limited trades a far higher rate of wages has been enforced for a time than the value of the labor performed would justify, which, with the adoption of unnecessarily burdensome methods and rules, result in the end in materially checking production, deteriorating the quality of the goods produced, and so tending to transfer the industry to other countries. Not unfrequently arbitrary demands have been pressed upon employers, simply that they might compel compliance, and thus show their power,—demands immaterial to the men, but which, if submitted to, were injurious to the employer, and if resisted must involve heavy loss. The spread of communistic and anarchistic sentiments among the working classes with the growth of trades-unions, and their political significancy since the organization of the Knights of Labor, which leads all political parties to cater to their ideas, however erroneous, has introduced into the discussion a new and perplexing factor. The enactment by Congress of a law at their demand, whereby it now is illegal to contract with any foreigner, except he be an opera-singer, for service to be rendered in this country, is a case in point.

This resume of the past history and relations of employer and employed, demands a brief statement of the position in which the two parties to the question now find themselves. It is simply a condition of war. The employer, contending against the competition of the world, finds himself hampered at every step by aggravated restrictions and senseless interferences with his business. Faithful and honorable service, as a rule, is a tradition, but no longer a fact. His interests are not studied, nor indeed cared for. So far as he can discern, his men rather rejoice at his loss than at his gain. He encounters a spirit of antagonism that prevents excellence or certainty of production. Endeavors to enforce discipline or to compel general economies are met by threats of strikes. He cannot even dispense with the services of unworthy or undesirable men, except at the same risk. And he is compelled to transact his business, if he subordinates himself to the behests of the union, at the expense of a serious loss of self-respect. In his endeavors to free himself from this bondage he finds the whole labor element of his community, whether interested in his specialty or not, leagued and arrayed against him, and ready to oppose him, and those workmen who feel the burdens of their position to be too heavy by every conceivable means, whether legal or illegal. Through the medium of the various assemblies of the Knights of Labor, a complete espionage is kept over all his workmen as well as himself, and every endeavor is made to prevent any amicable arrangements which do not recognize the union; while, if such are made, the workmen and their families are denounced with opprobrium, terrorized by fear of outrage, or debauched with drink, for which purpose organized committees or paid agents are employed.

What wonder, when the conflict joins, that the sentiment, lamentable as it is, that starvation and suffering alone can secure reasonable consideration for employers, should exist and find expression?

The workmen, on their part, look upon their employer as their natural enemy. The historical reasons for this have been stated. Although the relations have so completely changed, that the employer is now, perhaps, as frequently the victim of oppression as are the employed, the facts which justified organization have not been forgotten, and the feeling that now that labor has the upper hand, that hand shall be heavily felt, rules the temper of the unions. They justify any and every proceeding that in their opinion tends to maintain the monopoly of the union, prevent workmen from finding independent employment, or employers from conducting business regardless of it. The controlling sentiment is, "all is fair in war, and we are at war," and they are as ruthless, as regardless of age, or sex, or pity, as must be an actual army, while the grim endurance often manifested of the self-imposed suffering growing out of strikes cannot but excite wonder alike at its stoicism and its folly.

LIFE'S PICTURE GALLERIES.

BY CHARLES R. HUNT.

[Suggested by the Baccalaureate Sermon in the Cynosure, July 1, 1886.]

What a view! When the mind can connect all our days,
And survey, as a whole, what we've made life to be,
Our thoughts and our impulses, every-day's ways:
We paint as we glide to eternity's sea.

Ah the vista! as seen along history's path,
Where life-pictures blending, as convergent rays
Show clearly God's goodness in mercy or wrath,
At which faith spreads her pinions, and hearts chant his praise.

What so loyal, so true, in the life-sketch we're taking,
As time through its corridor, urges us on;
As to see in the battle which evil is waging
We've stood by the truth with our falchion-blades drawn.

And then the glad thought that the victory's sure,
Over all in the service, or led by the will
Of Satan whose power will not, cannot endure,
But must sink, as sunk Richmond or Andersonville.

And when this life shall pass, and new scenes usher in,
When we've gone to the realm where no conflict can come,
How grand to look down, if our lives here have been
Such as give us clear vision from heaven our home.

What portraits of power are the pictures of God,
In the stream of events which are colored with blood:
Earth's Album-leaves turned by the touch of his rod,
And its etchings deep-grooved like the track of a flood.

Then we follow the Jews, from their bondage set free,
To the thunders of Sinai, the law-beaming mount;
Then follow their footsteps by Calvary's tree,
To the glorified millions "whom no man can count."

Then seals, trumpets, vials, close up the account,
And the blessed "well done," and the sitting on thrones,
Life's problems all summed in the glorious amount,
And the pride of the wicked transformed into moans.

Then follows the glory; the finishing up
Of nations idolatrous, false and forsworn,
The wine of God's vengeance they madly drink up,
And sink by the weight of their sins overthrown.

Now heaven shouts triumph; God's foes are put down,
And sweet anthems float from the olive-crowned hills;
God proves himself Sovereign, each saint wears a crown;
And glory and justice displace the earth's ills.

PRESS COMMENT.

Another secret society has just swarmed from the Masonic hive. This is known as the "Law and Order League." The secret labor troubles have popularized the idea of "law and order" as against the anarchy of secret labor knighthood, and now Freemasonry seeks to popularize organized secrecy by organizing another secret society to gather to itself the fruits of this popular issue. The brand of suspicion is in the forefront of this whole secret business. Let no one be deceived. Keep clear of all secret societies, however plausible the pretence.—Wesleyan Methodist.

Men love to be in bondage, providing it be of their own seeking. They submit voluntarily to the bondage of trade unions, Masonic societies, or political parties. To leave the first is to become a scab; to leave the second is to be deserving of death; to leave the third is to be a traitor. These are most extraordinary doctrines, which practically deny the right of private judgment or even of submission to the law of God. Our idea of allegiance in the public press or public men is first to God and his word, second to the public welfare, and third to one's own judgment, instead of being forced by conventional rules and rulers to follow and obey their judgment, or rather their commands, however injudicious.—N. Y. Witness.

Recent events in connection with the labor conflict have turned public attention sharply upon the question whether secret oath-bound societies are in harmony with the equal rights and liberties of citizens in a free republic. One feature common to all these societies is the vow of absolute obedience to unknown superiors. The movements of such a body are not the result of deliberation and free volition, but are like the movements of an army in which the men know little of the plans of their leaders and are moved hither and thither like machines. That is a power which nothing except great emergencies, involving the life or death of a nation, justify men in putting into the hand of their fellows.—Christian Standard.

The principle for which the Knights of Labor are contending leads directly to a State socialism which has been for years the dream of European theorists, but which is utterly opposed to all American ideas, and has not yet found much favor in this country. Unless our workingmen are prepared to endure the necessary evils of such socialism, they ought not to favor the measures that will produce it. Seductive as may be the idea of regulating all work and wages, which is offered by the scheme of a universal union of all workers for wages, the gift cannot be accepted without also accepting the burdens it would impose. On the one side are individual liberty, competition and suffering, with social progress; on the other are the merging of the individual in the mass, deliverance from struggles and anxiety, but, at the same time, the arrest of all social development, and of all ambition and hope for improvement in the future.—N. Y. Sun.

It is forty years since we have had a foreign war. During this time, England has hardly been without one. To-day, she has her army completing the conquest of Burmah. We have a compact territory and little occasion for foreign entanglements. Pre-eminently is ours a peaceable nation; and that is true, although the greatest war the world has ever seen has been fought in this country. We can hardly conceive of a quarrel with Canada that could lead to war, or of another war with Mexico. We are too strong to fear any strong nation, and we do not want to bully any weak one. But it is not enough to avoid war; we should be generous enough to avoid disputes and retaliations in our dealings with our neighbors. We are not helped as a nation any more than as individuals, by trying to overreach others. What is good for the prosperity of one is good for that of all, and we welcome every mutual concession that brings us nearer to Canada or Mexico, and that makes us forget that we are different nations.—Independent.

The men who tried the boycotting experiment in New York city give notice to the public that the decision of the court against boycotting will not be respected. The editor of the Volks Zeitung announces that he will still continue to advise men to use the boycott, and that he defies the court and jury. This is the logical result or outcome of the theory on which these people act. They seem to be incapable of understanding that they are citizens subject to the law, and not persons of extraordinary power appointed to enact laws and overrule the decisions of courts. Any man who sets out with the declaration that he will not respect the decision of a court or the verdict of a jury should be treated as an outlaw. When any man gets his consent to openly defy law, and insists on his own interpretation or none at all, he is dangerous to society, and some means should be taken to restrict his power for mischief.—Inter Ocean.

Mormonism is at war with the world. Not that the world cares anything about Mormonism as a religion, but as a social fabric the world accepts the challenge of war and will meet it. The civilized world has settled the matter that polygamy is an offense against society, and must not be permitted. So our country is not merely justified in suppressing polygamy, no matter by how many religious pretensions it is surrounded, but is compelled to do so. What we must take the lead in doing, other nations which have any regard for the defense of their daughters must also do. It is befogging the matter to talk about religious liberty. It is a matter of liberty of vice, not of religion. No man can afford to be lukewarm on the subject, who is not lukewarm on the subject of morality. The man who apologizes for Mormonism and wants to see its persecutions stopped, is a foe to the family.—Independent.

When we stop and think about it, the aspect of affairs occasioned by the switchmen's strike in this city, on the line of the Lake Shore Railroad, is not a pleasant one for American citizens. To the man of ordinary intelligence amongst us, personal liberty is our inalienable right, and whatever disturbs or impairs this right in an unlawful way is an unmanly, mean and abhorrent thing, and ought not to be permitted. To see armed men defending honest laborers in their lawful toil, because these laborers prefer not to join the secret labor unions, is a very suggestive and unpleasant sight. And the conclusion is forced upon thoughtful minds that these Knights of Labor and labor unions, so-called, are foreign importations not needed in the United States. Their assaults on personal liberty—not, in some instances, to mention property and human life—have been outrageous. Men who themselves play the tyrant ought not to be free. They should find a home outside of these United States. This strike is a burning disgrace to the strikers, a blow at personal liberty without adequate or just cause, and the men engaged in it ought to be ashamed of themselves, and quit it at once.—Interior.

—Just before the outbreak of the war Stonewall Jackson, then a professor in the Virginia Military Institute at Lexington, organized a Sunday school for colored children which is still sustained by leading citizens there.

THE SECRET EMPIRE.

THE BROTHERHOOD OF RAILWAY POSTAL CLERKS.

The secret constitution and work of the Brotherhood of Railway Postal Clerks show it to be in many respects a most remarkable organization. From the first page to the last there are traces of a vast scheme of boycotting the government. The brotherhood seems formed solely to find a place for a Grievance Committee, which, so far as the Government is concerned, becomes the brotherhood and has full and arbitrary power to speak and act for every clerk on its rolls.

The objects of the order are stated to be for "mutual aid and protection, and for a more perfect union that we as a body may be the better enabled to resist encroachments made upon our rights as citizens and our manhood as officials by indiscriminate removals from office of any of our members without sufficient cause and upon charges filed and fairly and fully investigated, and that we may also be the better enabled to administer to the wants and necessities of sick and indigent brothers, and in other respects to cultivate a more fraternal feeling among our members."

The first annual meeting of the Grand Lodge is fixed at Indianapolis, July 13, and its composition is entered upon in painful details. But its presiding officer, known as the Grand Chief Clerk, is shorn of all executive functions, which all appear lodged in the Grievance Committee. There is a per capita tax of $1 upon all members of the brotherhood, which, together with the usual fees for lodge charters and the sale of rituals, will bring in a fair income if the membership is reasonably large.

The by-laws define the regulations of membership, and state that no person shall be admitted to membership in this brotherhood whose reputation for honesty, sobriety, and industry can be seriously assailed, and all applicants must be recommended by two members of the lodge as in every way worthy of membership. The initiation fee is $2. It is provided that a member who shall die in the service, or who shall be discharged from his position for alleged causes upon which there has been no conviction, shall be entitled to a sum from the benevolent fund of the Grand Lodge equal to an amount to be raised by an assessment of $1 each upon all the members of the brotherhood, said amount to be paid to his widow or heirs (if a married man), or if an unmarried man the same may be disposed of by will or be paid to those dependent on him for support.

The following language is used:

"To all the by-laws, rules, and regulations we bind ourselves by the most solemn pledges of honor, uniting ourselves in the fraternal bands of brotherly love. We pledge to each other our lives, our honor, and our lasting fidelity and fealty, admonishing our brethren to be true to the principles that characterize true manhood. Continue to give the work your most faithful and honest efforts, and this important branch of the Government service, which your skill and genius aided so largely in consummating, will go down the ages as an imperishable monument to your memories."

The officers of the lodge are rather peculiarly named. They are the Chief Clerk, the Second Clerk, the Third Clerk, the Transfer Clerk, and the Short Stop. The Chief Clerk is the presiding officer, the Second Clerk is the secretary, the Third Clerk is the treasurer, the Transfer Clerk is a sort of general utility man, while the Short Stop is supposed to stop interlopers at the door. The power of the presiding officer, following the lead of similar societies, is practically unlimited between the meetings of the lodge, and he can do about as he pleases.

To become a member it is necessary to have received a permanent appointment as a postal clerk, a commission from the Postmaster-General being evidence of that fact, and also to be in active service at the time of application. The usual procedure is carried out in the way of initiation until the candidate has taken the oath, then he "by further attesting his sincerity and allegiance, will surrender to the lodge, through the Chief Clerk, his resignation as a postal clerk, which will be placed in the hands of the Grievance Committee, to be used by said committee under the orders of the lodge only in case of extreme emergency and in concert and conjunction with all the members of the same."

This Grievance Committee, while it is but one of three standing committees in the lodge, thus becomes the most important one of the lot, being closely modeled after the Executive Boards of the Knights of Labor. Their duty, as laid down in the constitution, is to take charge of all matters relating to the official relations of the Brotherhood of Railway Postal Clerks with the Postmaster-General and other officials in the Railway Mail Service; and when in the opinion of the committee an exigency shall exist for the exercise of arbitrary action they shall at once take the necessary steps to prosecute any plan or scheme that may, in their judgment, be the means of consummating a desired object. They shall not, however, resort to extreme measures until an amicable adjustment of the difficulties may be deemed impracticable, and without the knowledge or consent of the lodge.

This goes further than any trades union ever thought of going, and makes one committee, armed with the resignations from the service of every member of the lodge, the autocrat of its affairs. It is perhaps as dangerous an arrangement for the clerks under any regime as can well be imagined. The whole scheme of the brotherhood seems built up around the central idea of this irresponsible Grievance Committee.

The leaders who contrived the machinery of the brotherhood were solely planning a huge strike to coerce the Postmaster-General into an agreement, for it seems scarcely possible that a body of men who intended founding a permanent society would have placed such unlimited power into the hands of one committee and effectually gagged a minority by holding over the heads of its members their forced resignations ready to be turned over to the Post-Office Department the moment the committee determined to strike. The entire plan shows the hands of good organizers, and bears the marks of months of study which it doubtless received. In the meantime, however, so it now appears, the department was kept daily informed of the progress of the incubation of the brotherhood, and the twenty-nine clerks who were mainly instrumental in its formation were dismissed from the service just at the moment it was prepared to act. The constitution they left behind gives full evidence of the faithfulness of their labors, which the secret zeal of the members who are still in the service may yet prove not to have been wholly in vain. The call for the general meeting of the Grand Lodge at Indianapolis July 13th is still extant, there being at present no clerk who has the temerity to recall it, but it may safely be predicted that the trains toward the Hoosier capital will not be laden down with clerks still holding commissions at the date.

In the meantime the brotherhood is striving earnestly to increase its membership without the knowledge of the department. The informers have been spotted and driven out, and the secrecy about the brotherhood would do credit to a Guy Fawkes potl. Every clerk has become suspicious of his neighbor, and the Division Superintendent suspicious of all. Each clerk looks for a dismissal with each mail, and many a one asks himself why he did not go hence two years ago before the afflictions began. Unfortunately the publication of the secret work of the brotherhood will not tend to allay their ills brought on by too much civil-service reform a la Vilas. The members of the brotherhood who are employed on the Chicago run have burned their certificates and dropped the society altogether.—Chicago Tribune.

PERSONAL MENTION.

—Bro. C. F. Hawley has an offer from the Iowa and another from the Illinois Association to be State lecturer.

—Pres. and Mrs. C. A. Blanchard went last week to Devil's Lake, Wis., for a rest and brief visit to that romantic region.

—Rev. J. D. Gehring, of Park College, Mo., has lately endured a painful operation and final amputation of his right thumb after weeks of agony. We regret to learn of this affliction.

—In the absence of the regular evangelist, Bro. R. Loggan, Kansas State agent conducted the services of a late quarterly meeting of the Wesleyan church at Chapman Creek, Kansas. He gave during the meetings two addresses on the lodge.

—Rev. W. P. McNary, by whose enterprise and industry the Midland took being and has grown to a vigorous youth, has removed from St. Louis to Tarkio, Missouri, where he becomes pastor of the United Presbyterian church, beside retaining the relation of corresponding editor of the paper.

—Rev. J. D. Nutting, of Wauseon, Ohio, is suffering an affliction that must call out the sympathy of all who have known him in connection with the National Association. His young wife died last week after a brief illness of but twenty-four hours, leaving an infant daughter to the care of agonized friends.

—The General Secretary and Bro. Hinman have spent much of the past week in visiting prominent pastors and citizens of Chicago to secure their attendance at a preliminary meeting, to be held on Wednesday of this week to discuss plans for the national conference. They have met with very uniform success, and with such encouragement in unlooked-for places, that they are amazed while they rejoice in the manifest working of the Spirit of all truth against the enemies of Christ.

CORRESPONDENCE.

MEMPHIS LETTER.

Editor Cynosure:

DEAR BRO.—I do not want the dear friends of the Cynosure to miss any good thing that transpires here, and shall write as often as we have anything of interest for them. I have related to you how that Revs. Imes, Brinkley and myself were almost alone here, and how that nearly every minister of my race here oppressed me and my church, but it is amusing to see how they buttonhole, escort and advise our excluded members. When they were in the church they were scarcely noticed by outsiders, but now they are entertained on every corner. In every meeting to arouse public sentiment against me and my church for their exclusion the ministers are out in force. As public men their public acts are open to public discussion. Forgetting this, one of these gentlemen became highly incensed at a paragraph in my last article to the Cynosure, and came to give me a castigation. He for some cause changed his idea. Men and things are all open to investigation, but these secret lodges and their allies all squirm when the light is turned on. Our case is still pending in the court, the judge for some cause having postponed the same until the next term of court, which will be in September. We have no fear concerning the result. We are informed that the civil or chancery courts, have no jurisdiction as to what shall qualify or disqualify persons for membership in a Gospel church, and I am led to believe that this postponement is a final disposition of the case. We move along in the even tenor of our way holding up the words of Christ, "In secret I have said nothing."

The secret societies have made some several displays since my return. The 24th of June was celebrated by "the duly and truly prepared." They were all out and despite all their parade the people look and say they are some of the men who mobbed Bro. Countee. The Oddfellows went out gunning June 10th with a large following. They are the most popular order. They had one of their immoral, ungodly, demoralizing, race-degrading picnics, and out of the affair they realized $1,000. The sad feature of the whole is, that so many who profess to be Christians are among those who patronize these evils, and even the ministers open these revelries with prayer—an insult to the Heavenly Father.

"With their little sheepskin patch beneath their bosom;"

We pray God that we may have a wonderful revolution of things here in Memphis. On the 23d ult. a secret organization composed of ladies gave a picnic. They were all in uniform, and in open hacks, preceded by a band of music, they paraded the streets of our city to the delight of the ignorant and the abhorrence of all thinking men of the race. The young women wore little blue silk caps in the shape of soldier caps, and at night in the dance hall of the park, they were drilled by a man in the revolutions of fancy wheels, etc. Such is the continued demoralization that secret societies are doing for my people, and I look on, while my soul abhors it, and I find expression only in the words of the prophet, where he says, "O that my head were waters and mine eyes a fountain of tears that I might weep day and night for the sins of the daughter of my people."

Yesterday, Sunday, the 4th, an excursion train left here for Topeka, Kan., loaded with "Immaculates," going thither to attend their Grand Lodge. I think there will be quite a change here before long; they can not rid themselves of the fact that they are held guilty by the community of the attempts on my life. To-day the I. P. B's turned out, and in the line of their procession they had sixteen hacks containing about fifty women, profusely decorated. Now these women gave to the hackmen about 50 cents to be dragged through the streets, thinking it glorious to be thus degraded. We have a great work here to do. Our community is cursed, and Boaz and Jachin and Tubal Cain, with Jubelo, Jubela and Jubelum lead the crowd. It is a matter of impossibility to break them up it seems, and do you not think it would be a good plan (inasmuch as these orders are so ancient, and John the Baptist and John the Evangelist are, as they say, patrons of the ancient tomfoolery) for everybody to join in, men, women and children, and give the thing a new name and let it slide down quietly to its final resting place where there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth. We feel very grateful to Mrs. Phillips, Mrs. Stoddard, Mrs. Blanchard, and all who contributed to our happiness while in your midst. May God bless you and may you live long to push the Cynosure forward as an advocate for the blessed principles of God's Word. Yours in earnest for God and the right, R. N. COUNTEE.

THE CONFERENCE.

BRAID, Ottawa Co., Kan.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—In your issue of May 27th, I read, "A Call for an Inter-Church Convention," to be held somewhere at some time in September next; the invitation being to all Christians, as well as to all Christian churches, for consultation upon ways and means by which to liberate the church from the greatest of all scourges to which religious societies are incident, viz., Freemasonry and her numerous offspring.

Being a Christian teacher I am in favor of such convention at whatever time and place agreed upon. I wish to be present in that convention; especially so, since having left the M. E. church because she is ruled by the Masonic lodge.

Shall no man buy or sell unless he have the mark of the beast? Surely, we are near that point of time. Again; since "The shock of entrance is the new birth"—as said by Mackey,—shall there be no Christians outside the lodges, in the world's esteem? As there is such a thing as being born of hell, "Son of perdition," it may be that Mackey's "new birth" is of this character; if so we have a host of terrible fire-eaters to confront. Yet we will hold the fort in the strength of the Master, even against a siege of forty years.

But it is well to inquire, What constitutes a Christian, and what a Christian church? When these are answered in truth, we will be unable to admit that a Christian can be in a lodge, unless he be held with cords, and his eyes be out; or that a lodgeite can be fellowshiped in the church. Let us continue to pray, with trust in God, that the reign of anti-Christ may be short. Yours in Christ, H. W. SMITH.

WHY INFANTS ARE SAVED.

PARK COLLEGE, Mo., July 9, 1886.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—I have just read, with delight and admiration, Pres. Blanchard's Baccalaureate address, published in the Cynosure, July 1, 1886.

I think it unfortunate, that in a production of such superlative merit, there should be one fault. This one fault is contained in the sentence found on page 3, col. 1st, and is as follows:—"A majority of our race, for whom Christ suffered, die in infancy, of course, sinless, and not liable to punishment."

I offer no apology or excuse for calling this an error; it is a false doctrine—proven to be so by the plainest Scripture texts. I do not deny, what the sentence indirectly asserts, that infant children are saved when they die as such, but I do deny, because the Bible denies, that they are, "of course, sinless." (Job. 14: 4; John 3; Rom. 6: 23; etc.) Why do infants die before they have committed actual transgression if they are sinless? If infants, as such, are not "liable to punishment," why did Christ suffer and die for them? If they are sinless, they need no Saviour to deliver them from punishment.

I was never more shocked than I was when, a few years ago, I heard an aged "D. D." assert, in the most emphatic terms, that "an infant child needs no Saviour, because it is sinless." This doctrine is the starting point to Universalism. The occasion was the funeral of an infant child, of wealthy parents, who were unbelievers.

I am anxious to believe that Pres. Blanchard does not hold this doctrine in the sense in which his sentence conveys it to my mind.

J. D. GEHRING.

"THE DEVIL A MONK WOULD BE."

SABETHA, Kans.

It has been long since I have written for the Cynosure, on account of poor health, and though very feeble I can no longer withhold my pen. The battle is waxing hotter and hotter, and the devil is becoming greatly enraged, causing Ezekiel's five and twenty men to turn their backs upon Jerusalem and their faces toward the east to worship the sun, and now he is demanding of his sun-worshipers to put away far from them such men as Bro. Gamble, of Pennsylvania. I am being pursued by him; the church doors are closed against me, so we have repaired to the school houses, and they have been consulting to shut us out of them, but have not so far succeeded. Their plea is that discussion of secret societies is not a fit subject for the Sabbath day.

The men who are doing this are men who care no more for the Sabbath than swine do for music. The devil is even sanctifying the Sabbath when it will suit his purpose. To do so those very men will hunt or fish on the Sabbath, or labor, or do any thing-thing else their inclination leads them to do. Our modern Pharisees have thus sanctified the Sabbath to shield secret devil worship from exposure on that day. I have been trying to preach every Sabbath since my health would permit, and I trust the effort has not been in vain. I think the minds of the people are becoming stirred on the subject of National Reform and secret lodgeism. My first sermon at a place is from the text, "Thou shalt have no other God before me," preparing the way for some half dozen sermons to follow in its wake on the reforms of the day, intemperance, secret orders, Sabbath desecration, and every other opposing power of the Gospel. Dear Christian brethren, I humbly ask you all to pray that God will give me health, strength, grace, courage and wisdom that I may bring honor to his name and glorify his dear Son.

JOHN THOMPSON.

THE DECEIVABLENESS OF UNRIGHTEOUSNESS.

MONTMORENCI, Ind.

Satan, the father of lies, has a design in all the evil works under the sun. His design in men using tobacco, opium, intoxicating liquor, or whatsoever intoxicates or stupefies man, is to deceive to lie to man: to stupefy and becloud the understanding and the conscience and moral sensibilities, and keep the soul from reading the Word of God or hearing his Gospel, and thus delay repentance. By these things are quenched the blessed warning voice and wooing help of the Holy Spirit of God. By these evil things God's work of grace to save man from perdition is frustrated, and man thus dreams away his probation and does not wake up till in endless ruin. And all this ruin is planned and managed by that father of lies, that old serpent, the devil and Satan, who even sometimes persuades men that he has no existence. And this evil being ever inspires his subjects, servants and slaves to oppose in every way possible any opposition made by God's people against the works of the devil or any earnest effort made to save man from his devices, so that the deceived are made to practically say, "Let us alone, we love the bondage of sin and Satan. We love to be deceived by our greatest enemy; to believe his lies, and share his doom and destruction."

How the souls of God's dear people do mourn with astonishment at the moral insanity of lost man and at the desolation wrought by the works of the wicked one! Men go to the secret lodges night after night and thereby vainly made to encourage one another to believe that these silly and wicked ceremonies, by which the name of God our Maker is taken in vain and wickedly blasphemed, will in some way and without repentance toward God and belief in his truth, fit them for happiness in another world. And all this they willingly do, blindly in every sense, without any reasonable assurance from any responsible and trust-worthy being, that the course they are pursuing will end as they suppose. But we will continue giving our testimony whether men will hear or whether they will forbear. L. D. B.

AN EXPLANATION.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—In your kind notice of myself and my book you use a form of expression that might be understood to mean that my motive in leaving the professorship I have so long filled in Wheaton College was to write a book and become a candidate for Congress. The book was nearly completed before it became clear to me that it was my duty to resign my position. The candidacy for Congress was an afterthought that was entertained as furnishing suitable opportunity for teaching what seemed to me to be truths that needed to be taught in these times of reckless greed and party slavery. With the kindliest feelings towards by former associates, both in the college and all reform work, I have committed myself and my all anew to His keeping who cares for all His children, caring for nothing only so that I may keep a good conscience toward God and before all men. O. F. LUMRY.

PITH AND POINT.

A SOUTHERN PROTEST.

All of the Southern negroes don't appreciate Masonry as an ordinance from God, though many Southerners claim it so to be; but a true Christian should not be deceived thereby. I never heard of your paper until today. After issuing many of my circulars in churches and on the street, they aroused the Masonic sentiments to such an extent that some of the secret society fellows spake very violently of me; and to-day the Lord sent one of your valuable papers to me for encouragement, and after reading it I was much comforted.—F. J. DAVIDSON, New Orleans, La.

CREAM, NOT SCUM.

A brother wanted me to say more on holiness and skim off the secrecy question; but I feared to skim off what little cream of reform I had, because then I would have but a "skim-milk" holiness left. We believe every means of grace to be a work of holiness. For a person to have his mind changed from wrong to right on any question is a work of grace, and although he may not be saved, he is nearer the road to regeneration than before. Redemption is a work already done for us. Regeneration is a work done in us, just as soon as we seek God with the whole heart. "The day thou seekest me with the whole heart I will be found of thee." We need holiness all along the line of reform for Jesus's sake.—CYRUS SMITH, Beaconsfield, Ia.

ENCOURAGED IN FLORIDA.

The three evils, Sabbath desecration, intemperance, and secret societies, which you are attacking so successfully, are the giant forces we have to fight on this field. Even the blacks have been seized with a mania for forming secret societies, and they are organizing lodges of the Masonic and Odd-fellow orders all through the South, and nothing pleases them more than to have the death of one of their number occur so late in the week that they can parade at his funeral on the Sabbath day. Steamboat and railroad excursions are advertised for every Sabbath, and its sacred hours are filled up with music, dancing, revelry, and drunken orgies. The telling blows you strike, the convincing words you speak, greatly encourage and strengthen us in our conflict.—REV. W. A. BENEDICT, Orange Park, Fla.

BIBLE LESSON.

STUDIES IN THE WRITINGS OF JOHN.

LESSON IV, July 25, 1886.—The Resurrection of Lazarus.—John 11: 17-44.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Jesus said unto her, I am the resurrection and the life.—John 11: 25.

[Open the Bible and read the lesson.]

COMMENTS ON THE LESSON BY E. E. FLAGG.

1. Christ the Resurrection and the Life. vs. 17-32. It is only to the Christian that the night of death is illumined with the star of heavenly hope. One of the saddest things in connection with heathenism is the gloom and doubt with which it envelopes the life beyond the grave. The wisest heathen philosopher, when he buried his beloved dead, could only "dimly guess" at a future existence. That exultant faith which could exclaim in the deepest depths of affliction, four thousand years ago, "I know that my Redeemer liveth," was beyond even a Socrates. The Gospel economy has a place for the passive as well as the active forms of piety; for the Marys as well as the Marthas, but in a really symmetrical Christian life both types are mingled. Martha's expression, "I know that even now, whatsoever thou wilt ask of God, God will give it thee," shows that her faith was strong enough to believe that Christ had power to raise her brother to life even after a four day's burial. But, as once in the case of Peter, Christ asks a question which can only be answered by a full confession of her belief in his divinity. There is a reason why such confession is demanded of every true believer. Faith unconfessed is apt to grow shadowy, to become more readily a prey to doubt; but to put what we believe into plain words, that we and everyone else can understand, seems to have the effect of clearing our mental and spiritual vision; it gives our faith a body, as it were, that we can see and touch. We cannot obey the command, "to be ready at all times to give a reason for the hope that is in us," while that hope or faith is a dim, unsubstantial something, whose evidences we have never examined, and of which we have never said to ourselves or others, "I KNOW." Another reason is that we need to have the clearest, possible views of Christ, of his character and work, before we can labor intelligently for the conversion of souls. We need such a preparation before we can combat popular errors, before we can fight the rum traffic, or oppose successfully, evil of any kind. Much more do we need it when combatting the anti-Christ of secret false worship. To unmask his falsehoods and cruelty and corruption, we must know the real Christ, his truth, his gentleness and his purity;—and more, he must be in us, "the hope of glory," we must have felt for ourselves the spell of his love and bowed before his divine beauty.

2. The raising of Lazarus. vs. 33-44. Half of the attraction which Christ has for us lies in the fact that he is a sympathizing Saviour,

"Think not thou canst sigh a sigh
And thy Maker is not nigh."

The circle of Christ's sympathies has a divine completeness. He could enter into the joy at the marriage feast in Cana, and he could weep with Mary and Martha at their brother's tomb. But we are not to rest selfishly in the comfort of this heavenly sympathy, but to feel it as a stimulus urging us to show forth Christ's beauty to the world, by being in ourselves its visible image, remembering that, "as he is, so are we in this world."

LIGHT FROM THE WORD.

How is the sympathy of Christ with his people noticed in the Old Testament? Isa. 63: 9. Can one truly comfort another who has not felt that sympathy himself? 2 Cor. 1: 4.

From Peloubet's Notes.

"Then Martha, as soon as she heard that Jesus was coming." Jesus did not at first come to the house, but in some way let the family know that he had arrived near the village. The reason was the presence of the Jews in the house (v.19). (1) These would make it impossible for him to say what he would to the afflicted sisters; (2) some of them might report his arrival to the Pharisees, and so interfere with his plans; (3) because, as Abbott thinks, the conventional mourning customs of oriental society were exceedingly distasteful to him.

"Lord, if thou hadst been here, my brother had not died." We are slow to believe that our sorrow is "for the glory of God that the Son of God may be glorified thereby," and in our affliction continually echo Martha's "if," saying to ourselves, if we had not done this, or if we had not done that, if it had not been for our blunder or that of our friends or our physician, our beloved would not have died. Chance is the god of atheism, and is a comfortless god in the time of our trouble.—Abbott.

"Jesus said unto her, I am the resurrection, and the life: he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live," etc. I understand these words as an embodiment of Christ's creed respecting life and immortality. Jesus is the source of the resurrection, and the fountain of life. Whoever, therefore, by faith in Christ, has Christ in him the hope of glory, never knows death; to him there is no Hades, no dark and dismal abode of the dead, no long and weary waiting for a final great jail delivery,—a judgment and an acquittal. He passes at once from the lower to the higher state; he has already come to the general assembly and church of the first-born (Heb. 12: 22-24). What we call death summons him simply to depart and be straightway with Christ (Phil. 1: 23; Luke 23: 43). The eternal life which Christ here and now gives to those who are by faith united to him (John 5: 24) is never suspended. Against the conception, common now as then, of death as a long sleep or a long and dreary waiting for a final resurrection, is Christ's teaching here that "There is no death; what seems so is transition."—Abbott.

"Jesus wept." It is well that this short sentence should be in a verse by itself, the shortest verse in the Bible, but one of the most blessed. Why should Jesus weep? (1) He wept in sympathy with the sorrow around him. (2) His heart was full of sorrow, as he saw in this instance before him but one of the multitude of sorrows filling the earth. "He beheld death in all its fearfulness as the wages of sin; and all the world's woes, of which this was but a little sample, rose up before his eyes; all the mourners and all the graves were present to him."—Trench.

"If thou wouldest believe, thou shouldest see the glory of God?" To unbelieving Martha, Jesus could no more have restored the dead brother than to the unbelieving Jarus his child (Luke 8: 50), or to the widow of Nain her son, if her attitude toward his compassion (Luke 7; 13) had been one of unbelief.—Meyer.

"And said, Father, I thank thee." Is not the address recorded in these verses simply a thanksgiving spoken in respect of a previously offered private prayer? Is it not probable that the prayer was being offered during the period of delay beyond Jordan, throughout the travel to Bethany, and in the groanings at the sepulchre?—Craven.

"And I knew that thou hearest me always." He was never denied, for he always prayed in the right spirit, with the right motives, and with perfect faith. The prayer was answered when he seemed to be denied (as when he prayed in Gethsemane that the cup might pass from him), and when the request was visibly granted, as here. So it is with us; our true prayers are always answered, even when God denies our particular request. Even then he always grants the spirit of it, and gives us what, if we saw all the circumstances and results, we would have asked for.

"He cried with a loud voice, Lazarus, come forth." As one would speak loud to awaken a sleeper. The loud voice with which he spoke was the expression of a decided will, sure of being obeyed. Undoubtedly these external signs were only, as Hengstenberg says, for the individuals present, the power of raising the dead dwelling, not in the voice, but in the will of Jesus expressed thereby.—Godet.

"Loose him and let him go." Christ gives them something to do. This is partly to recall them from their speechless and dazed astonishment, partly to prevent the too great and dangerous revulsion of feeling, partly because he has done his work and would bid them to do what in them lies to be sharers with him in the restoration of the loved one to life and liberty. In this is a moral significance; we cannot raise the spiritually dead; but we can bring Christ to their grave by our prayers, and we can aid in their perfect liberation when the divine voice has called them from their sleep of death.—Abbott.

AMERICAN PLATFORM.

ADOPTED AT CHICAGO, JUNE 20, 1884

Viewing with deep concern the corrupt and unsettled condition of American politics, and witnessing with alarm the fearful prevalence of caste and clannishness by which our citizens are being arrayed in hostile bands, working secretly to compass political ends, a method directly and powerfully tending to increase corruption, to destroy mutual confidence, and hasten disruption and bloodshed; and having no hope of adequate remedy for these evils from existing parties, and believing the foundation of a party based upon the fundamental principles of the Declaration of American Independence, both inevitable and indispensable:

We, therefore, a portion of the American people, believing with our fathers that we have our rights and liberties, not from men or parties, but from God; believing in the Christian marriage, and not in Mormonism; believing in the religious democracy of the New Testament, and not in the despotism of the lodge; believing, also, with our Scotch and English ancestors, that civil government, though ordained in God, is "founded in nature, not in grace," and, therefore, that all have equal civil rights; while we abhor the idea of enforcing religion or controlling conscience by human laws and penalties as calculated to make hypocrites, not Christians, and savoring of the days of priestism, the fagot and the stake, we at the same time as firmly believe that atheism and priestcraft are twins and both alike foes to human liberty and welfare. We further most firmly believe that a government without God has none but lynch power, and is destitute of all legitimate authority to maintain civil order, to swear a witness, to try a criminal, to hang a murderer, to imprison a thief; and while we consider government without God as a mere usurpation, we regard all religions and worships invented by men, and so having no higher than human origin, as mere swindling impositions and cheats. We believe in peace and in national arbitration as a means of perpetuating it; yet we as profoundly believe that the bravery and blood of our soldiers have bought us the peace which we enjoy, and we honor the memories of the dead and will be just to the claims of the living; and we take up and prolong the strain raised by the women of this country: "For God, and home, and native land," and trust that this beautiful and patriotic motto will soon be not only echoed by their voices, but sustained by their votes.

We, therefore, solemnly adopt and present the following, as containing a brief synopsis of the principles of our government, by which we intend to be governed in casting our votes. We hold:

1. That ours is a Christian and not a heathen nation, and that the God of the Christian Scriptures is the author of civil government.
2. That the Bible should be associated with books of science and literature in all our educational institutions.
3. That God requires, and man needs a Sabbath.
4. We demand the prohibition of the importation, manufacture, and sale of intoxicating drinks.
5. We hold that the charters of all secret lodges granted by our Federal and State Legislatures should be withdrawn, and their oaths prohibited by law.
6. We are opposed to putting prison labor or depreciated contract labor from foreign countries in competition with free labor to benefit manufacturers, corporations or speculators.
7. We are in favor of a revision and enforcement of the laws concerning patents and inventions; for the prevention and punishment of frauds either upon inventors or the general public.
8. We hold to and will vote for woman suffrage.
9. That the civil equality secured to all American citizens by Articles 13, 14 and 15 of our amended National Constitution should be preserved inviolate, and the same equality should be extended to Indians and Chinamen.
10. That international differences should be settled by arbitration.
11. That land and other monopolies should be discouraged.
12. That the general government should furnish the people with an ample and sound currency.
13. That it should be the settled policy of the government to reduce tariffs and taxes as rapidly as the necessities of revenue and vested business interests will allow.
14. That polygamy should be immediately suppressed by law, and that the Republican party is censurable for the long neglect of its duty in respect to this evil.
15. And, finally, we demand for the American people the abolition of electoral colleges, and a direct vote for President and Vice President of the United States.

THE CHURCHES VS. LODGERY.

The following denominations are committed by vote of their legislative assemblies or by constitution to a separation from secret lodge worship:

Adventists (Seventh-day.)

Baptists—Primitive, Seventh-day and Scandinavian.

Brethren (Dunkers or German Baptists.)

Christian Reformed Church.

Church of God (Northern Indiana Eldership.)

Congregational—The State Associations of Illinois and Iowa have adopted resolutions against the lodge.

Disciples (in part.)

Friends.

Lutherans—Norwegian, Danish, Swedish and Synodical Conferences.

Mennonites.

Methodists—Free and Wesleyan.

Methodist Protestant (Minnesota Conference.)

Moravians.

Plymouth Brethren.

Presbyterian—Associate, Reformed and United.

Reformed Church (Holland Branch.)

United Brethren in Christ.

Individual churches in some of these denominations should be excepted, in part of them even a considerable portion.

The following local churches have, as a pledge to disfellowship and oppose lodge worship, given their names to the following list as

THE ASSOCIATED CHURCHES OF CHRIST.

New Ruhamah Cong. Hamilton, Miss.
Pleasant Ridge Cong. Sandford Co. Ala.
New Hope Methodist, Lowndes Co., Miss.
Congregational, College Springs, Iowa.
College Church of Christ, Wheaton, Ill.
First Congregational, Leland, Mich.
Sugar Grove Church, Green county, Pa.
Military Chapel, M. E., Lowndes county, Miss.

The Christian Cynosure.

EDITORS.

J. BLANCHARD. HENRY L. KELLOGG.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, JULY 15, 1886.

The Baccalaureate address in the Cynosure, July 1st, has been put in a pamphlet so cheap that Mr. Phillips, treasurer, thinks they should be sold at two cents (a postage stamp) each, or ten for ten cents. The sermon aims to be a thorough discussion of two matters of great importance to theology and reform: post-mortem Probation and the Image of the Beast. There are only one or two thousand struck off. Send for it to this office at once.

AN ANTI-SALOON CONVENTION, the papers say, is to be held in Chicago some time in the fall. Unless misrepresented it is a Republican party gasp for breath. The Chicago Journal (Republican) says of it:

"The proposed convention is to be called for the purpose of urging general action by the Republican party in the several States in favor of active measures of temperance reform. It is not a movement in favor of prohibition, and the fact is recognized that a large element of the Republican party is not in favor of prohibitory legislation. But it is declared that the Republicans must adopt a policy in the treatment of the liquor traffic that will satisfy the powerful temperance sentiment of the country, or it will lose a still greater number of dissidents on this question. It is said that if the Republicans as a party should take high grounds in favor of temperance reform, it might lose some saloon-keepers, but it would regain a far greater number who have voted the Prohibition ticket, not because they altogether believe in prohibition, nor because they wanted the Republican party destroyed, but because they wanted it made a temperance-reform party. The progress of the movement will be watched with interest."

THE W. C. T. U. AND THE SECRET LODGES.

We criticise Miss Willard with the greatest reluctance. She has spoken more eloquently, toiled more incessantly, traveled more miles, and organized more successfully than any or all other women in the temperance cause.

"And her deeds, as they deserve, receive proud recompense."

We have not stinted our praise of her and her sister, Mary B. But Miss Willard or the Cynosure has fallen into serious error. She has written congratulatory letters to secret temperance lodges, which she will not join because, as a sensible person, she knows when temperance conventions meet, and pray and plan, the Good Templar members of those conventions, men and women, go behind tyled doors, where Christ is omitted from creed, constitution and prayers, and plot, for planning in secret is plotting. Yet Miss Willard hails and commends the work of these nondescript bodies, though she knows that about one-half of their whole number went against the last Prohibition candidate.

The Signal, of July 1st, caresses the G. A. R.; praises the Maroa Women's Union for giving them boquets. "So the best feeling prevails between the Grand Army and the White Ribbon Army." Now, Miss Willard knows that the G. A. R., as a body, go for John A. Logan as President in 1888, and that Senator Logan originated the plan of making the liquor traffic permanent, and supporting American education by its revenue, making it, as Mrs. M. A. Willard well termed it, "A demijohn education." Besides, Mr. Logan has the reputation of being "the swearingest Christian in the United States." The White Ribbon Army goes for the G. A. R.; the G. A. R. for Logan; Logan for liquor, and Miss Willard gives her benizon! The recollection of the last Grand Army meeting in Portland, Maine, its endorsement of liquor-drinking, and condemnation of the prohibitory laws of the State whose guest they were, ought at least to deter from too cordial relations.

The Grand Army and Knights of Labor are falsehoods on their face. There are neither army nor knights there. They are political swindles, and pecuniary frauds. A. R. Parsons, now in Chicago jail, cell No. 106, who helped attempt the murder of fifty policemen; who glories in "the red flag" of Ledru Rollin, which meant and still means plunder and "war on society to the knife and the knife to the hilt,"—this redoubtable Knight of Labor, who has been expelled by Assembly No. 24, since he was imprisoned, writes from his cell to the Chicago Times that he has been a Knight of Labor, and has organized lodges in full fellowship for ten years past, and that his doctrines and flag have never been objected to till now.

But Mr. Powderly, it is said, is a gentleman and opposed to socialism and anarchy. Let us see. In the late riots he has issued secret circulars which have been printed. In one of these he says: "What we require is secrecy, obedience, patience, and assistance." And he tells his Knights that he is opposed to a Congressional committee of arbitration, and gives as his reason, "When our organization is completed, we shall have no need of laws."

Every man applying for membership in an Odd-fellows lodge, has with his application money, to send his written and signed pledge never to enter the civil courts "for any purpose whatever," connected with his rights, pecuniary or other, as an Odd-fellow. And the Knights of Labor concealed their existence for a time, and were led by adventurers, till members and funds increased, and now men like Mr. Powderly aspire to pass in society with men who fear God and uphold the laws, which Mr. Powderly is superceding and setting aside.

The Knight's oath or pledge of "secrecy" and "obedience" is clear treason. If an organization is levying war on the United States, enlisting in that is treason before any fighting is done. The Knights of Labor have levied war on the commerce and property of the United States, and shed the blood of our citizens in that war, and Powderly's general assembly, met at Cleveland, have neither condemned the war nor repealed their laws under which it was waged, and yet Miss Willard has written a letter of friendship to this organization; in Kansas a body has since been organized, called "The Frances E. Willard Assembly of the Knights of Labor!" And while she is thus wearing the plumes of these secret knights, her organ comforts the secret Grand Army, and notices favorably "The Brotherhood of Railway Brakesmen," of which there are several preying on the earnings of roilroad employes.

Miss Willard should know, for few ladies are more intelligent, that this whole secret lodge system rests on Powderly's two pillars, secrecy and obedience. There is not a pagan temple of false worship since Samson was but has rested on these two pillars. They are the two main props of idolatry and despotism the world over. The oath that binds to secrecy is the strongest act of worship; and obedience to unknown superiors is the root, and the tap-root of despotism.

"Eyeless at Gaza at a mill with slaves,"

There is this apology: Miss Willard is at the head of a woman's movement, the brightest and best the world has ever seen since women followed Christ from Galilee and helped commence the overthrow of idolatry and despotism. She has been importuned to join the secret orders. She has bravely resisted such importunities, and the pressure is fearful to bear. Now Frederick Douglass has been offered seven degrees of Masonry in a single night, free of charge and exemption from further attendance if only he would receive their mark in his forehead or his hand. And Miss Willard's devotion to the temperance cause necessarily and properly leads her to desire not to repel prohibition votes. But if the W. C. T. U. is to aid and abet, countenance and support the lodge system, which, as a system, ignores Christ and civil government, in contempt of Christ's teaching and example, painful as it is, we must protest against it.

THE UNION SIGNAL EDITOR.

Mary Allen West, as noticed last week, is now editor-in-chief of the Union Signal, the organ of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. Our readers, who were all prohibitionists before the prohibition party was born, will be glad to know more of Miss West.

Her father, Nehemiah West, with a colony of some sixty persons, purchased a canal boat, started from Cayuga county, N. Y.; were pulled by horse power to Buffalo, by steamboat to the Cleveland and Ohio canal; thence through the great State of Ohio to Portsmouth; thence they rowed to Cairo down the Ohio river, thence up the Mississippi to Alton, twenty miles above St. Louis; thence up the Illinois river to Copperas creek below Peoria; and there, quitting their canal boat, whose memory followed each of them through life, they proceeded to Knox county and founded the city of Galesburg, Ill. A journey to found a colony on the Congo river in Central Africa would now require less time, money, courage, skill and perseverance than that canal boat voyage.

Mr. Nehemiah West was law-giver, justice of the peace, elder of the church, and advice-giver-general of this interesting community. The lodges of New York had fallen in a popular furor over the most foul and significant murder of Morgan. The lodges of the State had furnished money to screen the murderers and defeat the judiciary of the State. Fifteen hundred lodges gave up their charters, and the rest feigned dead. The Galesburg colony were Anti-masons, converted to Christ in the stupendous revivals which followed the fall of the lodges. Every professional and public man in Rochester and most of the same class in the chief towns of the State (who had all belonged to the lodges), like the legion-haunted Gadarene when the devils were cast out, sat at Chist's feet "clothed and in their right mind." And the same region, following Finney, Gerrit Smith, Myron Holly, Seward, Granger and Fillmore formed and furnished the first thousands to the party which destroyed slavery.

Miss West's mind came out of that national furnace blast. She was graduated from Knox College of which her father was a founder and trustee. The senior editor of the Cynosure was her president and instructor. He wrote the college diploma; graduated the first thirteen classes; took the college in a state of bankruptcy; reported it free from debt the last five years of his administration; and left it worth $400,000, with its present buildings erected and paid for when he came to Wheaton. Miss West was "there to see," during the struggle of Knox college against wind and tide, poverty and persecution by church and state. She became an accomplished teacher and an able writer, and gained and held the post of county school superintendent as long as she desired against aspiring and unscrupulous competitors for the post. Like her honored father, she is calm and clear-thinking, and like him possesses sound principles, with sense to guide them. The Cynosure extends to her courteous greeting and warm welcome to the picket guard in the army of reform.

SUPPRESSING A LODGE.

Postmaster-General Vilas has done the country a great service in his prompt action against the Brotherhood of Railway Postal Clerks, an account of whose organization is given elsewhere in this paper. The prompt discharge of twenty-nine members of the order, some three weeks ago, "for insubordination," decidedly checked the plans of the ring-leaders. "They have secretly attempted," says the Postmaster-General, in the letter ordering their discharge, "to form an association with a view to dictate to the department, and many have also been guilty of deception toward their fellow clerks by reporting that the purpose of such organization was benevolence."

The "Chief Clerk," C. C. Mead, and R. E. Robb, Secretary of the Brotherhood, have replied to Mr. Vilas from Indianapolis, setting forth their grievances and charging the head of the department with bad faith, and making the service inefficient by removals for mere political reasons. Their game seems to have been to hold a threat over the department and compel a cessation of removals lest the whole body of clerks step out and block the whole mail service of the country. These men who could thus toy with such immense and vital interests, affecting the whole country, were doubtless passably fair-minded men, and the folly they came near perpetrating is no more and no less than thousands are cajoled into in the name of labor interest, charity, etc., etc. The government officials located the central organization in Indianapolis, but the scheme originated in Cincinnati.

The conspiracy is now practically broken up. The Chicago Division burned their records as soon as the war was opened from Washington, the ranks of the order are divided against themselves, and many who joined are seeking by every means in their power to recall their resignations, foolishly put into the hands of an irresponsible and arbitrary executive committee. The custodian of these resignations has, it is said, 103 in his hands. It is said that if a clerk is willing to pay $15 to the funds of the order and go on record as an oath-breaker, he may withdraw. But with the false sense of honor inculcated so widely by the lodge, most of the members hesitate at this penalty.

The great significance to the country is in the fact that there is power in our popular government if properly used, to suppress a lodge. Although the circumstances may have been peculiar, yet the principle is established. If these clerks had not the right to combine in sworn secrecy for self-protection, the principle can be extended to other combinations which have a similar pretense for existence, but which threaten the public and private interests of their fellowmen. We are beginning to "see men as trees walking," yet other socialist riots may be necessary to arouse the people to realize the folly of longer tolerating the lodge system to cover conspiracy against the public weal and the peace of the nation.

—The pamphlet on "Masonic Outrages" will be ready for delivery next week. The pages are being electrotyped, and as many copies can be printed as are called for.

SAMUEL D. GREENE.

It was about the year 1866, while in Boston, a letter from Dr. Edward Beecher was forwarded to me, earnestly advising me to make the acquaintance of Mr. Samuel D. Greene, who, he said, was a member of his (Park Street) church while he was pastor there; a good man, and one who knew more and felt more deeply on the subject of Freemasonry than any man he ever knew.

I found Mr. Greene in Chelsea, and sat till two o'clock that night thrilled with his narrative. Born in Leicester, Mass., in 1788, he taught school in Providence, Rhode Island, and in Thompson, Conn.; married in 1810; went west, and, in 1822, opened and kept the Park Hotel in Batavia, Genesee county, N. Y. This was then the extreme frontier, and his life went on as that of an inn-keeper in rude society. By request of a minister he opened his hotel for religious meetings, and, after an agonized and remarkable religious experience, he, with his wife, joined Rev. Calvin Colton's (Presbyterian) church. Mrs. Colton taught a school in his hotel.

At that time all the prominent church male members in Western New York belonged to the Masonic lodge, and believed it the twin and handmaid of Christianity. The oldest deacon in the church which Mr. Greene joined used to say, "I should as soon think of speaking against the God of heaven as against Freemasonry." Says Mr. Greene in his book, "The Broken Seal," "There is about the whole institution a barbaric glitter and pomp exactly fitted to please swelling and half-developed men."

But Mr. Greene had studied some Latin in Leicester Academy, and entered and studied awhile in Brown University; and, being withal a man of great natural force both of body and mind, instead of being dazzled, was disgusted with thi lodge. The Batavia lodge master was the leading Presbyterian elder; the Episcopal minister and every male member of his church were members; and when Mr. Greene had been stripped, blindfolded, and fooled through the Entered Apprentice degree, and permitted to put on his clothes, he sat down in the lodge by the side of this deacon, who so profoundly revered the lodge.

"Deacon," whispered Mr. Greene, "is that really Masonry, or have they been fooling me?" The deacon assured him all was right, and would be explained.

WILLIAM MORGAN

Was a citizen of Batavia at that time, a member of that lodge, and intimate friend of Mr. Greene. He had married Lucinda Pendleton, daughter of a Methodist minister in Virginia, his native State. His wife was younger than himself, scarce sixteen when married. Morgan was gentlemanly and agreeable. He drank liquor, as did all men, saints and sinners, at that day, "Freemasons" in chief. But he was not a drunkard. His brewery in York, Upper Canada, was burnt down, and he reduced to poverty from illauence. He then came back into the States, and resumed his trade of a brick-layer. Greene met him in Batavia in 1822, four years before his murder by Masons. Mrs. Morgan was the mother of two children, twenty-three years of age when Masons killed her husband, who was a prominent member of Batavia Lodge, No. 433, and lecturer of the lodge.

In May, 1826, Mr. Greene had fallen off and been absent for two months, when, in the latter part of July, he was summoned by special notice to his lodge. The business, introduced by Ebenezer Mix, Surrogate of the county, was the charge that Morgan was writing out Masonry, and David C. Miller was to print it. Mr. Greene took his seat in the lodge and sat astonished while he saw that the horrible oaths he had taken, in terms so extravagant that he had not supposed them anything but balderdash, were now to be enforced in the death of his neighbor and friend Morgan. A letter, real or forged, was read, signed by DeWitt Clinton, Governor of the State, and "Grand High Priest of the Royal Arch Chapter," which ran thus: "The book must be suppressed at the cost of blood and treasure. If any are prosecuted in the courts, your sheriffs, lawyers and juries will doubtless be Masons; but, in the last resort, I am Governor and I will pardon you." A deacon in Greene's own church said, "The sacriligious wretch! If he attempts to carry out so wicked a deed there are officers and members of churches who will execute the Masonic penalties upon him, let alone otsiders."

Mr. Greene looked through the lodge-room to see if he could see any token of relenting in the face of any member; but could see none. His neighbor, friend, and fellow-citizen was to be killed for publishing Masonic initiations as he had taken them; and the Episcopal minister, and every male member of his church, the leading members of the Presbyterian session of his own church; the officers of the county, and men deemed the best men in the community were co-operating in or silently consenting to the deed.

Mr. Greene was a large robust man of strong nerve; but, as he gave me these facts, his whole frame quivered with emotion. He said, "I dared not speak to my nearest friend. I went to the attic of my hotel, knelt, and there prayed to God till my sweat wet the floor where I knelt!"

Aaron White, Esq., of Rhode Island, speaking of men's terror of the lodge, at that time, said to the writer, "You boys know nothing about it. The power of Masonry at that time was like the power of popery before Luther burnt the Pope's bull, and was not burned himself. Before the rise of the Anti-masonic party, and the revelation of the lodge secrets by hundreds and thousands of seceding Masons, every one stood in terror of it."

At length Morgan was kidnapped, and Mr. Greene learned that Miller was to be taken off. He ventured to tell this to his wife, but she regarded him as out of his head to think that Masons would do such things. "Are they not our best men?" He and Mrs. Greene stood at a window looking out on Miller's printing office.

"Madam," said he, "stand here twenty minutes and you will see, for I hear the roar of their coming." And come they did, at noonday, rushed up the outside stairs which they stood looking at, seized Miller and carried him off. Mr. Greene sent a man to Mrs. Miller, to say, "Morgan is gone and will never return. Your husband is taken, and if you wish ever to see him alive, go into the main street through the town, and cry 'Murder!' at the top of your voice." Mrs. Miller did as directed; crowds gathered and followed Miller and his captors to Ganson's tavern, where Morgan had been tried by a Masonic justice before they put him in Canandaigua jail. Miller was having a similar sham trial, but the Masons were frightened by the crowd, and let him return.

As on the morning of Lexington battle the people arose without leaders, and the cry arose, "Where are our sheriffs, laws, grand juries? Have we no protection for property, person, families or lives?" The lodges in Batavia and the next towns met and agreed to lie and say, "Morgan was taken for larceny; the Masons had nothing to do with it." And good men, who afterward confessed this sin, with weeping, said: "We did not consider that we were lying, but keeping our Masonic oath to conceal." Children now live of those men who confessed in open church, their lying for the lodge, and were restored on repentance and confession. The city of Galesburg was founded by godly men and women, some of whose parents uttered and afterward confessed those lies for the lodge.

The grand jury of Genesee met—twenty-four men—and called Mr. Greene before them. "Mr. Greene," said their foreman, "we have called you to ask if you can give us any information concerning the disappearance of our fellow-citizen, William Morgan." They hoped Greene would lie and say he knew nothing of Morgan's taking off, and thus destroy his power to harm the lodge; for they already believed Greene had tried to save Morgan, and had saved Miller, for he let his livery horses go to bring Miller back.

This was a most terrible trial for Mr. Greene. But he had trusted in God, and resolved to die rather than cover crime. All the grand jury were Masons but two. Mr. Greene straightened himself up, and, pointing first to the foreman and then to the Masons in succession, replied: "You know who took Morgan off!—and you!—and you!—Where shall I begin?"

With clenched fists and flaming eyes they plunged at him, uttering oaths and vengeance; and Mr. Greene declared to me that he believed they would have murdered him, in their rage and madness, but the two non-Masons who were jurymen sprang to his side and said, "Mr. Greene, we have taken none of their cursed oaths, and you sha'n't be hurt for telling the truth."

The people on the outside were listening. They began clamoring for admission. The door of the jury-room was burst open, and the Masons swallowed their rage and slunk away before the wondering and indignant multitude. So the grand jury of Genesee county obtained no sworn falsehood that day to cover the murder of Morgan.

Mr. Greene was then president of the trustees of Batavia. From that time he was pursued by Masons, as bloodhounds used to pursue their human prey in the South. They killed his brute animals. They invented lies to destroy his hotel business, and Masonic papers printed them. They arrested him on mock charges, and in short did what as Masons they had sworn to do; and they would have murdered him a thousand times but for the rise of the people against the lodges and the merciful providence of God, such as he displayed in the life of Baruch in the days of Jeremiah the prophet, when the Masonic religions had broken down the Hebrew commonwealth and destroyed all human security for liberty or life.

Mr. Greene, aided by Rev. Dr. Increase N. Tarbox, one of the holiest and loveliest of men, compiled and condensed from his own writings the little book called "The Broken Seal," now sold at the Cynosure office; a book which will yet be read by millions. The good Dr. Tarbox still lives and as his strength will not permit him to attend in person he has promised to write a letter expressing his concurrence in a national congress of Christians opposed to secret societies.

Mr Greene died in a good old age, honored and beloved by the faithful and respected by all who knew him, even though they dared not stand with him against the lodge. Those who attended the Syracuse Convention of 1873, saw the venerable man standing on the platform with Gerrit Smith and David Bernard, and they seemed like three angels from the clouds which soon after hid them, to assure us that there are no secret societies in heaven nor will be on earth when the Lord's Prayer is answered and God's will is "done on earth as it is in heaven."

Mr. Greene's old age was brightened by a most amiable and beloved wife who still survives him, and his grave has been visited and honored like the tomb of a prophet.

—A long letter from Mrs. E. Tapley, of Columbus, Miss., appeals for aid in continuing the work of tract distribution, and laboring among the colored churches of Alabama and Mississippi, which has been carried on for some years by herself and husband. Mrs. Tapley is anxious also that the old school, which was founded by her father, the elder Feemster, be revived.

—Rev. Joshua Smith, of Robbin, Tunica county, Miss., wrote to our General Agent lately, urging that he have some assistance in helping his people against the lodge invaders. For two years, several different orders have been drawing off the church numbers and greatly hindering Christian work. Bro. Smith has been laboring hard to overcome this evil. He feels that all this lodge business is anti-Christian, and pleads earnestly for help.

—A stone was thrown through the windows of the French Protestant mission, at 135 Van Buren street, this city, the other evening, greatly disturbing the congregation. Two persons, however, came out for Christ before the close of the meeting. The mission is in the midst of a strong Catholic neighborhood, and this is not the first attack of the kind. The meetings of this mission are free, and the lodge evil is as as apt to be mentioned as any other. It is much in need of funds.

—A copy of the Cynosure, astray apparently, but guided by the hand of God, found its way into the Punjab in far north-western India, where it came in to the hands of a devoted missionary, Rev. W. J. P. Morrison of the Presbyterian mission of Ambala, and found in him a sympathizing reader. He writes for tracts and other publications for distribution among the European and half-caste population of that part of India among whom Masonry prevails. Will not some friend of missions in this country note this request and send to our treasurer a donation to cover the expense of meeting this earnest request from India?

—A while since Rev. C. E. Walker of the Dakota United Brethren conference wrote of the arrest of several young men for base ball playing on the Sabbath. They were fined, but refused to pay and were turned over to the sheriff. Owing to some real or pretended or intended inaccuracy in the commitment that accommodating officer promptly discharged the young men, who turned and and entered suit for $5,000 against H. N. Woodard, treasurer of the United Brethren church at Twin Brooks, swearing revenge upon him for his agency in their arrest. As this brother is a poor man it is evidently intended to crush him and strike at the church also, where some of the men, being lodgeites, feel insulted every time they enter the house.

The Chinese lodge assassins of St. Louis, whose trial last winter gave the public a revolting picture of the Chinese character, when hardened by their secret lodge oaths, are beginning to look into their doom. Two of the company of high-binders engaged in the murder have been sentenced to hang August 27th next. It was the misfortune of these poor wretches to be Chinese Masons. Had they been Irish, or French, or German Hiramites, how different their condition!

CROSS BEARING.

I am crucified with Christ—
With him nailed upon the tree;
Not the cross, then, do I bear,
But the cross it beareth me.
Solemn cross on which I died,
One with him, the Crucified.

Shall I take that blood-stained cross,
Cross of agony and shame,
Cross of him who fought my fight,
Cross of him who overcame?
Shall I deck myself with thee,
Awful cross of Calvary?

Shall I drag thee through the crowd,
'Mid the laughter that is there;
Whirl thee through the giddy waltz,
Bound upon my neck of hair?
Awful cross of Calvary,
Shall I deck myself with thee?

Shall I make that lowly cross
Minister of woman's pride,
Drawing eyes to me that should Fix upon thee Crucified?
Awful cross of Calvary,
Shall I deck myself with thee?

Shall I call this glittering gem,
Made for show and vanity—
Shall I call this gaud a cross,
Cross of him who died for me?
Shall I deck myself with thee,
Awful cross of Calvary?

SOCIAL PURITY, THE LATEST AND GREATEST CRUSADE.

In the year 1869, while studying in Paris, I used often to see passing along the pleasant streets great closed wagons, covered with black. Inquiring of my elegant landlady the explanation of these somber vehicles, she answered sorrowfully: "It is the demimonde who go to be examined." I then learned for the first time that in Paris fallen women have a legal "permit" to carry on what is a recognized business, but must remain secluded in their houses at certain hours, must avoid certain streets, and must go once a week, under escort of the police, to the dispensary for examination and certificate that they are exempt from contagious disease. Always after that those awful wagons seemed to me to form the most heart-breaking funeral procession that ever Christian woman watched with aching heart and tear-dimmed eyes. If I were asked why there has come about such a revolution in public thought that I have gained the courage to speak of things once unlawful to be told and you may listen without fear of criticism from any save the base, my answer would be:

"Because law-makers tried to import the black wagon of Paris to England and America, and Anglo-Saxon women rose in rebellion."

Even a worm will turn at last, and when her degradation was thus deliberately planned and sanctioned by the state on the basis of securing to the stronger partner in a dual sin the same protection from nature's penalty which society had granted him so long, and of heaping upon the weaker partner in that sin all the disgrace and shame, then womanhood's loyalty to woman was aroused, it overcame the silence and reserve of centuries, and christendom rings with her protest to-day.

Thus do the powers of darkness outwit themselves and evils evermore tend to their own cure. It is now solemnly avowed by thousands of the best and most capable women who speak the English tongue, not only that the contagious diseases acts shall never be tolerated upon a single inch of British or American soil, but that the houses of ill-fame shall be not only prohibited, but banished altogether. The system of license must not come. The "let alone" policy must go. The prohibitory method must be achieved.

"And He gave some prophets, and some apostles, and some teachers, and some evangelists." This is the order in each new evolution of that Gospel which would bring about equality between Jew and Greek, bond and free, male and female, in Christ Jesus.

To see the prophet of this new civilization we must go to the beautiful old cathedral town of Winchester, England, and find a Christian mother with her husband and sons about her. She lost her only daughter long ago, and with the chrism of this great sorrow on her heart, dedicates her rare gifts of faith and works of pen and voice to the lost daughters of mothers still more sadly stricken and bereft. History will record that Mrs. Josephine Butler, wife of Canon Butler, of Winchester Cathedral, was the earliest public champion of the cause of social purity. For well nigh twenty years this noble woman has battled against the odious contagious-diseases acts in England and on the continent, and lives to see them rendered inoperative during six years past, and to witness an almost unanimous vote in the House of Commons for their repeal within the past few weeks.

Listen to her prophetic words:

"We perceive that the repeal of these 'acts' is the key to our future work, as our opposition to them has been the needful training for that work. We see that all things are possible with God; that nothing can resist the progressive force of a pure principle and the aroused conscience of a great nation, and we are led on, step by step, to contemplate a victory far beyond the defeat of this unholy law, viz, the overthrow of the permitted systematic sacrifice to destruction of a section of the community for whom Christ died."

Whoever touches this question of the origin of the social evil has come near finding the "origin of evil" itself. That the world's equilibrium is lost we all concede. That it shall be restored when woman takes her rightful place, and not till then, intelligent students of science, history and the New Testament believe. On a low plane, and for sordid ends, premeval and medieval man wrought out, by fiercest cruelty, virtue as the only tolerated estate of one-half the human race. On a high plane, and for the noblest purpose, Christianity, working through modern women, shall yet make virtue the only tolerated estate of the whole human race.

No true reformer among women has harsh and bitter thoughts of men. Their inheritance from the dark ages, unsunned by Christ or science, the two blessed revelators, is their misfortune, rather than their fault, as ours is also. But working side by side, be it theirs and ours to restore to this pitiful world the Eden it has lost. I am not here to speak alone about the "Woman Question;" that is but half my theme; it is rather the higher, broader and more sacred "Human Question" that should enlist the interest and work of all true hearts. "Prevention," "reformation," "legislation," these are our watchwords, and along these lines we mean, with God's help, steadily to push the battle.—Miss F. E. Willard.

CHARLOTTE ELLIOT'S HYMN.

Some fifty years ago the Rev. Cæsar Malan of Geneva was a guest of the Elliot's, a well-to-do family in the west end of London.

One evening, in conversation with the daughter, Charlotte, he wished to know if she was a Christian. The young lady resented his question, and told him that religion was a matter which she did not wish to discuss. Mr. Malan replied with his usual sweetness of manner, that he would not pursue the subject then if it displeased her, but he would pray that she might "give her heart to Christ and become a useful worker for him."

Several days afterward the young lady apologized for her abrupt treatment of the minister, and confessed that his question and his parting remark had troubled her.

"But I do not know how to find Christ," she said; "I want you to help me."

"Come to him just as you are," said Mr. Malan.

He little thought that one day that simple reply would be repeated in song by the whole Christian world.

Further advice resulted in opening the young lady's mind to spiritual light, and her life of devout activity and faith began. She possessed literary gifts, and having assumed the charge of The Yearly Remembrancer, on the death of its editor, she inserted several original poems (without her name) in making up her first number. One of the poems was,

"Just as I am, without one plea
But that Thy blood was shed for me,
And that Thou bidst me come to Thee,
O Lamb of God, I come!"

The words of Pastor Malan, realized in her own experience, were of course the writer's inspiration.

Beginning thus its public history in the columns of an unpretending religious magazine, the little anonymous hymn, with its sweet counsel to troubled minds, found its way into devout persons' scrap books, then into religious circles and chapel assemblies, and, finally, into the hymnals of the "Church Universal." Some time after its publication, a philanthropic lady, struck by its beauty and spiritual value, had it printed on a leaflet and sent for circulation through the cities and towns of the kingdom; and in connection with this an incident at an English watering place seems to have first revealed its authorship to the world. Miss Elliott, being in feeble health, was staying at Torquay, in Devonshire, under the care of an eminent physician. One day the doctor, who was an earnest Christian man, placed one of those floating leaflets in his patient's hands, saying he felt sure she would like it. The surprise and pleasure were mutual when she recognized her own hymn, and he discovered that she was its author.—Youth's Companion.

INFANTICIDE.

In many households, children, instead of a blessing, are a nuisance. It is a card-case versus a child's primer, carriage versus cradle, social popularity versus domestic felicity. Hence, infanticide and ante-natal murder are so common that all the physicians, allopathic, hydropathic, homeopathic and eclectic, are crying out in horror; and it is time that the pulpits joined with the medical profession in echoing and re-eehoing the thunder of Mount Sinai, which says, "Thou shall not kill," and the Book of Revelations, which says, "All murderers shall have their place in the lake which burneth with fire and brimstone." And the man or the woman who takes life a minute old will as certainly go straight to hell as the man or woman who destroys life forty years old. And the wildest, loudest shriek of Judgment Day will be given at the overthrow of those who moved in the high and respected circles of earthly society, yet decreed by their own act, as far as they could privately effect it, the extermination of the advancing generations, abetted in the horrid crime by a lot of infernal quacks with which modern medicine is infested. When on the Last Day, the criers of the Court shall with resounding "Oyez, oyez!" declare the "Oyer and Terminer" of the Universe opened, and the Judge with gavel of thunderbolt shall smite the nations into silence, and the trial of all the fratricides, and parricides, and matricides, and patricides, and uxoricides, and regicides, and infanticides of the earth shall proceed, none of my hearers or readers can say that they knew not what they were doing.—Mighty God! Arrest the evil that is overshadowing this century!—Talmage.

ONE BY ONE.

One by one the sands are flowing,
One by one the moments fall;
Some are coming, some are going,
Do not strive to grasp them all.

One by one thy duties wait thee,
Let thy whole strength go to each,
Let no future dreams elate thee,
Learn thou first what these can teach.

One by one—bright gifts from Heaven—
Joys are sent thee here below;
Take them readily when given,
Ready, too, to let them go.

One by one thy griefs shall meet thee,
Do not fear an armed band;
One will fade as others greet thee;
Shadows passing through the land.

Do not look at life's long sorrow;
See how small each moment's pain,
God will help thee for to-morrow,
So each day begin again.

Every hour that fleets so slowly
Has its task to do or bear;
Luminous the crown, and holy,
When each gem is set with care.

Do not linger with regretting,
Or for passing hours despond;
Nor, the daily toil forgetting,
Look too eagerly beyond.

Hours are golden links, God's token,
Reaching heaven but one by one;
Take them, lest the chain be broken
Ere the pilgrimage be done.

"HAVE FAITH IN GOD."

A poor little girl was weeping violently, when Lord Napier came along and asked what was the matter. She said "I have broken my bowl and shall be whipped." He said, "I cannot mend it, but meet me here to-morrow at such a time, and I will give you a sixpence to buy another."

At home he found an invitation to dine with some great ones, and as he could not go there and meet the beggar girl too, he said to his daughter, "I cannot disappoint her, she trusted me so implicitly. So he sent a note of non-acceptance of the invitation, and met his engagement with a poor child, who trusted his word! It was beautiful.

And shall not God, the infinite Father, be faithful to his word of promise to his children? He will, every time, if they "trust him implicitly."

He declares, "Them who honor me, I will honor." And "He cannot deny himself." Sooner shall heaven and earth pass away than that he will disappoint heart-faith in him. The soul that trusts in God shall find its faith rewarded. His nature and promises assure it.

Mere wish or desire is not enough. These are often mistaken for faith, but they may exist strongly, and no faith in God be exercised. There must be implicit, child-like resting on the faithfulness of God's word. And such faith will he honor.

The Master says, "According to your faith, be it unto you." "Be not afraid, only BELIEVE." "Whatsoever ye shall ask in prayer, believing, ye shall receive." "Believe that ye receive them, and ye shall have them." Now these are the words of Christ. "Hath he said, and shall he not do it?" They are sure in answer to the faith required.

An earthly parent is pleased with, and encourages filial confidence in, the heart of the children; much more will the heavenly Father. He says, "Open your mouth wide and I WILL FILL IT." Can we "take him at his word?"

Never mind how dark it is, nor how trying the circumstances. It makes no difference to God. And true faith "laughs at impossibilities," knowing in whom it trusts. Let us all, then, learn to say with Paul, in every trying circumstance, "I BELIEVE GOD, that it shall be as he has said," and all will be well. The Lord help us. GEO. THOMPSON.

DOING ERRANDS FOR CHRIST.

"Mamma," said a little five-year old boy, "I wish Jesus lived on earth now."

"Why, my darling?"

"Because I should have liked so much to have done something for him."
